TRANSLATOR'S INTRODUCTION

ACCORDING TO HEBREW LEGEND, the Sepher Razial was presented to Adam in the Garden of Eden. It was given by the hand of God, through the medium of the angel Razial. It is, therefore, suggested that this is the first book ever written. The text is an extensive compendium of ancient Hebrew magical lore, and quite probably the original source for much traditional literature on angelic hierarchy, astrology, qabalah, and Gematria.¹

There is very little published bibliographical information available on the Sepher Razial. It is noted in the bibliography of Gustav Davidson's Dictionary of Angels that the Sepher Razial is sometimes titled Raziel ha-Malach, and credited to Eleazer of Worms.² Davidson mentions a Hebrew edition, published in 1881, and an

Gematria is a form of qabalistic numerology, in which each of the Hebrew letters is assigned a numerical value. Combining the letters yields a numerical value for every word. See the essay "Gematria" by Aleister Crowley (The Equinox, vol. 1, no. 5, London, 1911), later reprinted in The Qabalah of Aleister Crowley, edited by Israel Regardie (York Beach, ME: Samuel Weiser, 1973), currently available as 777 and Other Qabalistic Writings. See also Gareth Knight's Practical Guide to Qabalistic Symbolism (Cheltenham, England: Helios, 1965; now published by Samuel Weiser, York Beach, ME).

English manuscript in the British Museum.³ The bibliography of Joshua Trachtenberg's Jewish Magic and Superstition notes a 1701 edition of Raziel ha-Malach published in Amsterdam, and "a German-rabbinic script that does not correspond throughout with the printed text, but often contains a more complete text." Trachtenberg further states: "Sefer Raziel, probably compiled in the 13th century and containing much Geonic mystical material (so potent were its contents considered that mere possession of the book was believed to prevent fires)."⁴

In Appendix IV of Aryeh Kaplan's translation of Sefer Yetzirah, Kaplan notes 25 various 19th-century editions of Sepher Raziel. He also notes that Eliezer (ben Yehudah) Rokeach of Worms (Garmiza) lived in the years 1160–1237.⁵

There is certainly no evidence to support the theory that the Sepher Raziel was actually written over 5000 years ago. There are however, references to the Sepher Raziel in several scholarly texts establishing a certain amount of validity to its claim to antiquity, dating it at least as far back as the 13th century. There have been various quotes printed from Sepher Raziel in a few English texts on Hebrew folklore, such as the Trachtenberg book mentioned earlier, and Myths and Legends of Ancient Israel by Angelo Rappaport.⁶ (For the record, no English edition was cited in either of these books' ample bibliographies.) Also, diagrams from Sepher Raziel were printed in Davidson's Dictionary of Angels, Trachtenberg's Jewish Magic and Superstition, and David Goldstein's Jewish Folklore and Legend.⁷

The introduction of the ancient Hebrew grimoire, The Sword of Moses states that "... the so-called Sefer Raziel, or the book delivered to Adam by the angel Raziel shortly after he had left Paradise. It is of composite character, but there is no criterion for the age of the component parts. The result of this uncertainty is that it has been ascribed to R. Eleazar, of Worms, who lived about the middle of the 13th century. One cannot, however, say which portion is due to his own ingenuity and which may be due to ancient texts utilized by him. I am speaking more particularly of this book as it seems to be the primary source for many magical or, as it is called now, a cabbalistical book of the Middle Ages."⁸

Trachtenberg states, "The long list [of magical incantations] in such a work as Sefer Raziel are proof of the arduous training that the novice in magic must undergo if he would learn how to direct all the memunium [Hebrew for "in charge of" or "appointed to"] of air, wind, date, time, place, etc., which can control a situation at a given moment."⁹ In Folklore in the Old Testament, J. G. Frazer notes, "He (Noah) learned how to make it (the ark) from a holy book, which had been given to Adam by the angel Raziel, and which contained within it all knowledge, human and divine. It was made of sapphires, and Noah enclosed it in a golden casket when he took it with him into the ark, where it served him as a time-piece to distinguish night from day, for so long as the flood prevailed, neither the sun nor the moon shed any light on the earth."¹⁰

Sepher Raziel is also mentioned briefly in James Hastings' Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics. "The Book of Raziel, said to have been taught to Adam by the angel Raziel, and also to Noah, is a compilation, probably by various writers. It has affinities to the Shiva Koma and Sword of Moses. According to Zunz, Raziel was the work of Eleazer of Worms. It describes the celestial organization, and gives directions for the preparations of amulets."¹¹

In Hebrew Myths: The Book Of Genesis, Robert Graves and Raphael Patai claim that:

Solomon is said to have won much of his wisdom from the "Book of Raziel," a collection of astrological secrets cut on a sapphire, which the angel Raziel kept. The idea of a divine book containing cosmic secrets appears first in the Slavonic "Book of Enoch" (xxxiii), which states that God had written books of wisdom (or, according to another version, dictated them to Enoch), that He then appointed the two angels Samuil and Raguil (or Semil and Rasuil) to accompany Enoch back from heaven to earth, and commanded him to give these books to his children and children's children. This may well be the origin of the "Book of Raziel" which, according to Jewish tradition, was given by the Angel Raziel to Adam, from whom it descended through Noah, Abraham, Jacob, Levi, Moses and Joshua until it reached Solomon. According to the Targum on Ecclesiastes X.20: "Each day the angel Raziel standing upon Mount Horeb proclaims the secrets of men to all mankind, and his voice reverberates around the world." A so-called "Book of Raziel," dating from about the twelfth century, was probably written by the Kabbalist Eleazar ben Judah of Worms, but contains far older mystical beliefs.¹²

A reference to the angel Raziel is presented in Witchcraft, Magic, and Alchemy by Emile Grillot de Givry, who quotes from the preface of a manuscript titled "Le Secret des secrets, autrement la Clavicule de Salomon ou le véritable Grimoire," where Solomon speaks to his son, Rehoboam: "... I named the most holy Name of the Lord, Yahweh, and I merited the means that may not be named, the means of the Wisdom, which the Angel Raziel showed me in a dream, whereof the close tale may not be told to the understanding, and said to me, 'Hide well the Secret of Secrets, because the time comes when the universal sciences will be destroyed and utterly hidden and will become void; and know that thy time is near.'"¹³

In Jewish Folklore and Legend, Goldstein states: "Enoch consulted the wonderous 'Book of Raziel' that had originally been given to Adam, and there he read of the part that Noah was to play in the salvation of the human race."¹⁴ George Yurchison, in World of Angels, mentions that, "... when Adam was expelled from the Garden, the Archangel Raziel, at the instructions of the Lord, presented him with a Book of Secrets (known also as the Book of Adam, Secret of Secrets) to aid mankind in their attempt at salvation." He later states that "In ensuing generations of Adam's seed, the first man with his progeny were visited constantly by Michael and other Archangels to aid, instruct and console the mortals. It was at this point that Raziel gave the Book of Secrets to Adam. This is the only known book prepared actually in Heaven that existed (and still does, in fragments) on the earth."¹⁵

In Dictionary of Angels, under the heading "Raziel," Davidson presents the following:

In the cabala, Raziel is the personification of Cochma (divine wisdom), 2nd of the 10 holy sefiroth. In rabbinic lore, Raziel is the legendary author of "The Book of the Angel Raziel" ("Sefer Raziel"), "wherein all celestial and earthly knowledge is set down." The true author is unknown, but he has been commonly identified as Eleazer of Worms or Isaac the Blind, medieval writers. Legend has it that the angel Raziel handed his book to Adam, and that the other angels, out of envy, purloined the precious grimoire and cast it into the sea, whereat God ordered Rahab, primordial angel/demon of the deep, to fish it out and restore it to Adam, which Rahab obediently did, although it should be pointed out that before this, Rahab had been destroyed. "The Book of the Angel Raziel" finally came into the possession of, first Enoch (who, it is said, gave it out as his own work i.e. "The Book of Enoch"); then of Noah; then of Solomon, the latter deriving from it, according to demonographers, his greatest knowledge and power in magic. (Rf. De Plancy, Dictionnaire Infernal.) From a midrash (Ginzberg, The Legends of the Jews I, 154-157) it develops that Noah learned how to go about building the Ark by poring over the Raziel tome. (Rf. Jastrow, Hebrew and Babylonian Traditions.) ... Searching further in the cabala, one learns that Raziel is one of 10 (actually one of 9) archangels in the Briatic world, which is the 2nd of the 4 worlds of creation. ...

According to Maimonides in his "Mishna Thora," Raziel is chief of the order of erelim (q.v.); also, the herald of deity and preceptor angel of Adam. In further connection with "The Book of the Angel Raziel," "The Zohar I", 55a, reports that in the middle there occurs a secret writing "explaining the 1,500 keys [to the mystery of the world] which were not revealed even to the holy angels."¹⁶

In the first book of the Zohar (Berashith-Genesis), there is a fairly long passage referring to the Sepher Rezial, that gives some insight to the legendary origins of this book.¹⁷

This is the Book of the generations of Adam. In the day that Alhim created man, in the likeness of Alhim made he him." (Gen. v.1.) Said Rabbi Isaac: "The Holy Ones showed Adam the forms and features of his descendants that should appear in the world after him, and of the sages and the kings who should rule over Israel. He also made known to him, that the life and reign of David would be of short duration. Then said Adam to the Holy One, "let seventy years of my earthly existence be taken and granted to the life of David." This request was granted, otherwise Adam's life would have attained to a thousand years. This was the reason that David said: "For thou Lord, hast made me glad through thy work; I will triumph in the work of thine hands (Ps. xcii.,5), for thou hast filled me with joy in prolonging the days of my life." "It was thy own act and wish," said the Holy One, "when thou wast incarnated as Adam, the work of my hands and not of flesh and blood." Amongst the wise men and sages that should appear on the earth, Adam rejoiced greatly on beholding the form of Rabbi Akiba who would become distinguished by his great knowledge of the secret doctrine. On seeing, however, as in a vision, his martyrdom and cruel death, Adam became exceedingly sad and said: "Thine eyes beheld me ere I was clothed in a body and all things are written in thy book; each day hath its events that shall come to pass, are therein to be found." Observe that the book of the generations of Adam was that which was the Holy One through the angel Rasiel, guardian of the great mysteries and secret doctrine, gave unto Adam whilst yet in the Garden of Eden. In it was written all the secret wisdom and knowledge concerning the divine name of seventy two letters and its esoteric six hundred and seventy mysteries. It also contained the fifteen hundred keys, the knowledge and understanding and use of which had never been imparted to anyone, not even to angels, before it came into the possession of Adam. As he read and studied its pages, angelic beings assembled around him and acquired the knowledge of Hochma, or divine wisdom, and in their delight exclaimed "Be thou exalted, oh God above the heavens, and let thy glory be above all the earth" (Ps. lvii., 5). Then was it that the holy angel Hadraniel sent one of his subordinates to Adam, saying unto him, "Adam! Adam! guard thou well and wisely the great and glorious gift entrusted to thee by the Lord. To none of the angels on high have its secrets ever been revealed and imparted, save to thyself. Be thou therefore discreet and refrain from making them known to others." Acting on these injunctions Adam zealously and secretly kept this book up to his expulsion from the Garden of Eden, studying it and making himself acquainted with its wondrous mysteries. When, however, he disobeyed the commands of the Lord, the volume suddenly disappeared leaving him overwhelmed with grief and most poignant regret, so that he went and immersed himself up to his neck in the river Gihon. On his body becoming covered with unsightly ulcers and sores threatening physical dissolution, the Holy One instructed Raphael to return the book to Adam. After obtaining a full knowledge of its occult teachings, he handed it, when at the point of death, to his son

Seth, who in turn bequeathed it to his posterity, and eventually it came into the possession of Abraham who was able by its secret teachings to attain to higher and more enlightened knowledge of the Divine, as was the case with his predecessor Henech and enabled him, as it is written, "to walk with Alhim," that is to converse with them.¹⁸

The Sepher Rezial is very rare in any form, and the text is of great importance. It seems incomprehensible that it has never been translated, in its entirety, into English. The translation presented here was derived from a single text, the 1701 Hebrew edition, published in Amsterdam. The 1701 edition is a compilation of five texts, gathered together by its editor, who transcribed the letters of the various manuscripts into one volume. The title page notes that the book was "Printed in the chosen house of the respected priest [Kamir] Moses Ben Hieshiesh, by the honorable Abraham Mindim Kovitineyov."

The text is in biblical Hebrew, which uses no vowels. Hebrew vowels are represented by small dots and dashes positioned above and below the letters. According to the Oxford Companion to the Bible, the use of vowels in Hebrew writing developed between the fifth and tenth centuries C.E.¹⁹ The full Hebrew text is 97 pages long. Each page has an average of 48 lines, with an average of 90 characters per line.

The use of vowels greatly simplified the matter of translating Hebrew into English. The variations of word interpretations became more specific with the placement of vowels. Also, there are very few pronouns and verbs utilized in biblical Hebrew, and almost no punctuation. In this translation, I have kept sentences as simple as possible, and have elected not to inject any implied verbs or pronouns, except where necessary to the grammar and/or syntax of the passage. Also, I have attempted to remain consistent with the words translated. You will therefore, likely note some repetition.

There are several difficulties involved with translating biblical Hebrew into English. English utilizes more words than any other language, especially Hebrew. Therefore, one Hebrew word may have a fairly large variety of possible translations, depending on the context of the passage. This obviously leaves room for interpretation. Most biblical Hebrew words have a root of three letters. The meaning may change depending on addition or omission of a prefix or suffix. For example, the root word (TzDQ) may be interpreted as right, righteous, righteousness, just, justice, justify, honest, correct, innocent, blameless, acquittal, vindicate, equitable, or charity. To complicate matters further, one English word may have several Hebrew interpretations. For example, the Hebrew words for the term "evil" include Ra'a, Resha'a, Ragezeni, Moseri, Chota, Cheli, Mezieq, Nezeq, Tzereh, and Hereh-Ason.

Each of the five manuscripts within the 1701 edition was produced during a different time period, while the manner of writing Hebrew was changing and improving. In each manuscript there is a different form and dialect of biblical Hebrew. Some of the dialects are of a very ancient form that was never intended to be translated into English. The first sections appear to have been derived from the most modern manuscripts. The style of writing in each book is different, with the use of different prefixes and suffixes, and different verbs and word spellings, and the expressions varied from section to section. The later sections are a bit "degraded" in places, as they are transcriptions of the most ancient manuscripts, and they were the most difficult to translate. For these reasons, the translation may seem rough and the "flow" of the text changes throughout this book. However, there is no way to accurately interject terms for the sake of literary integrity without possibly making an incorrect assumption. Those readers who have studied medieval Hebrew texts will understand the meaning as presented. Those not well-versed in this type of material may have difficulty, but they can also research similar works for clarification.

Due to the rarity of the Sepher Rezial, I could not locate alternate texts for comparison. I obtained two fragmented texts in English translation, but neither was of much use for comparison. One section of this text was published in English translation as Sepher Ha-Razim: The Book of the Mysteries. In the preface of this translation, the editor states that “. . . no English translation [of “Sepher Ha-Razim”] exists.”²⁰ The 1966 Hebrew edition used for this translation was edited by Mordecai Margalioth.²¹ Also, an English translation of a Raziel manuscript was posted anonymously on the Internet. This consisted of less than 100 pages, and was titled Liber Ratziel: The Book of Salomonis. It was obviously taken from a Latin manuscript, as many passages were left in the original Latin.²²

There are several concepts discussed in detail in this translation that may be unfamiliar to novices. Biblical Hebrew texts often use several names for God, and this book is certainly no exception. The most commonly used name here is (Hebrew: HQBH). This is an acronym for Hova Qedesh Berek Hova, which translates “He is holy. Blessed is He.” When this acronym is used, I translate it simply as “God.” Other names of God employed in the text include El, Elohim, Elohim, Elohinu, Eloah, Yah, Yehuwa, Adonai, Ahieh, Shaddai, and Melek Meleki Melekiem (The king, king of kings). In these cases, I simply leave the word in the English equivalent of the Hebrew pronunciation.²³ Also, the letter Heh followed by an apostrophe was often used as “The Lord.” There are other mystical words in the text that do not translate clearly into modern English, so I have also left these in the English equivalent of the Hebrew characters. Table 1 on page 19 shows the Hebrew characters and the Roman equivalents used in this book. Please note that letters in parentheses (Hebrew: IHOH, for example) may not be translated as they are phrases used repeatedly throughout the text, or they are referring to the unspoken name of G-D.

One of the most important aspects of this book is the material concerning the various names of God, specifically the “72-fold name,” the “22-fold name,” and the “42-fold name.” According to

Trachtenberg, “The name of 22, however is another matter, more interesting and puzzling—and much more important for the magician. Its debut was made in Sepher Raziel. . .” Trachtenberg presents an extremely informational essay on the names of God. He also discusses the Sepher Raziel extensively throughout this same chapter, as well as in the following one, on angelic names.²⁴

Another important concept discussed is the five names of the human soul. Each name corresponds to a certain aspect of the soul. The Neshemah refers to the breath of life. Nephesh refers to the soul itself. Ruoch refers to the spirit or mind. Cheyah refers to the life or vitality of the spirit. Yechideh refers to the unity or uniqueness of the spirit.

The concept of the Hebrew hells is also detailed. According to Hebrew mythology, there are actually seven hells: Gihenam (hell), Sha'arimath (the gates of hell), Tzalemoth (the shadow of death), Barashecath (the pit of destruction), Tithihoz (the clay of death), Abaddon (the perdition), and Shahol (the highest, triple, or Supernal hell). In qabalistic lore, these are described as the ten hells in seven palaces, and they correspond to the ten sephiroth of the qabalistic tree of life.

The divisions of the Garden of Eden are mentioned several times in the first few sections. According to the Old Testament (Genesis

²² Probably Sloan Ms. 3846. See Appendix.

²³ In modern Hebrew texts, the name of God is never spelled out, but is often represented by two Yods. In prayer, this is usually pronounced as Adonai. Devout Jews will not even write the name God in English, and instead write out G-D.

2:10-14), the Garden of Eden is divided by four rivers. The first is Pishon, which flows around the land of Havilah. The second is Gihon, which flows around the land of Cush. The third and fourth rivers are the Tigris and the Euphrates. These are two actual rivers that defined the boundaries of the ancient land of Mesopotamia, which today is essentially the land in the area of Iraq and Iran. In fact, the word "Mesopotamia" means literally "between the rivers."

In his foreword, the original editor states that this work is a compilation of several manuscripts. He also claims to have proofread the text repeatedly to insure that this book would be "worthy to be studied by the children of my people." Although there is some repetition, the translation presented here is, for the most part, verbatim, in order to preserve the integrity of the text, as well as the intention of the original editor. I have also proofread the text repeatedly, and have taken great pains to produce an accurate transcription. I truly believe that the original editor would find this English translation to be worthy of study by the children of his people.

The title page is also of interest. We have reproduced it here, and the translation is as follows:

This is the book of the history of man [Sephera Adem Qedemah] that was given to him by the angel Rezial. This is the gateway of the Lord. The righteous come forth. Rise upon the path. Rise to the House of El. Reach the glory of El. In every house of Israel, it is treasured. Rise up and see descendants most wise and intelligent. Prosper and be blessed. Extinguish the fire of enemies, that they do not rule in the house. Of every evil spirit and wicked enemy, fear not in the dwelling. Of who has this holy book, glory and honor to you. Keep it hidden and concealed near silver and gold in a house of treasure. In the course of sickness and misfortune, let there be salvation quickly. Testify [bear witness] and proclaim to all learned in the Torah.²⁵

²⁵ The Torah is the holy book of the Jewish people, consisting of the first five books of the Old Testament. It is kept as a heavily ornamented scroll within an ark in the Temple, usually upon the pulpit. It is often carried and worshipped during ceremonies. The word "Torah" may be translated as "law," and may also be interpreted as "instruction" or "teaching." See Metzger and Coogan, eds., The Oxford Companion to the Bible (New York: Oxford University Press, 1993), p. 747.

FOREWORD

BY THE MASTER PROOFREADER
[HEBA'AL HEMEGIEHEH]

IN THE NAME OF THE UNITY of the tabernacle of the Lord [Hegebieh] and the dwelling of the Lord [Shekinethieh], it is secret and hidden. Blessed is the name of the glory of the kingdom forever.¹ See it restore the glory of life everlasting [Chieh La'avolemiem]. Endure therein and know every science of secret and hidden things.

This is the Book of the History of Man. Study and learn. Proclaim to the generations, from the beginning until the end. Of the most direct path of the Lord, the righteous journey therein, becoming strong unto Shem [Hebrew letters: Sh"M].² Break through as the dawn. Illuminate the eyes. See visions come in abundance. Visions of the illumination. Evil does not befall the righteous by understanding the commandments of purification coming forth from the ten books.

This book was concealed and locked away in a house of treasure for many years. The children of my people [Benai A'ami, usually a reference to "my countrymen"] are enlightened by the printing. In the [old] days, my ancestors did not speak the word, and regretted not hearing the word. Upon seeing the vision of two visions [Rah Rayithi Shethi Rayivoth], it was printed in large quantity.

In the book are proclaimed the images of the letters from all the world, printed clearly. The holy and honored book is response to the commandments of the Torah. This was given long ago, financed by the Rabbi Obeadieh the Elder. A great outcry arose. The work was diminished and error after error discovered. I succeeded in reducing the errors by careful study, and seeking out the best portions of the book.

There are two books from other countries. I see mine is the original of all of them. They have all been copied from my book. I see the doctrine corrected for the benefit of the children of my people. Also included is the smaller work of Eleazer, son of the Rabbi Judah [see Introduction], who received the work of Merkabah [chariot] from the pious Rabbi Judah.³ The rabbinical Judah the Hassidic received it from his father, Rabbi Simeon the Hassidic.⁴ Obadiah himself proofread it, and sealed therein by the teacher of the great illumination, Rabbi Ta'abeli,⁵ found during sojourn in the Land of Israel [Aretz Tzebi]. He traveled from one end of the world to the other. Those not dwelling in the land are not passed over. As travelers, as immigrants to Israel, dwelling in lamentation without possessions in the house, they are not passed over. They also receive greatest benefits by this book, from prayers rising up. From the beginning, the prayers are answered at once. Cry for joy all the day. There is no second to understanding the knowledge revealed by the name. Know the name to proclaim and be answered.

The great prophets were not able to make prophecies until studying this book, beginning properly on the third page.⁶ The book prepared them to make prophecies. The Lord gives wisdom to understand every word in the world. It is required to prepare

them, as the jars of flour of the prophet Elihu [see The Book of Job], and the vessels of oil of the prophet Elijah [see Kings I, the Old Testament], and the fifty burnt offerings of the prophet Israel. When properly prepared, this book proclaims the Earth full with knowledge.

Also, it is written on the third page of the book, all pure are blessed and favored. The impure will not understand and not become wise. Let it be known, the words coming forth from this holy book are honored and revered. The impure profane by foolishness. The worthy become wise by understanding the knowledge. Herein are all the tributes [Medoth] written in the book of the great Rezial.

The book was not properly established by Obadieh. The work failed. The value of this holy book diminished, not being complete and corrected. The pure did not receive great benefit and usefulness by petition and prayer. It is required to speak all names and proclamations correctly. Only then to receive vision after vision, and the answer of answers to the secret of secrets.

The people dwelling in Egypt, who settle outside the land of Egypt, are not oppressed by powers of evil [Qliphoth] ruling the land from above. Shaitan commands the powers of evil, ruling from above and bound by the dwelling of the Lord [Shekineh].⁷ Proclaim the day of retribution [Iyem Shelemeh] to punish the sons. The shadow of death [Tzalamoth] falls, bringing darkness across the lands. Israel languished, until the words of the Torah and word of the prophet. Death comes forth through the window [Chalon] by the powers of evil [see Exodus 11:1–11:8, the tenth plague of Egypt]. Cover the window and speak, protect us from the cloud passing over. The darkness falls, seen in the visible heavens. The prophets saw the vision by the virtue of the book. Serve the holy spirit [Ruoch Hakadesh]. Go forth from the cave, as the finger of a hand in the wall of the palace, loathsome and abominable. The hole closed and a great cloud passed over, spreading an abominable covering of bitumen [Chemar].⁸

The prophets receive understanding. Fill the belly with all wisdom of the universe. There is nothing more precious than learning the wisdom of the qabalah, upholding the Mishnah [codification of Jewish oral law]. Without understanding the knowledge, there is no interpretation of the Mishnah, no knowledge of the work of the Merkabah, no learning the Gemara [commentary of the Mishnah], and no interpreting the unity of God. From understanding the knowledge, receive wisdom to interpret the significance of the unity of God. Begin the path of the Lord, but not without understanding the knowledge of the doctrine of the book. Is it not so, what Ezekiel and other prophets have written, bound, and sealed in the book?⁹

Change the names of the Malechiam.¹⁰ In times of destruction [Choreveh], as in the Midrash of the scriptures¹¹ when Shaitan was cast out of heaven to the earth, where there is not understanding of the true meaning [Pheshat, the literal or plain meaning]. Of every work of qabalah, it is necessary to establish the seasons, the months, the days, and the hours. In every hour, change the name of the Malechiam, guided by the pages of this book. God created darkness to establish the hours. In the Midrash, Shaitan commanded the king of flesh and blood to extinguish the lamps. The Sun and Moon darkened. The shining stars increased.

Change the Malechiam watching over the heavens and Earth. Reveal the words of absolution by the Torah of Moses. Then the prophecies are revealed. Ears hear and eyes see. Cover the ears not to hear, and close the eyes not to see.

The qabalah is perfection, the root of the Torah. There are two Tablets of the Decalogue [Sheni Lochoth Haberith] arranged in order. The pure revere purity. It is indeed necessary to study and learn the 613 precepts of the Talmud. Solomon divided and distinguished the secret portions.¹² By grace of the Lord, ⁹ Ezekiel was a prophet who lived from 593–571 B.C.E. See the Book of Ezekiel in the Old Testament.

¹⁰ This term is often used as a general reference to angels. In some texts, the Malechiam are actually a specific order of angels.

Goodness is the last word of the first wisdom. The beginning path to the end. According to the commandments, exceed in goodness from the revealed [Negelah] teachings of secret things.¹⁴ You exceed in goodness by keeping the commandments.

Proclaim the lamp of the commandments of the Torah, the secret light.¹⁵ Do not forsake the commandments written in the Torah. The light reveals that the commandments are superior. The light reveals the commandment as a lamp. The Torah is light [see Proverbs 6:23]. The secret is revealed. Bring forth a small lamp before the flame. Extinguish the burning flames as flame consumes flame. The fire of God goes forth to consume it. The lamp of Elohim.

The Neshemeth of man [see Introduction] is the root of perfection. Reach to God. Reach unto the Lord Elohim. The small lamp reaches to the great light. Make many commandments. Increase the lamps creating flames. Distinguish the secrets and reveal them. Become wise by the power of God. Reveal the divisions without reducing the commandments. Go forth to dwell in the house. Establish the prayers. Build the foundation of the Sukkah.¹⁶ Dwell therein in prayer. Speak to the Lord and proclaim prayers above in reverence. Complete the tabernacle in prayer. Forgive the guilty banished [Diaspora].¹⁷

Keep all commandments. Reach to the Lord. The secrets are revealed to your sons. Dwell in the world. The son and father are as one.¹⁸ All righteous dwell in the presence of power [A'atzemov].¹⁹

¹³ On page 2 of The Bahir (York Beach, ME: Samuel Weiser, 1970), translated by Aryeh Kaplan, Kaplan notes: "The word 'beginning' (Reshit) is nothing other than Wisdom. It is thus written (Psalm 111:10), 'The beginning is wisdom, the fear of God.'"

¹⁶ A tabernacle built of branches and leaves often adorned with fresh fruit.

¹⁷ A Greek term meaning "dispersion." See Oxford Companion to the Bible, p. 169.

¹⁸ The symbolism of the father and son are extensive. See the Old and New Testaments and other original sources.

The seal of Elohim is 96 by Gematria.²⁰ In the beginning, [Berashith] Elohim created the seal (Hebrew letters: ShAaHZ) upon a gourd [Dela'ath].²¹ The wise understand and hereafter reach to God.

An abominable cloud of bitumen comes forth from the heat. Do not be destroyed by the powers of evil. Stand trembling before judgment.²² Afterward, man speaks of the punishment of death [see Genesis 3]. Tremble before the wrath and be consumed by heat. The Torah speaks of heat to consume.

All are locked outside the gate. Weep and lament in Gihenam [the first hell; see Introduction]. In lamentation, experience 32 visions, the key of the 32 paths of wisdom and power of man. Of Yod Heh Vau Heh, shed tears until now revealing the secret of secrets concealed from ancient times. The secrets of the Neshemeth and Malachim above.

The pure learn and understand the words of the book. Be with Elohim as Enoch was taken by Elohim.²³ At the established time, speak to Israel of the act of El.

This is the Book of the History of Man and the Book of the Origin of Man. The worthy see the book of books is truth.²⁴ Behold, man is sustained in the Garden of Eden. Man received the secret of ten books from God through the medium of Rezial, the holy angel appointed over the highest and most holy mysteries. The ten highest plates are engraved of the most holy wisdom. There are 72 kinds of wisdom. The divisions are revealed as 170 (Hebrew: MAH OSh-BAaIN) engravings of the highest secrets. By means of the book, engrave the wisdom and reveal 1005 (Hebrew: ALP OChMSh) keys to the highest and most holy secret, concealed in ten books.²⁵ The book was assembled at the time God indicated for Raphael to write ten books, as the intermediary of man.

Then came Abraham. By the ten books, he knew of the foolishness and disobedience in the world. He knew of Enoch writing ten books. Because of the foolishness in the world, he divided them. The brilliance was restored. Enoch rose up to reach the splendor and ceased being a man. You sent forth the holy angel to teach ten high wisdoms and deliver ten books. Keep hidden in the Tree of Life [Ayilon Chiyeh, see Genesis 2-3]. Learn the divisions. It is true that God gave this book to man through Rezial, the angel.

The book came to Rabbi A'qivah and Rabbi Ishmael. The teachings of the Book of Formation were revealed by the Book of the History of Man.²⁶ It was handed down from generation to generation to A'qivah. He rejoiced in the warmth of the light. It is also written in the Gemara, reveal to the generations. Rabbi A'qivah rejoiced in the laws. The gift is seeing the generations. Reveal the visions at once. Be in awe by what is written on page 42 [of the original Hebrew text].²⁷ Write the names upon a myrtle leaf. It is not forbidden to engrave these seven names, as it is forbidden to engrave Ahieh. The gift to the worthy is knowing the signs of the ninth section.

The worthy come forth in purity. Learn from the pages of this book. Work in holiness and purity. Sons and grandsons of the pure father are created in purity. Only the father is required to guide therein to glory, as it is written in the Book of Vestments in the first section of this book.

It is required to keep this book in a house of treasure with silver and gold. Surely be delivered from blight and misfortune and affliction, and receive great benefit and usefulness.

²⁴ Psalms 85:12. "Truth sprout up from the earth, and righteousness looks down from heaven."

²⁵ The Zohar notes 670 mysteries and 1500 keys, see the passage quoted in the Introduction. Also, see Rappaport's Myths and Legends of Ancient Israel, volume I, page 148.

In the first section of this book is the Book of the Vestment. Therein are works of the book, of how it was given to man by Rezial, the angel, and how to be guided therein. Also, the names of the seasons, and the names of the Malachim ministering in every season and every month and every day. Also, the names of the heavens and Earth, and every spirit and angel ministering over every sign of the zodiac, and the angels of the seven planets in every season, and days of the week.

In the second section is the Book of the Mighty Rezial. The corrected doctrine is sweet as honey dropped from the honeycomb. Also, the work of Merkabah and words of wisdom. All words are properly corrected and suitable to be revealed to the worthy. Also the works and actions of the Malachiem, and knowledge of winds and rains and such things.

In the third section is knowledge of the 72-fold name and the actions of the letters and vowel signs.

In the fourth section is the Book of Noah. The actions of the greatest works are written. Also, of the work of Berashith and prayers to rise up in exaltation.²⁸

In the fifth section is the Book of the Signs of the Zodiac. Also the charms [Qomeya'avoth] over all things, tried and proven. Also the 22-fold name and 42-fold name, and their actions.

It is required to establish and make known, not to speak the most holy names aloud. Only regard them in the heart, even in prayer. It is written in the Gemara, worship the Lord the true God in all hearts. The prayers are difficult to learn. Much sleep is required to learn the meanings of the letters. Remember the holy names, as required to prepare, but do not speak them aloud.

It is also required to prepare, by rabbinical consecrations and devotions not printed in this book, for a period of ten years. These are not printed here, as a wise man said it is not appropriate to print them in this holy book. Knowledge against knowledge hinders understanding. The rabbinical, combined with that printed here, are united as one. Forsake them and be cursed by all plagues foretold in the Torah of Moses. It is established, those not keeping every commandment of the Torah are accursed. Forsake one commandment and sin unintentionally, the foolish are accursed. Let it be known the knowledge is reserved for those prepared by rabbinical consecrations and devotions. The scholars of Earth are favored in the eyes of the Lord.

Now it is time the transcription is printed. I have copied it letter by letter, with special attention to the most holy names, and also the names of the Malachim. I proofread it four times, letter by letter. If there are any errors, I beg the Lord to forgive me. It is now prepared to be printed and bound by Isaac Ben Checheber Abraham, Amsterdam.

²⁸ The term Berashith means "Genesis," and translates literally to "in the beginning." It is also the very first word of the book of Genesis, the first book of the Old Testament.

BOOK ONE

PART 1

BOOK OF THE VESTMENT [SEPHER HAMELBOSH]

IT IS DECREED, THE HOLY AND PURE ARE FILLED with secret wisdom [Rezi Chokmah]. The knowledge is the result of understanding.

The wise are humble and cry in joy from the names learned in clear language. The chosen are pure of heart. Make to heal the body. Give grace that measures the strength of the light of the shining star. Gird with the strength. The power is established forever by the actions before the generations. Rejoice in silence from generation to generation of the holy heights [Qedoshov Merom]. It is written as pure gold. A bubbling fountain of purity is established in the center of the sublime power. Of the works of glory, the most precious pearls are not compared with the glory, nor the finest gold of Aphier.¹ The value of wisdom cannot be measured, nor understanding of knowledge. Also, there is no measure to the value of the secrets written herein, as revealed by Elohim.

As the force of fire, all search therein. As the ruler of the heavens, all search therein. The Tree of Life is supported and guarded and protected, as the apple of the eye. By reverence of the Lord, the glory is obtained. Obtain the glory to obtain life. Of understanding, receive wisdom. Of salvation, keep from death. Of fulfillment of the Nephesh, by consecration. Of the power, be strengthened by reverence of the Lord. Of learning the knowledge, understand and fill the heart with wisdom. From drawing of life, increase from the sole to the heel. Form divisions in the Garden of Eden.

Elohim treasures the reverence. The Lord fills all the Earth with glory, as in heaven where the throne is established. There is no measure to the glory. Seven fountains rise and fall to honor a thousand thousands ministers [Mesharethim] and a myriad myriads hosts [Tzebavoth].² The force of fire ignites the river of fire flowing forth. The sound shakes the nations in fear of destruction. A vision comes forth of the image of a fiery archer as Tharshish and Sardonyx, and arrows as swift as lightning.³

The throne of the glory resembles ice [crystal]. Surrounded by Malachim, the archer Ophan kindles the flames.⁴ The people of the dominion tremble in fear and cover their eyes. The Lord made clouds and fog all around, wrapped in swaddling cloth, dwelling alone upon the throne, concealed and hidden.

The worthy go forth to the hidden light. The most profound secrets are revealed. The revelations are made clear, not obscured by darkness. There is nothing in all the universe that compares. All actions and desires are fulfilled by works revealed. Become proficient and results occur quickly. Those who attempt to duplicate the works receive no results. The souls [Nepheshoth] of the disobedient and rebellious are punished by condemnation. By desire, to establish the curse. The sea dries up. The Sun and Moon darken. The light of the stars becomes faint. The mountains shift and fall, and the Earth trembles. This is the result of arrogance. Those chosen are strengthened by the power of the wisdom, established by understanding the knowledge.

In the holy book are 72 signs, given by Michael, the great prince above seven princes, ministering before the king, king of kings [Melech Melechi Melechim]. From it, Adam, the first man, received the beginning wisdom. From it, awaken and proclaim the names of every living creature and bird and creeping thing and fish. From understanding, increase the wisdom of all created by Elohim on the sixth day of Genesis [Berashith].

Adam read the holy book and learned the letters and words. He knew the words were true. The knowledge lifted him above all other creatures. He was in awe from all he saw therein, and understood that all that is written in the book is the truth.⁵ It is true; all of the words in the book are most holy. Great is the glory of every power.

In holiness and purity, perform the operations. In humility and modesty, succeed in all works. Become wise by the spirit of wisdom [Ruoch Chokmah].

It is written, Adam prepared a bar of gold and purified it twice by fire. Then [he] engraved thereupon the signs of the holy book, in holiness and purity. Then [he] placed the book in a cleft of the rock on the east side of the Garden of Eden—not to fall to Earth, but to endure and sustain the power. In every place, Adam was sustained.

It is proclaimed, Adam wandered upon the earth, as a ship upon the sea. He remembered and recorded when mountains melted like wax; and the sea went forth as hoar frost; and fire went forth as dust; and lions and leopards and bears and animals of the pasture stood silent and still; and insects rose up in the air as birds; and the sea became a desert wilderness.⁶

He remembered and recorded the letters of the holy name before the Sun and the Moon and Orion [Hakesil]. By the light of all luminaries, rule in righteousness and in reverence of Elohim. Also, hold dominion over the spirit [Ruoch] and over violence [Shad] and over misfortune [Phega'a, or enemy] and adversaries [Shatan] rising up over men and women. It is written, be summoned as you wish and desire.

He recorded when the stone wall of the tower suddenly fell to the ground; and fruit trees bear fruit before the proper time; and [people] take flight before battles of war.

Everything was revealed to him: of the holy spirit [Ruoch Hakadesh], of death and life, of goodness and evil. Also, the mysteries of hours and minutes of time, and number of days. Calculate the seasons and anniversaries [Yobelim, refers to the equinoxes and solstices] until the end of the universe. Measure the time from the beginning until the end.

⁵ Psalms 119:160. "The beginning of your word is Truth."

Then serve his son, Seth.⁷ For ten years, instructed according to the way of the holy book, he received understanding of all letters and words engraved in the holy book, of all powers revealed. He knew by the powers therein to perform miracles, and learned to perform the works. He kept the book hidden away in the cleft of a rock.

From the book, Adam learned that the time of death drew near. Every day, he rejoiced in adjuration, not eating fruits or vegetables or any meat [giving] forth blood. Every day, [he bathed] in the purity of running water, once in the morning and once in the evening. He spoke to his son, Seth, by adjuration alone, not guided by the holy spirit. Preparation is difficult. Work only in humility and reverence, in purity and holiness. Every path is revealed and you become wise by the signs.

After all this, Adam was released to the long home [Beth A'ao-lam, a reference to the cemetery or grave]. His son, Seth, served the Lord. He was sustained therein by every power, not turning to the left and right from every word spoken by his father, Adam. He became wise from understanding the knowledge, and received the wisdom of the holy book. He opened the gate of wisdom and understanding. Know the difference between good and evil, be repelled by evil and choose goodness.

See and behold the generations of ancestors coming after. The foolish and the vain and the sinful profane by proclaiming false idols in the name of God. The disobedient and rebellious tolerate suffering, not knowing or understanding. Journey in darkness.

Seth became wise by the secrets of the book and the letters of the holy name engraved therein. He learned that God would cause the sea to overflow and destroy all the world by his power. He kept the book in a vault of gold and also placed in the vault all the precious spices, and kept it hidden in a cave. He lived in the city of Enoch, built by his brother Cain [see Genesis 4:17].

⁷ Seth was Adam's third son, after Cain and Abel. See Genesis 5:3.

BOOK ONE

PART 2

THIS IS THE PRAYER OF ADAM, THE FIRST MAN

THIS IS THE PRAYER SPOKEN BY ADAM when cast out of the Garden of Eden. From [his] prayers for mercy, [he was] given the holy book by the compassion of the Lord.

Adam spoke: Lord, eternal God of the universe, [you] created all the universe by power and glory.¹ The kingdom is everlasting beauty, going from generation to generation. Nothing is unknown and nothing hidden from your eyes. You created me by your hand, to hold dominion over all living creatures and lord over actions.

The cunning and accursed serpent of the tree deceived my wife and me by lies, leading [us] astray to eat the fruit of the tree of knowledge. I know not what will become of my wife and myself and my sons, and the generations coming after. I am disobedient and foolish, running away before your power, not answering nor raising my eyes, ashamed of sins, of wickedness and iniquity, knowing you would cast me out into day.

Here am I, in the wilderness, to plow the soil and toil upon the earth, receiving nourishment from it, trembling in fear upon the earth, dwelling, from this time, by eating the fruit of the tree of knowledge and not heeding your words, not receiving wisdom. I know not what will come from foolishness.

You are merciful and rule with great compassion. I am the first man you created and breathed into me Ruoch and gave the Nephesh [see Introduction]. I beg mercy of compassion. Be slow to anger and show mercy as prayers rise up to the throne of glory. I petition for salvation from the throne of compassion. Let there be mercy. I desire to speak in your presence, no longer hiding as I pray for mercy. The everlasting Lord of the universe holds dominion over all, ruling in great compassion.

I pray you reveal what will come of the generations coming after. What will occur every day and every month. I pray you do not conceal the wisdom. Watch over me and sustain my labors.

Adam prayed for three days. God sent forth Rezial, the angel, who dwelled upon the river going forth from the Garden of Eden. He was revealed to Adam as the Sun went black. By his hand, he gave the book to Adam, saying: "Do not fear and lament no longer. From the day you served in prayer, the prayers were heard. I come to give the knowledge of the words of purity and great wisdom. Become wise by the words of this most holy book. They reveal until the day of death. All sons serve below. All generations coming after are guided by this holy book to prosper in purity. Be humble in Ruoch. Reveal all that is written therein. Know what comes to pass every month, and between day and night.

"Every word is revealed. Learn when to eat, when to fast, and when to honor A'arob;² what to do in heavy rain or in times of drought; how to increase crops; hold dominion over wickedness in the world; [what to do] when plagued with locusts [Arbeh] and locust larvae [Chasiel]. [Learn what to do] when fruit is picked off the trees; when [you are] plagued with boils; when to fight wars and when to turn away. [Learn how to act] when disease comes to man or beasts; when the good come upon the highest favor; when the wicked spill blood; when to lament that the profane desecrate the flesh."

Adam drew near and heard, learning to be guided by the holy book. Rezial, the angel, opened the book and read the words. Hearing the words of the holy book from the mouth of Rezial the angel, he fell upon the ground trembling in fear. Rezial spoke: "Rise up and be strong. Revere the power of God. Take the book from my hand and learn from it. Understand the knowledge. Make it known to all pure. Therein establish what will occur in all time."

² A rabbinical provision alleviating Sabbath restrictions on eating certain foods, carrying certain things, or walking to a certain place.

Adam took the book. A great fire kindled upon the bank of the river. The angel rose up in flames and returned to heaven. Then Adam knew the angel had been sent forth by Elohim, the holy king, to deliver the book, sustained therein in holiness and purity.

The words of the book proclaim works to perform when seeking to prosper in the world. For three days before the New Moon [Rash Chadesh may refer to the first of the month], prepare by fasting. Do not drink wine nor lay down with his wife. Bathe in the sea before the rising Sun.

Then bring two turtledoves.³ Slaughter them with a knife of brazen metal [brass or copper] with two edges. Slaughter the first turtledove with one edge of the knife. Slaughter the second turtledove with the other edge. Remove the intestines and wash in the sea. Bring three shekels of aged wine, pure frankincense, and a little honey, pure and clear. Mix all together and fill the bellies of the turtledoves. Then cut them into pieces. Place the pieces upon burning coals before the rising Sun of noon as a burnt offering.

Then be wrapped in white robes and go forth unshod. Write the names of the Malachim ministering in the months. Divide the names into three sections. Burn one section every day for three days. On the third day, gather up all the ashes. Scatter them upon the floor in the middle of the house. Then sleep above the ashes. Record above the names of the Malachim: the Hadieriem [mighty or noble ones], the Chazekiem [powerful ones], the Geborim [strong ones], the Kadeshim [holy ones], and the Moshelim [rulers, or dominions]. Then awaken. The Malachim came forth in the night in dreams to reveal their names. These were made clear, not in riddles, but all clearly revealed. Seek without fear.

After four generations, Enoch, son of Jarod, served and became wise in the reverence of Elohim.⁴ Keeping the body in purity, bathing in the sea of life [Mim Chiyem] and living in holiness before the Creator of the universe [Borah La'ahalom]. In a dream, the place was revealed to him where the book was concealed and also the path to lead therein. Work in holiness and purity. Rise early and walk until noon. Because of the heat of the Sun, stop to rest, not realizing [he rested] in the [holy] place. There, pray in the presence of God and be blessed. Rise up in purity and be sustained in the place of purity. While concealed therein, the light of all paths will be seen. Guide therein until seeing the highest holiness. Separate from those dwelling upon the Earth, taken by Elohim.

In this holy book is knowledge of the Malachim ministering in the seasons, the signs of the zodiac, all the luminaries, and those ministering in every month. Also, the names and invocations of every season, and the Malachim ministering in the four seasons of the year. Become wise from the names of the Earth and the names of the heavens. Also, the names of the Sun and Moon. Increase the glory by every power. Understand all knowledge over all creation.

Adam, the first man, understood the power was passed on to the generations coming after, by the power and the glory. After Enoch was taken by God, it was kept hidden, until coming to serve Noah, son of Lamech, a most righteous and honest man, loved by the Lord.⁵

In the time of five hundred years, there was great corruption on the Earth, by acts of violence and corruption of all flesh. Because of the ways of people of the Earth, a great cry rose up from the Earth to the heavens, before the throne of the glory of God.

Noah was favored in the eyes of the Lord. The Lord sent forth the holy prince, Raphael, to Noah. Raphael spoke, I have been sent forth by the word of Elohim. The Lord God restores the Earth. I make known what will be and what to do, and deliver this holy book. You will understand how to be guided therein by works most holy and pure. Hear the word of the Lord. You are the most righteous and honest man in all the ages. Behold, I give you this holy book to reveal all the secrets and mysteries. Work in holiness and purity, in humility and modesty. From it, learn how to make the ark from pitch pine [A'atzi Gupher]. Gather your sons and wives and sons' wives. Live in hiding for a short time, until the wrath of the Lord passes over.

Noah took the book from the hand of the holy prince, Raphael. In time, he received understanding of the knowledge therein. By the words of the holy book, [he was] guided unto the Ruoch of the Lord. He made the ark in the length and width written therein.⁶ By the knowledge, Noah became wise by the holy name and spoke to every house of God: Come to the ark, those righteous and worthy.

From the secrets of the book, Noah, son of Lamech, built the ark and understood all the words. [He] then brought to the ark two and seven males and females.⁷ The sky opened up and the flood lasted forty days and forty nights. Noah spoke by the Ruoch of wisdom and understanding, giving blessing to the Lord Elohim, the great, strong, and honored king.

Noah spoke: Blessed is the Lord, giving wisdom to revere your name. Blessed is the kingdom. By reverence, deliver the souls of the pious. In the secret place, protect and deliver us in salvation, living by your grace, forever serving your spirit. By understanding every word, every man and beast and living creature and bird and creeping thing and fish know of the power and great strength. Become wise by the great wisdom of the holy book. Make known when it is day and when it is night. Know when to eat and when to fast.

The prayers rose up to the throne of glory, giving salvation to all in the ark. The Ruoch of Elohim passed over the Earth, lowering the water. The ark rested gently upon the mountain of Ararat.⁸

Noah was guided by the wisdom of the book. It was made known to his son, Shem. From it, Noah learned to build the ark, and what would come. Shem was guided therein and sustained by the book, following the works in holiness. Shem handed down the book to Abraham,⁹ then from Abraham to Isaac, from Isaac to Jacob, from Jacob to Levi, from Levi to Moses, from Moses to Aaron, from ⁶ According to the Old Testament (Genesis 6:15), the ark was 300 cubits in length, fifty cubits in width, and thirty cubits in height.

⁷ According to the Old Testament (Genesis 7:2-4), God told Noah: "Take with you seven pairs of all clean animals, the male and its mate; and seven pairs of the birds of the air, also male and female, to keep their kind alive on the face of the earth."

⁹ According to the Old Testament, the lineage from Shem to Abraham was Shem, Arpachshad, Shele, Eber, Peleg, Rev, Serug, Nahor, and Terah. Terah was the father of Abram, who was later instructed by God to change his name to Abraham (Genesis 17:5).

Aaron to Phineas,¹⁰ from Phineas to his son, and to all the generations coming after.

All who are pure rise up in happiness and goodness by the knowledge. Become wise as established therein. All are not afforded grace and not all gain the understanding of the knowledge. The beginning wisdom comes from reverence of the Lord. By this, the wise man considers how to become wise therein. From understanding, man serves the Lord. Study the book in purity. Do not fall upon your face, trembling in fear. Do not go astray from the path of the Lord. Do not go before the power of evil. Come forth in goodness. Counsel the wicked to join together, casting off their wicked ways. Live in goodness and happiness is obtained in life, not being persecuted by evil spirits and wicked enemies. Deliver from misfortune at once. The house is blessed.

Journey to the high place to contemplate grace. Give blessings to the holy name. Attain the brilliance of the light. By visions, know all are good in the eyes of Elohim. Man knows, by visions, of the death of the wicked. Deliver the Nephesh of the righteous to live. Conceal the Nephesh in the foundation, enduring death by the power in the presence of the kings assembled. Serve in the name of God, the king over all kings.

All are sustained by this book. It is written, keep the body pure and do not defile the flesh. The wife is not to toil in impurity.¹¹ The Nephesh is not to die. All uncircumcised [A'arel]¹² are not to profane. Keep holy the flesh in the sea of life. Purify the body to be with Elohim. Do not consume unclean things. Do not toil in corruption. Work only in holiness by all written herein and prosper.

Those who are improper [wrongdoers] by the letters of the holy name, not keeping the body in purity and holiness, and corrupting the flesh, they are guided therein frivolously. By not keeping to the path, and by going with arrogance therein, [they] profane and desecrate the holy name. [They shall] be punished and perish from the world. [They shall] be accursed and an abhorrence in the world, not favored and not graced. The fire is not extinguished. [They will] wander in darkness, moving farther away from the light of the Lord.

Show reverence to the Creator of all the universe. Guide therein in purity and holiness. Understand the knowledge of all the words therein. Succeed in all the works. Be favored in the eyes of the Lord in mercy and compassion. All enemies tremble in fear before the power of the holy name. Proclaim to the wise and understand the knowledge. Travel the direst path to the Lord. Commit sins, and stumble, and fall before the power.

Prosper by the established and ordained blessings. Rise up to dwell in the light of the Lord, judged by the book.¹³ The humble bow down to serve. All go forth to the Lord, for five days in the beginning of the month, and five days in the middle of the month, and succeed in all works.

Rise up and be judged by the great book. In exaltation, declare the Lord Elohim in prayer. All serve and live as it is written by the Lord to live, and succeed in all works.

Be judged by the book of judgment. In judgment, all serve and worship in prayer.¹⁴ Of the works, change the name of the Moon and Sun, five days in the beginning, five days in the middle, and five days in the end.

¹⁴ In The Bahir, Aryeh Kaplan, trans. (York Beach, ME: Samuel Weiser, 1979), p. 24, it is noted: "As long as a person does judgement, God's wisdom is inside him."

¹⁵ The third season is omitted. It is quite safe to assume the passage should read: "During the third season, the Sun is in Libra [Mazenayiem], Scorpio [A'agerov], and Sagittarius [Qashat] for 91 days," etc.

It is generally accepted in biblical lore that there is an intimate connection between agriculture and religion. In fact, several of the major Hebrew religious festivals are based upon the harvesting of crops. For example, The Feast of Weeks, or Shavuhot, celebrates the completion of the grain harvest and the first fruit harvest. Also, the Feast of Booths, or Sukhoth, celebrates the final fruit harvest.

TRANSLATOR'S NOTE—The Hebrew in the talismans here in figure 1 is of an ancient form, and the translation is certainly open to interpretation. The numerous Yod Heh Vau combinations may possibly represent partial spellings of the name IHOH; however, HI may be translated as "oh," or "here is." HO may also be translated as "oh," or "alas." HIIH usually translates as "to be," but may also signify "the Lord." IHO may signify "Lord of." There are numerous possible interpretations. Also, AL and AHIH are names of God, although AL may also have various interpretations. Therefore, I have partially translated this talisman, leaving God names and Yod Heh Vau combinations in Hebrew characters. Additionally, the larger talisman presented here is quite difficult to translate. The translation presented is certainly open to interpretation.

³⁰ The chopheh, the canopy of flowers under which Jewish couples are married.

³¹ The tzietz is a gold ornament worn on the forehead of a rabbi.

Translation of the talisman (5):

HI HI splendor IH IHO AL blessing by IH to hasten IH great [strong] by the hand of [power of]. Strengthen [be great] by formation IHOH DSS.³³ AHHH IHOH HH IHO HIH desire [Kemeh]. HIH delight in desire, wondrous from praise. Desire glory. Desire to rush forth. Desire to make a vow. Desire to bind together. Desire that the pure be clean by purification. Of all serving, this is the glory. IH HI HO HIH IHOH HO HI HO SS.

Translation of the caption under the talisman:

These are the letters of the name to proclaim. Make the oath by those written above. After prayers by the letters, be in purity and holiness. Be upright in the heart and in cleanliness for the sake of deliverance by all works over every word and the word Ba'a-hesh [DBR BAa"HS].

Translation of the larger talisman:

Be pure in the fields of the province. Flow into the sealed valley from the open field. The faithful are separated by goodness. From the book, you write in detail of the work of the Lord [Degeriem].³⁴ Taking flight and passing by, you are grasped and lifted up. When taking flight miraculously, praise the shining splendor in the course of life. Oh, cover man in strength. Desire to turn aside. Ahieh gives support from deliverance. Lead to worship in the dwelling of the Lord. Exalt Ahieh as the redeemer. Be within by anointment in pure splendor of the commandment. Keep the commandments of great Shaddai. The worthy complete, forming to support one. From holy desires, bind in great strength around. Reveal from the shining (Hebrew: IHOH). Make the offering and revere Elohim. Of the splendor to me, the law of the hosts enlighten. Provoke wonder of pure splendor as the hosts dwell. Here is the clear voice. Dwell in the clear flames

³³ The Daleth is likely superfluous, as two Samekhs usually signify termination of the sentence.

of those above. Complete the division of El in perfection [Them Sera'aph Al Bethem]. Oh, here is where the Lord breaks forth [Ashetherieh]. Blessed is the name of the glory of the kingdom forever.³⁵

At the top of the diagram (Hebrew: QDOSh) translates as "holy."

The line at the bottom of the diagram translates: "Blessed is the name of the glory of the kingdom forever. Blessed is the Lord of the universe, Amen and Amen."

The line on the upper right side translates: "The Lord breaks forth to strengthen [or bind]. Here is the shining splendor of the glittering mountain of dew."

The line on the lower right side translates: "Complete the division of El in perfection." The line on the upper left side translates: "Through the ages, in a soft and tender voice."

The line on the lower left side translates: "Blessed is the name of the glory of the kingdom forever and ever. Complete the division of El in perfection."

³⁵ There are various possible interpretations of this: Them may be translated "complete," "end," or "perfect." Sera'aph may be translated as "division," "branch," or "thought." Ashetherieh may also be translated as "star of the Lord."

BOOK TWO

PART 1

THIS IS THE BOOK OF THE GREAT REZIAL

BLESSED ARE THE WISE BY THE MYSTERIES COMING from the wisdom. Of reverence, the Torah is given to teach the truth to human beings. Of the strength and glory, honor the Skekinethov. The power of the highest and lowest works is the foundation of the glory of Elohim. The secret word is as milk and honey upon the tongue. Let it be to you alone. The teachings are not foreign to you. This book proclaims the secret of Rezial, but only to the humble. Stand in the middle of the day, without provocation and without reward. Learn the tributes of the reverence of Elohim. Turn away from evil and journey on the path to pursue righteousness. The secret is reverence of the Lord. The worthy go directly to the secret. It is written, only reveal the secret of El to serve the prophets.

There are three secrets corresponding to the Torah of the prophets. All secrets correspond to these three. The first commandment is the first wisdom, reverence of the Lord.¹ It is written, reverence of the Lord is the first knowledge. The beginning wisdom is reverence of the Lord, corresponding to three wisdoms.

It is written, of the outer wisdom, rejoice and build the house of wisdom with the secret of the foundation. Be wise by opening the heart to the secret.

There are three kinds of secrets. The secret of the Merkabah [chariot],² the secret of Berashith [in the beginning, or Genesis],³ and the secret of the commandments [the laws of God].⁴ These are made clear by the help of Shaddai.

There are three kinds of reverence of heaven. They are reverence of the Lord, reverence of Shaddai, and reverence of Elohim. It is made clear that reverence of the Lord is to love the name of God and serve in love. It is written, man is happy to revere the Lord. It is not written here of reverence of Elohim, but only of reverence of the Lord.

It is written in the commandments to serve in love. Desire to regard in the heart and keep the commandments. In the commandments, it is said of the reverence of Elohim, revere Elohim, lest [you come] into the hands of temptation. Man is not to serve in temptation, of reverence before the king, not rising up by the name.

It is decreed, as it is written, Abraham was beloved. God spoke to him to lead his son. It is written, you know to revere Elohim. You know of love. Know it is decreed, man is happy not to journey by counsel of wickedness. It is written herein, man is happy to revere the Lord. Show reverence to the heavens all the day. Regard love in the heart. The reverence of the heavens is in the heart at all times, reverence of the purity of the Lord. Those giving reverence are loved by the Lord. There is much value in living in purity. Bathe in the glory of the light of Elohim. Go from darkness into light, divided from those led astray. As the light shines down upon the sea, that is the reverence of Elohim who spoke to Abraham. From love, understanding was created by the love and reverence. A thousand generations come after from the love.

It is written in the Midrash of three kinds of offerings. They are the burnt offering [A'avolah], the peace offering [Shelomim, or "thank offering"], and the sin offering [Chetath].⁵

There are three classes of righteousness. They are love, petition, and reverence. The burnt offering corresponds to love. The peace offering corresponds to petition. The sin offering corresponds to reverence. The burnt offering is a sacrifice to the glory of God alone. The peace offering and sin offering are for the sake of the living body. Proclaim love from the petition and petition from the reverence. From love, you serve God in righteousness. Give glory and honor to the kingdoms alone before all things. In goodness, the Lord created the universe by the word, not by labor. The God [Haloveh] and father and king is strong and wise, good and compassionate. You tolerate all things, filling all the highest and lowest, sustaining in the high places and bringing forth all creatures. You reveal the mysteries of the universe, the knowledge of good and evil. You tolerate wickedness for the sake of the restoration. Behold, all goodness to the righteous who love God. Give praise and laud over the greatest works.

The burnt offering is sacrifice. By petition, serve in the holy place, blessed is it. Fall in supplication and petition. Petition for every measure of goodness for the sake of the benefit of the body. This is the foundation of wisdom, understanding of knowledge. From this, bring light in the days. Heal the woman unable to conceive and make sons upright in the heart. You succeed in works of wealth and glory and treasures, all to the good. Petition the Lord above, thus sacrifice the peace offering.

Give reverence and serve God in great fear.⁶ Be delivered from curses written in the Torah. The punishment comes forth from the holy place, blessed is it. Its measure is longer than the Earth and wider than the sea.⁷ Receive salvation from affliction, injury, and suffering. Do not writhe in pain. Do not be ruled over by foreign lands. Do not bring death or speak evil. Fill the days in goodness and blessings in the world. Deliver from misfortune and affliction and destruction from the walls of fire in Gihenam. The wicked prepare to burn in flames on the day of the great judgment [Yom Hadin Hagedol]. By reverence of the Lord, rise up by sacrifice of the sin offering. Make three sacrifices: the burnt offering, the peace offering, and the sin offering.

⁵ There are five kinds of offerings described in the Old Testament (Leviticus 1:1-5:14): the burnt offering, the grain offering, the offering of well-being, the sin offering, and the offering with restitution.

Of sacrifices in the first house [Beth Achad] through the first priest [Kahen Achad] in the name of the one God [El Achad], three times in righteousness: by love, by petition, and by reverence. Complete them and be protected by God, protecting and loving you from petition and reverence.

The beginning wisdom is reverence of the Lord and love of heaven. The heart of the righteous burns as flames of fire. Keep the commandments in reverence of the Lord. This the Lord Elohim requires, not making reward for reverence and love. It is written of reverence and love, the Shem Hamephorash was created from love. Of the written word, this is the reverence of Shaddai. Revere God by keeping every commandment. (Reverence of God is not in itself glory, but keeping every commandment.)

Fall down in supplication and cry out to El. Establish the heart and grant the petition at once. Reject wickedness and condemn the wicked. Forsake reverence of Shaddai. Know to withhold mercy for sins. Forsake the petition, not revering the name of Shaddai, and not making desire or evil grow in the heart. In the middle of the house, the humble show reverence and gather in the house. It is written in the Midrash, withhold the mercy from those forsaking reverence of Shaddai. Stand and serve before God. Show reverence in prayer and receive tranquility therein. Deliver from all evil. Dwell in the secret place of the most high, hidden in the darkness of the shadow of Shaddai. Deliver from the mouth of the trap [the opening of the snare].

Petition in prayer. Speak, protect from traps. In every petition to Shaddai, be blessed by God the father [El Abiek]. By support of El Shaddai, be fruitful and multiply [Pherov Vorebov]. El Shaddai sees and turns away. Behold, be fruitful and multiply. Wherefore be silent, and bring forth from the secret place that the father reveals to you. Establish Shaddai, of sixty, four hundred, thirty and the Yod above [Hebrew: I' AaOLH, or ten burnt offerings] is five hundred.⁸ The man Job begets sons and daughters. There are five hundred of them.⁹ Five hundred strong ones [Aberiem], 248 sons and 252 daughters. There are four more daughters than sons. Thus be fruitful and multiply (Hebrew: PRO ORBO).¹⁰ By Gematria, the letters Tau Qoph are the name over be fruitful and multiply.¹¹

Therefore, establish to petition the name. Thus, the course of the universe is five hundred years. It is treasured by Shaddai as the measure of heaven. Speak of heaven. According to Shaddai, there is not enough to serve. Remember Shaddai by the prophet of the nations seeing Shaddai. Behold the reverence of Shaddai. Be aided by the name Shaddai, protected from the evil spirits [Hamezieqien]. By protection of Shaddai, lodge and speak prayers of supplication. Therefore the name is written upon the Mezuzah.¹² Penetrate the iron over the Mezuzah. Proclaim and remember the name Shaddai to protect from the evil spirits, that is (Hebrew: IHOH BATH BSh MTz"PTz Sh').¹³ Of the letter Shin of Shaddai, Shin is above [or "300 burnt offerings"] in the name of (Hebrew: IHOH). Of Shin above, (Hebrew: BATH BSh ShM HQDSh ODI) corresponds to (Hebrew: ID KOZO BMOK"SZ KOZO) written in the Mezuzah.¹⁴

⁹ In the Book of Job of the Old Testament, it is noted that Job had seven sons and three daughters (Job 1:2). This name may also be Joab, who was a general in King David's army. There are a few stories of Joab involving children. In the Midrash, one tale depicts Joab slaying 500 warriors in Kinsali, the Amalekite capital.

¹² The Mezuzah is a talisman attached to the doorpost. It contains a prayer written on a small scroll. Also, see Trachtenberg, Jewish Magic and Superstition, p. 145.

¹⁴ The name KOZO is considered the antithesis of YHVH, or "Tetragrammaton." The numerical value of KOZO is 39. Also, see Joshua Trachtenberg's Jewish Magic and Superstition, p. 92.

(Hebrew: BMOK"SZ ALHINO). Beth upholds Aleph, Mem upholds Lamed, Vau upholds Heh, Koph upholds Yod, Teth upholds Nun, Zayin upholds Vau. Here are fourteen signs corresponding to the three names (Hebrew: H' ALHINO). Therefore, write fourteen letters for the sake of the two corresponding to (Hebrew: H' ALHINO). Write Shaddai with Shin Daleth Yod.

The first Daleth corresponds to the back [or neck]. The Yod of Shaddai corresponds to the fathers, Jacob, Isaac, and Abraham. The final written words are (Hebrew: BATH BSh ShDI).¹⁵ Beth, Shin, Qoph, Daleth, Mem, and Yod.¹⁶ The beginning Yod Yod Aleph is the number of (Hebrew: AHIH).¹⁷ When adding the numbers Resh, Tau, Vau, Samekh, Tau,¹⁸ Israel proclaims Jacob to be Resh, Yod, Vau in number.¹⁹ That is to say, take Resh, Tau, Vau, Samekh, Tau, from the fathers, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Israel, here is 203.²⁰ Combine thirteen letters from the three names of the fathers, and here is 310. Thus the signs of the fathers correspond to thirteen tributes.

There are three praises. Of the Aleph before the name are 63 aspects [Bechineth].²¹ Therefore, see the God [El] of Abraham, God of Isaac, and God of Jacob, by El Shaddai. Also the secret of Shaddai is revealed by calculating Tau Qoph.²² The life of the fathers is 502 years. Abraham lived 175 years. Isaac lived 180 years. Jacob lived 147 years. Together, the years total 502.

Beth [with a value of 2] corresponds to heaven and Earth. In the course of 505 years, the fathers gather to them as the days of the heavens above the Earth. Make clear as the days of the heavens above the Earth. The course is 500 years as the lives of the fathers.

The letter Shin is in the house of prayer. First consider the correspondence to Jacob, that is written Israel.²³ Thus, praise in ¹⁵ The Gematria of these letters is 1019.

¹⁶ The Gematria of these letters is 456.

¹⁸ The Gematria of these letters is 1066.

¹⁹ The Gematria of these letters is 216.

²¹ In the text, it appears to read S"G (which is 63), however the lettering is a bit smudged.

²² The numerical value of these two letters is 500.

²³ See Genesis 32-35, where Jacob's name was changed to Israel.

prayer. Proclaim the praise, speaking: Praised is the ruler above, and the chosen cast down to Earth. It is written, be cast out from heaven to Earth, the beauty of Israel. Prayers proclaim the glory. By prayer with the letters of glory, stay upon the path of the Lord. Therefore, by the nine fathers [Thesha'ah Bab], give the crown [Apher] in the place of prayer.²⁴ Of the days of the Messiah, give praise below the crown.

It is written in the Book of Formation, the letter Shin reigns.²⁵ Bind to the crown and bind therein the heavens. Therefore, fire resembles Jacob in heaven. By the letter Shin, create fire, and see fire therein. Thus, in the house of Jacob is fire corresponding to the letter Shin, as Jacob wrestled the angel of fire.

Also, the letter Shin has three branches, corresponding to the three names of Jacob, Israel, and Jeschuron [a periphrastic name of Israel]. The letter Shin is over the noble houses [Bethiem Atzel].

It is written, the image engraved in the throne of glory resembles the image of a flying cherub. Come forth to Egypt. It is written, fly over as the cherub takes flight. Revere Israel by the hand of the strength. It is written to revere Israel, by the hand of the great grandfather [Seva]. Israel resembles Jacob over the sea. Sing the hymn unto Israel. The Lord reigns forever and ever. Therefore, resemble Jacob, according to the written truth. Give the truth to Jacob. According to this, do not go forth unto carved images [Phesolet]. The daughter, Dinah, was troubled by Shechem²⁶ and the maiden Aseneth,²⁷ daughter of Potipherah.²⁸ The tribes

²⁴ Apher actually translates "gray," "ash," or "meadow." It is probably a transposition for Phar.

²⁵ See passage 3:9 of the Sepher Yetzirah. This is presented on page 155 of Aryeh Kaplan's translation (Sefer Yetzirah (York Beach, ME: Samuel Weiser, 1990)).

²⁶ Dinah was the daughter of Jacob and Leah. Shechem was the name of a province, and the man for whom the province was named, who had raped Leah. Leah and her brothers then took severe revenge upon him. See Genesis 34:1–34:30.

²⁸ Potipherah was the father-in-law of Joseph, and a priest of On.

multiply to put forth the law.²⁹ Do not speak of idolatry. In the house of Jacob, written by Jacob, is the great name [Shem Ha-gadol] and the holy tzietz.³⁰ Take Mikal to become the wife of Potipherah.³¹ Proclaim Joseph to take the daughter.

Around the Shin, twelve prayers divide, corresponding to the twelve tribes. The three divide and three tribes spread out as they go forth from Egypt.

The letter Daleth corresponds to the back [or neck], corresponding to Isaac. Straighten the back to unite the name of God. Daleth is the flesh of the back. All the flesh of the back corresponds to the back of the neck. Of all the flesh of the back of the neck, wring the neck. Therefore, shave the back. Place the strap upon the flesh. Inquire of Isaac. The letter Daleth is over the head in purple [argaman, a purple or reddish-purple]. Therefore, the letter Daleth corresponds to the neck.

Also, draw above and below, dwelling in the fourth firmament, the name in the Holy Temple [Beth Hamikadesh], thus the holy tabernacle [Meshikan] of four coverings. The first covering is sky-blue [Thekaleth].³² The second veil is of goat skin. The third is of ram's leather. The fourth covering is of Egyptian leather [tachashim, seal, dugong, or badger skin].

In the lowest dwelling, Isaac is sacrificed upon the back of the altar of degrees [Mezabeach Shel Ha'aleh], therefore corresponding to Daleth. It is written in the Book of Formation, reign with Daleth. Bind it tight and create Mars in the fifth firmament.³³ Close to the Sun, it receives the heat of the Sun to be dry as fire. Therefore, Daleth corresponds to Isaac, the rising of the Sun. Mars is dry as fire and appointed over heat, and over anger and wrath. Therefore, when God is angry, remember Isaac, as he is honored. It is written, remove the ashes from the burnt offerings.

³⁰ The tzietz is a shining plate or talisman worn on the forehead of the rabbi.

³¹ Mikal was the daughter of Saul and wife of David. According to The Oxford Companion to the Bible (p. 546), the wife of Potipherah, Zuleika, attempted to seduce Joseph.

³² This refers to a colored dye obtained from a mussel (helix janthina), termed cerulean purple. However, the term may also mean sky-blue, light blue, or azure.

³³ See Sepher Yetzirah, 4:9–4:10.

The Yod of Isaac corresponds to Abraham tested by ten trials.³⁴ Give in prayer near the side of the first house over the first name Abraham. It is written in the Book of Formation, the letter Yod reigns. Bind to the crown and create therein Virgo.³⁵ Abraham takes his beloved bride [Sarah] as virgin and form with the letter Yod. The perfection of the Lord [Kalelieh] is separated. Rise over by counsel from the perfection [Kalivoth].³⁶ It is written, rise up to the perfection. It is written in contrast to the counsel, take instruction and correspond to perfection. Give counsel and speak to close friends. The father Abraham did not learn much from the book, but learned perfection is as two fountains or springs of wisdom.

Also, the letter Yod corresponds to Abraham lifting the hand of the Lord God. The Yod corresponds to the heart. It is written, the faithful reach out with the heart.

Also, the Yod corresponds to Abraham, as according to it, God foresees Abraham serves by ten trials. Create the universe by ten commandments. It is written of the history of the heavens and the earth, the name Abram became Abraham.³⁷

The ten numbers are nothing. Thus one and two, three and four, five and six, seven and eight, nine and ten. Then all calculations repeat. Begin eleven, twelve, and so on. Then twenty is two times the letter Yod. Thirty is three times the letter Yod, and so on. Thus all calculations are perfection. Nothing is concealed by language. By ten numbers, speak and close the mouth to speak profoundly.

At first, the Shekinah precedes the universe by myriad myriads years, or as many years afterward. The glory of the universe is above or below, deep and profound. It is in the east and west, north and south. How great is the light. In darkness, obscure the firmament. Here is the letter Yod. At first is the letter Aleph. At the end is the letter Beth. Gimel is above. Daleth is below. Heh is to the east. Vau is to the west. Zayin is to the north. Cheth is to the south. The light of the letter Teth reveals light in the air. Darkness obscures all

³⁵ See Sepher Yetzirah, 5:8.

³⁷ See Genesis 17:5.

things. All is formed. It is in all and it is all. Bow down by all. Rise up and give thanksgiving in the heart. As the letter Yod bows down, the ancestors of Abraham go forth. Understand by the Book of Formation. Reveal over the Lord [Adon]. Place it in the bosom and kiss the head. Make a covenant.

Also, much more is revealed in the secret work of Berashith with help of Shaddai.

Also, the letter Yod corresponds to Abraham as Yod upholds Raph. From Adam until Abraham is twenty generations. The universe was created by Yod. Bring forth small things, as Yod is diminutive. Yod is as a humble man, bowing down and rising up.

Also, make clear the reverence of Shaddai. Man serves God with love in the heart. Great is the reverence and devotion. Establish the heart. Keep the commandments. Rejoice in supplication to serve the creator of the universe. By rejoicing and reverence, serve the Lord in reverence and tremble in exaltation. It is written, serve the Lord by rejoicing. The heart rejoices to petition the Lord.

Revere Elohim and serve in fear of Gihenam and the day of judgment, of the suffering and torment. That is the reverence of Elohim. Judge and deliver retribution, as angered by the sins of man. Of every word, it is difficult to speak, Elohim, I do revere you and speak with great difficulty, very loudly at your feet. I shall not fall to rest, but journey to the house and revere you, lest I be punished. It is written, Elohim, judge me by reverence.

I revere Elohiel, speaking every word devoted in my heart. It is spoken, by the Lord Elohiel, revere and uphold the reverence of Elohim, not to fall from grace. In every place, revere Elohim and serve from the reverence.

Behold the reverence of the Lord. Serve in love, corresponding to the burnt offering. Be sustained in exaltation by the reverence of Shaddai, for not to revere is not to serve the Lord (That is not to serve).

Corresponding to the peace offering, fat [Cheleb] and blood is consumed [or burned]. The remainder is to the Lords [Leba'aliem]. The desire of the high priest [Kihenim] is the peace offering, bringing peace in the world. Serve from love and supplication, and strengthen the body. Give to him the Torah, of wealth and treasures and glory and understanding, revere Elohim. Serving in reverence is the foundation. Of the house of man [Aneshi Bethov], do not deprive support corresponding to the sin offering going over sins. There is great love from the petition and supplication from the reverence.

At this time, become wise and prosper. Of the love of the blessed, after, write the secret of the Merkabah. Let man be wise by reverence forever. Consider the wisdom of the world. By the glory, form the king of flesh and blood. Command the armies and go to battle to smite the enemies in the name of the Lord. Give reverence before going into battle. If there is not reverence, enemies lay waste, prevailing over the land in every dwelling.

The king of all kings, God, exalts in reverence before going on all paths. The Lord is everywhere and in every place. He observes the good and wicked in every place. The worthy revere the Lord in righteousness. Unite the nations in order that the nation [not] be divided. Work for the sake of the heavens. Every path is created from the blessings. Establish the heart. It is written, satisfy the Lord. He is eternal, therefore established.

Blessed is the Lord. Command man to bind and calculate every season. Of the man who is a sinner or thief or adulterer of women, bind to consider much. Of the wisdom, this man is not to know and not to come near, disgraced in every dwelling created by the wisdom of the Creator.

Consider the wisdom that created the commandments, making reward for the love. Serve the Lord a little and serve much. Also, man considers forever not to forsake the wish of the Creator.

Bring the Lord of judgment [Ba'al Hadin] before the magistrates [Sheliton]. Reveal that the magistrates rule over the necromancer [Ba'al Avob] and magician [Yida'avoni], or engage in demoniacal works [Ma'asheh Shedim] or works by the knowledge of the signs of the zodiac.³⁸ Do not be false or deceitful, as it is revealed the magistrates know all. Also, fear the works binding with an evil spell [Lechebierora'ath], lest [you] come forth to be judged before the magistrates.

³⁸ Ba'al Avob is the Lord of Necromancy. The term "necromancer" may be defined as one who calls up spirits to learn of the future. Yida'avoni means "wizard" or "soothsayer." Ma'asheh Shedim are works of demons or works of violence or destruction.

God gives life to man in the heart. By the path of reverence, reveal all thoughts and understanding of all works. Lord over people and know to summon the Lord of judgment. Speak the words to end deceit. Rise up that the words may be true. It is written, those not pure will not rise up to know of the universe.

It is made known when shame is necessary. Speak, I will not do acts of iniquity, nor deceive by speaking or writing words, not to establish before the eyes. Thus, in every hour and minute, consider the love and search the heart. Examine the perfection. Keep the commandments and show reverence over the lifetime.

Of the root of benevolent acts [Chesiedoth, may refer to Hasidism] measured previously, be judged by every word you write, of favor over all works.

Of the root of reverence, the words are difficult. Know you revere Elohim and perfection.

Of the root of supplication, rejoice in the heart in love of God. Rejoice in the heart from the petition of the Lord. Therefore, be loved and protected.

Of the root of the Torah, the most profound knowledge of the works of all words, it is written, all made by the Lord is good.

The root of the commandments is eight words, corresponding to the eight threads of the Tzitzith.³⁹ Write and remember all the commandments of the Lord.

The first thread corresponds to the eyes. Do not see without raising up the eyes. Do not brim with tears. After, the eyes do not close. Speak by the power of eyes, lest [you] forget the words seen. Cast down the eyes to salvation. Also, the Totephith is between the eyes.⁴⁰

The second thread corresponds to the ears. Do not be deceived by hearing lies, nor hear the ending of words. Israel hears the decrees.

The third thread corresponds to the throat. Do not swallow all abominations. Make to eat matzoh and similar things.⁴¹

³⁹ A fringed garment or shawl, draped around the shoulders of one praying in a Jewish temple.

⁴⁰ An ornament worn by the Rabbi upon the forehead.

The fourth thread corresponds to the mouth. Let the tongue not speak words. Of all words written, [do] not labor to make the oath, [do] not deceive by words or speaking the name, [do] not make the oath and speak falsehoods. Also, the teeth are not white in the mouth, or the tongue articulate.

The fifth thread corresponds to the hands. Do not lay the hand in sin and do not steal. Open the door with the hand. Bind the signs by the means of it.

The sixth thread corresponds to the feet. Do not walk about after strange Gods [Elohim Acheri], not stumble and fall. Walk after the Lord Elohim. Journey by all paths, as commanded by the Lord Elohim. Watch the feet as you walk to the house of Elohim.

The seventh thread corresponds to the skin [Ha'aroh].⁴² Do not commit adultery. Be fruitful and multiply. Respect circumcision [Hamilah].

The eighth thread corresponds to the nose. Let it not be irritated or excited by the sweet scent of idolatry, nor desire the oblation. Smell the myrtle on the Sabbath, and similar things.

Man is to remember these eight things for all time. Let them be in the heart. Eyes first, ears second, throat third, mouth fourth, hands fifth, feet sixth, and skin seventh. Do not sin by them. The heart is with each. Consider thoughts of every one.

It is written in the Midrash, the congregation [Asepheh] diminishes and grows. Behold them equally over the years. Cast down to the battles. The first rise up and make the offering, fixing the crowns [or ornaments]. The first rise up, fixing the crowns. Reveal what is great. Speak, to ascend by the crowns. Of the wicked, smite the sinners rotting before smelling the scent of idolatry. The eyes close before the journey and the head turns away from the Lord in Gihenam.

The first threads of the Tzitzith are the strands of the greatest length and suitable to adorn. Of the first strand, speak not to deliver the strong ones [Geborim] to vanquish the uncircumcised [A'arelim]. The body is righteous to fulfill the commandments.

First, beginning in prayer. Second, the proclamations of the Torah. Third, opening the heart. Fourth, the nose smells the matzoh. Fifth, the hands give righteousness. Sixth, consecration of the Torah and supplication before God. Seventh, the covenant of the body is suspended therein. Eight, the feet walk to the synagogue [Beth Kenesioth] and the house of study [Beth Midrashoth, another name for synagogue]. Therefore complete perfection.

The root of the reverence of the Lord is to forsake the pleasures of lust by the path of the reverence of the Lord. Do not revere the Lord for the sake of salvation of the universe, or being eternal. You just revere, lest not to be perfect before God in love.

As the commandments come into the hands, you labor over the works. Make as Abraham by sacrificing the son. It is written, at this time, know you revere Elohim. At this time, it is made known. Is it not so that before the secrets of the universe were revealed, the knowledge was not yet concealed in the belly [womb]? Speak, you are not tempted. Henceforth not to be tempted by all temptations.

Also, the letter reveals by the word. The heart is perfect by all commandments, as it is not necessary to be tempted. At this time, know the Lord is great. All to Elohim.

Also, by the name Aloah, Joseph spoke: Elohim, I show reverence to you. It is difficult to rise up and go forth to you by the feet. Indeed Elohim. I revere you. My sons endure in famine and the wrath of El. You, the Lord, are revered. It is difficult to rise up, lest reveal not to dwell and be slayed. However, he spoke of reverence of Elohim with devotion in the heart. He spoke to the Lord, I honor you in reverence. You, the Lord, by the holy words. The weight is upon the heart. Consider before the reverence of the Lord. I revere you, the Lord. Surely, take up your son Isaac in the name of God. Take up Nephesh and consider the power [A'atzem]. Come to bind, as a word. It is difficult to rise up, through that beyond desire.

The root of love is to cherish the Lord. The Nephesh is filled with love. You rejoice by passing over the pleasures of the body. Reign over the pleasures of the universe. Love is rejoicing in strength. Strengthen the heart. Consider always how to create desire of God. Bring forth pleasure, walking as women before the love of the Creator. More in youth and passing of the days, many women do not come before El. From desire of the Lord El, the heart burns to rise up to the Lord. From much love and desire, rise up to the Lord. Of the lightning of the early rain [Ivoreh Kachetz, or arrows of the archer], benefit much from all without making desire of the Creator. The body is kept in purity and holiness by the love.

Phineas betrayed the body and slayed Zimri.⁴³

As Abraham, place the hand to the highest when below. Until the shoe latchet [Sherok Na'al], Elishah did not desire to receive from Na'aman, and loved the heavens in the heart as flames.⁴⁴

Bind the divisions, not seeing women there and not from the word cast forth. End the words. Toil and labor, making favor of the Creator. Delight by praises to fulfill desire. Rejoice to cherish the Lord.

The root of humility is to go away from the glory and be praised when returning before the Rabbi. It is revealed, gather the friends of the Rabbi to sleep. Know when to rest. Lie down after hard labors. Know when not to toil. Speak thus of labor and desire. Give glory to the friend, but do not speak of young women.

It is written, of you who send forth to journey, speak to send forth. Do not speak to send forth before the heretics [Mieniem], not speaking by the authority in the place. They are also humble. Go before the name of the friend, the house of praise [Beth Chelel] to the house of heaven [Beth Shemiya]. The friend senses [or experiences] and stops speaking. All are able to diminish the glory. Great is the glory to revere the name.

It is written, honor the Lord with the reverence in the eyes to condemn. When seeing humility, there is no desire to go before God. Great is he. Go before Shemethbiyesh (Hebrew: ShMThBI-Sh). Be humble before the great Shemethbiyesh. From honoring them, go before the Lord.

When proclaiming, man learns of El, Rabbi Shemethbiyesh proclaims. Do not praise man much before and much after, and not speaking much. Speak thus, as it is written. Speak to him to learn of Rabbi Eleazer over Rabbi Jochanan Ben Zeketzi.⁴⁵ The friend is permitted. El beholds the heart of man himself. When you praise, do not praise the body. It is written, praise the enemy [Zer, or stranger], and not the mouth, but only of the friend. Learn to teach. From the teacher, be able to praise the body. Speak of the perfection of Ahieh. Watch the path of the Lord. Declare the strength to rise up to the high place [Bemah].⁴⁶ Lengthen the days and show them the high place. Also, lengthen their days.

⁴³ Phineas was the son of Eleazer and grandson of Aaron. Also, another Phineas was the son of the high priest Eli, see Samuel I 1:3. The time frame here appears to be appropriate. Phineas was said to be a "scoundrel" and an "idolater" (Samuel I 2:12). See Kings I 16:9.

Keep all the commandments in secret. In secret, go with Elohiq. When keeping them, know how to work before all, such as in prayers, and by the Tzitzith. Of envious writers [Sopheriem], increase the wisdom and the commandments. All are able to make commandments for the sake of the heavens.

Speak of the righteous, you are righteousness by every commandment. Do not be occupied by other matters. Place the love of the Creator in the heart. Reverence is necessary before him. Be skillful making the commandments. Rejoice before El and speak the final words.

In every place and in the synagogue [Beth Hakeneseth, house of gathering or assembly], stand in awe before the Shekinah. Establish the heart only to him. Do not withhold passage, as there is disgrace before making the covenant. He is angered when man is not seen to revere, lest [you] make it known to human beings to be disgraced.

All passes forth, that which brothers [Shachiyem] make. Do not make labor double [or multiply]. Every man toils before the king and before woman. The Creator of the commandments sees before the king. By splendor, the king finds favor in the eyes; however, women are forbidden to see. Speak, it is forbidden for the wife of man to see even the face of the Lord. When preventing sickness [Dothek],⁴⁷ do not see before the women. The labor doubles.

Know all the increased words are brought into the hands of the sinner. Consider the suffering of the loss of commandments corresponding to labor. Let all works be for the sake of the heavens. It is good to possess more from them of the brilliance. When you make them, be happy in the world. Good things come to you forever.

⁴⁶ This generally describes a hill or high place, usually dedicated to religious worship.

⁴⁷ A term meaning sickness, usually referring to a woman's menses.

They come from the assistance of the Lord, who created the heavens and Earth.

The secret is reverence of the Lord. Of the secret work of Berashith, Isaac speaks, it is not necessary to begin the Torah, but only restore this to you. Begin by Berashith. Because of that, speak of the power of works revealed to people. All was created in order to know and understand and make wise by the greatest and most wondrous works.

Bear witness there is none as, and there is none other than. I write the book to proclaim the secrets and reveal the strength of the creator of the universe. Man is happy to learn the secrets. Revere the Lord. Shelter him, dividing the universe. Come and write over the mouth of the gates of all that is above. Know of the unity of God. Of the glory, give the heart over to reverence. Bow down to him. He is one and there are not two of him. Blessed is he.

Aleph is as God. It is first and last. He is king over all the universe. There is no other unto him. In as much as the Aleph is first of the letters, God is first of all the Malachim. The Aleph is first. The calculation is small. There is none less than. Thus a myriad calculations.

Aleph is the first letter of the word Achad [one] and Aleph is the last letter of the word Rebova [myriad]. Speak of one Achad [Achad Chad] and a myriad Rebova [Rebova Rebov].

It is written by Ezekial, the first word is El Achad. By Daniel, it is written of a myriad myriads [Rebov Rebovon] before existence. The Aleph fell, as it is the first to designate one. Speak Achad Rebova [one myriad]. The Aleph fell, as it is at the end of Rebova. Speak Rebov. Human beings know it is first. There are none second to it. It is first and it is last.

Aleph is the beginning of calculations and the end of calculations. Also, Aleph begins the alphabet, as Aleph, Beth, Gimel, Daleth. Aleph is at the end, as Aleph, Tau, Shin, Resh, Qoph, Tzadik, Peh, Ayin, Samek. It is proclaimed by three letters, Aleph Lamed Peh.

Aleph is the letter of the larynx. Lamed is the letter of the top of the tongue, in the center of the palate.⁴⁸ Peh is the letter of the lips.

⁴⁸ The palate is considered the seat of taste, which may be taken as a metaphor for the seat of perception.

Aleph begins in the throat. Of the larynx and the tongue, it is in the center of the palate. By the tongue and the lips, to speak.

Let it be known that Achad is first [Rashon], middle [Amtza'a], and last [Acheron]. The last Aleph is turned away [or opposite] from the rest of the letters. The Achad is in the universe. Create the universe turned away from the universe. Speak and revere the power [Avon].

Do not understand, as foreseen by the destruction [Cherben] of the Beth. Speak, do not permit destruction in the world. Hide the face from it. Know that, in the beginning, to create the universe. Indicate the destruction of the Beth. The Beth of Berashith is the great Beth Rashith [First Beth, or first temple] of the Holy Temple [Beth Makadesh], written therein upon the heavens of the first place of the most holy.

Through the gate of Earth, falling [Hiethch] to chaos [Tohu Vuhohu] by the written word [Thibeth] in the middle. By Gematria, Tau Yod, indicating the first house [Beth Rashon], serves 410 years to fall.⁴⁹ By Gematria, Tau Koph [420] indicates the second house [Beth Sheni], serving 420 years in chaos. Tau Lamed [430] indicates two temples, both serving for 430 years: That is to say, Tau Yod, Tau Koph (Hebrew: ShKNThI) is in the middle of (Hebrew: ShKIN).⁵⁰ Here is Tau Yod also in the letters (Hebrew: ShKNThI).

Also, Tau Koph is in many places, indicating the destruction of the Beth. In time, make known Beth Rashith in the beginning of the universe. Remember the destruction of the Beth to destroy all that is created. The Lord alone is sublime.

All created by Beth are in pairs. Two worlds, heaven and Earth. Mountains and hills, seas and rivers. Gihenam and the Garden of Eden. Leviathan and Nechesh Beriech. The Sun and the Moon. Man and woman. Wickedness and righteousness. Man has two eyes, two ears, two nostrils, mouth and tongue, two hands, two feet and sides, so on and so forth.

The Lord El distinguishes Beth, revealing one division. Make known to all, there is a pair. Therefore, opened by the outer Beth, he is one in the kingdom. Blessed is he.

⁵⁰ This is a discussion of Hebrew suffixes.

Of the seven above, recognize Aleph Vau. Reveal it is united above the seven firmaments. He is the ruler of all (and therefore, the name of Aleph). The name Ahieh is the beginning of the ten sephiroth, above to below. Adonai is the end of the ten sephiroth, beginning by Aleph. Aleph is first of all letters and end of letters, before Tau Shin Resh Peh. Complete to see every one by these letters.

Recognize all the most holy names. Yod begins the chosen name (Hebrew: YHVH). You are not able to write Aleph without the first Yod and also all the vowels.⁵⁶ Recognize the letter. It is not able to exist without Yod Vau, that Yod, Cholem [a Hebrew vowel corresponding to the Latin "O"] or Melaphom or Chiroq [a Hebrew vowel indicating the sounds "ee" and "i," as in "slip" or "sleep"].⁵⁷

Reveal by Yod, create ten sephiroth, the universe in the middle, and the universe at the bottom—of Aleph itself, Sheva, Tzeri, Pethach, Chiroq, Cholem, Melaphom, Cheteph, Pethach (Hebrew: QO), Petach, Sheni, Yod, Sheva, Hatef, Patah (Hebrew: QO). When the Yod is below Kametz with Yod above. Of Vau, Cholem with the middle Yod (Hebrew: QO), Melaphom, as when above the line, Chiroq without the line, Sheva or Tzeri with the line. Of three letters (Hebrew: SGL). Aleph by itself, Yod Vau Yod.

⁵¹ Portrayed by an Aleph with a dot beneath it.

⁵² A Hebrew sublinear vowel in the form of a small mark or dot beneath the letter to indicate the sound of "a," as in "father" (long kamatz), or "o" as in "short" (short kamatz).

⁵³ A Hebrew vowel to indicate the sound of "u," as in "but."

⁵⁴ A short vowel mark to indicate the sound of a, e or o.

⁵⁵ The Aleph has a dot beneath it.

⁵⁷ Hebrew: AO—the vau has a dot at the top; AI—the aleph has a dot below it; AO—the vau has a dot at the middle.

It is written of the name (Hebrew: HOIH). Reveal the Lord is one and created all the universe, the highest, middle, and lowest, filling all. There is not a vowel placed or the covenant [Hebreh] without him. Blessed is he. He is one above the seven firmaments and he rules over all.

Consider the one God [El Achad] for many myriad myriads [Reba Rebeben] years. In the beginning of the universe and in the worlds [A'avolementh], you see by them and by them, the splendor and glory. Speak in the heart. Human beings are not to consider the glory of the kingdom. Create the universe, that it is to pass. Complete the understanding of El in the heart in reverence. Serve in truth with the perfect heart, and goodness to them all the days.

The Lord [Adon] spoke, all come forth from the Ruoch of the holy spirit [Ruoch Kadesh]. It is the first of all the covenants of man. From the word, Ruoch comes forth from the mouth. Therefore, spirits are not shut up by the worthy in silence.

The tractates on fasting [Tha'anieth, or self-humiliation] are in the Book of Formation.⁵⁸ Here are words of the Ruoch of fire and water.⁵⁹ From the word, man presses the lips. By force, the voice goes forth. Sparks go forth by the Ruoch. Therefore it is spoken, as a hammer smashing rocks. Sparks go forth from stones. Fire comes from the power of the sparks coming from the mouth. Therefore, it is written, is it not so the power of the word is as fire? Here is power from the voice of man, the Ruoch of water, the heat of the fire in every dwelling. From the word, fire consumes fire. Therefore, speak of how to create fire and water. The Ruoch is the glory of Elohim, the secret word. From blessings over the days, all exist by words.

⁵⁹ See Sepher Yetzirah, 1:14.

BOOK TWO

PART 2

REGARDING THE POWER OF RUOCH

THE THREE LETTERS OF RUOCH go forth three times. Awaken in the days of Job, Elihu, and Jonah, and make three tributes. The Ruoch breaks boulders and dissolves mountains, and fire goes forth.

It was written by Elihu, Ruoch is great and powerful, dissolving mountains and breaking boulders before the Lord. It was written by Ezekial, Ruoch is great and continuous fire [Ash Methleqocheth].

Resh is the first letter of Ruoch. Resh reduces Beth by numbers. The second letter is round.¹ It is spoken of Ruoch, El goes around in circles to restore Ruoch.

Vau is in Ruoch. It is spoken of the Messiah, first is the spirit of wisdom [Ruoch Chokam], second is the spirit of understanding, third is of strength, fourth is of intelligence, fifth is of knowledge, sixth is of the reverence of the Lord, and seventh is Ruoch.

There are seven [sic] kinds of spirits. The first is Neqemeh [to establish]. Do not judge Ruoch. The second is Hamenshebeth [the breathing one]. It is spoken, in the world, the Ruoch of Elohim hovers above. The third is Melak [messenger, or herald], not by the Ruoch of the Lord. In Yonethen's translation, Hemelak Heruoch [the angel of the spirit], in the dwelling of the Lord, creates the spirit Melak.² The fourth is Berieh [nature, or human being]. Speak of El Elohi Heruoch. The fifth is Rechebah [proudly], making the laws of the spirit of justice [Ruoch Meshephet]. The sixth is Shera Demiyonoth [Prince of fantastic images, or prince of imagination]. Fear the Ruoch of Elohim. The seventh is A'arietzoth [mighty, or tyranny]. Do not fear before all. Even though you are weak, A'arietzoth takes on your burden. The eighth is Nebaiiem [prophecies], giving you the Ruoch. The Lord raises the Ruoch of Elohim. Be guided above. The Ruoch of the Lord pours out Ruoch over all flesh. These are the eight kinds of spirits.

¹ Beth is the second letter of the Hebrew alphabet. This refers to the shape of the letter Beth.

God is the king of Shin Aleph Aloh. There is great value and importance in the knowledge of Ruoch. Of human beings, there is the Bible [Miqora], the Mishnah, the Talmud, and the Hagaddah [the narrative and hermeneutical portion of the Talmud]. In them are matters of the earth, and mysteries of the importance of Ruoch.

The male is Amesh. Mem is in the middle between Aleph and Shin. Change (Hebrew: BATH BSH IOR). Here is Amesh, the male.

The female is Amesh. Mem is changed by the Lord by Aleph Beth (Hebrew: AP BAa GS DN HM). Here is woman from Ashem.

The letters are prominent, illuminated by shining lights and complete. Thus, before the creation of the universe, letters are prominent in the Torah. Of the letters (Hebrew: ASHM), thus create air. Strengthen by the highest power. Males are stronger than females. Be fruitful and multiply.

Ashem is complete. Created from the air, the females are created much weaker than males. There is air from the great weakening of the females. There is air from the great strengthening of males. Be fruitful and multiply.

The Ruoch goes forth from the holy spirit, filling the lives of all men with the breath of Ruoch. Therefore, remember Elohim by the Ruoch. Many say the Ruoch of Elohim hovers above. From the moisture of Ruoch came the sea. By the power of water came fire. Rejoice in the world.

Man breathes in the palm of the hand and sees moisture. Know when to heat water in a clear glass [or crystal] vessel.

Give praise to the Sun in the month of Tammuz. In the provinces, the atmosphere is warm. Be able to ignite the fire of the waters. Thus from the fire, the stones heat the water in the kettle. Boil therein for many days. After, find the stone divided below the vessel, revealed by the knowledge.

The strength of Ruoch is complete. Ruoch is suspended by the commandment of God. In the end, write the covenant with the Ruoch of the Creator.

It is written, the sea is arranged above the firmament, creating darkness and light. The light is formed and the darkness created. The Ruoch of Elohim hovers above the surface of the sea. Reveal Ruoch over the sea and therefore El. In the days of Elihu, as on the palm of the hand, man rises from the sea. Ruoch is there.

The Ruoch of Elohim is the holy spirit. The living air goes forth from the living spirit [Ruoch Chiyem]. It is created as the glory of the air. The holy name [Shem Hakadesh] from the Ruoch created all spirits. Know Ruoch is the first of all creatures [Haberiyoht] below and above.

Of the four spirits [Ruochoth] of the world, every one of them is in all four corners of the world. Ruoch is actually within every dwelling.

Every day, speak from the Book of Formation [see Sepher Yetzirah, 1:9–1:14] of the Ruoch. It is inscribed and engraved therein of Ruoch. The mouth is as night and dawn by three.

Ruoch is actually moist and warm. It goes forth from the holy spirit. From the Ruoch goes forth water. From the water goes forth fire. Water is from Ruoch. Every place there is water, there is Ruoch.

It is written, you go to the Lord as water from Ruoch. In the beginning, fill the sea with life by means of Ruoch. The Ruoch is moist. Collect the moisture of the air in the sea on one side. Carve a line of foliage from it. It covers all the world as a kind of green herb [algae] growing upon the surface of the sea.

The stones disintegrate [erode] from the moisture. They sink down in the ocean [Thehom] and water goes forth.

From the letter Mem, create the sea, as Mem is water.³ Opposite to the proportion of the earth, there is water. Mem resembles water. Man proclaims, you drink between the lips and the sign of the sea resembles it [the letter Mem].

Mem is the first letter of the word Mayim [water], Mebova'a [spring], Meqovor [fountain], Ma'ayin [well], Moqvoh [pool, or pond]. From the holy word, all water goes forth in purity as a pool of water. God proclaims Moqvoh three times.

Second, Moqvoh Israel, the Lord and Aleph and Moqvoh are as fathers [Abothikem]. Of the Lord, therefore, Moqvoh, by rising three mothers [Amoth]. Moqvoh, by Gematria, is forty Seahim.⁴

In the Book of Formation [see Sepher Yetzirah, 3:8], Mem is bound to the crown. Combine this with that. Flood the Earth, forever cold in the year. Draw out by Nephesh, male and female.

Divide the name Mem. Begin the word and combine the letters, making two words. Proclaim the first one Mash [Mem Aleph Shin] and the second Mesha [Mem Shin Aleph]. Form Earth in the world, as a fountain of cold water. In the belly, by the heat of Nephesh, consume and bring forth the cold. Male is Mash and female is Mesha.

There is Earth. Bring forth the words and bring forth grass between. Of every word, there is female and male. On raining days, it is cold.

Ruoch is warm. There is moisture in the breath, as vapor comes from the mouth. Thus, place the word upon fire. The water goes forth from the moisture, therefore do not speak of how to create. The voice of the Lord is over the water. In the beginning, you, the king, receive by voices. Speak, the Lord is mighty in the heights [Adier Berom].

The Torah holds dominion over the sea. Of all who thirst for water, it comes to pass from counsel of Melakethov [angels, or heralds]. Be in purity as instructed by the Lord [Lomedieh, or disciple of the Lord]. Therefore, in forty days Moses received the Ten Commandments. Also, forty days afterward, of two-times-forty and the Ten Commandments, here is water. The moisture of the word fills all the world with water. Ruoch hovers above the sea.

Of water and fire, water comes forth from Ruoch of the holy word [Ruoch Debora Kadesh]. By the virtue, complete it. Fire comes from it, carving the throne as divided. Shin is engraved above and fire turns to heaven. Of fire, hissing by tearing [Qoriya'ath, or rending],⁵ from hearing the sound of the letter of fire. When burning, the sound goes forth. Shin is above, as a lamp extinguished. The flames rise up. Come forth and proclaim Shin to change the language. Of heaven, as in the Book of Formation, the Shin is bound to the crown. Combine this with that, forming the heavens [Shemim].⁶

⁴ Plural for Seah, which is a liquid measurement equaling fourteen quarts.

In the world, the heat in the year begins. Of Nephesh, the male and female. Divide the crown of Shin by fire and engrave the first word. Combine the letters, making two words. Know that male is Shema and female is Sham. Form the heavens in the universe from fire and the heat of the year. The first alone is from heat. Bring forth heat. There is heat in the year. Divide from the heavens and bring forth human beings, males and females.

Shin changes the language. Of Shin, there are three branches. It is the first letter of heaven. The Sun therein is fire and the Moon is snow. The blackness spreads. Here is three. The Sun is fire as red coals and the Moon as flames. The Moon in the firmament is similar to coal embers. Thus, there are three branches of Shin.

Fire is formed with the Shin. Therein are three things: flames, smoke, and embers. There is no fire without Ruoch blowing the letters. Therefore, binding Aleph with Shin is Ash [fire]. By Aleph form Ruoch. By Shin form fire. Shin changes language. The fire of heaven creates water. Consume the water. It is written, drain the water by licking it up.

The heart goes forth from the holy spirit as the brightness of fire. It is written, every word comes by fire. Pass over fire and purify. Above, purify by fire of the river of fire [Neher Dienor. This is also a reference to the Milky Way], and below, purify by the sea, existing by the word.

Fill the world with Ruoch, water, and fire. Amesh is air, water, fire. Fire decreases the water. Of all words of the petition, water is appointed above to descend below. Flames rise upward, coming to the place. The Ruoch of Elohim hovers over the surface of the sea. The holy spirit takes the fire together in the middle, of the Lord Shaddai. Now, life is in the world. Of water, Ruoch is over the water and fire is above all things.

Speak to the Lord in the heart. There is no glory to the king without the host to create worlds of knowledge and the glory of the kingdom. Counsel the king in all things. Teach him the Torah. The value and importance of Berashith increases. Which withholds the teaching of the word of the Torah. I exist in all things.

Of the teaching of God in the Midrash, the wisdom of the Lord is the foundation of the universe. There is no wisdom, but only of the Torah. It is written, it is the highest wisdom and the highest understanding. Learn that God created the universe by the wisdom of the Torah. Know (Hebrew: ChlTh KP MM HH) by Gematria is 618.⁷

It is written, in the beginning, Elohim created [Berashith Bera Elohim]. There is no beginning, but only in the Torah.

It is written, the Lord establishes the beginning path of Berashith. By Gematria, the Torah was formed to learn from. Know the universe was formed by the Torah.

Aleph is one and Beth is two, which is three. Gimel is three, which is six. Daleth is four, which is ten. Heh is five, which is fifteen. Vau is six, which is twenty-one. Zayin is seven, which is twenty-eight. Cheth is eight, which is thirty-six. Teth is nine, which is forty-five. The letter is set in order to form one. Now calculate. Ten and ninety is one hundred. Twenty and eighty is one hundred. Thirty and seventy is one hundred. Forty and sixty is one hundred. Together this is four hundred.

Fifty remain set in order. Fifty with forty-five is ninety-five. Set in order ninety-five with four hundred. Here is four hundred and ninety-five.

Obtain five [H']. Subtract from five hundred [MTh"Q], and obtain five fifths [Chemesheh Chomeshi]. The Torah rules from the amount five hundred.

The universe was created in the course of five hundred years. Therefore, in the Torah form the universe. It is written of the covenant of day and night and the limits of heaven and Earth. It is not established in the Torah from the word.

Study therein day and night. It is known, study the Torah all the day. Consider every verse of the Torah, bequeathed to us by Moses.

In language it is (Hebrew: Ath BSh).⁸ In numbers it is (Hebrew: IG ALP).⁹ Subtract 40 [M']. That is to say:

PART 3

IN THE BEGINNING
[BERASHITH]

IN THE BEGINNING, GOD CREATED TWENTY GATES. It is revealed to the son of man by twenty letters. Create two names (Hebrew: AaHZ OHAaHB). By Yod Heh, the Lord formed the worlds, the Heh of (Hebrew: HAaHB) by Yod and (Hebrew: AaHB) over the works of creation preceding the universe. Yod precedes Heh and Aleph Tau precedes the holy name, blessed is it. Of Aleph Beth of Yod, for the sake of combining Yod Heh Vau.

Aleph is one. Beth is two, which is three. Gimel is three, which is six. Daleth is four, which is ten. The Yod is upheld by Heh Vau. Yod Heh Vau is the holy name. Divide the gates by the names of Beth. There are three sides to the universe, as the letter Beth.

Of Yod, words are created corresponding to the Ten Commandments.

Of Tau, the lives of the people [Thechiyieth Hamethiem] [are created]. Therefore, this is the gate to create the universe. Also the face of Beth is above. Aleph stands alone, forever turning the face in the universe.

Beth is written at the side of the desert as Bethiem [Beths, or houses]. You see Beth in the desert as the Earth. Here is chaos [Tohu Vobohu].¹ El was in the heavens, but there was no man in the beginning of the universe. The Earth was chaos, in darkness and desolation [Tohu]. Divide the emptiness [Roqnieth] from all goodness.

In desolation, lament in the desert. It is the place of desolation, as there is no goodness therein. After the desolation, do not benefit and be not delivered from [it]. Thus, see the Earth is chaos and there is no man. Falling to the Earth, desolation consumes all the universe.

Of emptiness [Bohu] establish the days. Adam and his wife are concealed in the middle of the tree in the garden. It is not a cemetery [Bieth Ba'avolem].[†]

The clouds darken, as water is dark in the sky. Proclaim the clouds become dark and withhold the light. The darkness obscures sight when Eliek descends in the darkness of the clouds. Here create the clouds. Darkness is not without speaking, let there be light. Before darkness, light was not created in the universe.

Speak of darkness over the surface of the ocean. The clouds darken by the water near the sea. Also, in the beginning, the universe was dark. Therein a substance, as required by darkness. Of how many thousands of myriads, there is no beginning.

Thus of the universe, God is in the worlds. After, there are eyes to see therein other than Elohim. Do not rise up to support the evening. Illuminate according to the time of rest, as the rebellion of the darkness, in the dark of night, counseled by God in thanksgiving of the creation of the universe. The Torah is written by the strength of the fire of the Moon.

There are seventy-three names of God inscribed to the right. Alone in the universe, turn to this side and fear there is no man. Desire to be alone forever and to be one. He turns away from you, and at once you beg. The one goes forth, taking three drops of water and filling the universe with water. Dwell over the sea.

[†] There is a note in the original text that reads as follows: Add one, two, three, four, five, and six. The total is twenty-one. The second begins. That is to say Aleph Zayin. By the addition of seven, this is twenty-eight. The secret of Aleph Zayin, through deliverance, indicates twenty-eight works. Also, study Aleph, Beth, Gimel, and Daleth. The secret of Aleph Daleth [AD translates as mist or vapor], rising up from the earth. Add one, two, three, and four. The total is ten. Aleph Daleth by three [written "A'D BG'"] in the center is the Heh. Heh is Nun. By the number, subtract, and here is the name Adonai. That is the secret of Beth, Gimel, Daleth (Hebrew: QODSh) [holy] indicates Beth, Gimel, Daleth, Beth, Daleth, Kadesh. With the Gimel in the middle, here is Beth, Gimel, Daleth, by Gematria, Yod, Heh, Beth, Gimel, Daleth, by itself is nine, and Resh Tau and Samekh Tau [OR Th OS Th]. Beth and Daleth is six. Here is fifteen [T'O].

The Ruoch of Elohim hovers over the face of the sea. The water is divided into three parts. One third is suspended above by his command. One third is springs. One third is sea.

Second, take three drops of light and divide them. One third is (Hebrew: BAaHZ). One third is (Hebrew: BAaChB). One third is the days of the Messiah.

Third, take three drops of fire and divide them. One third to create the Malachim. One third is the lives [Chiyoveth] of the holy. Of one third, do not breathe the fire.

Fill the world with water, light, and fire. Fire is on the right. Air is on the left. Water is below. Take and mix this with that. Take fire and water to create the heavens. Take water and air to create the throne of glory. Take fire and air to create the lives of the holy. The angel [Malachi] serves.

It is written, the wisdom of the Lord is the foundation of the Earth. Number the wisdom seventy-three, as the seventy-three names of God. Inscribe by the strength of God, laying his hand upon seventy names, every one able to create one universe. Thus it is indicated in the Midrash, the wisdom of the Lord is the foundation of Earth.

I receive, as it is written in the Book of Formation, of ten sephiroth. First, of the Ruoch of Elohim, the living breath of the mouth. Second, of the holy spirit, the Ruoch of air. The Ruoch does not go forth, but seven spirits [Ruochoth] go forth. From the word, Ruoch goes forth. The water is third from Ruoch, the wetness of the moisture of the words. The fire is fourth. The water displaces the heat by the words. The fifth is above. The sixth is below. The seventh is to the east. The eighth is to the west. The ninth is to the south. The tenth is to the north.²

From the words come the world, except for air, water, and fire. Mix fire and water together to create the heavens. Proclaim before, let there be light, not requiring light. Light is the power of Shaddai.

It is written, be wrapped in light as Solomon, the man that built the precious house [Beth Segor]. The shining lamp illuminates the shadows of the Ruoch of air as fog.

Speak from the midst of the fire. The fire of Ruoch rises up as a narrow pillar of smoke. It is between the heavens and the Earth. It is divided first in the desert, second in the mountains, and third in the inhabited land. Hold dominion in the dwelling. Without eyes, be able to rule by the desire to see in the house.

There are three windows. The strength of the Sun goes forth above the windows and within the house. Thus, desire is as the measure of the strength. Bind and stand away from the windows. It is the air.

In the days of winter, see the narrow fountain rising up from the air and fire. It is not gathering above, but sinking in water to heat the earth. It is not usually visible, going forth from outside.

Also, in the days of the winter when the air is cold, body heat goes forth from the breath from the mouth of man standing outside, as fine smoke.

In the days of summer, the air is warm and the body is warm, not separating this from that.

The heavens are suspended in the air. Earth is suspended from the air. By the turning of the wheel, Earth turns around. There is no movement from the place. Speaking metaphorically, it is as a vessel of glass with the width of the mouth short; and as a chaff, or dry leaf, or wing of a bird, or the shell. Put it in place, face to face with the vessel. Breathe the Ruoch by the power, until filling the vessel with Ruoch. Then rise up in the air in the middle of the vessel, until the Ruoch is therein. Thus, Earth is suspended in air and air sinks in moisture.

The power of the Sun is the heat of the day. However, in night, lie down below the air, covered in a garment of wool or leather. The next day, the moisture goes forth from the mouth in a flowing movement, as a river in the air going forth from the mouth. Of the air of Ruoch, water is from air.

Of God, there is none like him. Only in the image, in order to understand the teaching. Thus the river goes forth from the mouth of Adon. From the flowing of the water by the power of the river, fog is all around. It covers the rivers from the heat of day. The river makes chaos in the direction of the green foliage. It resembles an image of a green arch.

When man is in a boat on the sea in the highest waves, look in the direction of the green above. It is reddish near the bottom and the sea below is black near the deepest points. This is the place of darkness. In the shadow of the water, be able to look from end to end; to the ends of the world, from heaven to Earth.

The shadow of the water is fifteen cubits high from the heights of the mountains. By movement of water, man rises over the top of the mast [Thoren]. Observe the curvature of the earth before the water rises. Man sees this in the water. From the distance of the province, see all lands are like a bowl.

From the foam, the sea freezes as snow. In the mud and loam, raise a flower bed of fragrant herbs. Sow many varieties of fragrances. Make the border around the flower bed and place up a wall. When the sea comes forth, do not forsake them in a storm. It is as a valley. Put the rain therein. The clouds are filled with water and become dark. Do not speak how the light goes forth from the word.

I learn the secrets of fire and light. Also, how much moisture is inside, and of times to listen to sounds not able to rise above the foundation, and how to rise above the hidden and unknown, but only as ancestors receive in their hands. Reveal how to illuminate the sea from the holy word. Speak of you ruling over the truth.

Man inscribes the signs from the image. The angel drives out the accursed. God casts down from the heavens to find Adam, the first man. Return to inscribe the image from Aleph until Heh Yod Vau.

Thus of the water, Heh Yod Vau of the shining [or glorious] Malachim. Also by the name, man is the shining lamp in the house of illumination [Beth Lehayir, or house of light]. Thus created the universe by the most holy word, blessed is it.

Over the shadows of the sea, light goes forth. Light illuminates it forever. Let there be light. Perform miracles by the light. Create the sea. In many places, it is proclaimed, the sea is as light. Disperse the cloud with light. When covering the eye from light, therein the sea flows as tears from the eye.

Therefore, proclaim the light of day is the inlet of the sea. Let there be light. The clouds go dark. The Ruoch connects over the sea and the air between the shells [Qliphoth]. Heaven is in the day. The Moon is as a sphere. Water is above and below the universe, going around the firmament thus.

Between all the shells is light. The light is created from the moisture of the word. Create water in the storehouse of water as rain and lightning. The storehouse of snow is the place the water shines. There is no darkness.

Thus of snow and rain, lightning comes, the lightning of the heat of the luminaries. Proclaim light over the name of air to pierce the darkness. The light is required of all actions, therefore sustained.

It is written, let there be understanding of light. Also it is written, let there be light to sustain the requirements of light. Also, it is written of the reverence of Elohim by the light.

Goodness completes the requirements of actions. Speak in goodness over the light, not over the heavens and Earth. The water is above. Let there be light, not being heaven, not Earth, and not water. Therefore, it is not written, let there be understanding. Let there be light. The river of fire is shining between the qliphoth.

From the word, the light goes forth before all. Engrave the word and be enlightened. Your light is sweet and treasured. Rejoice in righteousness. Rejoice in the light of righteousness.

The world is one third water, one third wilderness, and one third inhabited land. Also, the Earth of heaven is in the days. Also (Hebrew: HAaHZ OHAAaB). In the days of the Messiah, reward the people of Jerusalem with mercy.

In the dwelling is three firmaments. From here, create pillars to strengthen them, not to be seen from the side. They are as stones rising up by the side, thus they are not seen. It is written, heaven measures three spans [or hand-breadths].

God takes pure fire and pure water, mixing them to create heaven. Create heaven with fire. In the beginning, Elohim created the heavens and the Earth, arranging seven houses above and seven below. Heaven extends upward as a cobra [Phethen] in a great veil. The Sun is complete, extending to surround heaven, resembling a veil.

It is revealed, you are over the gate and brought forth. The king brings forth and covers you, going forth and passing over you. The veil rises up as the morning star [A'amod Heshecher].

Of the heat of the Sun, cover the first firmament before the wheel of the Sun. Gather the heat passing over. Gather the Moon, stars, and signs of the zodiac. The Sun in the universe is the House of Glory [Beth Helel].

Speak of the Earth, created by the glory. Thus, the gate is in heaven before arranging the constellations.

Nisan is the first month of the year. Fire is the beginning of all things. Here is light to measure first. Nisan is the beginning of the warmth of the year. Aries is fire. It is the sign of the zodiac of Nisan. It is (Hebrew: TAQ).

After fire (Hebrew: AaPR) is Taurus, the sign of Ayir [the second month]. It is earth and (Hebrew: ShBG) is earth.

(Hebrew: AChK) is air. Gemini is the sign of Sivan [the third month]. It is air and (Hebrew: AChK).

Water corresponds to Cancer, the sign of Tammuz [the fourth month]. It is water and (Hebrew: SPD) is water.

Leo is the sign of Av [the fifth month] and fire.

Virgo is the sign of Alul [the sixth month] and earth.

Libra is the sign of Tishri [the seventh month] and air.

Scorpio is the sign of Marheshvan [the eighth month] and water.

Sagittarius is the sign of Kislev [the ninth month] and fire.

Capricorn is the sign of Teveth [the tenth month] and earth.

Aquarius is the sign of Shevet [the eleventh month] and air.

Pisces is the sign of Adar [the twelfth month] and water.

(Hebrew: ShShTh SAB MAQ GDR) are appointed. Therefore, in the scriptures, arrange heaven and earth. The Ruoch of Elohim hovers above the surface of the water.

Of light first, thus Aries is fire and proclaimed first. Nisan establishes the chamber to consume the offering. Obtain lambs from the herdsman. Proclaim the light. Speak to him of the secret of darkness. I desire to create the universe by the light. Speak before him of what you created before. Speak of not turning aside and devise the curse with you, to perish from the world. I am the Creator by the light of Aries. It is the fire, the sign of Nisan.

Speak after the light El created. Your darkness resembles Taurus, the sign of Ayer.

After, El created Gemini, the sign of Sivan. Man shuts out light. In the darkness, give two tablets.

After, El created Cancer of water, the sign of Tammuz. Everything requires water.

After, Yah speaks of Leo, the sign of Av. Man grasps with the strength of a lion.

After, Yah speaks of Virgo, the sign of Alul. Man is ready to be profound.

After, El of Libra, the sign of Tishri. Man as Virgo weighs you in Libra.

After, El of Scorpio, sign of Marheshvan. Weigh you in Libra. Of iniquity, be cast down to Gihenam, the place of serpents and scorpions.

After, Yah speaks of Sagittarius, the sign of Kislev. Descend directly to Gihenam, not rising to the Lord directly. From the petition of the highest for mercy, I cast down to Gihenam, as an arrow from the bow.

After, El of Capricorn, the sign of Tebeth. Be cast down directly to Gihenam, not rising up. Therein are the power of darkness [Meshechierien], turning away and leaping up. Rise as Capricorn.

After, El of Aquarius, the sign of Shebet. I sprinkle water to cleanse in purification of iniquity.

After, Yah speaks of Pisces, the sign of Adar. Rise up directly from Gineham. Succeed in the universe. Go forth to the spring, therein the dominion. Thus it is distinguished in the Midrash.

Then flow to the previous position of Aries in fire in Nisan, forming the chamber.

Of earth, Taurus is in Ayer, going forth from Thehom below. The image of a calf lying down on the ground, a fatted lamb. In fasting, therefore, make the image of a calf upon the ground, below the feet.

Gemini is in Sivan, corresponding to the Ruoch. There is no air going forth. By the word, from death, the trees flourish.³ Cancer is in Tammuz, corresponding to the water. Of the great name of every generation on the Earth, suspend the signs of the zodiac. Therefore, heaven precedes Earth. However, Earth was created in the beginning, until here explaining the creation of Earth.

Of the twelve signs of the zodiac, God created light to shine in day and in night, but it was not seen in the day before the power of the wheel of the Sun. Measure it to see in night, except from the sign of the rising Sun. The highest is when the measure rises up to the sign of the zodiac. After, the union is concealed. From them, it is revealed to rise in the east. The star sinks down here and there over the measure.

Aries is arranged as the highest. Libra is in the period that stands in the east, setting in the west. The star of Aries sinks in the west as the star of Libra rises. Aries measures sinking, Libra measures rising. Then, Taurus and Scorpio, Gemini and Sagittarius, Cancer and Capricorn, Leo and Aquarius, Virgo and Pisces.

Measure the distance going forth, in the amount rising from the east, in the amount sinking in the west. In the amount, there is not one of them, but two arranged; not gathering in the boundary of the divisions of the sign of the zodiac.

When serving in the Spring, not serving in the Autumn. When serving in the Winter, not serving in the Summer. When serving in Summer, not serving in Spring. When serving in Autumn, not serving in Winter.

Arrange the ministers in the middle. Libra, Scorpio, and Sagittarius are in the middle. Plant seeds during these months. They minister for sixty-one days. In the middle is Sagittarius. Of Capricorn, in the middle is Aquarius. They minister in the days of the winter for sixty-one days. In the middle is Aquarius. Of Pisces, in the middle is Aries. They minister in the days of the spring for sixty-one days. In the middle is Aries. Of Taurus, in the middle is Gemini. They minister in the days of the autumn for sixty-one days. In the middle is Gemini. Of Cancer, in the middle is Leo. They minister in the days of the summer for sixty-one days. In the middle is Leo. Of Virgo, in the middle is Libra. They minister in the days of the warmth for sixty-one days.

The wise men of Israel speak of the firmament. It is made as a tent. The signs of the zodiac are fixed in the wheel. The wise men of the nations speak of the circle of the wheel. The signs of the zodiac are fixed therein, turning around. The wise men speak the words, not indicating Scorpio is in the south and the Dipper constellation is in the north. The Dipper constellation does not move from the place, not circling in the wheel.

The letters (Hebrew: TAQ) are fire (Hebrew: ShKG) are earth (Hebrew: ThMD) are air, and (Hebrew: SAaD) are water. Man does not know the root source [essential origin] of the signs of the zodiac. God created them, but not from the actions.

It is written, El poured out water in heaven and Earth, and fixed the signs of the zodiac. Reveal the works of the highest blessings. See the signs circle. Proclaim the sign of the zodiac when leaving. Bow down to the glory and the hosts of heaven [Tzeba Shemim].⁴ Bow down and be humble. Create all hosts by the Ruoch from the mouth.

The four above and below correspond to the twelve divisions: (Hebrew: TAQ) is fire; (Hebrew: ShKG) is earth; (Hebrew: ThMD) is air; (Hebrew: SAaR) is water. The twelve signs of the zodiac correspond to the three letters. Therein are the hosts [Methechielen] of judgment. The last letters are (Hebrew: ShAZIININ), the three letters without (Hebrew: ZIININ).

³ A reference to the death of trees in winter, and rebirth in the spring.

⁴ This term may refer to the angels, or to the Sun, Moon, and stars collectively.

Thus, there are twelve months and twelve great lives [ChOI-IOT^h] in the hands and feet. There are twelve tribes and twelve Malachim surrounding the throne of glory. Twelve blessings increased by all prayers. Twelve orders of the Torah, the laws of the Lord.

The first is integrity [Themiemeh]. The second is the restoration of the soul [Meshibeth Nephesh]. The third is faithfulness [Nameneh]. The fourth is intelligence [Mechokemeth]. The fifth is uprightness [Yiesheriem]. The sixth is rejoicing in the heart [Meshemечи Lebov]. The seventh is chastity [Bera]. The eighth is enlightenment [Mayiereth]. The ninth is cleanliness [Tehoreth]. The tenth is servitude [A'avomedeth]. The eleventh is truthfulness [Ameth]. The twelfth is righteousness [Tzadiqov].

Therefore, the twelve hours of the day are occupied by these twelve orders of the Torah. Thus, the offering of bread for you to eat is of twelve shew breads. There are twenty-four tithes [A'asherionieth] serving the students of the Torah. Study for twelve hours in the day and twelve hours in the night. Of the twenty-four books, therefore be upheld at the side of the Lord and receive redemption.

The first step is to cook and mix the wine. Prepare the table and proclaim to those serving. Instruct those who are simple. Instruct them even when there is no desire to occupy themselves with the instructions of the Torah. Therefore, eat the bread of the Torah by eating twelve shew breads.

There are twelve praises [Shebechoth] of the Torah. The first is beginning [Rashith]. The second is preceding [Qedomim]. The third is from before [Maz]. The fourth is of old [Ma'avolem]. The fifth is in advance [Merash]. The sixth is early [Meqedomi]. The seventh is without [Bayin]. The eighth is Bayin. The ninth is Bayin.⁵ The tenth is before that [Beterem]. The eleventh is in front of [Lepheni]. The twelfth is not until [A'ad La].

Of the twelve after, the first is the way of [Derekov]. The second is the act of [Mepha'aliyov]. The third is the work of [A'avosh].

⁵ The eighth and ninth may be typographical errors.

The fourth is in the presence of [Bephienov]. The fifth is in the bosom of [Bechiqov]. The sixth is in the midst of [Bametz'a'a]. The seventh is by the strength of [Ba'azoz]. The eighth is by the name of [Beshomov]. The ninth is by the law of [Becheqov]. The tenth is at the side of [Atzelov]. The eleventh is in the presence of [Lepheniyov]. The twelfth is in the land of [Aretzov].

The twelve signs of the zodiac were created for the sake of the Torah. There are four divisions of the signs, and thus of the Torah. Watch over the gates of the dwelling day by day. The first is by the journey [Vobelekethek]. The second is by rising up [Vobegoumiek]. The third is by lying down [Vobeshekebek]. The fourth is by sleeping [Vobesheneh]. These are the four periods.

Man returns to serve. Learn of the three periods in the day and night, of sixteen in Av, until sixteen in Ayir. Therefore uphold and consider the commandments.

Observe all of the laws of God in fifteen days of the second month and uphold them. Thus, the mother learns to appoint it, as all are thrust forth from the caul. Be in the mother's womb for three portions of the year—actually, the days filled in the womb, previously eight days of eight months. (Hebrew: ThSh"i). A myriad and 240 [OR"m] divisions, relax in time to thrust forth in birth (Hebrew: ThSh"i).

It is written, you and your sons receive the laws of ElohiK, and also the ancestors as thrust forth in birth (Hebrew: ThSh"i). It is indicated to Abraham that El regards them as a stone to be hewn. Abraham was occupied in the Torah, and learned the signs of the zodiac. Go forth abroad and [set] forth astrological matters [Atztaginothik].

Also, four are drawn above and below, corresponding to the twelve signs. Divide four above and below. (Hebrew: TAQ) is fire, corresponding [to] above. There fire is sustained, corresponding [to] above. (Hebrew: ShKG) is earth, corresponding [to] below. (Hebrew: ThMD) is air [Ruoch] to guide above. (Hebrew: SAaD) is water below. Also, guide above and below. The clouds are of air and water when in the sky. Man is in the days of raining. Ruoch opens, resembling a cloud, and it is water. In the days of raining, find growth to establish the green vegetation in open fields.

The rain falls upon the soil of the earth. Desire the growth of green vegetation. When water falls as rain in a stone vessel, it becomes green after many days.

In the days of heat, the signs minister with the Sun. Ruling in the days of heat, the signs minister with the Sun. Of the rain, then seeing many kinds of tropical flowers, seeing all varieties.

(Hebrew: TAQ) is the beginning of fire. The heavens are the foundation of the creation, above and first in heaven. (Hebrew: ThMD) is air of the Ruoch above, of all birds, only bound in the heavens. Thus, Earth was created second. Also of the foundation of Earth, the Ruoch (Hebrew: ThMD) takes the earth. The Ruoch gathers, reaching to Earth. The sea is fourth. Of (Hebrew: SAaD), the sea flows below and in the desert in the low country. It flows down to the heart of the nation. Of the sea, the dew comes down. It is written, flow down and establish the low country from the meager earth.

These are the four seasons of the year. The season of Nisan is hot and moist. The season of Tammuz is hot and dry. The season of Tishri is cold and dry. The season of Tebeth is cold and moist.

The four elements of man are blood, phlegm, red bile, and black bile. These are cold, hot, wet, and dry, as fire, earth, air, and water. The four elements of the body are blood, phlegm, red bile, and black bile. The seasons correspond to cold and hot, as summer and winter. The world was created from fire, earth, air, and water. The red bile corresponds to fire. Black corresponds to earth. Phlegm corresponds to water. Blood corresponds to air. The blood is the Nephesh and the Nephesh is warm.

Learn the interpretation of creation by the elements of the world. In the beginning, create Ruoch from the Ruoch of the Creator of all things. From Ruoch, create water and air. From the water, create fire and snow. From fire created from water, create the heavens. From the snow, create the earth.

Of the heavens and the living Ruoch of the heavens. The air of the heavens is hot and dry, corresponding to fire. Bring forth Ruoch from air. The earth is dry and cold. The water is wet and cold.

Thus, create the four elements of the body. The living Ruoch is the father and mother, Ruoch of the creator of all. From the living Ruoch of the father and mother, create the seed. The blood corresponds to water and the blood is opposite to the air. The seed goes forth from the father. The mother creates red bile. The phlegm is as snow, created from the blackness by the word of the Lord. The sea of the universe is water. Of Ruoch, fire and air, as a throne over the water. The glory of the king is directly above.

The Torah was written by the fire of the Moon over the blackness of fire. Offer the Torah, hidden in the bosom [or hollow place]. Of pleasure, the throne stands by the word of the mouth, not creating life as paradise [A'adiyen] in the garden. Knowledge is the medium to reveal the light. From the images therein of all creatures and Neshemoth, it is hidden in a pouch below the throne.

Behold, on the left there are seven habitations built in the Garden of Eden. The Holy Temple [Beth Hamekadesh] was built before. The dwelling of glory [Shekineth Kebod] is in the middle. The name of the king, the Messiah, is inscribed upon the stone of goodness upon the altar. The Ruoch of Elohim sustained you until the universe was created. Be counseled by the Torah, for there is good counsel. Of the creation of the universe, return and create the Malachim that there is no sin. The first was Sodom. El invited man to drink the water of iniquity.

God restored all he created, restored by healing from sin, by the Nepheshem, healing man from a great state of affliction. In the Holy Temple, offer sacrifices of atonement in the Garden of Eden, of Nepheshoth, of righteousness, of Gihenam, of passing over the commandments of the Torah. The Messiah is occupied with the Torah, gathering the pages by hand. Administer to the restoration of the Torah.

Speak of the greatness of the universe. You are Elohi, Elohim of the universe. He speaks to you of what to do when there is no host of the king and when to journey to the desert by the words of the Torah. Listen to him. Of the firmament of heaven, cover in glory. Reach to the firmaments and the seven nations.

Elohik is the Lord of the heavens, the heavens of the heavens [Voshemi Hashemiem], the Earth, and all in it. The scriptures [Pesoq] are the strength of the Lord and offerings of the Lord.

From the heavens to the Earth is a journey of 500 years. Thus, the firmaments are obscured by the clouds. Thus, from the Earth to the firmament, and from end to end. Now, place the ear as a funnel and listen to the sound of words. Give reverence to the heavens in the heart. Then, understand the knowledge of matters of the universe. Take snow from beneath the throne. Cast it upon the water. Freeze the water and make soil upon the earth. Of snow, establish the earth.

It is written of earth, the snow comes forth. By the word of the great king, freeze the water and make the storehouse of snow. Take snow from below the throne. The earth is the footstool. Of white snow, melt and flow down. The waters are muddy. Thus all creatures are pure and good from the heavens.

In the end, El restores the earth. Of snow, six horns [Qorenoth].⁶ Thus all the operations of earth are six days. Of earth are six tasks [or customs]. Seed and harvest of winter, spring, summer, and autumn.

It says in the Book of Formation, water is from Ruoch. Engrave and hew chaos [Tohu Vebehuh] from mud and clay as a flower bed.⁷ Establish by heat. From neglect, place snow above. Of the work, speak of snow.

Speak of the desolation of Earth. The green vegetation surrounds the Earth. The rocks fall and are immersed in the ocean. Water goes forth. Divide water from Ruoch. The moisture is to one side. Hew Tohu there. The green surrounds the world. Green is upon the water and upon the rocks. Moisture falls and the water goes forth. The water is created.

The man does not support this, not creating rock from water. Take a brazen vessel. Make rock from the brazen metal. Take pure, clear water, and boil it over the fire. When the water decreases, add twice as much water. The brass vessel breaks and a rock is found in it. Thus, in man and beast, find small rocks from the moisture boiled in the body. Make a rock in the liver or kidneys, or in the hinder place.

Of God, fire consumes the words, making the water into mountains and rocks and earth. The moisture goes forth from water.

It will come to pass, the Earth surrounding Tohu is seen by eyes. Anchored therein is the foundation of heaven, the origin of fire with the foundation of the Earth. Water goes forth. Collect the water and make mud, loam, and clay. Make it like a flower bed in a valley, surrounded by a wall. From neglect, by virtue of the signs, the mud and loam separate. Place snow above. Freeze and make earth. Speak of snow, earth is made.⁸

Of the Book of Formation, made from Tohu. Actually, Tohu is made of mud and clay, establishing earth. Actually, make the earth by them. Create the fortress above the ocean. Engraved above is the Shem Hemaphorash in 42 letters. Establish the letter over the surface of the ocean. Cover the waters and indicate 20 letters. Every word is sealed in the name of the heavens.

Of Earth by (Hebrew: AHIH). Aleph Heh is below and Yod Heh is above, corresponding to the crown. The throne is sealed by Yod Heh of (Hebrew: IHOH), of the three letters of fire and flame. By (Hebrew: IHOH), create heaven and Earth. Therefore, the beginning is Yod Heh.

Rejoice the heavens and exalt the Earth [Ishmecho Hashemim Othegal Haretz] by the great name. Of all suffering [or burden], the Lord makes all. Seal in the pouch 42 letters. Offer over the ocean. The water does not rise up as the deluge of the ages. Take the pouch and at once divide the water of all the springs. The ocean increases. As one hastens to find the pouch, speak in vain to labor over [it].

Establish the Holy Temple and turn the pouch. The water goes forth and floods the worlds. Fall upon the face. By the song of degrees [Shir Hama'aloith] from the valley, proclaim the Lord to descend quickly.⁹ Rise up by the fifteen songs of degrees, except for every song of degrees of David or Solomon, for they are not important.

Thus, corresponding to the dwelling in Checharas [mystical name of a city in Egypt] of 19 letters, therein place the 14 letters. Of Vau Yod Heh, here are five letters. By them, the ocean is angered. God beholds the humility. Indicate by Ruoch to wander the Earth. Over the pouch, God speaks to David to fetter his loins and build the foundation of the Holy Temple. David sees that in the pouch is written above the fifteen letters of the Shem Hamephorash. Around it, it is written, let there be glory to the Lord forever and He rejoices.

It is also written of David and Solomon, build the Holy Temple. Extend the hand and raise the pouch to be touched by El. The name of the Creator is engraved upon it.

Of God, the miracle to guide the pouch. It is fate [Gorel] of Joshua to proclaim. It is fate to return the pouch from heaven to David. By the name of the Creator, David is filled with the love of God.¹⁰ Reach in you and raise the pouch by the power over the Shem Hamephorash. The water rushes upward.

God spoke to David, giving instructions of the arrangement of Aleph Lamed and instructed the building of the Holy Temple to remember the name. Establish it. Turn away from wickedness.

David raises the pouch and engraving over the Shem Hamephorash, casting it over the surface of the ocean, and afterward returned. Now become wise by the hidden, secret things of El. Learn without receiving the desires of the heart. When receiving the desire of the heart, speak of the desire in you.

Of thoughts, turn aside the heart. Serve and be reverent of life. Desire to be lifted upright at once. Incline upright and desire to return. Bow down thus, not to rise above the heart. Consider the valley below. The glory is below in the valley, as in heaven, the splendor of the Kingdom and the glory of the name.

It is written, below sow the earth. Know the heavens surround the Earth as a shell over all the universe.

All the universe is 500 over 500 [Th"Q AaL Th"Q]. The great sea circles the universe to support the foundation of the universe. The letter covers all the great sea. All the universe is supported by one pillar. The righteous name is (Hebrew: ShNA). Righteousness is the foundation of the universe and the letter of the pillar.

All the universe is upon the single fin of Leviathan [whale, or sea serpent]. Leviathan dwells in the lowest sea, as a small fish in the sea. The lowest sea is over the sea in the beginning.

Upon the shore of the sea, proclaim the name of the sea of weeping and the water rises up. Take the water of the highest weeping. The lowest weeping is not as pure as the highest. The highest desire is the path of God.

The sea of weeping is suspended above the lowest Earth [Aretz]. The Earth extends over the sea. It is written, the Earth extends over the sea. The sea is over the pillar of Chashmal.¹¹ The pillar of Chashmal is over the storehouse of snow. The storehouse of snow is over the mountain Bether [Her Bether]. The mountain Bether is over the ocean [Thehom], resembling three ox heads [Rash Shor]. El proclaims the ocean over desolation [Tohu]. Desolation is in the direction of the greenness. Darkness goes forth. Desolation is over emptiness [Bohu], resembling stones.

The water goes forth to serve. Emptiness is the pillar over the sea. The sea is over the water. The water is over the mountain. The mountain is over Ruoch. Ruoch is suspended in the gate [Sha'areh], bound by the elements of the lowest Earth [Aretz]. The angel appointed over the lowest Earth is Aretzietziyahov.

Proclaim the name of Earth. Desire to make the word of the king, ruling over the lowest Earth. The ocean [Thehom] is over the ocean of desolation [Thehom Tohu], over chaos [Tohu Vobohu], over the sea of emptiness [Bohu Im], over the sea of water [Im Mim], over the sea of ashes [Mim Apher]. The lowest Earth is suspended in the gate and bound in the dome of land [Kepheh Adameh]. Over land [Adameh] is the greatest glory, power, and beauty, by the virtues of the Creator.

In the beginning, El sees land. Exalt and rejoice. Proclaim how to create man from the soil. The Lord Elohim forms Earth [Aretz] from land. The angel appointed over land is Adamael, and over the ocean of land [Adameh Thehom]. The ocean of land is over the ocean of desolation, over chaos, over the sea of emptiness, over the sea of water, over the sea of the desert [Mim Chorabah]. Land is suspended in the gate and bound in the dome of desert [Kepheh Cherubeh]. The angel appointed over the desert is Cherubeh.

Proclaim the name of the desert to draw water from all the seas in the world. Regard the desert over the surface of the streams of land [Adameh Iyavorim] and over the streams. The streams of the desert [Iyavorim Cherubeh] are over the ocean of desolation, over chaos, over the sea of emptiness, over the sea of water, over the sea of dry land [Mim Yobeshah]. Cherubeh is suspended in the gate and bound in the dome. The angel appointed over dry land [Yobeshah] is Yobeshael.

Proclaim the name of dry land. Of all seas in the world, Israel goes by dry land within the sea. The water of the rivers and pools of water go to the sea, making dry land. Above the ocean of dry land [Thehom Yobeshah] is the ocean of desolation, over the sea of desolation [Tohu Im], over the sea of water, over the sea of earth [Mim Aroqa]. Dry land is suspended in the gate and bound in the dome. The angel appointed over Earth [Aroqa] is Aroqael. Proclaim the name Aroqael.

In Gihenam, the wicked are judged by the fire. Eloha in heaven judges the disobedient. Aroqa Shahul, and Abbadon, and Bar Shecheth, and Tit Hiyon, and Sha'ari Tzalemoth [Gate of the Shadow of Death] are in Gihanem.¹²

Of the wicked, there are forty Malachim and Chebeleh appointed over them. The clouds of darkness form a wall. The wicked are silent in the darkness.

Shahul is half fire and half hail. They suffer in pain and terror in Shahul. The Neshemeth do not languish, as the worms do not die in the river of fire.

There are seven great dwellings in Gihenam. In every dwelling, there are seven rivers of fire and seven rivers of hail. The highest is served by the fire. Every dwelling is bound together. There are 7000 caves [Chor] in every dwelling. In every cave are 7000 clefts. In every cleft are 7000 scorpions. Every scorpion inflicts 300 wounds. By every wound, there are 7000 as bitter herbs. There are seven rivers of poison [Sem]. Of death in fire, man is smitten therein. The angel Chebeleh smites you and judges you for every minute of one half of the year in fire, and half in hail and snow.

The Tzeneh [a vessel for containing snow] is from the fire. Divide the sins of man above the ocean of Earth [Aroqa Thehom]. The ocean [Thehom] is suspended in the gate and bound in the dome is the world [Thebel]. The angel appointed over the world is Thebel. Proclaim the name of the world.

From Thebelim are signs of the works of goodness. In the world are mountains and hills and all dwellings of the Lord. When speaking, the mountains tremble and all the hills dissolve.

In the world are 65 kinds of creatures over human beings, resembling the body of a lion and the face of a man, the head of a lion and the body of a man, the head of a serpent and a bull, for there are two heads. There are three heads, four hands, one body, one torso, and two feet.

Over the world, God prepares to judge. Speak to the world. Judge in righteousness and create the human being from the dirt [A'apher]. It came to pass, make the substance to build the world. Reward goodness and face the throne. Establish from the meager earth.

The throne of glory is over the ocean, over the ocean of desolation, over chaos, over the sea of emptiness, over the sea of water, over the sea of the world [Mim Cheled]. The world [Cheled] is suspended in the gate and bound in the dome. The angel appointed over the world is Cheledial. Proclaim the name Cheledial.

In the world, you are human beings. Of acts of wickedness, there is not the world, but only the body. The world is over man and beasts, birds and fishes, creeping things and insects.

Of the righteousness of the Torah and works of goodness, the reverence of heaven. All inhabitants of the nations listen.

In the world are seven lands and seven oceans between them. These are the four spirits of the world. From the spirit of the east, light goes to the universe. From the spirit of the south, a pool of water. From the spirit of the west, the storehouse of snow, the storehouse of hail and cold rain. From the spirit of the north, not stopping the spirit of destruction [Ruoch Meziqin] and horrors [Zova'avoth] and spirits [Ruochoth] and demons [Shedin]. In the north is the hell of the evil [Thopheth Hera'ahh]. Do not stop them from affecting man. Only Eloah may stop them. Forsake the north gate.

The Shekinah is in the west. All face the right-hand path. The universe is created corresponding to the east, south, and west.

It is written in the Torah, of the knowledge be counseled by the Mishnah. In the beginning, the universe was created in six days.

¹² See the Introduction, page 19.

After six thousand years, the universe is established. The righteous are occupied by the doctrine of the Torah. The Lord first completed the testimony, second, the orders, third, the commandments, fourth, the reverence of the Lord, fifth, the judgment of the Lord, sixth, the blessings.

Thus first, be blessed. Second, preserve the light of the Lord. Third, consecrate. Fourth, rise up in exaltation. Fifth, be at peace [Shalom]. Sixth, observe the commandments.

First, keep watch over Israel. Second, observe. Third, observe.¹³ Fourth, observe the Nephesh. Fifth, observe the going forth. Sixth, [observe] the coming of the Lord.

Sing the song of degrees. Keep in purity by keeping the Torah in purity. The divisions of the Garden are five signs. Five are exalted in Eden, of Egypt, Mesopotamia, Sinai, Jericho, and Israel.

Keep in tablets of six spans [or hand breadths]. The six orders are saved from Gihenam. It is written therein of the shadow of death [Tzalemoth], not of the orders of the tablets, six spans over six.

Let there be light to every one of the six. In the desert [Cherebah], make six divisions of the six. This equals 36 spans, arranged span over span. The width is three spans. Three times 36 is 108 appointed to Gihenam. Be delivered from it.

Know Gihenam and the Garden of Eden are supported by the first house, divided between them. The Garden of Eden is on the northeast side. In the north, fill the belly. Therefore, the Sun is red in the west. Flourish by the brilliance, as surely the fire is in Eden. In the northwest is Gihenam. From the burning coals of fire, the Sun in the east is red as blood. The hot springs go forth from Ga'a. Form a wall on the side from the springs. Gihenam is diagonal to the south. Come to the gate of Ga'a below the firmament. Gather in the universe on one side. The rest is outside of the firmament.

In the Qliphoth, seal the river of fire. Above the Qliphoth, the sign of Ga'a is surrounded by the second Qliphoth. Of Ga'a and Gi-hanem, the power of the Qliphoth. The river of fire is above the Qliphoth.

Of the throne of glory, life comes from the strength. Establish the turning of the Sun, Moon, and signs of the zodiac. Of boiling rain, the hot, boiling water descends, going from the east to west, and so on and so forth.

The highest firmament is the course of 500 years. Proclaim the universe is 146 myriad myriads cubits.¹⁴ In the midst of the firmament is the Qliphoth and the river of fire. They come near the lowest part of the universe. In the end, complete the Earth.

The light from the heaven goes forth beyond the Garden of Eden by the mountains on the northeast side. It descends between the mountains to the world. The mountain divides the universe from the Garden of Eden.

The Malachim come forth from the mountain. The darkness of the firmament obscures it from the Earth. Also, the firmament surrounds Ga'a in brilliance.

Above the Qliphoth is the throne of glory. Below is the gate of spirit [Ruoch Sha'areh]. There is nothing surrounding the Qliphoth. It faces Ga'a and Gihenam, surrounding the universe. There is a path to the river of fire.

Of the limits of Gihenam, the signs of the zodiac are near the river of fire, immersed therein above. One from 60 in the garden, one from 60 in Eden, and one from 60 in Gihenam.

Be occupied by the study of the Torah. Of one from 60 of the highest wisdom, be delivered from death and from Gihenam. Come to the Garden of Eden. It is written, the wisdom of the Lord is the foundation of Earth.

Of the 22 letters of the Torah, Aleph is one and Beth is two, making three. Gimel is three, making six. Daleth is four, making ten. Heh is five, making fifteen. Vau is six, making twenty-one. Zayin is seven, making twenty-eight. Cheth is eight, making thirty-six. Teth is nine, making forty-five. Yod is ten and Yzaddi is ninety, making one hundred. Kaph is twenty and Peh is eighty, making one hundred. Lamed is thirty and Ayin is seventy, making one hundred. Mem is forty and Samekh is sixty, making one hundred. Here is four hundred-and-ninety-five. Of five from the Torah, here is 500.

Qoph is one hundred, Resh is two hundred, Shin is three hundred, and Tau is four hundred, making one thousand. Here is fifteen-hundred.

¹³ There is likely some dropped text here.

¹⁴ This calculates to 14,600,000,000 cubits. A cubit is said to be the distance from the tip of your finger to your elbow, approximately 2 feet.

Twenty is five-hundred-and-forty, and six-hundred-and-fifty, and seven-hundred-and-sixty, and eight-hundred-and-seventy, and five-hundred-and-one-thousand, here is six thousand.

In the beginning, Elohim created (Hebrew: R"Th BKA OBKA BA"Th B"Sh) of six, as much indicated 6000 rising upward. By the right of three fathers and four mothers, create seven firmaments. Divide by seven lands. Twelve tribes correspond to the twelve signs of the zodiac.

The names of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, by Gematria, are 688 [Abraham = 248; Isaac = 208; Jacob = 182]. The names of Sarah, Rebecca, Rachel, and Leah, by Gematria, are 1086 [Sarah = 505; Rebecca = 307; Rachel = 238; Leah = 36]. The names of Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar, Zebulon, Benjamin, Dan, Joseph, Naphtali, Gad, and Asher, by Gematria, are 3166 [Reuben = 259; Simeon = 466; Levi = 46; Judah = 30; Issachar = 830; Zebulon = 95; Benjamin = 152; Dan = 54; Joseph = 156; Naphtali = 570; Gad = 7; Asher = 501]. Israel and Yesheron are 1107 [Israel = 541; Yesheron = 566].¹⁵

Of the prophets of the Torah, as it is written of the three, here are six thousand years. The universe will endure. Of Ephraim, Manessah, and Israel (Hebrew: BATH BSh ALP L"H), here is 7000 corresponding to 6000, to be the universe and Aleph Zayin of Tohu.

Therefore twice as much as Lamed Cheth [L"Ch] corresponding to Cheth, the seventh of seven firmaments. Of seven planets, and seven countries, and seven oceans, that seven is the world of Tohu.

Therefore, survive to the days of Achab¹⁶ for 7000, not kneeling before Ba'al. 7000 in days of Jehovachez.¹⁷ Here is divided seven countries and seven deserts between them, of seven firmaments.

It is written, the wisdom of the Lord is the foundation of the Earth. Fill with wisdom, not coming forth. It is written, the reverence of the Lord is the wisdom; however in heaven, be filled with intelligence. Understand the wisdom.

¹⁵ Yesheron is a periphrastic name of Israel, meaning "the righteous people."

¹⁶ A King of Israel. Also, the name of a false prophet.

¹⁷ The name of a King of Israel, the son of Jehu. Also, the name of a King of Judah, son of Josiah.

By the means of the word, speak of intelligence in heaven. In the deserts, knowledge goes forth in two drops. From drops of knowledge in the deserts [come] the great book and all the works of glory.

On the seventh day, the love of the Lord shines upon the universe. Create seven countries. Give the laws over the Earth and in the open plains of the seventh firmament. The seventh day is chosen to be the Sabbath. Thus bind them and create around the lowest earth. Afterward, surround by fire and water, Tremble in fear of lightning and thunder. Tremble in fear of the images. The noise and tumult returns and, afterward, silence. One minute after, speak the Kaddash [Prayer for the Dead]. After speaking the blessing, speak in counsel. After all this, the holy life and the Aophnim, the throne of glory, and the foot of the Shekinah.

Around the back of the head, see life on Earth as the Shekinah above. Thus, the Shekinah is below and splendor fills the Earth. Also, heaven is the throne and the Earth is the footstool.

A thousand thousands and a myriad myriads ministering angels serve below the feet of the Shekinah. From every kind of praise [shebech] and every kind of praise [Qolos], fill the Earth below.

All the lands of the Shekinah are over the throne of glory from below. Of the powers of the universe, the second power to what is first of the lowest labors. First is the highest labor, keeping the glory above and below. The glory of the Creator is in the air and in the darkness, in every place filled. Do not fill the firmaments with glory. One is above and one is below.

The word written by the Lord is of one divine truth. He is one and there is none like him. There is no Creator other than him. He fills all, except as it is explained in the end of the book.

The Creator established all. The vision of glory is in heaven above. Dwell in the glory above, corresponding to the throne. Of the name, Seraphim, Chashmallim, Cherub, Aophanim, Chiyoth, thus below the lowest earth.

Reveal the glory above by the singing of the wings. Listen to the sound of the wings. From the wings, those on the Earth hear the holy singing from above and blessings from below. When speaking to God, I work in the temple [Meqedesh] and dwellings. Gather to all habitation above. Come forth to God, and speak to him: What is the matter with you, dwelling in an unclean place? It is better to dwell in purity. I shall purify the dwelling. Dwell in the temple of El.

God spoke to them: Of man below, be equal. Complete the sign. Rejoice by the singing. Rejoice in heaven, created by the Lord. Dwell in the lowest Earth and rejoice in heaven.

The Malachim dwell in the lowest Earth. Of Israel from the singing below, and moreover the singing. It is written, rejoice in unison by glory that comes forth.

The people of Israel call out [Yiriya'aov, or sound the trumpet] to every son of Elohim. Consider more of all congregations. Do not rise up to rejoice the name of Aaron. The song of Aaron rises up. Rejoice as Jacob rejoices.

It is written, see and rejoice in the heart when you hear. Thus, when quiet, it is complete.

Moses and Esau are appointed to consecrate in the midst of the dwelling, corresponding to the letters of the names: Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar, Zebulon, Dan, Naphtali, Gad, Asher, Joseph, Benjamin, Sabbatai, and Yesheron. There are seventy-two letters (Hebrew: ABRHM ITzChQ IAaQB RAOBN ShMAaON LOI IChODH IShShKR ZBOLN DN NPTThLI GD ASHR IOSP BNIMIN ShBTI IShRON).

Thus, by the name (Hebrew: OISAA OIBA OIT). The letters of the mothers are as the letters of the fathers. Embrace and kiss the image of Jacob.

Israel is the holy land, the place of God. Below is the Holy Temple. Speak, Holy, Holy, Holy [Qedesh Qedesh Qedesh], as it is written in the book of the temples of God. Embrace and kiss the name of the image of Jacob, engraved upon the throne of glory.

Place two seeds of Jacob. Speak, happy is the father of the praise of your son. By the most holy praise, see the vision of (Hebrew: ShDI IHOH) [the Almighty God] and see God.

The prophet Bala'am performed works of the Merkabah.¹⁸ Place Jacob upon the throne. Speak of the goodness of Elohim. Of Jacob by Gematria, Jacob upon the throne. It is written below the left side (Hebrew: LRASHI IShRAL). On the right side, embrace. Therefore, speak of the hand over the right hand of man.

(Hebrew: AaL AISH IMINK) by Gematria (Hebrew: IShRAL). Over human beings, Ametzeth [strength] to you. (Hebrew: AImTz"Th) by Gematria is Israel. It is written (Hebrew: ChZO-QOTHik AMTzThIK) [powerful strength].

Also, support the right side in righteousness. Speak, Holy, Holy, Holy, three times corresponding to Elohim. In the heavens above, first. Above the Earth below, second. There is not another in the air, third. There is not in the highest and lowest, nor in the air between.

Corresponding to three praises [Yithodien] we speak, hear me Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one.¹⁹

Of the blessings before, he who endures, petition in the morning, and then in the evening. First, proclaim from the beginning of the first generations. Second, proclaim to the Lord. I am first, and I am last. Thus speaks the Lord, King of Israel, and the redeemer, the Lord of hosts. I am first and I am last. There is no other unto Elohim. Of the third, actually sprinkle the blood.

From ancient times, return in vestments as white as snow. The heat of the flames of pure fire. The flames shine as a wheel of burning fire. First, put forth the darkness. Behold, the clouds around heaven come near. From ancient times, reach and come near second. From ancient times, deliver judgment of the highest and most holy. Appoint to reach the kingdom to possess holiness, third.

In the morning, speak three times, Holy, Holy, Holy. Once in Yotzer, and once in Amida [Prayer of Eighteen Benedictions] in supplication, and once as arranged in the Kaddash.

The holy glory is in the air between heaven and Earth. Those are the three prayers of supplication in the day. The Prayer of Eighteen Benedictions is the supplication.

Deliver directly from eighteen. Of Gihenam, 108 nations by the nation of God. From Gihenam, open the mouth wide without (Hebrew: Ch"Q) and gather (Hebrew: LAa"HB) for eighteen hundred thousand years.

Of the eyes, not seeing Elohim other than those men able to see eighteen hosts [Cholivoth, or armies] assembled.

¹⁸ See Numbers 22-24.

¹⁹ The prayer is Shema. Shema Yisrael Adonai Elihanu Adonai Achad. In modern tradition, followed by "Amen."

It is written, be satisfied in the eternal life of eighteen thousand lands of God. See in all time. They are hidden. Therefore, hide in them. It is written, they are hidden. (In other words, in the world. There are eighteen benedictions in the Amida. It is written to hide. Thus, in the world, there are eighteen rows of the throne, for it is written to hide.)

The Creator formed all and filled all space with the glory. Rise up over the holy life in heaven. Thus, honor the most holy glory over the life below the throne. Before the throne of glory, below is as above.

The name Shekinah is written upon the throne of the heavens. The Earth is the footstool. It is written, the glory fills the Earth.

Place the sign at the feet of the Shekinah, surrounding 18,000 lands. Of the spirit of the north, 4,500. Of the spirit of the south, 4,500. Of the spirit of the west, 4,500. Of the spirit of the east, 4,500. Thus, the circle is 18,000.

The 4,500 of the spirit of the north are of splendor and glory, of strength and praise, of song and honor, of joy and exaltation and majesty.²⁰

The 4,500 of the spirit of the south are of fulfillment [Melayim] and holiness, of purity and righteous is the great name.

The 4,500 of the spirit of the west are of fulfillment, of adorning the crown, of the kingdom and the sound of the silence of time [Qol Demameh Dekeh].

The 4,500 of the spirit of the east are of fulfillment, of splendor and glory, of beauty and exaltation, of rejoicing in song. Restore as written therein.

The sign in the north is of fulfillment, grace and righteousness. Be strengthened by the great victory.

The sign in the south is of fulfillment, of splendor and glory, of beauty and glory. Exalt in the majesty.

The sign in the east is of fulfillment. The song restores the crown of the kingdom and the sound of the silence of time.

The sign in the west is of fulfillment. Adorn in the splendor. Of strength and exaltation, rejoice and sing all the words of praise.

Speak of the chariot of Elohim. Of myriad thousands upon thousands, the Lord is in them.

Eighteen thousand remain and they minister before and after. Of 18,000 lands surrounded by the river of water. After the river of water, surrounded by the river of fire. After the river of fire, surrounded by walls of fire and water. After the walls of fire and water, surrounded by mountains of hailstones and hills of snow. After is the wall of storm. After is the shaking of an earthquake. After is the fear of thunder and lightning. After are the Cherubim flying upon the wings of the wind. After are a thousand thousands hosts. After are myriads of pleasures. After, sing hymns. After, sound the Shofar. After is the sound of blowing the Shofar. After are myriads of pleasures. After are further praises. After are holy words. After are the words of blessings. The glory fills the Earth.

After all this is the mud and mire. After mud and mire, there is nothing; henceforth chaos and darkness. You cannot see, as there is no measure to it.

It is written, hidden in the darkness is a secret place. Every day for all time, God rides above the Cherub. Go forth to ride above the Cherub swiftly and return to see. Flying upon the wings of the wind, ride above the Cherub, flying upon the wings of the wind, filling all. Ride above the Cherubim in the south, thus going to the south side. All the Cherubim and every spirit dwell by the Ruoch of the Malachim.

By the sign of the side, the strongest princes [Methegeborim Sheriem] are below the strongest. The brilliance of the glory is not seen on the second side. Therein, Solomon speaks in prayer. Hear me in the heavens. The foundation of the dwelling corresponds to the glory coming forth by the brilliance of the great Malachim.

Place the sign of eighteen lands in righteousness. In the end is Ezekial, but not there, as the lands are diminished. Complete by these signs in love of 310 lands.

Give the name of the universe and the name of the lands. By the brilliance of the glory, see from the place of the throne of glory. The brilliance around it is from the blessing.

Blessed is the glory of the Lord. It is all and fills all, all between the heavens and the Earth. Seek the Lord by Aleph Beth, as the Rabbi A'qiba.

The mercy of the Lord fills the Earth. Great mercy is given from God. Know in the Torah, to proclaim mercy. It is written in the Torah, of mercy over the language above. The Lord is merciful and the Lord is compassionate. They shall know all put forth of the firmaments and what is in the midst of the first. It is the veil high above. The veil covers and binds. It is as a sheet spreading. It is out, open, not seeing in the house. Thus, extend to surround heaven.

In the morning, spread out over the surface of the firmament of the heavens. Protect from the heat of the Sun, in the night, [from] rain.

The sign is before the stars of the signs of the zodiac. In the morning, return to the place. Cover the firmament in the evening to bind. In the morning, cover and be renewed every day.

Of the work of Berashith, the veil of heaven is bound. Unite the veil and heaven below the firmament is separated. It is written, the heavens are covered by the glory of El. It is revealed by the firmament. Return above the veil surrounding. See in the day. Know God created 390 firmaments of heaven. Double [or multiply] to unite. Corresponding to double, every firmament to my name and title. Point above and every one ministering between the throne of glory.

Of seven firmaments, they are the foundation. Above, all the firmaments are complete and perfect. The veil surrounds the heavens in the course of 500 years.

The ladder stands upon the Earth [Aretz]. Over 500 years, begin reaching to the Lord in the heavens. Rise up the ladder in the course of 500 years.

The most-honored princes [Sher Nekbadim] appoint seven chief offices [Serasim] over the lands. Above and below, come forth to the sign of Metatron. Create the heavens from fire and water by the word of the Lord. Create heaven by the word of God. By the power of the heat of fire and the moisture of the water, create the heavens therein.

The skies are below the firmament. Raise water by the name of the first firmament. The hosts of angels stand guard. Seven thrones stand over the heavens, not dwelling in the highest. Watching over and ministering, they are the highest magistrates [Sholetiem, or dominions].

Bind to them, the most merciful, the highest blessings, and the most powerful. Desire to take vengeance in the blessed place. The destruction [Mezieqiem, or demons] of man is occupied by the Malachim.

Of the seventh sign, the Malachim are appointed to make. The seven princes [Shariem] of the magistrates [Shetoriem] are formed from fire. See by the flames of the fire. Go forth from the fire. The hosts did not create the word, but only when counseled by the magistrates. By authority of the seven, put forth whether good or wicked, whether wealthy or poor, whether in war or peace.

Below the first dominion [Shoter] are 70 princes ministering. They listen to every word. Of works of healing, proclaim the name Tezom and Thereh.

Below the second dominion are the princes and Malachim ministering. Of the consecration, keep guard and cast down the enemies in battle. Proclaim by the name of the Malachim. Proclaim in purity.

Below the third dominion are four princes of the Malachim ministering. They are friends of man, whether satiated or in hunger. Every word comes forth, whether good or wicked. Proclaim the name in purity.

Below the fourth dominion are 42. They are appointed over the heart of the king and the princes and every man. Proclaim the name in purity.

Below the fifth dominion are 22. They listen in the night to the words. Petition the stars and speak with the spirits. Proclaim the name in purity.

Below the sixth dominion are 37. They are strong Malachim, girded in power and strength, covering all the corners of the world. Proclaim the name in purity.

Below the seventh dominion are 46. They read every word in dreams. Proclaim the name in purity and you succeed in the works.

PART 4

IN THE BEGINNING, PART 2

THE ANGEL A'MOAL IS APPOINTED over the veil of the firmament, appointed over 12,000 Malachim. Of the many paths in heaven, extend the path in the light of the fire of splendor. In the place, there is a great mountain of white fire. Divide the pure fire, not seen from there. Go forth beyond to divide the path of the white fire from the pure.

On the grassless paths, the Malachim go forth. Go forth on a journey upon the path. Go around, until rising up the ladder from firmament to firmament, the Merkabah is reached. There are the Malachim. Those who are not pure will not reach the splendor (as it is commanded), rising up to the Merkabah.

In every place, it is written of the heavens, either of the significance of an open hand or the body of the firmament; however the heavens above the heavens are as a chamber within a chamber.

It is revealed that all the heavens are formed as a tent, stretched by a tent hook in the Sea of Oceanus [Mi Avoqiyinos]. Be caught as a hook in the Sea of Oceanus. Distinguish the limits of the heavens. Distinguish the limits of the Earth. The limits of the Earth and the limits of the heavens extend from the Sea of Oceanus.

Be refreshed in the highest sea. In the midst of the sea, rise above, as a tent extending forth. The human being stands below. The limits are below and in the middle of the heavens. The limits below and in the middle are above all the creatures of the lowest dwelling. Dwell in the tabernacle.

Of the seal of the heavens and the Earth, by the seal of Ahieh, Aleph Heh is below and Yod Heh is above. Of the three seals of Ahieh, there are twelve letters corresponding to the twelve hours of the day and twelve hours of the night, twelve months of the year, twelve signs of the zodiac, and the twelve tribes.

To the side (see figure 3 on page 94), there are four seals of every spirit. Two letters are above and two letters below: Aleph Heh is below and Yod Heh is above. Of three spirits and three letters of (Hebrew: AHIH). The fourth spirit is established to serve, but not of the seal until the appointed time.

In the divine seal of (Hebrew: IHOH), Yod Heh is above and Vau Heh is below. By this sign, rejoice the heavens and exalt the earth. Rejoice the heavens [Ishemechov Hashemim], as Yod Heh is above. Exalt the earth [Vothegeel Haretz], as Vau Heh is below. These are the four letters of the name.

From the north gate, the Shekinah descends. Sustain the language. The Lord descends to see the city of Gomer.

Descending to Sinai, the Lord descends upon Mount Sinai to restore Jerusalem. Stand upon feet in the day, thus, upon the Mount of Olives. The letters of the seal are seen as lightning and flames of light. See a thousand thousands myriads of divisions rising up. Before that, engrave by the fingers. Bind the crowns of burning arrows of brilliance.

The letters Aleph Heh Yod Heh are a thousand myriad divisions. The one measure rises up as 79 [Aa"t] flames. It is written therein of 3000 of the seal of the heavens. As before, I employ the heat of the Sun in the universe. Be consumed by fire.

The myriad hosts of heaven of the orders of fire. The orders of the powers of the force of fire rush forth to cast down and burn the world. Thus, see the limits of the heaven, bound by the ends of the earth, the ends of the earth by the ends of the heavens by the seal of Ahieh. Serve in sorrow and bring forth by measures of mercy.

The seal is in the Book of Formation.¹ Raise in the hand three simple things [Pheshototh]. Cover them in the name of the great (Hebrew: IHOH). Seal them with six edges. Face upward and seal by (Hebrew: IHOH). Proclaim of twelve (or by Aleph Beth) not double Heh Vau Zayin Cheth Teth Yod. Move Qoph Yod Nun, taking Yod Heh Vau Heh.² Reveal by combining the letters of the name.

² The Gematria of Qoph Yod Nun is 160. The word is Qien, or Cain, and translates as "lance" or "spear."

Figure 3. The caption under the diagram translates as: Of these twelve letters (N"l AHIH), that (AHIH) observes by the description. Before find three seals of (AHIH), two times (AHIH) and one time (AHIH). Here is the seal of heaven and Earth, of three seals of (AHIH). Complete as that before.

AH Heaven is as a helmet
IH spread the earth
over the water and here, splendor and glory as above

Bridge Here is the place of the glory, where the foot Bridge of the throne, and not being except in Heaven
Bridge to double, thus to divide by 75 and beneath the feet.
AHIH

Combine this with that, making Heh Qoph Beth Heh in heaven [HQBH, see Introduction], resemble the throne, but not the throne actually. Reveal only to all the Malachim. He is king over all the heavens. Double the image of the throne.

The heavens number the glory of El. Serve thus above the sea of the heavens, above the sea of water to the sea of lightning and thunder. Tremble as the walls of the powers of fire surround the sign.

The great ladder is placed in heaven. The top reaches to the firmament. The most holy Malachim and most honored princes are appointed over it.

The Malachim are appointed over the north gate by the grace of the Lord. There are six over the south gate, six over the east gate, and six over the west gate.

Malachim are in the sole (the round circle of the foot). The groups divide to establish. El speaks to man. Pass before, not turning away according to the circle within. Bring forth in the round sole of the foot. Interpret the feet and the oval sole of the foot. The footsteps in the circle are as darkness in the beginning of creation, resembling an ox. Therefore, create twelve oxen below. The foot is upright. The foot of the ox grows as the lion, not as man, and similar to the eagle. What the Lord creates is great.

Know, when described thus, by three veils of the throne of Aleph. Aleph is as the highest. Reveal the three veils. Aleph is above Beth. Beth resembles a throne. Gimel is as the eye of Cheshemial, like a sapphire. Aleph is above and created as Beth, therefore Aleph Beth.

Of Rabbi Aqieba, the Beth descends from above, from the throne of glory. Tremble as the wheels [Gelgalim]. God speaks to them. Restore the Beth above. Descend in the beginning, of all the splendors of heaven [Kebodino Merom].

From the beginning, speak of the glory of the Kingdom. Speak as it is written. The first circle of the throne is below the feet of the highest. God hears the prayers from his dwelling, sitting upon the throne in the heavens. The Earth is the footstool in the house of rest [Beth Menocheh] of the Lord [Adon]. The footstool is in the House of God [Beth Elihanu]. Bow down before the holy footstool.

Of Daleth, fifty-and-one of the Book of the Mishnah [Sepher Mishnah] of the Torah. Therefore, bow down before the Torah, the footstool of the Lord. Thus, there are seven thrones in heaven. These thrones are in the heavens, seen therein. The magistrate is appointed over them.

The root of the word is engraved in the throne of glory in the court of the temple of the king. The honored prince is Voqemoval. The host is Sederal, appointed over the Malachim. The magistrate is appointed over 12,000.

The king stands over the gates of heaven. Therein are multitudes numbering the glory of El. It is written, the heavens number the glory of El.

Teth corresponds to the portion of the firmament reaching nine times the firmament by Samekh Berashith, until the sea shines upward to the heavens. Aleph is the most high [Meromim], Beth is the angels [Melakiyov]. Gimel is the hosts [Tzebayov]. Daleth is the Sun. Heh is the Moon. Vau is the stars. Zayin is the heaven of heavens [Shemi Shemiem]. Cheth is the sea above the heavens. Teth is, thus, the foundation of the dwelling.

The foundation dwells in the heavens. There are nine kinds of fire. By the works of Merkabah corresponding to Teth, make the firmament above the heavens. The firmament is fixed therein. The Sun, and Moon, the constellation of the Pleiades, Orion, stars, every sign of the zodiac, every ocean, and every great ladder are placed in the firmament. The top reaches up to the sky. The angel is as flames of fire. The most honored princes are appointed over it.

There are seven appointed over the gates of the firmament. Of the gates of the firmament, make the north spirit. In the north are appointed six princes. There are seven princes serving over the spirit of the south, seven princes over the east, and seven princes of the west.

In the the second firmament is frost and vapor, the storehouse of snow, the storehouse of hail, the angel of fire, the angel of judgment, and the spirits of fear. Of the sign, the firmament fills with fear. In the midst of the Malachim, serve the unfathomable [Ayin Cheqor]. Make the hosts and the highest princes and most honored magistrates.

In the firmament are twelve degrees. In every degree stands the most honored and highest Malachim. Of every one of every body [Gopheh], hear to make a human being. Of every proclamation in purification over the first degree, serve nine princes and magistrates serving. The fear weakens them. The terror binds them by fear. Tremble as they are dying by the image of fire around as a vision of lightning. The mouth is not to silence the commandments and not to hear sounds. The angels are silent. They come upon them suddenly, rushing over all to serve the highest.

There are eleven princes serving over the second degree. They serve by the power. Fill with strength, love, and desire. The burning fire rushes forth from the nearest sign of the zodiac.

Fourteen princes serve over the third degree. Tremble in fear of the anger of human beings, hindering thoughts. They are strengthened by the strength. Fear is before and fear is to follow. Of groaning and trembling, walk from the sound of the trembling of thunder as the sounds of fire. Burning fire goes forth from the eyes, to establish, complete, and abolish.

There are sixteen princes serving over the fourth degree. Seven bind the storm. The sound of steps walking are as the sound of chains being brandished in the east. From the north are sounds as lightning and rushing fire. Of the divisions of the year, and of good and evil.

There are twelve princes serving over the fifth degree. They hold a shield and spear, a helmet upon the head, and a coat of chain mail armor covering the right side and left side. Of hail stones, tremble in oppression as fire goes forth. Hold a lamp and whisper [Lecheshiem] the answer. Do not silence the mouth as burning flames go forth from the fire. The Ruoch from the nose consumes the fire. Make the storehouse of fire, from where fire goes forth.

There are seventeen princes serving over the sixth degree. They lead the humble, filled with glory and robed in white vestments. They are seated upon great thrones, over faithfulness, loyalty, honesty, and over the healing of the faithful and the peaceful.

There are eleven princes serving over the seventh degree, bound by the power to strengthen in fear. One half resembles fire and one half resembles water. They are wondrous, not serving over. Fire rises up as burning coals in the eyelids. Serve in fear of the lowest, not being able to see the visions. Serve the highest. Be afraid [of] the visions and the three spirits of the world.

There are nineteen princes serving over the eighth degree. There are fourteen offices over the faithful, appointed over the rushing forth of power and strength. Form man by the strength of the bow and lance. Seal up the fire. Fear the horsemen of fire and chariots of fire.

There are fourteen princes serving over the tenth degree [The ninth degree is omitted]. The offices are over the faithful. By the powers of the sounds of fire, not hindering all the knowledge, make the covenant in heaven.

There are sixteen princes serving over the eleventh degree. They serve in greatness. The hosts minister over the princes. The fire rises up in splendor. Fly and give praise to the Creator.

There are twenty princes serving over the twelfth degree. They are surrounded in righteousness and shine in splendor. In the beginning, fill the foundation of the building. These serve half and half. Half are roots and half are branches. Afterward, heal by words of binding. All remember healing in the firmament. The tabernacle of beauty is improved by the arrangement of heaven and filled with a great light.

Speak the name of the Sun in the tabernacle. The firmament divides the darkness of seven planets. Saturn is the highest. Mikal is appointed over Saturn. Berekial is appointed over Jupiter. Gabriel is appointed over Mars. Raphael is appointed over the Sun. Chesedial is appointed over Venus. Tzedeqial is appointed over Mercury. A'aniel is appointed over the Moon.

Saturn is cold and dry, as ice and hoar frost. Jupiter is hot and moist, in even mixture. Mars is hot and dry, as fire. The Sun is complete fire. Venus is cold and hot. Mercury is cold and hot, less dry and moist. The Moon is a mixture of cold and hot.

Four dwellings are revealed to the prophets of the life of man. Bring forth by the star constellation [Mezeh Kokeb]. Reveal to the prophets of the life of man. In time, bring forth. The rising star goes forth in the universe from out of the east. It is the house of life [Beth Chiyov].

First, the house of the planet Saturn rises in 57 years. Second, Jupiter comes to pass in 79 years. Third, Mars comes to pass in 66 years. Fourth, Venus comes to pass in 22 years. Fifth, Mercury comes to pass in 77 years. Be alone in the house of the planet.

Saturn is appointed over (Hebrew: RIOCh) [probably an alternate spelling of Ruoch], over affliction, bruises, sickness, and disease hidden in the body, and over death.

Jupiter is appointed over life [Chiyem], over peace, goodness, happiness, wealth, and over the glory and majesty of the kingdom.

Mars is appointed over the blood [Dem], over destruction, wickedness, hostility, war, vengeance, anger, and over the great Lords [Ba'ali Reboth], over wounds and injuries, over iron, and over fire and water, and over the fall.

Venus is appointed over beauty, over mercy, lust and desire, sexual intercourse, fertility, nature, over the birth of men and birth of beasts, over the spirit of the earth and fruits of the tree.

Mercury is appointed over wisdom and understanding, over the science of writing and all engravings, the importances of all arts of education, all customs of every culture, and all languages.

The Sun is appointed over the division of light and darkness that determines the days and years, making therein all arts of education, over the writings of all languages. Reveal the revelations from city to city and from country to country.

The Moon is appointed over the gates of heaven and Earth, and the mixture of all the covenants, establishing the divisions of good and evil. They are appointed, not dominated by good or evil, as these are all in the commandments of the Creator. Favor all dwelling upon the earth. They are not evil, and also they are not good, even in Israel.

The light of the Sun is not necessary in the day, nor the light of the Moon in night. The Lord goes before the days, not touching the foundation.

The clouds in the day also come forth in the world. Israel does not require the light of the Sun nor the light of the Moon, not in day nor in night. The Lord goes forth in the day.

Speak, not because of the Sun, for the Sun and Moon are driven forth. The signs of the zodiac are fixed. Thus, calculate the seasons and measure the days. Calculate the hours and the orders of the courses from the beginning.

The strength within the Sun is Michael, Mercury is Beraqial, and Chesedial is the Moon. Gabriel is Saturn.

Saturn from the Sun, of all the signs of the zodiac, is 30 years. Jupiter is Tzedeqial. Mars is Samal. The Sun is Raphael. Venus is A'anal. The seven Malachim are of seven hours of Saturn from the Sun. Of every planet is two. In the middle, reach the end. From the Sun, with all the signs of the zodiac, complete in 30 years.

Of Jupiter, from the Sun with every planet, in 12 months reach the end. Be complete in 12 years.

Of Mars from the Sun with every planet, of 30 days to reach from the sun. Twelve months is Venus from the Sun with every planet. Twenty-eight years to reach from the Sun and 36 years of Mercury.

The Sun ministers with every planet. In seven days, reach from the Sun. Three hundred days of the Moon from the Sun with every planet. In 25 days, reach from the Sun. Complete in thirty days.

The arrangement of the seven planets is the wisdom of the people [Goyiem]. The firmament is ten divisions of seven degrees above. There are seven dwellings of seven planets. These are arranged from the lowest degree. Uphold Earth by the dwelling of the Moon. The Moon circles in the firmament, rising up from the Earth 730 measures [Chebeliem].³

By the measure of the heavens, of every measure, there are 156 measures. Measuring to reach the Earth, the end is 123,880 by measures of the Earth.

The second degree is the degree of Mercury. Rise up 353 measures by the measure of the heavens. Of every measure, there are 161 measures. Earth, to reach the end, is 56,433.

The third degree is the dwelling of Venus. It is around every firmament. Rise from the dwelling 58 measures by the measure of the heavens. Every measure is 84 measures. Earth, to reach the end, is 4,552.

The fourth degree is the center of the dwelling of the Sun. Rush forth around the firmament in twelve months. Rise from the dwelling of Venus in 80 measures by the measure of the heavens. Every measure is 518 measures. Earth, to reach the end, is 41,340.

The fifth degree is the degree of Mars. Rush forth around the firmament. Rise from the dwelling of the Sun in 30 measures by the measure of the heavens. Every measure is 119 measures. Earth, to reach the end, is 3,570 measures.

The sixth degree is the dwelling of Jupiter. Rise from the dwelling of Mars in 612 measures by the measure of the heavens. Every measure is 112 measures. Earth, to reach the end, is 68,544.

The seventh degree is the highest. It is the dwelling of Saturn. Around the firmament is 30 years. Rise from the dwelling of Jupiter in 750 measures by the measure of the heavens. Every measure is 156 measures. Earth, to reach the end, is 127,000 measures.

From the dwelling of the Moon to the dwelling of Saturn is 1,881 measures by the measure of the heavens. Of 291,800 measures by measuring Earth.

Every measure of the earth is 50 cubits. 40 measures to the mile. Every mile is 1,000 cubits, to reach 72,546 miles less one measure. (And one from eight in the mile, and one from two miles, and 179 days and one half, and one from 40 miles to the clouds of the firmament.)

In the hollow space of the universe, from the Earth to the firmament, is 730 measures by the measure of the heavens. Every measure is 156 measures. By the measure of Earth, to reach the end is 123,480 measures of Earth. The 2,447-mile course is 71 days and seven miles.

Of the wisdom of Israel, it is spoken: From Earth to the firmament is 500. Speak the truth of the seven planets, of Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, the Sun, Venus, Mercury, and the Moon.

Divide the firmament in seven arrangements and seven lands of dominions. By these seven planets, know to bring forth man therein, of good and evil.

Above the second firmament is the highest sea. Reach the planet Saturn. It is near the sea. Therefore, it is cold, until the vapor comes from the water. It is far from the Sun, not receiving heat. Thus, it is cold and dry, as ice and hoar frost.

Jupiter is nearest to Saturn, receiving the cold that is close to the water. The heat goes to Mars, in the center between the cold and heat. Therefore, there is power from the mixture in the middle, not of great heat, nor of great cold.

Mars is near the Sun. It is hot and dry as fire. The Sun is the fire of all the seven planets. The heat of fire and force of the Sun is in the center. The path of fire heats the universe by the flame from above to below.

³ This refers to a measuring line, or a rope or cord.

Of Venus from the cold, and Mercury and the Moon from the heat of the Sun, rise up and melt the cold. Mercury is cold. From the cold of Earth, the Moon is cold as snow.

Heat is received from Venus and Mercury. Below, reduce the moisture of the Moon from the mixture. Cold as snow, receive the cold from the lowest water. From the air [Ruoch] between the Earth, freeze the cold as snow. From the mixture of the heat, receive from the heat of the planets. It rises from Earth, not as cold as Saturn.

The heat received from the most powerful hosts [Tzebavoth Chiyiliem] comes near. Therefore, the power is from the mixture of cold and hot.

The Sun is fire. Mercury is dry. Jupiter is wind. Venus is rain. The Moon is cool. Saturn is flowing water. Mars is boiling water.

The Sun is as the land of Gog.⁴ Mercury is as the southern land of Keftabieth. Venus is as Edom. The Moon is as Shinar [A country near Babylon]. Jupiter is as Idumea. Mars is as Kephethor. Saturn is as Hodov.

The Sun and Jupiter are the ruling planets of fire. The Sun rules in the day and Jupiter rules the night.

Venus and the Moon are the ruling planets of water. Venus rules in the day and the Moon rules in the night.

Saturn and Mercury are the ruling planets of air. Saturn rules in the day and Mercury rules in the night.

Mars is the ruling planet of water in the night, ruling in the day and in night.

Seven Malachim are appointed to the highest. Therefore, seven rule in the day and the night. Give the power and strength of the Sun and the planets as one. Mars is ruling. The Moon is love. The Sun and Jupiter are hate. Saturn and Mars are as one in place, facing as one. Favor goodness in the place. Evil is ill-favored, being favored and ill-favored.

Jupiter, the Moon, Mercury, and Venus are as one to favor hate, ill-favored to complete this to that, not love with the Moon.

Mercury to Venus, as one favored. They are ill-favored, and of love, this with that. Of desire, not passing over Mercury with the Sun, and not the Moon with Venus, and the sign Aries with Jupiter, and Mars with Saturn.

The Sun, Venus, and Saturn favor Gemini, Venus, and Aries, with Jupiter, Mars with Saturn. The Sun, Venus, and Saturn favor Gemini, Jupiter and Saturn favor Cancer. The Sun and Jupiter favor Leo. The Sun, Venus, and the Moon favor Virgo. The Sun favors Sagittarius. Jupiter, Saturn, and Venus favor Capricorn. The Sun, Jupiter, and the Moon favor Aquarius. The Sun, Venus, and the Moon favor Pisces.

Of Yod, create the universe by ten commandments corresponding to ten words. Create the Sun and Moon corresponding to two tablets. By Zayin, create the planets corresponding to the Torah, refined sevenfold. Create many stars, ministering with the signs of the zodiac.

God created the twelve signs of the zodiac in the universe. Of every sign and planet, create power [Cheyil] of fifteen powers. Of every power are 30 powers. Of the powers of Riyehthon, there are 10,406. Of Riyehthon, there are 30 legions, 324,000 in every legion: 30 of Setera, of 9,720,000; 30 of Sherqon, of 90,000,000 and 1,000,000; of all to Sherqon, 3,650,000 stars as appointed, the days of the Sun, of 100,000,000,000 [one thousand myriad myriads], and 99,600,000,000.

Rule in the day and in night. Ruling the seven planets in the day is Keshetzenesh and in the night is Chelem. In the day, Keshetzenesh rules in the day over the seven arrangements of the constellation of the Pleiades, beginning with Taurus. The stars unite, gathering as one, as the brood below the chickens.

The constellation of the Pleiades begin with the sign of Taurus, Orion, the Little Dipper, and the Big Dipper. Going after the constellation of the Pleiades, speak of the Little Dipper, the Big Dipper, and Orion. Going after second, the stars of the Little Dipper. Proclaim Orion and the Lord proclaims the dwellings of Orion, of the constellation of the Pleiades, of seven stars.

In the beginning, rule in the day and rule in the night. Virgo rules in the day and in night. Here are five days and two days.

Seven are suspended from the wheel in the firmament. Those suspended go forth, and reverse, with all the signs returning. Of the wisdom after, there are no rulers of these signs, according to the desire of God, the king of kings, who created the wisdom of the signs, to which there is no end.

Therefore, to every man is Neshemeh, Ruoch, and Chiyem [see Introduction, page 19]. Face him, as he knows in the heart what comes forth in the day. Be united by the signs. Understand all in every dwelling. Of him who created, know of all thoughts until not creating all the great, shining luminaries in the sky, outside of the Little Dipper, as it is placed in the north.

The demons [Meziqiem] go in the firmament. The Malachim that fell from the most holy place, from the heavens, rise up to hear one word. After the veil, follow after in the tribe of man. By the hand, return to the place.

All stars and planets, and all signs of the zodiac were formed in the first quarter, not preceding the two parts of the hour. Therefore, every work of the Sun is slow. Every work of the Moon is swift.

The Sun and Moon are the two great, shining luminaries in the firmament. The highest is stretched as a tent, extending as a curtain. Isaiah speaks that it is spread as a tent. All the creatures cover the firmament as a tent, covering all below.

The wheel turns the luminaries, the stars, and the signs, from east to west, from west to east, going from Aries to Taurus, from Taurus to Gemini, and so on, until Pisces. From the beginning until the end of the year, going around and around. Rising up and descending, with the two great, shining luminaries. The stars from south to north and from north to south.

Earth extends over the sea, fixed within the waters of the oceans, as a ship in the middle of the sea. The Sea of Oceanus surrounds it. Proclaim the great sea [Im Hagedol]. There is no water produced therein or going forth. Cast down therein and rest in the water going forth in the universe.

When passing Oceanus, reach chaos. From there, reach the ends of the firmament. It is written in the Book of Job, surely be divided. Isaiah speaks of the Creator of the ends of earth.

Earth is created from the dwelling on the north side. Earth rises up to the dome, reaching the firmament on every side. It is suspended by the strength of the firmament. Of the wheel of the constellations, the Sun is the head and the Moon is the tail.

The desire of knowledge is in every place. The head is suspended, increasing over the creation of the universe in two years. Deliver in twelve years and the remainder therein in the course, corresponding to the year and corresponding to the month.

The head is suspended and the tail goes behind it. Thus the stars go before all. Bring forth by going forth, but not before the head suspended. Rise by the letters Yod Heh, and return the tail.

There are seven planets. Bow the head before the favored star. Bring forth therein. Suspend the twelve signs of the zodiac. Set apart men from women. Reveal Tau Aleph Vau in the east, of the names of men. In the east corner is a young maiden [A'alemoveh]. It begins the letters and every word is of the highest.

In the beginning, man is Shin Koph Gimel before women. In the corner, divide the south. Cast down every word by casting down women, as women are below.

Samekh Ayin Daleth is in the north, extending in Tohu. In the lowest, women of Tau Mem Daleth in the west. Men are before the corners divide west.

Of the dwelling in the west, there is no glory. Of men, Tau Aleph Peh fire. The names of men are according to the dominions of fire. The fire rises up as man, for it is seen above.

Shin Koph Gimel is earth. The names of women are according to the dominion of earth. The nation below are as women, being seen below.

Tau Mem Daleth is air. The names of men are according to the dominion of air between above and below. Third, man bows down to Samekh Ayin Daleth as water.

The names of women are according to the dominion of water. The water is below. Third, women bow down, for it is seen below. These are the elements of fire, air, water, and earth.

God created the twelve signs of the zodiac in the universe, arranging them in the firmament. They are Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo, Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricorn, Aquarius, and Pisces.

The Sun is arranged in the twelve months of the year. The luminaries shine in the day and night. Every one is in place, not visible to the eye before the light of the Sun. In the wheel of the Sun, visible in the night outside from the sign, the Sun dwells above. Before the Sun, there are six concealed and six revealed.

Aries is arranged highest. From the strength of the star, Aries sinks down. Libra rises up. When Libra sinks down completely, go forth from the number of hosts and complete the names.

There is not one gathering in the boundary limits; not leading to minister in the season of sowing; not ministering in the season of the harvest; not ministering in the season of sowing.

Arrange to minister from the middle of Libra. Scorpio is in the middle. Sagittarius ministers in the season of sowing for 61 days. The hosts are in the middle of Sagittarius. Capricorn is in the middle. Aquarius ministers in the days of the winter for 61 days, in the middle of Aquarius, Pisces in the middle. Aries ministers in the season of the winter for 61 days, in the middle of Aries, and Taurus in the middle. Gemini ministers in the season of the harvest for 61 days.

Thus speak, come forth with sheaves of grain in the beginning harvest. The priest [Kehen] of El comes forth with sheaves of grain in the days of Nisan. Thus speak of the river Jordan. It overflows over every river bank in all the days of the harvest.

In the middle of Gemini and Cancer, and the middle of Leo in the season of the summer for 61 days, speak of the season of sowing until the harvest. Of the Sun in the course of the seven planets, from the middle of Libra until the middle of Aries, there are 180 divisions. Thus, in the season of the harvest until the season of sowing, seven planets from the middle of the signs of the zodiac until the middle of Libra, there are 180 divisions.

The divisions of the planets in the firmament are made as a helmet. Therefore, proclaim the planets go forth. Thus proclaim in the universe, the Little Dipper is in the south and the Little Dipper is in the north, leading in wisdom.

The Big Dipper, Orion, and the constellation of the Pleiades lead the order, every one in the season of the year, changing with the passing seasons. The Big Dipper and Orion minister. Define Orion and define the passing in the days of the Sun. Thus speak to define all language. Close and seal, as making to define by Isaiah.

Of Orion, define the passing and the interpretation of the Lord of the universe, creator of all. Seal the star. Orion passes close. The winds return from the strength in the days of raining. There is no path to the host of the sea [Mecheneh Iyem].

In the number of Saturn, reveal the covenant of Cheshmoval in the firmament. It is made as a dome, resembling a tent extending over Earth. Dwell in the boundaries below, in the center and above.

The dome resembles a tent. All Earth is below. The Sea of Oceanus is around the Earth and chaos. It is written in the Book of Isaiah, is it not so of the knowledge, not to hear Elohi, the Creator of the universe. Of the ends of the Earth, there is no dwelling. The Earth reaches the limits in the firmament around.

In the book of the wisdom of the Gentiles [Sepher Chokmi Hagoyim], the firmament is above the Earth on every side. In the book of the wisdom of Israel, the firmament is in the north side, not reaching the limits of the Earth.

It is not established that the north corner is over desolation [Tohu]. Suspend Earth over nothingness. The south corner is the chamber in a closed circle. It is written, make great until not seeing the making of the Big Dipper, Orion, and the constellation of the Pleiades.

The south chamber is from the east. From the west, the foundation of the firmament is over Earth. It is written in words, obscure the heavens above. Bind over the foundation of Earth. In the dome and the chamber in the south, the Ruoch is concealed in the midst of it.

In the days of raining, God ministers. Job knows to fly as the hawk, spreading its wings in order to gather from the south below the wings, and he served. Let there be power of the bird to judge the rest of the birds; however, as the hawk has great wings, and great is the feather of the male, fat is from the rest of the birds.

Thus in the years, in the first year, the constellation of the Pleiades ministers in the days of the raining. The serpent [Nechesh] is sealed in the star [Beriech Hova Mezel, or sealed its fate]. Of the crocodile [Thenien, or sea serpent], proclaim in the language of the wise ones. The star is suspended, according to the twelve signs of the zodiac.

Suspended therein are six from one side and six from the other side, sealed in the heavens from end to end. Therefore, proclaim the serpent is sealed. From the twisting tail, gather therein. The middle of the face is as the twisting serpent.

The innermost six signs minister, leading the universe. Come forth in the period by the rising of the Sun. Also, twisting from the second side in order to gather the outer signs before the Sun in the center of the universe.

Minister at this time. Surround and extend forth, sealed in the firmament from end to end. The firmament extends over all the universe from end to end. From one end, divide the north, but not to the end. Make the universe of three divisions. One third is sea, one third is wilderness, and one third is civilized land.

In the east of Earth in the period of Tebeth is the southwestern height. Until the firmament, measure in a circle. Go around corresponding to the shores of the Sea of Oceanus. On every side and in great height, go around the east, the south until the west and the south. The heights are as open windows in the east and open windows in the west.

In the east, in the period of Tishri, is the southeastern side of the period of Tebeth. Also, the east is the center, the center of the period of Tammuz. In the center, there are 91 windows in the south corner. Therefore, 91 in the north corner.

There is a window in the center. The splendor shines in the window. In the north, there is a window in the corner. It is covered and light goes forth.

It is said, from the covering, light goes forth. It is in the east corner, south of the period of Tebeth. Proclaim the window is open. The window in the north corner is of the period of Tammuz. Proclaim it is pleasant. From the beginning, the Sun shining in the window is pleasant. Go around in a circle. Afterward, cast down from north to south, going past the window. By the measure of 91 windows, there is one window in the chamber. In it is the wind of a hurricane.

The period of Tishri begins when the Sun rises before the window, shining in splendor. Go around to the eastern corner, the south, window after window, until it reaches the open window. The period of Tebeth begins from the open window. Go around in a circle. Afterward, rise from south to north, window after window, until reaching the concealed window. Go around and rise to the eastern corner, from the northern window, until reaching the pleasant window, until the window in the chamber.

In the chamber, consider 91. Consider from the beginning, the eastern corner south from the open window, until the concealed window. The window is concealed. Consider 91. It is the concealed window to the chamber. There is the window, shining in splendor. Here it numbers 183. These windows in the east are 183, corresponding to 183 windows in the west.

Three enter and the Sun rises every day before the window. It sinks down, passing one in the west, corresponding to the window in the east, until it passes. Rising up in the darkness, it passes the window.

See it return in the dawn. It is spoken, when the dawn rises, reach the rising of the dawn until it comes and goes. Extend in the dwelling. Of passage in darkness, it is spoken, let the Sun come and darkness be.

The Shekinah is in the west of the universe, rising up to lead blackness to the first window, in the center of the firmament, between the east and south.

In the period of Tebeth between the eastern window, spreading there north to the period of Tammuz, it spreads out. From the chamber comes the tempest, from the spreading of ice. The Sun does not go forth to gather therein. Only once in the great course, the Sun is created therein. The course is desired in the orbit [circuit].

There are four faces of four sides. The first side is warm and moist. The second side is warm and dry. The third side is cold and dry. The fourth side is cold and moist, corresponding to the fourth season of the year.

In the period of Nisan, the side of the Sun is changed. It is warm. Thus, the fourth season of the year is warm and moist below the earth. It is warm and moist in the season for three months.

In the period of Tammuz, the side of the Sun is changed. It is hot and dry, below the rising up of earth. It is hot and dry in the season for three months.

In the period of Tishri, the side of the Sun is changed. It is cold and moist for three months.

In the period of Tebeth, the side of the Sun is changed. It is cold and dry for three months.

If the Sun does not pass around four revolutions, the universe is not served by the seven. Bind the constellation of the Pleiades in five bands and Orion in two, thus seven. There are twelve around the wheel. Seven are bound.

Two return to the south side. Of five gates on the outside, return to the north side. Four rise up from the north to the right side, and five to the left side. They gather in day and night.

Gemini is the end. Seventh is Scorpio. The eighth is from Gemini to Sagittarius, between Scorpio to Cancer. Between Scorpio to Cancer, between the Big Dipper to Scorpio, the Big Dipper to the north and Scorpio to the south. They rise up in a circle toward the south and sink down in a circle toward the north.

In the north, the Big Dipper rises, and ministers with those suspended by the wheel. Those suspended are the stars of the wheel. The wheel turns in a circle, Aquarius is in the days, and the stars in Cancer are suspended to rule. The Big Dipper is leading. Complete by Ruoch to serve by Ruoch, the beauty of heaven.

Bear the hand of Nechesh, bound and suspended in the circle. Rise to gather the luminaries as kings. The stars are as princes of the hosts. Arrange the stars as hosts in a group. Go forth by the number of hosts.

Consider twelve signs of the zodiac reaching the constellation of the Pleiades and Orion above. The seven planets reach from the constellation of the Pleiades and Orion above.

There are forty arrangements of the constellation of the Pleiades or the seven dwellings, with Orion beginning. When binding, arrange the constellation of the Pleiades. Orion is beginning. These are bound. Learn from the signs.

Of the seven planets, know the Lord arranged the constellation of the Pleiades and the seven dwellings with Orion beginning. God turned his face to regard, and spoke to Job. Be able to bind the five bands to the constellation of the Pleiades. There are seven. Begin the seven dwellings of Orion.

The Lord made twelve and the constellation of the Pleiades. It is in the sign of Taurus, from the tail of Aries until the constellation of the Pleiades. Consider it is near Taurus to Orion. The Little Dipper and Big Dipper go after the constellation of the Pleiades.

The Little Dipper and the Big Dipper go after the constellation of the Pleiades, the Little Dipper, and Orion. The Lord proclaimed the dwelling of Orion second. Consider before the Little Dipper. Of the Lord of dwellings and wheels of God (Hebrew: MOSH-BOTHIM OMGOLGLOTH IH'), the constellation of the Pleiades, there are seven stars. They bind the constellation of the Pleiades. The Big Dipper goes after the constellation of the Pleiades.

God declared he would flood the world. Take two stars from the constellation of the Pleiades and thus the flood. As petition of the passing, take two stars from the Big Dipper. Conceal them in a place. Go above the Big Dipper after the Constellation of the Pleiades.

Petition the sons of the Lord [Benieh]. Make the Big Dipper over the sons of the Lord. Lead the universe as the beginning star, the one rising in the east.

Libra is seventh from the beginning, coming forth and sinking in the west. It is not visible. Complete the seven planets united from the ends. Rise up to see. From the ends, the seven sink and are not visible. Aries and Libra are in the period.

Begin with Aries rising, and from the beginning, Libra sinks. Taurus and Scorpio are in the period. Taurus begins rising. Scorpio in the beginning sinks down. Thus Gemini and Sagittarius, Cancer and Capricorn, Leo and Aquarius, Virgo and Pisces.

Six signs in the universe rise from the north. To the day it is, at the south side, south, visible to return. They go forth to the north side after the height of Earth, not visible to the eye. Thus, not the signs after. Over thus, proclaim Samuel is wise to perceive the gates. By the language, bind the gate.

The seven are bound above and bound within. The dwelling is not visible to the eye. This is not designated in the scriptures.

These are all of the signs of the zodiac and the planets. The Big Dipper and Orion are in the sign of Gemini. The constellation of the Pleiades and the Big Dipper begin with the sign of Taurus. Regard above. Much is revealed from all the planets and all the signs. Above, they are continuous. The constellation of the Pleiades and Orion unite. Draw near to unite this with that. Going to this after that, regard with all eyes.

Thus after God to Job, bind the bands of the constellation of the Pleiades or dwellings of Orion. These are the gates to learn. Look to the firmament. Rise up to the constellation of the Pleiades. Taurus is in the east. See the sign of Scorpio sinking in the west. In the period, Scorpio rises up in the east, Taurus is sinking in the west. Orion is near Taurus. The signs come after (in other words, the signs of the zodiac come after).

The dwellings of the signs are from west to east, and from the north side after. Earth rises up. Proclaim the dwelling. Dwell in the bands. Also, rise over the constellation of the Pleiades in the north-east. Learn much from all the signs above.

Thus, proclaim the binding of the seven. From the beginning, rise from the constellation of the Pleiades. Rise from the north and Scorpio rises from the south. The rest of the signs rise from the east. The constellation of the Pleiades is from east to west. Measure seven bands. The bands are considered near Orion. Five bands bind from west to east in the season. Orion is in the east and Scorpio sinks in the west. At the end of the five signs, they are in the north side. The bands near Orion are in the west to the east.

In the south side, from the sign of Scorpio, reach to Gemini in the end. The seven are in the east after the constellation of the Pleiades. The bands are regarded from the east to west in the north side. From the sign of Gemini, Orion is in the end of the seven. Reach Scorpio in the end. Five are in the west. Begin in Gemini until the beginning of Sagittarius.

Of the twelve signs of the zodiac, measure from the constellation of the Pleiades and Orion. There are twelve degrees, no less and no more.

In the beginning, increase the bands of the constellation of the Pleiades. Divide into divisions of the constellation of the Pleiades. Minister in the days of raining and from death, with worms from putrifaction.

The division of the band of Orion is between Sagittarius. Divide Orion to minister in the days of the Sun. Of the holy days of the Sun, divide the point near the second. From the heat, increase the band by rising from the point of shining. Blessed is the path of the blessed place, amen.

At this time, understand the baking [A'agiyini] of the Sun. Of 300 windows and 180 degrees in three days, rise up by the eastern spirit. Of 180 degrees in three days, descend by the western spirit.

According to the days of the year, the Sun goes forth in the east and gathers in the west. The Shekinah is in the west. Gather those bowing down before God, the king, king of kings. Speak of the everlasting greatness, making as appointed.

In the period of Tishri and Tebeth, the course is in the southern corner. The Sea of Oceanus is between the limits of the heavens to the limits of Earth. Sinking down, the glory is great and the path is great, until the power reaches the window, in the window in the east, quickly produced therein.

In the period of Nisan and Tammuz, the course is in the northern corner. The Sea of Oceanus is between the limits of the south. The course is north. Go north in the period of Tishri and Tebeth. The north is in the period of Nisan, in the southern corner for six months and in the northern corner.

The course above is in the windows in the east. The spirit of the Sun returns by the three letters of the name written over the heart. The Malachim lead by the letter. They lead in the day, not in night.

The Sun rises in the chariot and the horsemen are adorned as the bridegroom. It is said, the bridegroom is adorned in beauty as the bridegroom goes forth to the bridal chamber.

In the days of the Sun shining, see the fire shining from Earth. Face upward of hail. Were it not for the hail covering the letter, the universe is consumed. It is not concealed because of this.

In the winter, cover and turn your face above from below. Were it not for the heat of the fire, the hail is not in the universe. Be able to serve before the cold. Speak, before the cold of the day, serve and the Sun shines.

The 460 bands (in other words, windows) are the number of the days of the Sun. Therefore, 460 of the names Shesech, Shemesh, Chedes, Chemeh.⁵

In every day of the Sun and Moon, cover the eyes from the light above. Cast out flaming arrows and go forth in strength. Of weakness from the iniquities of human beings, be bound by the blessings of the day. Above the arch of the firmament, pass below, heating the sea from there. Thus, not hidden from the heat.

Thirteen words are written over the heart. Therefore, from the beginning until enduring the light. Thirteen and five Malachim lead the letters of the day. Therefore, five words of the Sun.

The bridegroom goes forth first. Exalt in the strength second. Reach to it third. The seasons, fourth. Not hidden from the heat, fifth. Thus the light is divided of eight. First, in the beginning [Berashith], three Malachim lead the letters in the night.

There are eight Malachim between day and between night, corresponding to the four days. Eight times light. Therefore, the Lord God [El Adon] is over all, making eight written words. Gedelov [strength] is first. Votobov [of goodness] is second. Mela [fulfillment] is third. A'avolom [universe, or eternal] is fourth. Da'ath [knowledge] is fifth. Votheboneh [of intelligence] is sixth. Sobebem [turning, or circling] is seventh. Avothov [Thou, or sign] is eighth.

Thus of every one. Outside are Aleph Beth, Koph Lamed, Shin Tau [MA" B K" L Sh" Th]. However, by the the Lord God, Aleph Beth corresponds to the 22 letters of the Torah. Therefore, the name of the Sun [Shemesh Shem] shines in them. The Torah of the Lord divides between day and night. Upholding them are four spirits. They are a thousand corresponding to the Torah, preceding a thousand.

The Sun is immersed every morning. It circles and the light increases, going forth in brilliance until the day is established. Bow to it. Receive Ruoch in the flesh and blood.

The Sun comes forth in the firmament. Be immersed to purify with the power. Thus, in all time, Gelegelial is the prince appointed over the wheel of the Sun. Ninety-six Malachim, great and glorious, serve the wheel radiating [Heleh] in the firmament. There are 65,000 divisions in every day.

The Sun shines in the filthy place [Meqom Hetienophoth]. There is no destruction [Mezieq, or demon]. Be immersed in the light above. The eye is not able to see. It is written, man does not see life.

Thus, serve the Moon according to the New Moon circling after, as the Koph. When the Moon is half, cover around the Shekinah. From water, clouds and fog are around. The Moon is curved, as if facing the Lord.

The neck is below and the face is above. Of rain, all speak of drops. The blessing is over the Moon. Receive before the Shekinah, and dance before. Of the desires of life, return and leap up from below to the New Moon.

Aophenial is the prince appointed over the wheel of the Moon; 88,000 Malachim serve the wheel of the Moon. Of 24,000 divisions in every night of every season. In the season, the Moon serves in the east in the first season, by 96 of the New Moon of every month.

⁵ Shemesh and Chemeh are both terms usually referring to the Sun.

The dwelling of the Moon is between the clouds and fog. It is made as a dish. The New Moon covers this with that. It is between the eyes, as the birth of the Moon.

These two coverings change before the western spirit. It goes forth from between both, as a kind of shofar in the night. The first measure is in night. Measure second and thus until the middle of the month. It is revealed, the two coverings change faces.

By the spirit of the eastern corner, the Moon goes forth first. Gather and cover between the second in the night. First measure and second measure, and thus until the end, until the covering is complete.

It is spoken of the covering, place the covering of cloud and fog. Bring forth to cover completely. Blow the trumpet on the New Moon. The shofar is in the New Moon. The time of meditation [Hegiegov] is in the New Moon. In the time, complete the covering. Blow the trumpet in the New Moon. The shofar is in one hour. God comes forth.

The Sun and Moon in the beginning of the night is four hours. Return in the hours. Perceive the flame of the Moon reaching to the Sun in the day. Forty degrees pass to the center and darken with light.

In great brilliance [Rebi Nehorayi], the king speaks and decrees the iniquities of Israel. In the passing year, perceive the flame of the Sun reaching to the Moon in night. Forty degrees pass in the center. From the light is darkness. Israel desired to perceive over the passing year. God is perfection. Of the Sun, send forth wrath over the nations of the world. Thus it is spoken of the Lord God, learn the path of the people.

The light of the Moon is concealed in times and revealed in times. However, the light of the Sun of the universe is revealed to all people. The Sun and Moon go forth constantly, but the path of the Sun is not as the path of the Moon. The path of the Sun is fixed. The path of the Moon is not fixed.

In times, go forth with the planet in shortened length of time. How many steps from the north? See it is long from the south. See it is short and, not seeing it, remember the word, as it is spoken. Make the Moon of the festivals.

The Sun knows to come forth. Thus it is arranged, not going to the house as Saturn, Capricorn, and Aquarius.

Jupiter, Sagittarius, and Pisces. Mars, Aries, and Scorpio. Venus, Taurus, and Libra. Mercury, Gemini, and Virgo. The Sun, the Moon, and Cancer.⁶

Rehetial is the prince appointed over the stars. Seventy-two Malachim, great and glorious, serve with the signs of the zodiac rising from east to west, and west to east.

God created the planets and signs of the zodiac, going in the night from east to west and from west to east.

Kokebimal is the prince appointed. Three hundred and sixty-five thousand myriad Malachim, greatest and most glorious, serve with the planets. From city to city, from country to country, in the firmament of the heavens, and all suspended therein.

God created the firmament of the highest divisions of seven, created with those suspended from the head from fire. From water, the image of a great crocodile as a twisting serpent. Make the head and tail. Place in the darkness of the firmament. In the place, extend from end to end, bind the twisting serpent springing forth to the center of the light. In the middle, extend in a great circle. All the stars and signs of the zodiac surround all the planets therein and the two luminaries.

Twelve signs of the zodiac hold dominion over them, guiding between good and evil. Darken the light of the two luminaries and the seven planets. They go and come with the luminaries and signs of the zodiac, from east to west and from west to east.

In the period, the planets go after. Preceding to serve in the one place, speaking not before and not following after. You go forth on a journey directly. From fire and from water, see the hidden things not seen by the eye. Deliver the most ancient writings. I go forth to the knowledge of those suspended. Of power from holding dominion over the kingdom in reverence and goodness. In wickedness, facial features bring forth therein.

Prepare to go from star to star and be guided. Go forth to change the limits going after, behind the tail of the highest and lowest. Surrounded therein are the constellations, six in the south side and six in the north side. Know the wheel of the signs, planets, and luminaries are arranged and fixed in the darkness of the firmament.

The stars are fixed and surrounded therein forever, not moving from their place. They are fixed in the wheel, circling around the firmament in the south. In the north, from east to west. Those suspended extend therein from end to end. They are bound and suspended, created in the center of the wheel.

The Big Dipper is placed from the north side by virtue of those suspended in the north side. The signs of the southern part of the wheel are suspended by virtue of those suspended in the wheel. The Big Dipper is fixed in the circle. Those suspended from the wheel of the signs are fixed in the wheel from east to west. From the north, from west to east of the universe.

Of the seven planets, the wheels diminish. The wheel of the stars goes forth with seven wheels of seven planets. They are Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, the Sun, Venus, Mercury, and the Moon.

The planets and the twelve signs of the zodiac are from east to west. From west to east. From the wheel of the Big Dipper, lead with those suspended. The fixed lead the suspended from the wheel, the wheel of stars. Seven of seven planets, completed by the Ruoch of God.

By the power, speak of the Ruoch of heaven. Create beauty by the hand of the serpent [Shephereh Choleleh Yidov Nechesh]. Bind those suspended, as written by the word of the Lord, who created heaven.

Ruoch is in the face of all hosts. El proclaims the names of the planets. Count what is written. Count the number.

It is written of the great power of the great Adonai, learn there is much greatness by the arrangements of the Malachim. Of the planets, signs, and those suspended in the wheel, as the Big Dipper, see greatness in the rest. Create the universe, for there is no width or depth to the wisdom. Distinguish the universe as wisdom, the heart of the suspended body in heaven, the wheel of the signs.

There is no wisdom. (HEBREW A"Ch ARI"H). The Sun is the innermost part of the universe. The wheel of the signs is suspended. There is no wisdom to serve, when the Moon is new or its period complete. The sea dries as fire. The name of the prince is Michael. Taurus is earth and Libra is air [Ruoch].

Serve Venus when the Moon is new. Air is flowing water. Of Venus and of rain, the prince is Aanael (Hebrew: ChK"Q) [or ThBQ]. Gemini is air and Virgo is earth.

Serve the planet when the Moon is new. Flow a little and dry a little upon the foundation of the earth. Of air, the prince is Raphael (Hebrew: S"L). Cancer is water.

Serve the Moon when therein, or when the New Moon is complete. The prince is Gabriel (Hebrew: QD"Sh). Sagittarius is fire and Aquarius is air.

Serve Saturn when the Moon is new. Dry by placing over in secret. Seal the mixture by moist air and flowing water. The prince is Qephetzial (Hebrew: GD"Tz). Capricorn is earth and Pisces is water.

Serve Jupiter in the New Moon. Divide in half. Dry in the place and divide in half of flowing water. The prince is Tzadqial (Hebrew: TAa"M). Aries is fire and Scorpio is water.

Serve Mars in the New Moon. Dry in the place. Divide in half as flowing water. The prince is Samael.

Learn the signs of the Sun. The Sun rises clear and pure. Of the warmth, reveal the qualities of fire, air, and purity. When rising, the Sun is clear and pure in flames of fire. Of red flame, reveal the greatest and most powerful spirits.

When seen before the Sun rises, the clouds are green and red, revealing the rain. When shining as the flames of the Sun, reveal the measure of the autumn and winter. The Sun rises in the midst of the clouds.

In the midst of the sea, see the flame revealing the winter and autumn. When the Sun shines, rising in brilliance from the clouds, reveal the winter and autumn, of the rain.

When the Sun rises in the west, the clouds increase around. Reveal the qualities of the purity of the firmament and the air.

The Sun comes forth, returning from the spirit of the north. Draw away the redness of the clouds from the north side and black clouds from the south side. Reveal the qualities of purity, of the winter and autumn.

When rising with Ruoch, also designate the raining. When, from every side, the Sun is at the approach of evening, signs of the red clouds shine in brilliance of the Sun. The clouds reveal the spirits of strength. It decreases when the winds blow clouds to be from here and from there.

The Sun reveals the winter and autumn. See the firmament in great blackness as the dawn of life [Shechoroth]. The darkness shows the dry land. The rivers dry up, and the springs and wells.

When the Sun rises, circle around to reveal the winter and autumn. The Sun rises at the time. After, weaken and scatter the greenness from there. The brilliance of the flames shines from the midst of the clouds. Reveal the rain mixed together with hail sinking down. In other words, reveal all the rain together with Ruoch. Ruoch of earth begins in the Ruoch of the world.

Kindle flames in heavens. Send forth, shining in brilliance. Send forth therein, as a lamp of fire. Follow after and complete by revealing the rain with air together.

When the brilliance is pure, the Ruoch of the north dwells. Of the purity of the body of the heavens, the Ruoch of the north is purity by Ruoch. The Creator decrees Yod Tau [I"Th] over that. Dwell on Earth from the high and lofty place. From all the highest places, therefore, is pure darkness of Ruoch, black and darkness. The light of the Sun shines without darkness, cloud, and fog, as the shining splendor of the light.

When seeing the Moon in the day, be concealed in the hiding place. The highest shining of the Moon reveals the Ruoch of the north. When concealing the lower Ruoch, reveal the dwelling of Ruoch. When seeing the Moon in the day, reveal the qualities of the purity of Ruoch.

When seeing the Moon in the day, it is diminished by fog and cloud. Pure and clear, reveal the changing of Ruoch. Dwell by the sign of the coming day.

When seeing the Moon, clouds reveal the winter and autumn. When the Moon is the fourth day of the New Moon, lift up vertically in the corners until the Ruoch returns. From the Ruoch both of the west, reveal the winter and autumn. When seeing the New Moon divided from the place, see the divisions revealed from there. The Ruoch returns.

As the Moon is full, pass until the fourth day. From the fourth day until the fourth day, fill until the middle. Reveal the period being near the Sun. The Ruoch of the fourth sign goes with the Sun. Change the spirits of seven days.

Thus, by the signs of the Moon, see and understand the knowledge of the signs, the omen of rain for three days of the New Moon, or three days following the New Moon. Fill the life complete.

Of the half of the Moon, measure to fill all the seasons. Of the Moon, see the omens of rain for three days, or following three days. When the Moon is thin, pure, and clean, not seeing therein anything swollen, bind over the qualities of the air.

When seeing the dwelling of the Moon, it is circled around with cloud and fog. The wisdom of the purity of the Moon is in every month. See every Ruoch surrounding. Lead the clouds above. Bind the Ruoch dwelling from the sign at the side. Lead the sign of the clouds.

When seeing the Moon surrounded and dark, the name binds over autumn and rain. When around the Moon as one lamp of purity, descend from the dwelling. Decrease the lamp and bind over the qualities of air and purity, and when two or three.

Bind over autumn and rain and wind, when surrounded as wax [Doneg]. Divide from the first side, of the sign at the side, darkness comes. When darkness decreases, or is yellowish surrounded in blackness, see the divisions completed when greatest. Thus also, scatter the air and change much.

Of Ruoch, the Sun goes around as a circle of light. When divided quickly, bind over the qualities of purity. The firmaments rise as the Sun. Know by the sign of the day when there is to be rain. When the Sun rises from the midst of the clouds, heat rises as a flame of fire, then to be winter and autumn. As the Sun rises reddish and boiling, bind over Ruoch. When in the morning, see the Sun is great and large, then to be winter and autumn. When seeing the Sun shining before the rising, bind over rain. When rising before reddish clouds, bind over rain coming to the south side. When seeking great strength as in the desert, cast off. Also, when seeing the great blackness passing over and flies gather to bite or whisper sounds, bind over rain.

Know the periods in the beginning, all the periods of heat and the middle portions. Venus is as much raining. Mercury is completely hot. The Moon is completely cold. Saturn is as the summer and the winter, cool and much raining. Jupiter is completely cold, of snow and rain. Mars is heat, decreased rain, and completely without cold.

The signs of the zodiac are arranged, ministering in the beginning.

In the first night, Kelesh Tzemchoq Kelesh Tzem.
 In the first day, Chenkel Shetzemech Kenel Chenkel.
 In the third night, Nekel Shetzem Chenkel Shetzemech.
 In the second day, Leshetzemech Chenkel Shetzemech.
 In the fourth night, Shetzemech Chenkel.
 In the fifth night, Chenkel Shetzem Chenkel.
 In the fifth day, Tzem Chenkel Shetzem Cheneb.
 In the sixth night, Leshetzem Chenkel Shetzemech.
 In the sixth day, Nekel Shetzem Chenkel Shetz.
 In the seventh night, Mechnekel Shetzem Chenkel.
 In the seventh day, Shetzem Chenkel Shetzem Chen.

Reach the order of the nights, Ketzenesh Chelem. Also, the intelligence to understand when it is autumn, or rain is from the signs of the Moon in the third day of the lunar month.

The New Moon draws out when the beams of the Moon are as plates of metal. Of darkness, the sign binds over rain. Thus, when the Moon shines in the fourth day, bind over the rain. When seeing the Moon is red as fire, it is the sign to bind over the great rain in autumn, filling the seas. When seeing the Moon is black, it is the sign to bind over the great rain in autumn, filling the seas. When all around is as a lamp in a circle, or two or three circles, bind over autumn and the great rain.

Also, learn and understand the knowledge of rain. In autumn, it rains by the signs of the Sun. When the Sun rises red, bind over the rain. It is established to sink in the west. When black clouds come near from the left side [the northern side], it will rain at once, as the Sun rises serving the clouds. When the brilliance of the Sun shines as flames, it is the sign to bind over rain. Thus, it is written in the Book of the Signs of the Zodiac [Sepher Hamezeloth, presented here as Book Five].

Also, the wisdom of the name is over autumn and rain in the light of the days. When pigs or goats have sexual intercourse, the males with the females are able to produce. Cease the sexual intercourse to make strong. Also, when desired to make use of, or when dirty by places of the sea, or mud and clay, desire to be very dirty. Also, desire pleasures and seek pleasure from below the earth, until the ends of the opening edges.

Also, extend the head to correspond to the north side. Also, when the dogs dig in the earth and the wolf comes near the goats. Also, when immersing the princes of the tribes in the mirror of the sea, and in springs, not before desire. Also, listen when proclaiming the power consuming the crops. The thread of a spider's web falls from the strength, not to snare Ruoch. All these bind over autumn and rain in the light of the days.

In the course of the Moon, decrease to proclaim the small light. Thus, there is no dominion of the stars in the firmament, when stars number ninety-eight [Tz"Ch].

Denounce the Moon over the dwelling of the Lord [A'al Leboniethieh]. Create the stars as a man. Of power over the tree, consume and flames go forth. Therefore, the stars with the Moon go forth from the beginning of the universe.

Combine the signs and the wheel. Record and calculate and assign and number. Consider the calculations of the planets and signs of the zodiac. Calculate the periods and circling of the planets. Of those suspended and signs of the zodiac in everlasting order, see with light. Calculate in order to see the generations. Prepare to see them from the beginning until the end.

It is written, who acts and creates, proclaim the generations from the beginning, before the creation of the universe. In order to understand the actions of every man in righteousness and wickedness, decree over every one. According to the works, prepare works between good and evil.

Number the planets and signs of the zodiac, scattered in the hours. Bring forth between good and evil. All was created by Elohim in wisdom and intelligence, before the rise of the universe.

The wisdom of the Lord is the foundation of Earth. Number the planets and signs of the zodiac of every man. The universe was formed before them. According to the works, man is made to prepare. God does not give the planets and signs of the zodiac by permission of wickedness or goodness.

In the beginning, see man not established and without form. It is written, the heart of the wicked man is formed from youth. Elohim is compassionate and merciful. Compassion is over wickedness. Arrange and set in order. Return from the beginning of creation, when not yet rising to bring forth. Mankind dwells until the torment from sin is restored by repentance of the Lord Elohim.

There is no sign of the zodiac fixed. All is according to the man, by the sign and hour. As it is written by Ishma'al, by the name and by the letters of the luminaries, see all the periods. Therefore, speak in the night. Pass with the periods and change the hours, but not in the morning hours [Shecherieth, or morning prayers]. The cock proclaims the Sun in the night. Change the period and on the morrow being clouds. The clouds gather in the heights.

In the times the Moon is not shining in night, change with the periods. The next time, by three planets in the night.

That is the division between day and night; however, in the morning, see ten calculations in day. It is written to work diligently, be weary, and complete the name of the Lord of the hosts.

Learn to correspond Heh to the luminaries, thirty heights over all the the signs. Thus God is above all human beings. Observe all from the beginning of the creation of the universe by the command, let there be light.

Of the river of fire [Neher Dienor], the luminaries go forth by the commands. See, if not to toil, the constellation of the Pleiades in the river of fire. No creature is able to serve in the cold. Therefore, the Sun and Moon and planets see the redness of the Sun going forth in the day.

The river of fire goes forth in the place. The Sun goes forth in the day. The river of fire goes forth and the sign goes forth to proclaim day.

Proclaim the season of the day in the place. The Sun goes forth in night. In all days, be humble to go to the sign in the place and proclaim night.

Of the division, Elohim is between the light of the river of fire. Between the darkness of day, darken the sky and proclaim Elohim. Of the light of the day, that is the river of fire. By them, the luminaries stop going forth. Do not speak thus to be evening and be morning. Here suspend the luminaries.

The river of fire goes forth at the time of the Sun. Of the light of day, the river of fire. Of darkness, proclaim night. Of darkness of the days, the path of the Sun. In the morning, light of the river of fire until the middle of the day. The river of fire is above to the east and west in the fourth day. Go forth from the river of fire.

In the middle of the day, the river of fire is above and the Moon and planets are above. Speak of extending the heavens.

According to the going forth, arrange the measurements of the wise ones. Of 360 degrees, twelve signs of the zodiac are bound therein. The names of the signs are Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo, Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricorn, Aquarius, and Pisces.

Of every ruler, go forth 30 degrees. All degrees are 60 degrees to Gesteravoth.⁷ Of every Gestera are 60 Bereqovonoth.⁸ Of every Bereqovon are 60 Avoloth.⁹ Of every Avoloth are 60 Avoroth.¹⁰ Of every Avoroth are 60 Sototh.¹¹ Of every Sototh are 60 Rophosavoth.¹² Of every Aphorsavoth are 60 Herophoth, as instantly recieved.¹³

Calculate until eleven and twelve words. Follow the exactness of the calculation however the planets descend in the universe or lead in the universe. The names are Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, the Sun, Venus, Mercury, and the Moon. There is a division to every one of

⁸ This may refer to Bereqoth, which can mean lightning bolts, although the term Bereqovon refers to thorns or briars.

⁹ This is often used in reference to trees, and sometimes to fools. It may also be a reference to curses.

¹⁰ This usually refers to lights, or sometimes to curses.

¹¹ This probably refers to Shototh, which may mean whips, or fools, or madmen, or possibly statements of contempt.

¹² This is likely a typographical error for Aphoresavoth, which may mean divisions or distinct declarations, or possibly specifications.

¹³ This may translate as bruises or weaknesses, possibly medicine or cures.

the planets, by the strength of Dragon Dienor [Hebrew: DRAQON DINOR, a reference to the term dragon] surrounding.

Thus, in the period of the sign suspended from the wheel, go forth in heaven. The twelve suspended give seven from the period of the constellation of the Pleiades. The Lord binds the signs, suspended from the wheel and going forth in heaven. In Earth is seven. The Lord binds twelve around the wheel, bound from within. They are the outer gates. Seven rise from the right side of the north.

The Lord is from the north to the right side corresponding. Gather six in the day and six in the night. Gemini is innermost of the seven, and Scorpio is at the end. The Lord is from Gemini to Sagittarius, and from Scorpio to Cancer. Thus, gather the Little Dipper to Scorpio, with the Little Dipper in the north and Scorpio in the south.

Rise in a circle, according to the sinking in the south. Extend according to the north. In the north, the Little Dipper rises from the period with those suspended. The signs are suspended, the signs of the wheel. The wheel returns. In the wheel is Aquarius.

The signs are as lords [Seregiem] suspended as the rulers lead. Begin by six at the tail, suspended in the end. The six begin going directly and the tail goes opposite. Thus in the beginning, the river of fire is around the universe. Afterward from here is 80 days. On the fourth day, surround the river of fire. Begin and create the Sun to lighten the day upon the Earth. The river of fire is near the sign of heat. Cold is the constellation of the Pleiades. Snow is the Moon, as going forth by them. Therefore, create the smallest planets that do not shine, except to warm the universe by the light of the flame sending forth. Do not speak of what is created, what is necessary to the universe, but only to create all the beauty of the universe.

From the power of the light of the planets, desire exaltation. Also, the signs and luminaries desire. Rehetial is the magistrate [Shoter] of desire. Twenty-three princes correspond to the desire of the signs. The luminaries, therefore, proclaim Rehetial, the language of desire. Desire to interpret desire.

All the Malachim proclaim over the name that supports the printing of Rezial. Deliver the Book of the Mysteries [Sepher Harazim]. Adam, the first man, learned therein, as therein are the Malachim over the months.

Shephiya'aial presides over the month Nisan with 36 Malachim.

Regehiyal presides over Ayar with 43 Malachim.

Arinavor presides over Sivan with 68 Malachim.

Tha'atz Bon presides over Tammuz with 28 Malachim.

Thecher Gar presides over Ab with 29 Malachim.

Moracl presides over Alul with 29 Malachim.

Pechederon presides over Tishri with 29 Malachim.

Lerbeg presides over Marheshvan with 27 Malachim.

Arbagedor presides over Kislev with 29 Malachim.

Aberekial presides over Adar with 28 Malachim.

According to those presiding, proclaim Aberekial in the blessed language. The lowest are proclaimed by goodness to establish Romial, Cheresial, Tepherial, Shelemial, and Melekial.

All go forth seeing God. Send forth Mordecai in the month Adar.¹⁴ Esther is of grace and mercy.¹⁵

Of the Book of Memorials [Sepher Hezekeronoth, or Book of Commemorations], come to Mordecai, being the one next to the king. Give blessings to the king of the glory.

Norial is over the river of fire. Shemeshial is over the Sun. Irechial is over the Moon. Kokebial is over the planets. Shopherial is over the Book of Life [Sepheri Hechiyem, or the numbers of life], over the name to speak of the shofar. Zekobial is over the purity of Israel. Yihodial is over the Malachim, extending to the highest.

Proclaim all the Malachim over the name of the dominion. Combine the letters (Hebrew: HQBH). Create the wheel of the words. See all the actions of creation. Proclaim to rise upward by the names in wisdom, according to the Sun, Moon, and planets, created from the river of fire. Therefore, it is in the second firmament. The stars go forth proceeding to the conclusion.

Make blessings in the days before the Sun. Of the cold, heat the heavens. Of the division appointed in the fourth day, go forth from the river of fire. The Sun, Moon, and planets are suspended in the firmament.

¹⁵ Esther became the wife of Ahasuerus, and queen of Persia.

In judgment from the river of fire, boiling and put forth afterward, therefore the planets go to one side. Man is established, as cheese begins to go forth from the milk. When taken from the milk, it ripens and becomes cheese. Thus, it is not all white. Therefore, the Sun is white from the Moon.

From the planets, diminish the covering of the Moon. Of light over the days, create the river of fire. From them, create the lights. That is what is spoken by the wise ones. The shining goes forth from the motion of the living. Create in the highest heaven from the motion near the throne of the glory above. The wicked turn away.

In the second firmament, the river of fire is one. Of the judgment of the stars, speak of the many. If not for the tail of the constellation of the Pleiades in the river of fire, there is no salvation before the cold. The stars in the second firmament shine as the Sun goes in the day.

The river of fire is in the first day. Proclaim day by the Sun going forth. In night, go forth in the darkness of the universe. Of the days, take hold of the shell (Hebrew: BQLIPH ShThOPSh) in the days. Around the shell of the star, the river of fire goes forth in one shell above. In the shell going forth, the Sun goes forth in the day. Below in the shell is the place of the Sun in night. Thus, go forth in the darkness of the days.

Of the days of heaven, beneath in the shell dwell in darkness. Upon the path of the days, however, above is shadows. It is written of darkness, proclaim night as in the place of darkness. Proclaim the place of night, as the Sun goes forth in night. Thus, of every star above in the side of the end of the firmament.

Of the firmament, receive from the great fire, from the moisture, the holy word and the holy spirit. Mix together to bring forth a crystal. Be moist to extend and spread.

It is written on the right side, extend heaven. That is dry land. Of the firmament, create the firmament [see figure 6 on page 129].

The clouds of the firmament are moist. See the force cast down as the dry land extends. Of heaven alone, the path over the high place is in the day. By dry land afterward, spread as a tent. Of the dwelling, extend the abundance, all by means of the Ruoch. It is written, of the beauty of the Ruoch of heaven.

Of the power of the firmament above, the power rises to the beams of the protruding roof [Qoroth]. Thus, the days of the heavens are between the beams, as proclaimed above of the offering of the day.

Every star rises above, cooling in the days. Rise up and require the beams of the roof of the heavens. Strengthen and support the beams over the heavens. Is it not written, heaven extends to the right side? The rebatements give within and around, not holding the walls of the house, not piercing the wall by the first protrusion. The second is above the first. The sign proclaims the rebatements according to the wall support. Diminish the thickness of the wall, in order to protrude in the place. The sign is above, in the end of the wall. Proclaim to extend above in the wall. In the limited place, proclaim the offering. By the sign in the place, the rebatements of all the wall are weakened. By thickening, therefore, beneath is wide. Five above, six above seven.

It is therefore written in the floor, the lower is five cubits, the center is six cubits, and the third is seven cubits in width. However, not above, but only of the place of the limit.

In the Torah, it is proclaimed to extend. It is written, all these precious stones are hewn in measures, in the granary, from within and without the foundation, until extending from the foundation. Undertake the majesty of heaven. Extend the right side of heaven. It is necessary to divide the beams protruding upward to heaven. The beams are after the heavens. The sign protrudes when in the wall. Cool in the rising sea.

In the place, heaven is supported, and also there is Earth. Limit the place. Receive the heavens and protrude to heaven. Come to the middle of the limit. Thus, the purse of silver is made therein. Receive the covering.

It is written of the side of the foundation of Earth, the right side extends to heaven. Reach this by that. Above the beams, there is heaven. It is a kind of dome. It is written, serve the name in the tabernacle.

Above is the river of fire and 22 shells [Qliphoth]. From the name, cast down and diminish the river of fire. Cast down every star and go with the star by boiling.

It is written, the river of fire leads. Go forth from the presence of a thousand thousands to serve the Lord. In the river of fire, the Malachim serve the Lord. The sign goes forth of every star. Great things are covered and established before the river of fire in every place, however the first indicates the days. Going to the top, here are a thousand thousands. Bear the sign of Elohim in the firmament. The heavens are between, with beams protruding.

Let there be shining luminaries. Do not speak of the luminaries when placing the lights. Here is the Sun, offering as a crystal. The light goes forth outside the crystal. Of the sign of the crystal it is said, let there be luminaries in heaven. Fill with splendor. Produce splendor as the crystal fills with splendor.

Move to the outer. Speak by the dwelling of the gate every day. The gates open in the east. The darkness of the firmament comes from the place. The Sun comes in the morning, going forth for 50 years.

There are gates in the place of darkness of the firmament. There are windows in the firmament. In the place, regard the universe seen from the Earth as the Sun comes in the gate.

The gates serve the morning and grow larger. Therefore, speak of the gates opening in the east. There is no division of the name. There is the Sun. Wind comes forth in the universe. The windows weaken. Therefore speak, divide the window of the firmament. Do not go by the power and by the strength. Consume all the universe completely.

God goes forth in the place. The Sun goes forth from the place and the Moon from the place. Place it in the hollow of the heavens. The Sun is as a kind of dish in the hollow. Of the dwelling of the Moon, dwelling in the place, the Sun goes forth in morning or in evening. It spreads light in all the universe.

Therefore, the Sun is in the language of the female. Let there be luminaries. Do not speak of the luminaries when the Sun rises above. The language of female is of great beauty. The Sun is in the season.

Speak in the language of the male. The Sun goes forth over Earth. It is shining and goes forth. Thus, the Sun is in strength of six in four days from the river of fire. Serve between the shells.

The river of fire freezes [coagulates] as cheese. Create the heavens and dry up, seeing the river of fire as milk already made into cheese. Afterward, separate the firmament above the shells.

Beneath the darkness of the sea, it is dark. Create the Sun and Moon and planets and stars. Of every one, the glory of the firmament.

Know the planets serve in the firmament between day and night. Before the brilliance of the Sun, there is no offering seeing in them as man. Settle in the flames of the Sun, not visible in the distance, of the outer, before it is clear. When placing burning fire in the Sun, see it as ashes. Therefore, in the day, the brilliance of the Sun covers in light and is not visible. However, in the night, the Sun is beneath the Sea of Oceanus, and the planets are visible.

Speak to create the planets. Release the binding, as not shining. According to this, the highest sea cools. The host of the heavens create by the heat of the sign.

In the morning, see the planet going forth from the place of radiance [Zeherieroth]. The day comes, seen as the brilliance of the planet. Go forth from the place of the first rainfall [Yivoreh] as lightning. The planet goes above, not moving. Men are not lacking.

By going forth, give praise. Establish the flowing in heaven. In the place of the flowing, it is established to make the firmament yellowish in order to be more visible. Of goodness, the light is over the Earth. Give in darkness to the lowest firmament.

Support the Earth. The shining extends over the Earth, not in the firmament, but in planets and stars all being over the Earth. Man is able to receive the knowledge between good and evil. It is given in the heart, as God knows all. Here is flesh and blood.

Revere every word by the stars. Of every dwelling, God knows all, knowing of all flesh and blood. It is not necessary to know all. Blessed is he. Rise in memory forever and ever, but not in every dwelling. (Hebrew: OQ"O BNO ShL Q"O MIM M' BMIM.) Bind to it.

In the Book of Formation, God goes forth. The Ruoch is from the holy spirit.¹⁶ Engrave and carve the sign of Ruoch, the breath. Form therein the four spirits of the universe.

Ruoch is in every one, divided as instructed. Of him who makes the crystal vessel, receive the vessel of iron bore from end to end. Receive from the crystal, from the smelting furnace. Ascribe the end of the vessel in the mouth of all. The end of the vessel comes to the mouth. Breathe in Ruoch of the mouth. The Ruoch passes from the midst of the vessel bore. Reach until the end of the empty vessel. The Ruoch of the mouth breathes in the crystal. Make the vessel small or large, or long or short or wide. Measure mouths by the power.

Of the power and the strength, the wondrous Ruoch goes forth. Extend the hollow of the universe. The sea goes forth from the slight moisture, much without measure. Carve and engrave the throne of the glory.

Of every high host, do not desire of God to make from the great fire. In order not to liken to it, fire consumes fire. Receive the sea of fire and Ruoch. Create the ministers [Mesherthiyov]. Divide the water into three divisions. In one portion, freeze the water. Boil the water in fire. Tremble in the smoke. Soil is made into the earth. The second portion makes every high host. Heaven is the highest. The third portion is the firmament above. Separate between water. Water is divided above and divided below. The water is received from below.

Rejoice and speak of happiness. There is life to us. Bring near, close to the Creator. Of living and rejoicing, uphold below the throne of the glory. Fly in great happiness. Give praise and thanksgiving and praise. Adorn the crown. The splendor forms the universe.

It is written, the sounds of water is the greatest glory. By the works of Berashith, reach eleven times water. Of the generations of Noah, eleven times water. In eleven generations, here is Noah. There is to be a flood. God knows the water restores the universe.

Turn aside eleven times by the sea, according to the generations. The flood purifies in female [Asheth] and male [Ayish]. Turn aside and separate. God is over the sea, being the highest sea. Separate the sea over Egypt. Eleven times the sea. In the ark, the sea is of two kinds. Here are twenty-two kinds. Therefore, twenty-two kinds in the Bible.

The Lord El speaks, and Moses speaks to Aaron [the brother of Moses, the first High Priest]. Receive the staff, and extend your hand over the waters of Egypt, over rivers and streams, and over lakes. All is given, not restored below the Sun.

Therefore, Joshua reaches the sea. Water is from the song [Shiereh] until Esau and Moses eleven times. Also by Joshua, eleven times. The sea is eight times the water of the Jordan. Of three times the sea, give to divide the water of the sea before the sons of Israel. Thus, the water dwells at the approach of morning.

The offering is everlasting, the offering with the water of six days of Berashith. The highest sea is suspended by the commandment of God, between the sea and over the firmament, above the firmament, as suspended by the commandment.

Elohim divided to fill the sea. Learn to divide. Of you, Elohim, of the sea, give half in the firmament divided in Oceanus. The firmament resembles a pool of water. Above the pool of water is the dome. From the heat of the pool of water and the motion of the dome, dense clouds fall. They are cast down to the middle of the sea of saltiness. The highest sea is clear from every word.

The highest sea from the lowest sea is thirty measures. Between sea to sea is thirty. The song of degrees is thirty degrees above from below. Freeze above. From below, the shining of the sea goes forth, complete in fire.

Create the Malachim to consume in the eyes. The Malachim are of the highest sea. They are males and the lowest are females. Between the highest to lowest are three fingers going around the firmament, dividing the sons.

¹⁶ See Sepher Yetzirah, 1:9.

Therefore, by Isaiah, the gate of the sea extends in the hollow over the sea, for the sake of the sea of heaven and Earth. Ruoch arranged the universe by the highest sea.

The firmaments are as goblets [hills]. The house receives the sea. It is said, the sea extends in the hollow. The sea is the hand or sole of the foot, heaven and Earth and the living Ruoch, the everlasting Ruoch.

The Ruoch hovers over the surface of the sea. Above and below, the mountains are suspended in the storm of Ruoch. However, in the beginning of heaven and Earth, the Ruoch arranged the stars and heaven of fire (Hebrew: TAQ ShL ASH ShBG AaPR ThMD ROCh SAaD), and of the sea. Of them, fire precedes farther. Soil is the beginning of the house of praise [Bieth Helel], but only the fire of heaven. The Shekinah is in heaven.

Therefore (Hebrew: TAQ) is fire. Aries is the beginning of the signs of the zodiac. Over thus, fire precedes Berashith. Elohim created the heavens of (Hebrew: TAQ).

After (Hebrew: ShBG) is earth. Fire consumes soil and trees. Let there be earth.

After (Hebrew: ThMR) is air. (Hebrew: ThMR) is from the dryness of the earth. The Ruoch of Elohim passes over the earth. Earth receives the Ruoch from you, not corrupted.

After (Hebrew: SAaD) is water. The Ruoch dwells, flowing in the sea. The forces of the water go forth after the sea of fire. Cancer is water.

After is fire. Leo is fire. The water extinguishes the fire.

After the fire of Leo, Virgo is earth. The fire consumes the earth.

After the earth is the sign Virgo. There is Libra that is air. Of the earth and the greatest mountains make a windbreak of the Ruoch.

After the air of Libra, Scorpio is water. The air breaks the waves of the sea. From blowing the water is clouds, the foundation of the congregation. The earth serves forever.

Record the generations of the Earth, the generations of the king. Restore the earth, as being from generation to generation. The living and the dying come forth. The spirits restore.

The earth speaks of generations. The Sun rises, not enclosing heaven. Offer a sacrifice. There is not awareness when near the Sun.

After the heavens, Ruoch is around in a circle. The Ruoch goes forth, actually to the four corners, going with the Sun. After is Ruoch. The sea is the course of the rivers of Elohim. According to that, the congregation upholds the conclusion.

The word written is the truth, however, love supports by establishing after. By the word of the Lord, create heaven. Blessed is the mouth. All hosts gather moving as the sea of water. Revere the Lord of all the earth. In Ruoch is the beauty of heaven.

Therefore, Ruoch, earth, water. After Ruoch is water. The Ruoch gathers waves and breaking. After water is earth, in the name of the sign. Do not fear the declaration of the Lord. The sands increase the water. Generations uphold to establish after heaven, Ruoch, earth.

Arrange the sign above. Below cover in light. As perfection and light of the Lord, the song of degrees extends in heaven as veils. They are the highest heavens.

In the place of darkness, lead the clouds below the heavens. Go over the wings of the wind. All the air fills below the clouds. Therefore, every bird flies upward. The Ruoch gives power of the bird, making messenger spirits [Melakiyov Ruoch] cast down to Earth.

Establish the universe and be content. Offer a sacrifice to the Malachim, going to and fro in the universe. Offer the sacrifice to the ministers. The name is before fire, burning the foundation of the Earth. Over the foundation of the Earth, we are above the ocean as a vestment of clothing.

These are the seven oceans. They are between four countries. Over the mountains, establish water is below the earth. It is written, extend the earth over water. The water is over the mountains. The mountains are suspended in the gate. In the end of the dominion, arrange and establish after heaven, Ruoch, water, earth.

The sea rises to heaven. From the rising of the sea, gather Ruoch. It is near the heavens. According to the Ruoch of heaven's beauty, the Ruoch comes as clouds to the side of the sea. Water is after the Ruoch.

The Ruoch dwells as flowing water. The rain comes forth. Ruoch establishes every end of the earth. The clouds rain down upon the earth, to drain away.

In the beginning, the dominion of Earth, heaven, water, and not Ruoch. According to that, the earth is created first. According to that, commemorate the foundation of the universe.

The earth and the heavens are bound above. Water is above and below. Also, first is the foundation of Earth. Scatter snow as water. Make mud as a flower bed. The wisdom of the Lord is the foundation of earth.

Establish heaven in the place. Receive the power of fire shining in the vision. Of the purest water, create in the place of the heavens. After knowledge, the oceans divide. Divide the oceans below. The skies drop blessed dew over every place. Dew comes forth. There is no Ruoch to commemorate Ruoch.

According to that, the foundation of the Earth is in every place. Commemorate the foundation, burning the earth. Of heaven, praise Ruoch of heaven, earth, and water from above. Below, the Ruoch circles around. It is written, place the darkness circling around. The darkness drops down in water from clouds in the skies.

The name of the Ruoch is (Hebrew: ANH ALK MROChK). Also speak (Hebrew: ANH MPNIK ABRCh). Speak when rising to heaven. The name is (Hebrew: ShL OATzIAa ShAOL).

Dust is in the end of water. The name leads and completes darkness. The blackness of the universe is not obscured from you. By praising Earth, heaven, Ruoch, water, according to that, commemorate the foundation. The mountains tremble.

It is wondrous to make Aleph in Earth. The earth trembles and shakes. Of heaven: descend from above. Fly upon the wings of the wind, above and around. The darkness of water is in dark clouds around. Here it is regarded from below, rising up. By Job, Earth, water, heaven, Ruoch. Suspend Earth over nothingness. It is written, extend the earth over the water.

Therefore, speak after. The sphere is over the surface of the water. Serve heaven over Oceanus. Therefore, support the pillar of heaven. The Ruoch weakens of the beauty of heaven.

Also, from below, the clouds rise up. Of Earth, bind water in the clouds. Of heaven above the clouds, Ruoch is near. Of Job, water, heaven, and Earth, Ruoch from the word. Establish that rain is the first water.

From the heat of the dome in the firmament, the rain descends. The water over the firmament descends over Earth. The Ruoch blows and the rain descends. Reduce the drops of water. The drops from clouds fill streams. From the water, the clouds drink. It is concealed in the bottom of the sea.

Light shines over the corners of the Earth, drawing out and restore the Ruoch from the chamber. The storm comes forth. By Job, Earth, water, heaven, and not Ruoch, according to that, commemorate the foundation preceding Earth. That is the foundation. The water is around it. Heaven is supported in the sea. Fall to the foundation of Earth.

The sea puts forth. The cornerstones are around the water. The foundation of the fire is in the gates, for the sake of joining the corners of Earth. After, the knowledge of the borders of heaven are bound in the sea. According to that, commemorate the foundation of Earth.

Water extends to Earth. Create the heaven. Do not commemorate Ruoch, not seeing with the eyes. Also, not in visions, so much that is necessary of the ancient law. Speak of the ancient Earth, there are no oceans. Establish heaven in the heights.

Of Earth, heaven is created by the power of the established world [Thebel] in wisdom and understanding. Of the sound Tohu, the sound of water in heaven, not from the word of the creation of the universe, but only to restore, thus speak of the path of the people [Goyiem]. Learn from the signs of the heavens from below.

Go forth in life, hidden in silver and gold. Change by praise and from words. It is written by Zechariah, weaken the word. The prophet makes not from words, to stop when dew and rain fall. According to the word, in order to deny the weakening, as said by Zechariah. From the Lord, rain from the time of the latter rain [Melqosh]. The Lord makes lightning bolts, thunder and rain, and perennial rain.

Grass in the field is from God. This weakens the word, also not in this case. Create Earth by the power of the word. In signs of the Malachim, as written over Egypt, over Judah and over Edom and Gomer, speak, to revere, and also of goodness. There are no signs.

Of truth, the Lord Elohim is angered. Earth trembles and the people do not prevail. Anger makes them perish from Earth. Keep the commandments. From the blessings below heaven, stop the raining. From above, return to create Earth by the power.

Of the mountains, it is written, from the sign, destroy mountains. Of the foundation of the world [Thebel]. In wisdom, support the world. In the place of Earth, increase its people. God creates by wisdom.

Of vengeance, it is written by Jeremiah, in every language, to hear counsel. Counsel El by all thoughts. Consider the Chaldeans [inhabitants of Babylon], when not dragging the small cattle along the ground. The young lions gather above the battle. Of Nebuchadnezzar [king of Babylon, 605–562 B.C.E.], it is written by Isaiah, speak in the heart.

The heavens above are divided. They alone are arranged and bound over the mountains as the greatest cities in heaven. By the understanding, extend heaven above. Give the sound of water in heaven, it is spoken of rain.

Do not dwell over creatures of the world. Speak to extend heaven. Do not speak to create heaven, according to seeing the sign. Of not being able to see, but only as the heavens are filled with stars, as in the beginning of the month, or the end, thus, attribute to extend as the word extends. See so much, thus all the planets and stars, according to the clear heavens, for the sake of visibility.

Therefore, it is written to give the sound of water. There is no thundering, only in the day, quiet and calmness from the clouds of every divine [Elohi] nation. Of pagans [Alieliem], the world is created by means of the stars.

The Lord created heaven by the power, created with the stars, therefore be worthy. It is written, by the word of the Lord of heaven, create Earth by the power. Give the sign, therefore, perish from the Earth.

For the sake of the writing, the people speak. Where is Elohim and Elohim in heaven? All the Lord desires is made in heaven. On Earth, in days, and all oceans go forth to sustain heaven. Therefore, in praise it is first written, heaven is the beginning.

It is written, all that the Lord desires is made in heaven. On Earth in days, all oceans go forth to sustain heaven. Begin the power over Elohim in heaven. Therefore, all the Lord desires is made in heaven.

What name written is as the sound of water? In heaven, water precedes Ruoch. According to the sign, the heavens are clear in the day. As thunder comes, water comes without Ruoch. It comes to pass, write by the understanding. Heaven extends as a dome, visible in the clouds in day, as a rainbow in summer days.

It is written by Job, of Earth and heaven, Ruoch is in the days. The name is established to decree. God decrees Elohim. Understand the path. It is known in every place. Send forth the rain. Regard to the ends of Earth.

It is not necessary to reach below all the heavens. Regard the making of Ruoch. Plummet as a bladder [balloon] going into water. Measure the length and the width. Serve the angel and fill with water. As God blows the Ruoch, divide in 70 drops to fill the bladder. Blow therein divisions.

Water is established by the measure of all land and earth. It is written, the measure of the sea is in handfuls of water over the vessel. It is written by the false prophets [Benebia Hasheqor], the sign goes forth over the nation as crumbs of bread.

Of measures, the vessel is measured therein. Measure six measures. By Malachim, Gobi, the King of Edom, (Hebrew: GBI MLK ADM) pours out the ashes [Apher]. Keep all the people of Sha'alim at the foot.¹⁷ Fill the city with dust. All the people are at the foot, until it is not possible to measure.

Heaven spans the measure of the highest mountains up to heaven. By the span of the measures of the foundation of Earth, the right side extends to heaven and the mountains.

It is written by Amos, when smitten in Shavol [Hell], from there to take. When benefit of the heavens, from there to descend and divide. When concealed from the eye in soil, of the water, here is the soil.

Proclaim Shavol, and the well-cultivated plain of heaven by the kings [Melekim] in song. It is written, the foundation of the heavens tremble. By striking the foundation, Earth trembles when between the planets.

The sea breaks the rocks by the water. Be strong by the power and lead the people. The king goes to the valley and strikes the son of Sha'ayir.¹⁸

¹⁷ Sha'alim is the name of a district, or may also mean palm of the hand or foxes.

¹⁸ This may be the name of a man, or may also translate as goat, hairy, or a kind of demon.

Of 10,000 lives, take captive the sons of Judah [the 4th son of Jacob]. Go to the top. Cast down from the top of the rock. It breaks completely.

In every place, it is written of the foundation of Earth. The beginning of Earth is recorded. Of heaven, it is written by Isaiah, I place words in my mouth. Concealed in the shadows, establish heaven and the foundation of Earth.

Speak to the people of Zion. What language is established near heaven? Is it not so they establish and serve only heaven, dwelling in the highest mountains? According to that, Sennacherib [King of Assyria, 705–681 B.C.E.] receives all the gold that was burned [Sheba'ar] by Judah.

It is written, let there be, in fourteen years to King Hezekiah over Sennacherib, King of Assyria, over every city of Judah, fortification. Take flight all Israel from the cities. Therefore, speak to the people of Zion, not to take flight. Over these that are burning, Judah takes flight. It is written by kings, Israel rejoices, being over the people of Assyria until the day. Consider the days hearing of Hezekiah returning. It is written, send forth Hezekiah over all Israel. Judah comes to the house of the Lord in Jerusalem, making Pesach to the Lord Elohi of Israel.¹⁹

Also written by Isaiah, speak of watching [A'ari], behold Elohim.²⁰ Thus of the flesh [Mebeshereh] of Jerusalem.²¹ Jerusalem is, as other places, to come after.

The scriptures speak of the beauty over the mountains. Of the flesh of the feet, reveal to the king, the Messiah [Hemelek Hameshiech]. It is written after to speak upon the high mountain, to you over the flesh of Zion. Reveal the flesh.

Speak of the watching of Judah. Here is the king in glory. God rises up to the highest sea to establish the covenant with Earth, not able to live, even for a small moment, before the power of the great fire over the highest heavens, of the great heights and great abundance of the highest sea.

¹⁹ Pesach is the holiday of Passover, although this may refer to a Passover sacrifice or offering.

²¹ This term may also mean rewards, heralds, messengers, good tidings, or declaring to.

The great darkness is of the divided firmament. Divide the firmaments, as all the creatures are not able to live. Of the highest fire, the highest sea cools the universe from the fire above. From the heat of the fire above, the source of the universe is the highest sea.

The water is suspended in the air far from the firmament. The course is 500 years. By the sign, purify the people. It is written, sprinkle the water of the highest sea in purification. Heat the dome from the motion of water as rain. Man receives the vessel in the house of the bathing [Hebieth Hemrechetz]. It is filled with water before the heat and the warmth.

All dwellings are before the heat of the Sun. The great fire is as males. Of the flowing of the oceans below, there are two concealed in the ocean. It is written of the ocean, proclaim them female. The female is of the desire of male. Thus, Earth and the ocean are from desire. Of the flowing of the rain, the rain lords over Earth.

Therefore, all is purity. Immerse in water or pass over fire. Purity is according to that. The sea goes forth from the moisture of the holy word. The fire is by the power of the heat of the word.

The Lord created the complete heavens by the blessings over the water. All comes to pass by the word. The power of the sea is suspended by the command of God. Blessed is he and blessed is the name forever.

Appointed over the firmament is Cherdenial. Speak of the highest of high [A'aliyov A'al]. Cherdenial is bound in the heights in the course of 60 myriad divisions. Of every word going forth from the mouth, go forth with 12,000 flashes [Berqiyem] of white fire [Ash Lebane] of the prince of hosts [Sher Tzabavoth].

Bereqial is appointed over. The Malachim in the firmament reveal the power of how to lead the people in the universe. Speak and work to reveal the firmament.

Of the letter Nun, God reveals 50 gates of understanding. These were handed down to Moses less one, corresponding to 49 days from the first day of Pesach until Shavuoth [The Feast of Weeks]. On the fiftieth day, receive the Torah.

Fifty lie down and 50 rise up. Speak of Aleph Beth of Rabbi A'aqiba. The faithful dwell and serve God. Decree and endure.

God dwells and the Malachim serve. Fifty is not of them, leaping up to serve the Seraphim. By rising up, the great wise ones bind seven lands united. Cover the highest Earth. Suspend in the gate and bind in the dome.

The veil is suspended in the gate in the firmament. The firmament is suspended by 60 and 100 as two [BS' OQ' KB']. The base is suspended by 60 and 100 as two.

The plains [A'arboth] are suspended and bound in the arm [Zerova'a] of God. The righteous speak to the sky. Sink down to the righteous.

It is written, the sky goes forth, rising high above. The gates of heaven open to rain manna to eat. Tremble, as there are Malachim in heaven. The sky stretches forth from the righteousness. There is strength in the sky. Power and might is to you and your sons.

Manna rains as water coming from the sky, from all the firmaments of the heavens, before the great power of God. Of the great strength of the dwellings of the law [Shekinethov Thorethov] of Jerusalem and the holy temple, it is written, give strength to Elohim over Israel.

By majesty and strength in the heights of the sky, lead in heaven. Support in the heights of the dwelling of the sky. The sky is placed high above, not in the place, but only Shekinah. It is written of the Lord Elohim, from God, food to eat comes from the sky. Of Israel, rain manna from above to eat.

It is written in the Torah of the strength in the sky. There is not strength, but only in the Torah. The strength of the Lord is given to the people. Bless the people in peace. Of the Holy Temple in Jerusalem, the Lord built it with stones of goodness [Toboth]. At the feet are sapphire stones. By the blessing, every kind of precious stone. The sky sinks down to Jupiter, not the righteous of Jerusalem and the Holy Temple.

It is written, the righteous dwell in the power. At this time, be content to serve Jerusalem. The holy temple is suspended by chains of fire in the sky. In the day, go forth and shine in the wheel of the Sun.

The angels of the hosts of hosts [Melaki Tzebaovoth Mechenoth] of the classes [Kethoth] are in the middle. The ladder is fixed in the sky. The top reaches to the dwelling of the Malachim, the most-holy eleven. The most-glorious princes are appointed over the gates of the sky. Of the Ruoch, of the six princes of the gates of the north, six princes of the gate of the south, six princes of the gate of the east, and six princes of the west.

Beresial is the prince of the host appointed over. Proclaim the sky of the righteous. The dew and rain fall. Israel rejoices in the universe. Come and speak of the sky. The ceiling of the sky is in every kind of hymn [Shier], and every kind of praise [Shebech], and every kind of song [Zemereh].

Before the Shekinah is the holy temple in the heights. Speak of the splendor and glory before the holy temple in the sky. The splendor covers every remote part of the firmament to the highest. Speak of the concealment of heaven and the splendor of the sky. Learn of Thethermech. The hosts serve in the holy temple in the sky. Sing before it every day.

Of every Host of Thethremech, the great Malachim minister. Thus of the sky, the tumult of the sons of Thetheremech, the hosts are around the Shekinah in the sky. The highest name of God is in every kind of praise [Shebech] and song [Zemerah].

From morning until evening, speak Holy, Holy, Holy. From morning until evening, speak, blessed is the glory of the Lord. The Shekinah rises up in night to the heights. Of the hidden house [Bieth Meshtherem], speak, you are the hidden God [Atheh El Hameshtherem].

The third firmament fills the storehouse of clouds. Spirits go forth from it. In the midst of the hosts, thunder and lightning go forth from it. Three princes go forth upon thrones, in the image of the thrones of fire. The fire shines like gold, resembling every angel of fire. They are in the majesty of fire. The sounds of fire are as sounds of thunder. The eyes are as waterfalls [Tzenori]. The Sun resembles a wheel of burning flames. The wings of a bird shine as flaming horses in visions, as lamps from the words. Tremble from the roaring of birds flying, of every spirit, and from the birds in every corner [Pheneh].

These are the names of the princes ministering in the third dwelling.

The first is Yikenial. Of this name, 19 Malachim minister before. They are appointed to every word of fire, to kindle and extinguish.

The second name is Rehetial. Sixty-three Malachim minister, ruling every word over the horseman of fire and the horse of fire, of the broken and weak.

The third name is Deleqial. Nineteen Malachim minister, ruling over flames of fire, of the burning house, of the sinking of the sky therein. The sky is in every vessel. Sing before God. Sandalphon is appointed over, binding the crowns, possessing and delivering the Merkabah. Speak of Sandalphon, bound by Thephiliem [prayers, or phylacteries] in the beginning by the eternal God [Tzor A'ayolemiem], the Lord Elohi of Israel. In the Thephiliem, it is written, who are like the people of Israel?

These are also the names of the Malachim ministering from above. The three with Beleqial serve the name. He resembles flames of fire. Nodeh, Avoyil, Melekiyeh, Cholial, Cherial, Chebial, Shelechial, Tzegerial, Kemebial, A'avorial, Sesenial, Gobial, Thomial, Amelial, Thelemenoph, Vothechenial, Arephial, Agebial, Mesherial, Amengenan.

These are the names of Malachim ministering in all seven dwellings. In the first dwelling is A'anial. In the second dwelling is Tzedeqial. In the third dwelling is Chesedial. In the fourth dwelling is Dorenial. In the fifth dwelling is Gabrial. In the sixth dwelling is Bereqial. In the seventh dwelling is Mikal.

These are the Malachim ministering by water. All are therein with Qothial, Thothial, Thekerial, Neqiyet, and Vogahch. Ruling over the rain are Ma'aroboth, Melekial, Meremeravoth, Teretial, Sekenial, Leqobethial, Thenial, Gedial, Keremial, Isa'ayial, Meterial, and Liethial.

This is Shem Hemaphorash. It is the beginning of all the names. The beginning is the highest name and the lowest. Of the secret of male and female, Berash Adam Vochoveh. Of the name of four letters, Yod Heh Vau Heh. The great and honored name is the knowledge of our existence, the root of the invocation. Change the beginning of all existence. Bind to deliver by the tried and proven essence of truth. Of favorable existence, all was created by the wisdom and desire, according to the decree of wisdom, the desire to bless. Decree the name of twelve signs, of twelve written words combined.

IHOH IHHO IOHH HOHI HOIH HHIO OHIH OHHI OIHII
HIHO HIOH HHOI.

These names are approved, combined from the special [Hemivoched] name. The root reveals the meanings, explained by the names written afterward. That is the name of 42 letters.

The two pillars rise up to the forehead. The forehead, until the upper arm [Atzilthen], is covered in light. Of darkness of fire, ancient Israel is around Jochin and Boaz, which is in the middle.

The night is complete, destroying the illumination from the light. Of darkness from fire, separate the host of Egypt, the outer from the absolute powers. Reach to the light of the divine emanations [Atziluth] in night. Illuminate as in death. Do not bring one near to the other.

Measure the sea in one place. Thus proclaim one to the other. Michael and Gabriel stand on the right side and left side, giving authority of this to that. Proclaim the dryness of Earth and water springs forth. This is good. Grow old and depart [Kelech Voyit]. Be delivered and rise up in victory.

³Jochin and Boaz were the two pillars of the Temple of Solomon. Also, Boaz was the husband of Ruth, and Jochin was the son of Simeon.

⁴The term translates as "surrounding the Lord," but generally refers to the procession around the synagogue on Simhat Torah.

⁵An assembly of 71 scholars serving as legislature.

All is seen in the letters. Do not proclaim. Do not reach the thoughts. Do not know knowledge and intelligence, and not power afterward. Of the four glorious letters, do not proclaim the secret of the unity of the Lord.

In the secret of ten sephiroth are thoughts of unity of the Lord. Of the perfection of the emanations, all is remembered. Blessed is he and blessed is the name.

All emanate from four foundations. The highest marvelous deeds are most secret and hidden by the power of the unity of the Lord. Of ten sephiroth with all actions and paths and the courses of the hosts, complete all, this by that. Unite this by that. Of the unity of one, the secret of the 72 most glorious. Proclaim the Shem Hemaphorash. All the powers are most holy and most pure.

All men know of names and the power of the angel of every letter of the name. The book is a branch. All know the power of every word, of the angel of the wheel and planets, of all the highest words.

Thus, understand all intelligence. Know the words of glory. Reveal every secret of glory, sublime as it is, unknown and hidden. Understand the secret to change the letters. Of secrets, decree of images and all movements. Know of all intelligence. Understand the intelligence. Bind the names and highest letters. Combine the letters of the glorious and wondrous name.

Be prepared and understand all the words of glory according to the name of glory.

The light is diminished by the hidden secrets. Let there be light, and the commandments create. It is written, I am the Lord Elohi, who created the commandments. It is written, let there be light. I am not to be you, according to the accepted power over this.

Of the daughter of the mother [Am Beth], let there be the mother of the daughter and the daughter of the mother. Thus, the mother understands the secret of the image of Heh Heh Aleph. Complete the names and proclaim complete.

Also by the images, thus the name of the Neshemah. Of the secret of the word, bind Yod Heh, indicating three highest matters. Speak of Yod and cut off [Qotzov Ozembov, or dock the tail] Vau Heh.

Of 35 numbers, Yod follows three. Follow in spirituality [Ruocheniyoth] by the secret of ten, and the sublime and hidden secret. Aleph completes, hidden that the Yod Daleth binds; but not binding for the sake of the name of Isaac. Of Yod, Vau binds eternally. Of Daleth, Vau binds Heh forever. The second binds this by that, and now Yod Heh Vau. The Heh is below. Above proclaim Yod Heh Vau Heh. Pass Heh of Aleph Beth. By the name of four signs, remember the highest Aleph and the lowest Heh. Bind this by that. In the place, now prepare to write by the authority. Speak of the Cherubim.

Also, it is written of the God [Elohi] of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, Isaac is in the center. Prepare to raise Heh Aleph in the place of Yod Heh. Speak of the highest secret. The great strength and the glory of binding complete, the existence of wealth delivers [A'ashiri Pheltien].

Speak the full name over the unity of the universe in truth. Complete in the end. Aleph indicates two Cherubim, and Vau of beauty. Therefore, bind eternally.

Of the name Yod Heh, the existence is supported in the highest and fortified in the lowest, at the end of the name. Consider the house of the Lord Father [Bith Abieh]. The servant of the Lord [Na'avorieh] speaks to you in day and also night.

Heh is in the beginning of the name and Heh is in the end, the two hands of the holy one. Of two hands, bind the one and the image Heh Yod Daleth.

Yod is united with the word until cut off the body to indicate three of the five divisions of Heh. Of ten sephiroth, here are seven. The thorn of the Yod is not in the amount of the last Yod of Yod Heh Yod. Indicate the last three, and here are ten sephiroth. Indicate the word Yod Heh Yod.

Make to cut off the stalk [Qepheh Qeneh] and cut down the reed [Ovageon Ovikereth]. Of Israel, time ends [A'ath Qetz].

The names by Gematria: Shin Samekh Teth by letters and the word, here is 376 [ShAa"O], as in the amount of (Hebrew: ShLOM) and before 376; here is the word.⁶

Make the wicked to speak to Jacob. Of the Sabbath, be at peace in the house of the father [Beth Abi], and make peace to me below.

It is 376 [ShO"Aa], thus as declared when established from the book. (Hebrew: AChI) is near [Atzel] (Hebrew: AaShO).⁷ Here is 395 [ShTz"H], as from the book.

The Neshemeh is above. Speak of salvation at once. (Hebrew: AChI) over [A'al]. (Hebrew: AaSh"O). Remember at once by Gematria. Of salvation, indicate the end with the letters. One hundred ninety-eight [TzCh"Q] is half the number 395 [ShTz"H], with the word of the prayer over binding.

At the time of the Redeemer [Hegavoleh], give the spirit of understanding [Ruoch Biniehem]. Be worthy to dwell in heaven. Isaac reveals the kingdom above. Indicate to Isaac by addition of Yod. Of the crown [Kether], know to establish the crown of the kingdom [Kether Malkuth] in the beginning. The Lord reigns below. Make the sons to rule in peace [Hebrew: AaShO BNI' MOSHL ShLOM].

By the secret of (Hebrew: IHI AOR) [Let there be light], the secret name (Hebrew: HOIH BIN KL BRASHITH IHI AOR OIHI IHI). Place in the end and thus, let there be the name. Thus four letters full and complete. The letters support the name. Rise to the place of emanations by the name Yod Heh Vau. Of the highest glory and the secret, proclaim in secret Shalom. Proclaim Heh [H', sometimes refers to the Lord, five, or Heh] Shalom. Proclaim in the time of the names. Change the secret and complete the sublime secret.

Heh rises up and Heh descends. Reach the unity of Heh. One in the center and much glory, Beth rises up and Beth descends. Reach in the center of the ladder of unity.

When reaching to wisdom, bring support to possess love of the Lord, the secret of the divided name, of the existence, the beginning strength of every host of the Lord. Of power and the secret offering [Qorben], man offers the beasts. Man makes the offering of the beast in secret.

Of the secrets of the Talmud, all the qabala is to Moses from Sinai. Do not interpret the doctrine. Do not draw out and do not cast out. When man understands wisdom, do not fill the stomach and consume meat.

El gathers in the garden and hands down the sign. Man understands the wisdom to revere Elohim. The secret is passed on to companions in order to establish knowledge and understanding.

Complete and open the eyes and heart as being upright. Regard the living light. Regard the ends of the path. Blessed is the name. Rise up from the power, most glorious and powerful, El in heaven created Earth. Inquire and thus understand.

Of the power of powers, do not receive, not the image, and not power, and not greatness. Do not move from the place. All people come after. The name is as the name of the Creator. Also, the power of the image of the Creator.

Speak to provide and support. Lead in measures of compassion and purity of life alone. Make the hand to adorn you in the temple of your kingdom. From worshipping you and from the power, the strength of the prayer of Moses. By you, the days are revealed. Petition the compassion before the strength. Thus speak in prayer. The Lord El is compassionate and merciful before the six ends of the temple. You are everlasting, in reverence and supplication thus before the most holy. That Beth is in the place, indicate to complete ten sephiroth.

Remember David. Understand to indicate the word and secret of the one Lord, great and strong. Complete ten as the division of the sign is received in the great secret. Of the written words before five, Moses remembers them. These six complete ten, as the prayer of Moses to the Lord Elohim.

Of the Lord El, and before the secret of the most holy three, that three is to six, as two to four. Understand the secret by the Lord Yeh, the everlasting image. The three secrets of three nations divided is over the secret of ten sephiroth of 22 letters of the Torah. Below is the king. Bind every one of the images, of the image and the 22 letters.

The food is on the table of the king. Receive every one of the images. Of the image above, nourishment of El. Of the glory, the king seeks. Pass over the king before. Heh begins as the name by the great name. Remember above, as the image divides power of the name of power. The power of the name is from the holy names and from the Shem Hemaphorash. Proclaim the name of 72, the Shem Hemaphorash, the power of the name of power.

All go to the one place, one of every one word. Therein is tranquility. In compassion, we are supported by salvation of the Neshemeh. Of understanding, reveal Nepheshinov. Serve you in the heart. Complete by Nephesh. Desire in fear and, in awe, exalt. Of Neshemeh, forgive iniquities by sin offerings. Of the mercy of the king, compassionate and merciful is he, in great goodness [Merbeh Lehetieb]. Blessed is the Lord of the universe, amen, amen.

Now the wise son is with the Lord Elohiel and opens the eyes. Remove all foreskin [A'arleh] from the heart, removed by all desire. In every period, cover with linen [Lebeniem]. Of sandals, raise the feet. In the place, Elohim enters.

Serve until the man comes to forsake El. Interpret and investigate every palace, lest consuming much grain. Make the battlement of the roof and cast down. Cast down from above the divine emanation. Of the holy man, chosen from people by the priests of the nation of Levites [Hebrew: LOIHK].

Now the wise son is pure. In the universe, revere Elohim and turn away from evil. See and understand. Place the heart in El. El is in heaven over all to come. Elohim is in judgment when the son lives and when making the guilt offering [Thashiemeni].

By the word of the oath, you lie down there and rest in thought. Be strong by the high priest [Hekehen Hegedol]. Of the friend from the nearest nation, of sacrifice or supplication, suspend the nation over the name.

Uphold the heart. Life is suspended in the dwelling, however, when turning around, receive visions. Regard the chosen and prophecies. All are most holy. Take the priest the wicker basket. Lie down before the altar of the Lord Elohiel.

Now the wise son is complete, fulfilled by all the word. You listen. Revere Elohim and keep your commandments. Revealed to you is the qabalah by the division of the name of the glory and honor. It is divided by powers and secrets, most wondrous and most powerful.

Of the holy Rabbi [Qedesh Rebienov] and Rabbi Ishma'ael in history, deliver therein. Rejoice in the heart. Consider the understanding to learn by them, over the beginning of beginnings and the ending of endings. Rise up without ladder and without degrees. Cast down. Establish those who are cast down.

Now listen to the wise son. Understand how to rise up, and how to come by the secret, and how to obtain power and actions of the light. When receiving them in the beginning, reach the end. Thus understand much. Examine and search the three original scriptures by the simple and plain meaning. Also, examine the concealed meanings. Also, examine the written words. Examine all the letters, every one for itself. Also, examine the changing of the understanding.

Bind the images by understanding of powers, and by the most holy name that guides every one. From them, examine in actions. Reveal the sign to you alone. Complete in the heart by the written words above.

Speak to you of already knowing what is written. Deliver the angel of Elohim. Deliver the pillar of the cloud. The highest powers are most powerful and most glorious. Of the host of Israel, understand the power of the Lord. Divide understanding.

The sign circling indicates the three scriptures. Complete the most powerful and strong. Also, the action of the spirit of the east [Ruoch Qedim]. Also, the strength of power. Measure all the highest before the power of the sea.

Of strength, regard the highest. It is written, the spirit of the east inquires of Aniyoth Tarshish [translates as "a ship of Tarshish"]. The spirit of the east rises up to the visible heavens.

It is written, go with the Lord. The sea begins in love and compassion. Do not listen at once. Come above by measures of strength of all the night. Measure night and thus return and want much.

Every king of the world listens to the sound. Give the three scriptures. Understand in order to separate the two measures of powers. The measure is weak. Begin above and end below.

By the strength of the powers, cast down to judgment. Rise up to separate the understanding. The secret is not being thus, however, upon the path after. Bind strength with strength and fire with fire. Thus consume all the universe. From the destruction of all the universe, all the universe is desolate, not being able to make actions.

The nation is destroyed by the power, however, now, reach to receive therein. Also of goodness, of evil, of judgment and compassion, love and hatred, peace and war. Also healing, and removing evil spirits. From the power of images and from power of intelligence, and the gates [Thera'athem] existing by them.

Now the wise son and the faithful make adjuration to the Lord Elohi of the heavens in every period. In every season, come forth to wander. The words of the Shema establish. I already declare to you the first word. Be revealed when in the periods. Know the heart is of goodness and upright.

Knowledge is in the dwelling of the good. You swear an oath in truth. I revere you. You are near and you are far away. Until wandering around many times, the good see before every name and every power, according to the observance of knowledge.

By images and by divisions, understand what to speak: that (Hebrew: IH) is (Hebrew: IDI) in the image. Actually the power is to bless, however, there are therein three measures—the three signs before Kether, the most high, Chokmah, and Binah. However, the truth of the three measures indicate the fathers.

The truth and all power is unity. Of the power of the sea, reach therein as the hand of the Lord. Here is compassion. Also, of the hand of the Lord, here is the judgment.

Receive therein and change over the sign of power. Desire the action therein. Also the Lord corresponds to the lower. Of the power of the Lord, the power everyone, and one name. Also, the image (Hebrew: IDO HOA HOO) corresponds to the pillar of the universe. Of the holy temple of the Lord [Bieh Hemes qedesh], below and forever is the Earth. It is written, fill all the Earth with the glory of the temple. From the temple of all the Earth, and also the 70 going forth from power, the one name of all strength and power.

MOM—Guide by the beginning works of the name in compassion over all creation from the greatest sign. Consider and know El provides support of all. Praised are all the signs. From the midst is the king of Earth, and all princes of the nations and all magistrates of Earth.

Now, understand the wisdom here. Gather to you the greatest, the most glorious and most powerful. Also the wondrous actions of most precious things. Reveal clearly the writings here. El is everlasting in life. El comes in every period. El is holy.

Of the cotton cloth of the holy vestments, you are the high priest. The people do not rise up in the nation, as coming forth visions of the face of the Lord Elohiel. Be in fear and reverence in the pure heart. Establish retribution by explanation of calculation.

Beauty goes forth from the visible light. Great is the name of the glory and honor. The powers of miracles are bound in reverse and opposite images of the most holy book. All are worthy of the seven words. Of Elohim, live and do not be hungry and thirsty after. Drink of the living sea, most glorious. Thus understand the secret image of Alpha Beta engraved in the highest throne. All hosts worship the three palaces.

The name is engraved. Complete the most glorious powers of Elohim living. Change this from that. Exalt the Lord this from that. Most glorious, this from that. Marvelous deeds, this from that. Most powerful, this from that. Most pure, this from that. Most clean, this from that. Most innocent, this from that. Most upright, this from that. Most perfect, this from that. Most peaceful, this from that. Most illuminating, this from that. Most beautiful, this from that. Most shining, this from that. Living, this from that. Inwardness [Pheniemiem], this from that. Most holy, this from that. Complete the flame of fire, this from that.

Serve in reverence. In reverence and holiness, be [free] from tyranny. El creates the signs. The name of every one by dominions. Of works of the desire of the Creator. Of 22 letters in three palaces, engravings of images of every sign for himself. They proclaim in truth of the highest powers. Reveal to you the hidden and profound secret of the glory. Your sons live upright and faithful to me. Establish and be revealed to you.

These are actually the powers of the name. Proclaim in truth of the highest powers. Engraved in the throne, seal every sign alone from the image by the power. Proclaim that the angel Elohim is living by most glorious and most holy and highest signs.

Thus bind Moses in order to go forth. Bind the image and, from power, do not consume the learned sign. The pure fire consumes and burns. Receive it in purity. By images, change every power for itself. Of the power, remember actions. Thus proclaim the sign of angel Elohim living.

The highest power is from the sign. The abundance of powers of El. Work below and bind power to power, according to the motion and powers and secrets of action. Reveal to you, not to lessen the abundance of the vision of great power. In great purity and great holiness, study and be upright. When living, you understand the word. Corrupt Earth, not seeing and not prophesying.

The image is suspended. Abundance does not descend upon Earth. The secret of (Hebrew: ShARZL) is the splendor. It surrounds Earth, resembling the sea. When separating it by cutting it away, surely to live, and, in them, is the abundance. Thus consume and perish. Over that (Hebrew: ARZL ASOR GDOL) compels the powers above without the great image that is in the river [Biyar].

Of the throne of Kether, Chokmah, and Binah, the Ruoch of Elohim is living. The powers facing before are most powerful and most glorious, and shining [Seraph] from here. The Merkabah of the fathers. The understanding of the Lord.

The fathers speak of the shining above. All desires are of the powers. Of the most powerful deeds, however, in the scriptures, until the Seraphim are serving from above. Of all the highest powers, the fire is divided around. By desire, flourish by all powers.

From the day of birth [Yildothem], measure day and night, seasons and periods in the course of time, in order to reach the glory of formation. It is written, hasten to come after the Seraphim. Proclaim this of that and petition this from that. Where are most holy and glorious, proclaim holy and divine. Holy is the Lord of hosts.

Increase the power in short time by the sound of worship. Of holiness and reverence, speak, blessed is the glory of the Lord. All the highest draw away. From afar, speak, blessed is the name of the glory of the kingdom forever and ever.

Of the Merkabah and remaining Seraphim above, the highest powers remain. The Malachim and the Neshemoth of the righteous people of Israel are below. The unity is complete in fear of sinfulness. Speak, holy, holy, holy is the Lord of hosts.

By the sign in the hour, sublime is the Lord. Of the power, rise up to great holiness. Rise up over the throne of the kingdom. Dwell upon the throne of mercy and compassion. Speak, also I serve Israel, thus adorned. Happy is man in the morning of every day to praise and honor. Of strength in terror and fear. In holiness, speak (Hebrew: BShKMLO).

Be secure in the mercy of the Lord. All powers surrounding change this from that, according to the power of degrees. Of all writings in the temple, in the place, see actions complete. East and west, north and south. Of compassion, of judgment, of goodness, of evil, reward mercy, reward righteousness. Of justice and righteousness, call forth [Tza'ageh]. Of peace, of war, of the slain [Herog] and of destruction [Abedon], and of peace, and of deliverance from evil, of hate and of love. All by the desire of the Creator and king. It is established and fixed over man, serving and bearing. Complete the powers, living and glorious. Worship every day. Speak, (Hebrew: BShKML). Happy is man to revere Elohim.

Of understanding by the most glorious and most powerful, place the heart. From the vestments, go forth. Wear the vestment of Esau, the white vestment of the life and light of days.

Also forge the signs. Thus the Aleph and the Mem and the Tau. By the one path and the highest name, the powers are in the midst. Of the greatest and most glorious powers, make the vow of the name (Hebrew: AaMHM). Seal in compassion of the nation. Of judgment, bind and proclaim the truth. (Hebrew: ShARZL) is the true seal of God. From before goes forth the judgment. Change in compassion and all signs are given by the one image.

Serve until Aleph is by the throne, not thus below. Of the Aleph, fifty signs. (Hebrew: HB B G BD.) Lie down upon the first path. Do not bind the holy sign of the name (Hebrew: DI) by two images. Do not bind the most holy six. Serve the holy. (Hebrew: Ch Ch T). Thus bind. Here is the last image to calculate. From it, create the seal of the wicked. Darkness goes forth in the universe. The name (Hebrew: NIDONIN) of the wicked nations of the ten lands. The vowel completes the inner.

Holy and sublime is the Lord of purity. Thus the remaining signs (Hebrew: BQDSh L' K'O N' QDSh S' K'O Aa' NG P' K'O Tz' I'B Q' K'O R' QDSh Sh' ABOTH Th' D'O). Every word established corresponds above. Of four fathers of the Merkabah, of the four spirits of the universe, serving above the universe in righteousness.

Of the palace of Metatron and the understanding of purity. The abundance of El Nephesh. Man considers the purity. The palace of the understanding separates them from all the Malachim. Of all the most righteous and all the Neshemoth. Of Nepheshoth rising up to the highest. However, in the universe, come to the palace of Jacob.

Of the palace of Metatron, the name comes from the Nepheshoth, the most righteous in the universe. Of the profound secret, Metatron is all the actions and power of Shaddai, of all the one power. It is proclaimed, Metatron comes from below, pure and clean. Divide from the clay [Hechomer]. The name comes forth in the place. Hew the Neshemeh of the purity. Of the universe, Ga'a is above.

Of the pure and the upright, all the highest powers. Also the signs of the strongest and most powerful powers. Do not petition to receive the remaining powers. All see first the Yod Vau, first of all the highest powers. Bind images in the period. Moses rises up to receive the Torah. Know that Moses desires to descend from above. Of the holy temple, engrave the many and want to consume.

However, command to sing the highest name of the universe. Indicate to serve by Moses. Of the Nepheshoth of the most righteous, also receive from the highest and from the most holy, in the midst of the body of man [Goph Hadem]. They are above from the remaining powers. Above indicate the Lord. Be humble to revere. The horseman rises up. Of one father of orphans [Abi Yithomien] and the judgment of El.

You understand the powers of the name. Of the highest of all and the most humble of all. Speak, the Nepheshoth of the most righteous are above the Malachim. Hear the word of the Lord. (Hebrew: MGAaRThO NZRAaZAaO) is complete.

At once, bind every sign to the images. Come to Moses and descend to the people, engraved in tablets. Of the name, learn the most holy secret of the sephiroth. Of the 22 holy letters, bind all the Torah from them. Of the illumination of light, the highest and lowest. Of 70 names, and from them, the name of the first power and every word. Of all the highest powers, the words of the most glorious secrets are concealed and sealed, closed up and locked. Of the strongest and most powerful, of valuable and precious things, the most profound writings. From afar, engrave the many signs united. The high priest of man knows the illumination.

It is most fulfilling to calculate the generations. Consider and know the seasons and periods. Thus, sacrifice offerings of the righteous. Of goats, contrary from the birds, burn in purification. The remaining people stop, and serve from afar. Worship and draw near.

The priest stops serving. Fire falls from the heavens to consume and destroy. El casts out down to Earth afterward, as day is concealed. The Lord Elohino reveals to us understanding, until the universe was created with every word of the Torah. Happy is man to revere the Lord by the commandments. Desire much and complete.

(Hebrew: IH.) Restore the mystery of the vowels. Of the name of unity, reveal all. Receive from the root and foundation. Calculate all signs between. Of three measures, here is (Hebrew: ADNI).

Know of all going forth from the signs. The point is from fortification above. The name of unity comes forth. At once, praise the prince Metatron. Thus, when desire to make the oath, and thus the prince comes forth. Know the secret of the name corresponding to the powers of the Sun [Shemesh]. Combine and thus reveal the secret of A'azael. Of the Sun [Chemeh] is fire and light and day, corresponding to the signs. By the seal of Metatron, reveal the secret of the vowels from the letters. Thus, the first name is by the letters and vowels. It is known to reveal in reply of the one. Here it is written in two names remaining.

(Hebrew: OHI HL.) Previously reveal the first name of A'azael. Of the Sun and light and fire and day, the power of the name compels to speak the petition here. Thus the second name. In the middle, guide two names ruling over the creatures. Reveal by the assistance of the name. The name is the medium to guide over the second.

(Hebrew: OHL.) Of all revealed from vowels and letters, (Hebrew: HLCh) guides over the two magistrates, A'azael and A'avoziel. Compel the understanding and the secret of A'azael and A'avoziel already guides you. Thus the second magistrate as eight steps [Ha'abiem, or thresholds]. After, reveal the secret of the center name. Reveal quickly the third name.

(Hebrew: HL.) Know all raise hands. Guide the name by vowels and letters. Compel (Hebrew: ThThQNG) by the secret of A'avozial. Of the Moon, water, and darkness, and night. After this, here is the name. Compel by the name corresponding to six signs. The prince serves to reveal. After, reveal in reply. Restore and remember the third. All know the great name compels two princes. Change the Sabbath of the Jews [Leshebeth Yihediyov]. Do not gather in the border of the country. Do not draw near the other. The middle name reveals. Compel to understand both as understanding A'aza and A'azael. Behold the fortification. Also, as decreed, indicate to guide by the powers that correspond. The middle name is the seal.

(Hebrew: OHO.) Bind to rise up and establish with both and the image serves.

Here is the image serving. Correspond and change. Rise up and establish. In order to establish, speak after, you lessen by the established response.

Return and speak. Lessen by the mouth of eight princes. Know the name A'aza guides over the wisdom. The name A'avozial guides the throne of the glory. Of the high priest and false idol [Besheth], all is in secret. Thus reveal four mysteries [Tha'alomoth, or enigmas] of wisdom.

Come upon the paths. Reveal the path of the king. Come forth to correspond to the knowledge of the foundation. Death and life are through the language of man. Deliver all when from love of the Lord. Forsake the knowledge of the name of glory and choose by life.

(Hebrew: OHHO OHO HO.) Know first to calculate the holy name. Guide the highest powers. Abundance comes from understanding the name. The two powers of the two faces are as fire and water. Deliver by the hand of Metatron. Behold my desire is revealed to you. Know the first name by itself.

(Hebrew: OHHL.) Calculate to compel (Hebrew: ChThIZ). By the name (Hebrew: ChThLT), reveal the oaths above in the house of the fire [Beth Hash]. I make the oath of the wheel of the Merkabah. By the power of the highest, man is appointed by the established power of fire. By the power, at once understand much from the word. The secret is beneficial [Mova'ayiel]. Know to speak by the three names. The second changes. Bow down in the middle. Understand thus in the middle is the prince of the highest powers. I desire to reveal to you the middle name. Bow down. By two paths, return in the night as you know and understand therein the first as hearing.

Figure 8. The text in the upper left corner translates as, "The secret of A'avozial, and the Moon and Water [or "and in days"] and darkness and night form Aa'za [Esau, translates as "strong man"], the Moon, water, darkness, night." Moving clockwise in the talisman, the upper characters form "Hl," a name, and below this is, "This to be formed of that." The name Vohi appears to the right of this, and further right is the name Vohehi. Moving down and clockwise from Vohehi, the text translates as, "The Secret of Aa'zial and heat [or sun] of fire, of light, of the day." Keneged and shem translate as "corresponding to" and "name," respectively.

(Hebrew: IHO.) Of the sign, compell (Hebrew: ThQT) over the middle. Of the secret, Metatron is in the middle as ruling above. From the wheels, create desire and wishes by the power of the Creator. Be blessed. Deliver from destruction by the powers. Therein the name of the second path. Speak, Metatron is master [Sheliet] by the power of the cycle [Mechezor] of the wheel. Over the water and fire, the secret is divided, going forth from it. You understand and hear El, Lord of intelligence [Ba'al Shekel]. See the power of the six going forth from the blessed name; but only the actions of the powers change by desire. Compel by the sign to serve by powers. After, speak of two names. To reduce, speak the remaining name. It is opposite as fire to water.

(Hebrew: HO.) Calculate to compel (Hebrew: ThThQIT). All is established. Reveal to speak of (Hebrew: BAD). Swear an oath to the prince Metatron appointed by man over (Hebrew: AThG OAKGD). The highest wheels descend, compelled by the power through the name. Fill with desire. At once, divide the water, highest and lowest. This is the secret of the lowest man.

The oath goes forth from the secret. Know to indicate to divide. Remember the two written words. Understand much of the brilliance therein. Prepare much by the most profound secrets. Receive the most holy and highest. Place the heart. Understand the wisdom. Petition the name of the Lord Elohiel. Seek in every heart and in every Nephesh. Journey by the path. Go forth by every oath.

Know to support the root of the universe. Consider the angel the intermediary. Conceal the oath and swear the oath to the name [Shom Shem]. Know to support the root and wheels [Aophenov].

After seeing all is attractive [Hemoshek], make the oath to the divine glory of the name. Berashith return the glory therein with the name. How many times, perhaps because of all desire by the Lord. The image from the oath is over the path of the humble by the name.

(Hebrew: IHOH.) Hear information [Shema'anov] around the tablets of the prince Metatron. Face the prince of hosts by the motion of the wheel. Here occupy the universe, complete by the power of the wheel. Moses and Aaron and Miriam [the sister of Moses] from the gift of the Lord, the Creator. Blessed is the wisdom of the knowledge by the covenant. How many times, I make an oath by the vision of the image Elohim the Creator, God [Elohi] of Abraham, God of Isaac, and God of Jacob by the Shem Hemaphorash.

(Hebrew: IHOH.) Reveal the foundation. Come forth in every period. Petition before and learn of the universe to come. Learn from the journey, the one secret. (Hebrew: ShALO ANI BN BIH).

IHOH—Elohi of the path of the most powerful knowledge. The path of the knowledge preceding is everlasting. Secret sacrifice [Zebach] is the truth of the spirit [Heruocheni Hamethi]. (Hebrew: HATD) is the understanding of the truth. (Hebrew: HATD). The understanding from this time and forever, amen.

BOOK FOUR

PART 1

BOOK OF THE MYSTERIES [SEPHER HEREZIEM]

IN THE NAME OF THE LORD ELOHI OF ISRAEL, bring forth the Book of the Mysteries. Noah gave it to his son, Lamech, to his son, Methuselah, to his son, Enoch, to his son, Mahalaleel, to his son, Enos, to his son, Seth, and to his son, Adam.¹

It came from the mouth of Rezial, the angel. In years to come, the written words came before the assembly [Kenisethov]. It was written upon a sapphire stone. The characters are engraved. From it, learn of wondrous actions and mysteries by understanding and intelligence of the humble.

Counsel thoughts to serve. Investigate the degrees of heaven going through all in seven dwellings, going around all by every sign of the zodiac. Observe every manner of life. Examine and inquire of the Moon. Reveal the paths of the Big Dipper, Orion, and the constellation of the Pleiades. Consider what names are in every firmament and what angels. Also, what will come to pass of every word. Also, what names minister the magistrates [Meshethrethi Shoteriem].

In all humility and modesty, hear them make every desire. All draw near above in purity. Reveal works of death and works of life. Understand evil and good. Examine the periods and minutes to reveal periods of birth and death, and of affliction and healing. Interpret dreams and waking visions. Draw near battles and make peace in wars. Hold dominion by spirits and send forth.

¹According to the Old Testament, Cainan was the son of Enos, and the father of Mahalaleel. Also, Jared was the son of Mahalaleel, and the father of Enoch.

Go forth to worship. Consider the four spirits of the earth. Live from the wisdom. By the thunder, tremble. From the book, what works of lightning. Consider what comes in every month. Serve over works in every year. When of crops, of drought, of peace, of war. Live by one from the most glorious. Understanding of wisdom in the treasury in the heights.

From the wisdom of the book, Noah learned to make the ark from pitch pine [Gopher]. Protect from the flood of the sea and from the deluge. Come to bring forth with two and seven.

Of the preparation of all food and meat, give in the ark of gold. Come in the beginning of the ark. Reveal the periods of day and night, of which period to serve. Bring forth deliverance and go forth from the ark. Therein, come forth all days of life.

In time of death, deliver it to Shem, and Shem to Abraham, and Abraham to Isaac, and Isaac to Jacob, and Jacob to Levi, and Levi to Kohath, and Kohath to Amram, and Amram to Moses, and Moses to Joshua, and Joshua to the elders, and the elders to the prophets, and the prophets to the wise men. Thus, in every generation, until serving Solomon, the King. Reveal to him the Book of the Mysteries. Reveal by the word of the mysteries. By the understanding, hold dominion over all spirits. Of all desires, seek and wander in the world.

Bind and release the sign to rule above. Understand and prosper from the wisdom of the book. The great books are delivered by the hand, being precious and honored. Happy is the eye to see, and ear to hear. The heart is intelligence and understanding the wisdom. By the seven firmaments, all from the hosts to learn.

Of the wisdom in every word, succeed in all works. Consider the wisdom of the book.

BOOK FOUR

PART 2

THIS IS THE WORK OF GENESIS

[ZEH MA'ASHEH BERASHITH]

IN THE BEGINNING, THE LORD ELOHIM created the heavens and the Earth. The Lord Elohim proclaimed Berashith as (Hebrew: BRA ShITH). Thus, the root is not written as (Hebrew: BRA ShITH).

What is Berashith as the letters of Berashith? Create with them heaven and Earth. Speak, the Lord Yeh is the everlasting rock [Tzor]. Of two letters (Hebrew: IH), and of four (Hebrew: IHOH), here is six. Behold, learn of these six letters. Elohim created the heavens and the Earth.

Speak of heaven and Earth created by these six letters. Speak, the Lord Yeh is the everlasting rock. Learn by these six letters. Create the second everlasting. (Hebrew: HAaHZ OHAaH.) Therefore speak of Berashith, what is Berashith?

By one letter, Elohim created the heavens and Earth of heat from the fire. What is one letter? By it, create heaven and Earth with Heh. Speak of the generations of the heavens and Earth. Of the creation, El proclaims the creation by Heh.

With the letters, Elohim created the heavens and the Earth. (Hebrew: OHAaHZ OHAaHB.) Of heat from the fire of Gihenam, it is half hail and half fire. Judge the wicked by the burning hail. Consume them as fire. Judge by the fire. Consume the letter as hail (in other words, judge by hail. Hail burns as fire and fire burns as hail).

The angel of destruction [Melak Chebeleh] descends from above. Keep the Neshemethen in the dead body. Speak that worms do not bring death.

Every day, the angel of destruction descends. Every day the angel of death [Melak Moth] descends from above, guiding you from hail to fire and from fire to hail, as the shepherd leads a herd of cattle from mountain to mountain. Speak as the herd is guided to Shuhai, the place of death.

The angel of destruction descends from above, judging you in Gihenam for twelve months.

After twelve months, you descend to the gate of the shadow of death [Sha'ari Tzele moth]. You are judged in the gate of the shadow of death for twelve months.

After twelve months, you descend to the gate of death [Sha'ari Moth]. You are judged in the gate of death for twelve months.

After twelve months, you descend to the mud mire [Tiet Hiyon]. You are judged in the mud mire for twelve months.

After twelve months, you descend to the grave pit [Bar Shecheth]. You are judged in the grave pit for twelve months.

After twelve months, you descend to hell [Abaddon]. You are judged in hell for twelve months.

After twelve months, you descend to the lowest hell [Shahul Thechethieth]. You are judged in the lowest hell for twelve months, until seeing all righteousness.

Speak before him who has compassion over acts of judgment. Praise and speak, these are holy. Nephesh is not satisfied before the destruction of the house. Understand anger.

Speak, do not dwell in the heat of anger [Cheron Aph, or burning wrath] created at this time, until it is established to prepare the heart.

After twelve months, you descend to the Earth [Areqa], below the river of fire [Neher Shel Ash] going forth from below the throne of the glory. Speak, here is the tempest [Sa'areth] of the Lord.

The Sun goes forth and the tempest moves over the head of the wicked. Fall and descend, returning to the Earth. Do not speak. (Hebrew: ALHA DI ShMIA.) Of Earth [Ara'a], do not serve to disappear from the Earth.

Upon the Earth [Thebel] are mountains and hills. In all dwellings, speak and mountains tremble and hills melt.

The sixth ocean above the earth [Thebel] is the ocean above the ocean of desolation, above chaos, above the sea of emptiness, above the sea of seas [Miem Miem], and over the sea of the world [Miem Cheled].

Of man and beasts, of creatures of the field, and birds of the sky, and fish of the sea. Of the Torah, make goodness and reverence. Speak of all listening to dwell in the world [Cheled].

The seventh ocean is above the world [Cheled]. Gather foreigners [A'arebieth] to lodge. Go forth, going around from the month in every day.

Of the work of Berashith, above lodge in heaven. Speak, extend as a wall of heaven. Proclaim the name [Shemem] of heaven. According to the boundary of fire and water, God extends this by that and created heaven.

Speak also of the foundation of Earth. Heaven extends to the right side. El proclaims heaven. Fire and water is above the sea of heaven. Of grain and new wine [Thierosh] and new oil [Yitzeher].

In the period, God desires to bless the earth. Dew and rain descend in times. Above the sea of water [Hiem Miem] and above the sea of the firmament, between the sea to the firmament suspended.

Serve the wheel of the Sun and Moon and planets and signs of the zodiac. The Sun illuminates all the universe and holds dominion in every ocean. Light descends over the lowest Earth.

Speak, Elohim gives you to complete above the sea of water. The water of the sea is pure. Of hail and thunder, from the drops complete. The narrow walls of fire are surrounding. Speak of the heavens and the name [Shemi] of the heavens.

Over the gate of heaven of the spirit of the north, these are the names of the princes appointed: El El Ovel (Hebrew: AL AL OAL), Biem, Bela'ayial, Bela'ayi, Vobetzelial.

Over the gate of the spirit of the south, these are the princes appointed: Dorenial, Derekial, Hemon, Donal, Gechenial.

Over the gate of the spirit of the east, these are the princes appointed: Dorenial, Gabrial, Gederal, A'aderial, Modial, Rechemial, Vochenial.

Over the gate of the spirit of the west, these are the princes appointed: El, Tzien, Soqial, Zenesial, Vobechial, Vobeqetemal, Voterephenial.

Above the firmament of heaven, fix the Sun and Moon and signs of the zodiac. The end of the firmament resembles a dome. The Sun and Moon and planets and signs of the zodiac are at the end of the firmaments, holding dominion in every ocean. Light descends over the lowest Earth. Speak, Elohim, you give in the firmament of the heavens.

Over the gate of the spirit of the north in the firmament, these are the names of the princes appointed: Tiyal, Yida'al, Yinal, Nenal, Vocheleqiem, Vochenial.

Over the gate of the spirit of the south, these are the princes appointed: Kelah, Bechelial, Belehial, Loval, Yilial, Neqerial.

Over the gate of the spirit of the east, these are the princes appointed: Mesiem, Keremial.

Seal in the ring [Vochethemeh Beteba'ath] (Hebrew: AHIH ASHR AHIH). Before sealing in the ring, they are not sealed in the ring. Every human being [Berieh] is not able to seek by the letters before the flames of fire.

All who come to the gate seek by the letters. At once, fill the fire, therefore concealed by the letters and sealed in the ring.

Therefore, speak of Berashith. What is Berashith? In the beginning, create heaven and Earth. Give habitations and move the oceans to establish seven dwellings above corresponding to seven oceans below. Extend above corresponding to the foundation of Earth [Ademeh] below. Establish the sky [Shecheqiem] above corresponding to the dwelling of dry land [Yibesheh] below. Extend the habitation above corresponding to the foundation of Earth [Areqa] below. Extend the habitation above corresponding to the foundation of Earth [Thebel] below. Extend the deserts [A'areboth] above corresponding to the foundation of Earth [Thebel] below. The throne is established above. The glory extends as the work of the first day.

In the second, divide the sea. From it, take below and take above. Speak, Elohim created the firmament and separated between the sea.

In the third, you gather the water in one place. See the dry land and proclaim the earth. Go forth trees and grasses. All kinds of grains, trees bearing fruit, all kinds of plants of branches and fruit. Speak of grass springing forth upon the earth. Grass springs forth from sowing seeds of all kinds.

In the fourth, create the luminaries. Divide between the day and night. Give the Sun dominion in day. The Moon and stars hold dominion in night. Speak, Elohim created the two greatest luminaries.

In the fifth, create fish and all creeping things [Sheretzi] of the water, and the birds above the face of the Earth. Speak, the water teems with creeping things and living creatures, and birds fly above Earth.

In the sixth, create beasts and creatures and creeping things. Speak, go forth on Earth living creatures of all kinds. After, create man to hold dominion. Rule over every one, serving the great angel.

Begin to complete the storm [Sopheh] surrounding and the tempest [Sa'areh] surrounding. Speaking holy blessings and splendor fills Earth to the lowest ocean.

Above the ocean of desolation, above chaos, above the sea of emptiness, above the sea of seas, above the sea of dry land [Cherebeh], and above dry land is illumination. Voyage upon the ocean. Speak, give illumination to dry land.

The third ocean is above dry land. The ocean is above the ocean of desolation, above chaos, above the sea of emptiness, above the sea of seas, above the sea of dry land [Yibesheh], and above dry land are the seas and rivers and every place of water. Speak, create the sea and dry up to form them.

The fourth ocean is above dry land. The ocean is above the ocean of desolation, above chaos, above the sea of emptiness, above the sea of seas, above the sea of Earth [Miem Areqa], and above Earth [Areqa] is the lowest hell [Shuhal] and hell [Abaddon] and the grave pit and mud mire and gate of death and gate of the shadow of death and Gihenam. The angel of destruction is appointed over the wicked.

From the highest dwelling to the lowest hell, the course of the depth is three hundred years.

From the second dwelling to Abaddon, the course of the depth is three hundred years.

The seven Malachim are Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, A'anial, Vetzorial, Turiel, and A'azial. They are over the name and over the truth of the name, in mercy and compassion.

Of the name (Hebrew: BShKMLO), the adjuration over the prince Metatron. By the name, the princes are appointed over the four seasons of the year.

In the first are Norial and Tzedeqial. In the second are A'azial and Samael. In the third are Zebedial and Semenial. In the fourth are Gabriel and Raphael. Ashebierah Hesheron rule in every season of the year.

Of the adjuration, the sign of the prince Metatron is by the blessed name. From the blessing of the name, in the heights over every blessing.

Begin by the name. Thus the name is before all. Establish the name forever and ever. Serve the name. From the name, Gedodi tremble, highest and lowest. Of the most magnificent [Mepharim] name. Of every Gedodi above. Of every most magnificent name. Do not regard the name. All tremble.

The sea flows in reverse from reverence of the name. All the most powerful waves are of the magnificent name. The earth trembles by regarding it. Serve the Lord. Shake in fear from the name. Over every name of the world. (Hebrew: ODIIRI.) The world trembles in fear from the name. (Hebrew: ODIIRI.) Thehom and Abadon and the shadow of death flow from the name. In the Garden of Eden, all pious shout for joy of the name. Of all Neshemeth, Ruoch and Chiyim in the nose.

By desire, the language gives glory to the name. Give glory to the name. I am as dust and ashes cast forth. Worms smite the heart.

Of the Ruoch of the humble, cover until, as a flower of the field, you cast down to be humble before. Petition compassion before the throne of glory. You draw near to every proclamation and commandment. Seek to make prayer in petition by desire before. Hasten the petition in compassion. Make desire that you created after.

Of all desire, let there be below. Of compassion, forgive the sin. Do not defile. Many return in anger. Do not designate all anger. The Lord descends in clouds formed from the Ruoch above. Give over seventy men, the elders. Let there be quiet above the Ruoch. Prophecy and do not fail.

The Lord passes over, above the surface and proclaims, three [G'] forms mercy to thousands. Of three, pardon sins. Of three, forgiveness in the nation. Of three, the Lord hears. The Lord pardons. The Lord listens. Of three, Jacob goes forth from Bar Sheba. Of three, reach the place and remain there. Then to dream. Here stands the ladder. Of three, here is the Lord. Stand above and be spread as dust of the earth. Break forth. Of three here, we are the nation. Keep by all that to go forth. Speak, these are the complete scriptures. Let there be facing below to see desire.

This is the Shem Hemaphorash. Remember from desire in the bush. All who remember the sign over the destruction [Heshed] take flight. It is over extinguishing the fire and healing disease, and over the mountains of Tharshish.

When man remembers and writes the sign, the enemy dies, and the magistrate loves you. Remember not to proclaim the sign, but only when you are pure from all defilement.

Of all who proclaim the sign, those who are not pure will surely die. Thus the consecrations are necessary.

Of Chenial and Chesedial and Tzedeqial above, by the name reveal to me. Thus the name goes forth from three scriptures. Travel and come forth to be guided. Make a pledge [Iya'arebem] to the nation. Begin and end and begin.

This is the name of the honor and glory. It is divided into these 72 names:

Tarry not in day and not in night. Place in the four corners of the house.

In the beginning is the name of the honor and the glory. Of the oath, above is Asmoday, the king of demons. Of every group, go forth to gather in groups of diseases. Of every group, go forth. Do not cast forth and do not fear. Do not be afraid. You are Pheloni Ben Phelonieth, but only by assistance and support from all misfortune and distress.

It is required to keep the body and heart in purity. Establish heaven and thus judgment. Take flour and barley. If not barley, take wheat; however barley is best. Knead in purity. Speak the name Pheloni. I employ by that. Let there be desire before Elohim in heaven. Succeed by opening the heart. I establish the name Pheloni Ben Phelonieth. Be the key of the Talmud and Torah. Of every word, do not forsake. Teach all, and all is known by decree in the cities. Of the dogma [Phethegema], speak most holy are these by the name (Hebrew: IH), the Lord of hosts. Knead to improve the flour. Make pure the fine meal. From the fine meal, make round cakes as the palm of the hand. Take ink and make four drawings on the four cakes.

Whisper in her right ear. You go forth and all the nation by foot. This is tested and proven."

⁹This plate is also published in David Goldstein's, Jewish Folklore and Legends (London: Hamlyn, 1980), p. 30. Goldstein notes, "In each of the two compartments are representations of the three angels who captured the female demon Lilith, namely Swwy, Snswwy, and Sringllf."

The names above the diagram (figure 15) are as follows: MIKAL GBRIAL RPAL NORIAL QDOMIAL MLKIAL TzDQIAL PDIAL ThOMIAL ChSDIAL TzORIAL RMAL IOPIAL STORIAL GZRIAL ODRIAL LHRIAL ChZQIAL RHMIA QDSHIAL ShBNIAL BRQIAL AHIAL ChNIAL LAHAL MLKIAL ShBNIAL RSHIAL ROMIAL QDMIAL QDAL ChKMIAL RMAL QDSHIAL AaNIAL AaZRIAL ChKMAL MHNIAL QNIAL GDIAL TzORTQ AaOPPIAL RChMIAL SNSNIH ODRGZIH RSSIAL DOMIAL SNIAL THRIAL IAaZQIAL NRIH SMKIAL AaINAL ThSIRIH RNAL TzORIH PSISIH AaODIAL MMKIA MChNIH QNONIH IROAL TTDOSIH ChONIAL ZKRIAL OAaDIAL DNIAL GDIAL BRIAL AHNIAL. The caption underneath the diagram reads, "By the name (Hebrew: AHIH OHA HHA AA BB AO MAK AAA), give adjuration above. Be first by the name to form. By the third name, send forth the Malachim. Form by the path. Of the angel of the shore of the sea, make the oath to them in the place. Find the names are not of one power, and not one from the hosts and ministers, and not of all who dwell. Of the names, therefore by the names and the seals written here, I make the oath. Your hosts and ministers do not strengthen. You give birth. Phelonieth Ben Phelonieth. After the birth, not in day and not in night, not by eating and not by drinking, not by head and not by heart, and not by 248 mighty ones [Aberihem], and not by 365 degrees. By the power of the names and the divine seals, of these I make the oath of your hosts and ministers.

Here is another amulet. It establishes love between man and wife, or between man and female companion. Of love, you are the Lord Elohiel in all hearts and in all Nepheshes. Let there be desire from before the Lord Elohi of the fathers.

Send forth the most holy [Heqedoshiem] angel of Pheloni Ben Phelonieth. (Hebrew: K"p) establishes love. These are the names of the most holy angel appointed over love. (Hebrew: PTh TzIMA ThA HOHI KI HLA ShLK KShShLA PShLK IThQL.) You are the angel of love. Establish love. Declare to understand. (Hebrew: PB"p). In them, there is not hatred, and not anger, and not quarreling, and not evil words and wicked hearts; but only peace in the heart. The heart is good. Of love, declare from this time and forever and ever, amen. Let there be the image.

Here is another amulet of love (figure 16). It is written of water lilies and saffron, and with the brazen writing tool, write upon the prepared shell.

In the name of Pheloni Ben Phelonieth, let there be binding of the heart. Of Pheloni Ben Phelonieth, to love. Of Pheloni Ben Phelonieth, works of desire. Desire from power of the song and power of the Totepheth. You are blessed of Nephesh of the Lord Elohi. In great splendor and glory, the vestments cover with light. Peace extends to heaven. The veil cools in the highest sea. In the place of darkness, the horseman travels upon the wings of the wind.

Make the angel over spirits that minister flames of fire. The foundation is of Earth. Above is the dwelling of the Lord. It is not to fall forever and ever. Of Thehom, the vestment covers the mountains. The sea stands from the curse. Flee from the sound of thunder. Quickly rise up the mountains and descend into valleys.

Of the foundation, measure the limits. Do not pass over. Do not inhabit the earth. In the place, put forth from flowing rivers between mountains. Journey and drink. Do not live in the dwelling. Quench the thirst in the arid wilderness. Fly above the heavens to dwell. Be refreshed from the highest mountains to the wilderness.

The earth is enriched with plant growth to support the beasts. The grass serves man. Go forth by the warmth from the earth. Of wine, man rejoices in the heart. The surface of the earth becomes fertile. Warm the heart of man. Support the tree of the Lord. Of white cedar, establish the name. Return to the nest of the stork in the fir tree. In the house of the heights [Bitheh Heriem], mountain goats [Liya'a'iem] hide in the shelter of rocks.

Make the Moon of the fixed time of the Sun. Know to come forth. Beseige the darkness. Let there be night therein. All life moves, until the lions roar and growl, rending and tearing apart.

Seek food from El. The Sun rises. Gather to the dwellings to lie down. Man goes forth to work and works until evening. How many works of the Lord are complete by the wisdom created to fill the Earth with wealth.

The sea is great and wide. There are creeping things without number, from the smallest creature to the greatest. There are boats to journey Leviathan. Form clouds therein.

Complete by providing grains. You give food in the hour. Give to gather and fill the open hand. It is good to hide the face as the winds increase. Of toil, the dust returns. Send forth Ruoch to enrich and restore the surface of the earth. Let there be glory of the Lord forever. Rejoice by the works of the Lord. The earth trembles and the mountains shake.

Figure 17. Angelic script. These symbols are reproduced in Jewish Folklore and Legends, p. 30. Goldstein notes, "The so-called 'alphabet of the angels' from the Book of Raziel, Amsterdam, 1701. It was used for magical purposes, and little is known of its origin. The forms of the letters bear some similarity to the Hebrew and Samaritan alphabets." See Davidson, Dictionary of Angels, p. 335.

The Lord keeps in life. Sing to Elohi as long as darkness is above. Let us rejoice. The Lord ends sin and evil from the earth. Nephesh rises up. Praise the Lord.

Here is another amulet (figure 17) of grace and mercy written upon the prepared turtle shell. In the name of grace and mercy (Hebrew: IHOH), let there be mercy in the world. (Hebrew: IHOH AaL PB.)

Increase the righteousness of the nation. Speak, of the Lord to increase and send mercy above. Give you grace in the eyes of all visions. In the name of Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, Avorial, Kebeshial.

It is spoken of wisdom, live for seven periods. Drink a glass of rum [Kosiya Remiya] every day for 40 days. Understand the divine word that was given to Moses from the midst of the bush.

The understanding of the wisdom is from the midst of the knowledge. Intelligence is from the midst of the thoughts. Intelligence is from the midst of all goodness and honesty, from the midst of the most skillfull. Improvement is from the midst of the most pure. The most holy is from the midst of the modesty. Compassion is from the midst of the peace. The most satisfaction is from the midst of the abstinence. Reverence in purity is from the midst of the secrets of the holy spirit.

Through Sephephial, prince of intelligence. Through Aphephial, prince of the knowledge. Through Kethethial, prince of the understanding. Through A'arestial, prince of craftiness. Through Yihoval, prince of testimony. Through Nehenal, prince of the deliverance of the Lord. Through Rehal, prince of the mystery of the Shekinah. Through Ashemoli, prince of the Torah. The name Shehesherov Shekinah is over Moses.

The Ruoch of wisdom and understanding. Ruoch of knowledge and intelligence. Ruoch of craftiness and science. Ruoch of the mystery of the deliverance of the Lord. Ruoch is from you, Elohim. Thus dwell in the Shekinah of wisdom and understanding. Ruoch of counsel and strength and thoughts. Ruoch of knowledge and wisdom. Of the Ruoch of Elohim, the mystery is from intelligence in the hour over David Ben Zelateh by the name Sheqrechozi.

The great prince is (Hebrew: ZH PTR II'). The great prince is (Hebrew: GDL ZH RIRIAL II'). The great prince is (Hebrew: AGO-QThIAL II'). The great prince is appointed over the treasured wisdom of the Torah and over all keys of wisdom.

Teach Moses the Torah. Of wisdom and knowledge, thus to open. I am David Ben Zelateh. Of the gate of wisdom and the gate of understanding, by the name (Hebrew: AHO AChOSh IChOSh IHOH IHO IH HH HOH HH HOH IHOI HOH HH IH OH AH IHO AH IH OH OAA ANM SLH).

Do not forsake desire. Do not forsake learning. Speak of the scriptures preceding. Consume and mix a glass of wine or beverage [Mesheqeh] after. Speak, these are the scriptures over Ruoch of men and women. Of Shaddai, man understands to arrange the heart.

The Lord answers in language. Of El, cast out from before. The holy spirit of El is received from me. The Lord commands to cast the amulet out of gold. Deliver to the pure heart. Create to me Elohim and Ruoch is established, restored within.

Elohim gives me language to understand the knowledge. You give the word to awaken every morning. My ear hears the teaching. The Lord Elohim opens my ear. I am not disobedient. After, do not remove Ruoch. The word of the Lord is in me. Rule over language and speak thus.

Let there be desire from before the Lord Elohi of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel. Open the heart by the laws. Enlighten the eye and heart by the name Phethechial Rephal Chophial. Open your heart. In all the days, do not forsake all that is learned.

What is commanded to learn? From serving, learn all days. Do not forsake the word of the Torah forever, amen.

Make to fast in the evening. (Hebrew: R"Ch) is in Sivan. Write the divine scriptures upon an egg. Knead the yolk with good honey. Consume the word from all flesh. You eat the food.

(Hebrew: DIO NSIM.)¹⁰ That is (Hebrew: D"IO NS"IM).

Of two flags [B' NSIM], create Gabriel as (Hebrew: DIO). Of the appearance [Pheretzophien] and the interpretation of the flags, create Gabriel of the grace of Mieshal [Hebrew: MISHAL].¹¹

Of support, the cold is before. Be warm from the inside. There is interpretation over the holy. Blessed is it.

(Hebrew: A"Z B"O G"H.) Of five seals of God, divide the letters. Strip away the plain meaning [Peshet Pieseth]. Create the two flags.

(Hebrew: A"Z B"O G"H.) Establish the letters of the name of 22 letters. (Hebrew: ANQThM PSThM PPSIM DIONSIM BGIM' ADIRIRON IHOH ALHI.) Of the hosts, the Cherubim dwell. Here completes the name of 22 letters.

You make change to engrave the name of 42. (Hebrew: ABGITHK) is divided. (Hebrew: ABGA) is broken down. (Hebrew: ABGA) is above and faces the veil.

Obtain (Hebrew: HShTN). Denounce to break down and rend (Hebrew: QRA'a)¹² the Sepharim. Denounce going forth (Hebrew: HShTN). Denounce over Israel. Obtain the book of the Merkabah.

(Hebrew: ABGITHK QRA'a ShTN.)¹³ In the Sepher Hekeloth [Book of the Palaces], even as rending the book. Of the guilty, denounce here until being without food. Make the oath. Learn of favor [Zekoth] and fault [Meleqien] before the Lord.

The beauty of the bow of the Lord is in the secret parts of the one new language coming forth [Yikesh Henah Daqoshi Lieh Bemebosha Leched Beter Leshon Bova]. The first part is new. (Hebrew: TzTh"G.) Of language, establish the tabernacle [Heqeb]. Proclaim to expand the language. (Hebrew: TN"Aa.) Thus the keys of power. (Hebrew: IG"L). Thus the book of power. (Hebrew: PZ"Q KPZ"Q.) Learn of the snow. (Hebrew: PZMQ"I ShQ"O.) Bear the burden. Run from the place. (Hebrew: TzI"Th.) Go forth in abundance.

(Hebrew: ABGITHK) is the secret in the tractate passed over by the scholar. Of supplication, go forth three miles. Do not speak before, however afterward, do not return to Jerusalem. Of exactly one mile, return in less than a mile.

Thus the law [Helekeh]. Now, the sons understand of the sins of thousands of nations. Of all murder [Rotzech], it is necessary to journey. Take flight and take refuge in the city. There is no evil outside the pasture.

It is written of the shelter of the city, of 48 cities nearby. Your pastures and fields are in the nations. You are hidden in the nations. Take possession of the cities, given before. Afterward, reduce from one mile in the midst of, and not be slain.

(Hebrew: ShARZL.) Less than three miles, here the Sun rises. Thus of murder, measure three miles. Speak, take flight to the east from the place of murder. Thus at the appointed time, be in prayer for nearly one hour. Thus the killer turns away. Of murder in the place of prisoners, the sea is around. Speak, you are prisoners. Of the might of the Lord, send forth. You lessen to draw from the sea.

(Hebrew: MGB"A GB"A.) Of the letters Aleph Beth Gimel, it is the name. Of the book of great wisdom, the thousands of nations of God. Be blessed to calculate by combination. The sea is less from one mile. Speak of the length from Earth. Measure width until the sea. The Sun returns above. Be immersed in the sea. Afterward, lessen from one mile. Do not return before three miles.

Therefore (Hebrew: AB"G BI"Th GIM"L NOTRIQON). Through prayer, the border of one mile. Of three miles, it comes to pass. The sea is fixed by portions in the soil of the ground. Dig down one mile. Make it in the place where the ground is virgin soil. Speak the oath. I am above Nechelial, A'aremogial, Tetophiech, Atzothiech, Nera'ayial. By the name, truth goes forth as a bubbling fountain.

¹⁰These are the final letters of the name of 22 letters.

¹¹This translates, "Who is what God is?" It is also the name of several people, notably a companion of Daniel.

¹²This word is significant in the name of 42 letters.

¹³See Trachtenberg, Jewish Magic and Superstition, p. 95.

Remembering the purity of Jacob. Proclaim of the small. Speak of who rises up. Of Jacob, it is small.

(Hebrew: OAa"O NAM' TzDQ" OMSHPT" MKON" KSAK.) Mercy and truth precede before. (Hebrew: OS"Th) is small. All is made by that name.

(Hebrew: QRA'A ShTN.) It is good. Those who are wicked are torn to pieces above or from before the evil spirit or from before the sharp teeth of the demon [Mezieq].

(Hebrew: KOChBIN.) Of that name, suspend by the neck and heal.

(Hebrew: IKSh.) They are lifted up. Below is Teth and above is Samekh. According to that, speak of grace of all the acts of El three times.

Of man with strength, as to be thus 13 (Hebrew: I"G) below. Thus without punishment. You are lifted up three times. Thirteen rise up. Establish Teth, however above, there is no punishment until to be thus 23 times 20. They are (Hebrew: S' NG"D). It is good to remember support, of food and nourishment.

(Hebrew: BTR TzThG.) The false are dismissed [Sheqorien Pheter]. Of the language, dismiss the first sea above [Pheter Miem Rashieth Merom]. There it is false. Rend Shaitan. Thus of the oath. Thus record the event. Rend Shaitan.

(Hebrew: PTR TzThG.) Reply to the oath afterward. The event is with Shin and Beth.

(Hebrew: BTR BNIMT' ALIH.) Fulfill the letters Aleph, Lamed, Yod, Heh.

(Hebrew: TzThG.) By Gematria is as the strength [ChLNOTh]. Petition the Lord above in prayer. That is what to speak. Look from the windows, from the Tietz [ornament] and from the lattices.

(Hebrew: MShNIH NOTARIQON MTTTRON.) The great prince. Open the window. Of 13 [OI"G] windows, they are by the throne of the glory. You open them in order to gather to the phylacteries [Thephielethen] of Israel. All are created in that name.

(Hebrew: BTR TzThG BATH BSh ShGN HAR.) Learn that the first light was created by God. Separate the righteous and make them ready. God conceals it in Eden.

Speak and proclaim, Elohim illuminates. (Hebrew: AOR.) By Gematria to the Garden of Eden. Understand by that name.

(Hebrew: ChQD TNAA.) By Gematria. (Hebrew: RAM.) According to it, speak of the rays [Qeren].

(Hebrew: RAM.) Rays by the nation of Enoch.

(Hebrew: RAM.) Raphael, Avorial, Mikael are the hosts of Shekinah. Make ready to assist the Messiah. That is what is spoken of rays at once.

Of the name (Hebrew: ChBION AaZO), by the letters and by the name, that is Avorial.

(Hebrew: D"L.) Facing Avorial. (Hebrew: L"A RA"O). You see after and before (Hebrew: L"A IRA"O).

(Hebrew: ChQD TNAA) by Gematria is Nezerah the angel. Make the oath to the angel Nezerah in order to stop deriving evil.

Differentiate by the name. It is necessary to be of great innocence and baptized [Tebieleh].

(Hebrew: IGL PZQ) by Gematria is Cherub. The name to engrave over Cherub is above. Every day, God above guides. Speak and guide over Cherub. I take flight and fly upon the wings of the wind. See in 18,000 lands in the east, and 18,000 in the west, and 18,000 in the north. These 72 lands establish mercy. Speak of mercy in the universe. Understand the mercy. In heaven, establish the faithful. Establish mercy of thousands of myriads. Of (Hebrew: OAaZ), speak around 18,000. Of the name, the day of the name of the Lord.

Divide around to all four faces. Of 18,000, there is no place. Of the angel of the nation, the angel is prince. The faces guide the nation. Be covered with glory. Speak of facing the letters (Hebrew: HNOK).

By the one letter, the vision of glory comes to all the world. In the highest world, of one song of every group above. Remember the name.

(Hebrew: IGL PZQ MThL.) In the period, God rises upon the throne of the glory. The wicked are judged at once. Of every group above, directly see God rising up.

(Hebrew: IGL PZQ.) Above is the throne of the glory. Understand all is well.

(Hebrew: ShQO.) By Gematria and over the veil, learn that above the veil, engrave the name and image of the idol [Besh Tzer] of evil coming forth. Denounce over Israel at once. Remember the name. (Hebrew: OMIDNBO.) Fear the evil image. It is not permitted to gather before.

(Hebrew: ShQO BNI' OAaL HDRNAL MLMD ShHDRNAL.) Journey by all. The veil is spread over the throne. Immerse you in the river of fire. Divide over the throne of glory. At once, gather every group above the Moon [Irech]. They are also immersed in the river of fire.

(Hebrew: ShS"H.) Be protected above the river.

(Hebrew: AaLI NHR BNI' ShSH.) Thus take authority from Jacob. The fathers above are of peace. Sing the song. Speak not of Jacob. From the sounds of Gihenam are the letters of Jacob. At once, they hold dominion by the name. According to it, engrave over the hearts.

(Hebrew: ShQO TzITH.) It is good for man to wear the vestment garment of sackcloth and have gray upon the head. Remember the name. Pray and, at once, the prayer is heard and answered. Speak, there is not one permitted to wear the vestment sackcloth. Only be answered by the king. (Hebrew: KIORM BN AChAB.)

Also, it is spoken in the Midrash, of how many are adorned in sackcloths. God sees you at once, lest [you] understand the secret of the sackcloth. All thus are adorned. See the covering.

Of the letters of the covering, thus find (Hebrew: BMRDKI). Wear the sackcloth and be gray. Go forth (Hebrew: LRBIM) and thus (Hebrew: GBI ANShI NINOCh). Wear the sackcloths and understand the great secret.

Here completes the division of the name of 42 letters. The book is complete. The fountain of wisdom [Ma'ayiyen Hechekmeh] is from the secrets of the great Rezial. Of all the books that Rezial the angel gave to Adam, the first man, learn from it. Of all fountains of the wisdom of the Lord, for the sake of compassion. Be favored by the pleasures of victory. Desire to succeed by walking upon the path of the wisdom. Be ministered by a myriad myriads hosts. Of armies of fire, the river of continuous fire [Methleqecheth Neher Ash]. Dwell before rising up to shine in strength. From the sounds, the nations tremble. Guide in strength and guide to the highest. Blessed is the Lord of the universe, amen.

Through the actions, employ the holy messenger. The faithful hold dominion.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Steve Savedow is the author of The Magician's Workbook: A Modern Grimoire (Weiser, 1995) and Goetic Evocation: The Magician's Workbook, Volume 2 (Eschaton Productions, 1996). He has studied magic and the Western Mystery Tradition for many years. Savedow lives in Daytona Beach, Florida, and owns the Serpent's Occult Bookstore, an independent bookstore specializing in magic and pagan titles. He has been interested in the Sepher Rezial Hemelach for many years.

S*epher Rezial Hemelach* is the long-awaited, first English edition of this famous magical text—a translation from the ancient Hebrew in the rare and complete 1701 Amsterdam edition. According to Hebrew legend, the Sepher Rezial was presented to Adam in the Garden of Eden, given by the hand of God, and delivered by the angel Rezial. The myth thus suggests that this is the first book ever written, and is of direct, divine provenance. A diverse compendium of ancient Hebrew magical lore, this book was quite possibly the original source for later traditional literature on angelic hierarchy, astrology, Qabalah, and Gematria. Moses Gaster mentions this in his introduction to The Sword of Moses (1896) suggesting that the Sepher Rezial could be a primary source for many magic and qabalistic books of the Middle Ages.

Sepher Rezial Hemelach is a compilation of five books: "The Book of the Vestment," "The Book of the Great Rezial," "The Holy Names," "The Book of the Mysteries," and "The Book of the Signs of the Zodiac." It includes explanatory text on the holy names of God, the divisions of Heaven and Hell, the names and hierarchy of the angels and spirits, as well as symbolic interpretations of both the Book of Genesis and Sepher Yetzirah. It also includes material on astronomy, astrology, gematria, and various magical talismans, most notably those used for protection during childbirth. In his introduction, Steve Savedow details the history, bibliographical citations, and lineage of this famous work. The release of this contemporary English translation is a landmark event for students of magic and the ancient Hebrew tradition.

HERE are some of the most beautiful songs of peace and joy that the world possesses. Yet their origin, the date of their writing, and the exact meaning of many of the verses remain one of the great literary mysteries.

They have come down to us in a single and very ancient document in Syriac language. Evidently that document is a translation from the original Greek. Critical debate has raged around these Odes; one of the most plausible explanations is that they are songs of newly baptized Christians of the First Century.

They are strangely lacking in historical allusions. Their radiance is no reflection of other days. They do not borrow from either the Old Testament or the Gospels. The inspiration of these verses is first-hand. They remind you of Aristides' remark, "A new people with whom something Divine is mingled." Here is vigor and insight to which we can find parallels only in the most exalted parts of the Scriptures.

For these dazzling mystery odes, we owe our translation to J. Rendel Harris, MA., Hon. Fellow of Clare College, Cambridge. He says about them: "There does not seem to be anything about which everyone seem agreed unless it be that the Odes are of singular beauty and high spiritual value."

ODE 1

1 The Lord is on my head like a crown, and I shall not be without Him.

2 They wove for me a crown of truth, and it caused thy branches to bud in me.

3 For it is not like a withered crown which buddeth not: but thou livest upon my head, and thou hast blossomed upon my head.

4 Thy fruits are full-grown and perfect, they are full of thy salvation.

ODE 2

(No part of this Ode has ever been identified.)

ODE 3

The first words of this Ode have disappeared.

1 . . . I put on:

2 And his members are with him.
And on them do I stand, and He loves me:

3 For I should not have known how to love the Lord, if He had not loved me.

4 For who is able to distinguish love, except the one that is loved?

5 I love the Beloved, and my soul loves Him:

6 And where His rest is, there also am I;

7 And I shall be no stranger, for with the Lord Most High and Merciful there is no grudging.

8 I have been united to Him, for the Lover has found the Beloved,

9 And because I shall love Him that, is the Son, I shall become a son;

10 For he that is joined to Him that is immortal, will also himself become immortal;

11 And he who has pleasure in the Living One, will become living.

12 This is the Spirit of the Lord, which doth not lie, which teacheth the sons of men to know His ways.

13 Be wise and understanding and vigilant. Hallelujah.

ODE 4

This Ode is important because of the historical allusion with which it commences. This may refer to the closing of the temple at Leontopolis in Egypt which would date this writing about 73 A. D.

1 No man, O my God, changeth thy holy place;

2 And it is not (possible) that he should change it and put it in another place: because he hath no power over it:

3 For thy sanctuary thou hast designed before thou didst make (other) places:

4 That which is the older shall not be altered by those that are younger than itself.

5 Thou has given thy heart, O Lord, to thy believers: never wilt thou fail, nor be without fruits:

6 For one hour of thy Faith is more precious than all days and years.

7 For who is there that shall put on thy grace, and be hurt?

8 For thy seal is known: and thy creatures know it: and thy (heavenly) hosts possess it: and the elect archangels are clad with it.

9 Thou hast given us thy fellowship: it was not that thou wast in need of us: but that we are in need of thee:

10 Distill thy dews upon us and open thy rich fountains that pour forth to us milk and honey:

11 For there is no repentance with thee that thou shouldest repent of anything that thou hast promised:

12 And the end was revealed before thee: for what thou gavest, thou gavest freely:

13 So that thou mayest, not draw them back and take them again:

14 For all was revealed before thee as God, and ordered from the beginning before thee: and thou, O God, hast made all things. Hallelujah.

ODE 5

This Ode has strangely appeared in a speech by Salome in another ancient work called the Pistis Sophia.

1 I will give thanks unto thee, O Lord, because I love thee;

2 O Most High, thou wilt not forsake me, for thou art my hope:

3 Freely I have received thy grace, I shall live thereby:

4 My persecutors will come and not see me:

5 A cloud of darkness shall fall on their eyes; and an air of thick gloom shall darken them:

6 And they shall have no light to see: they may not take hold upon me.

7 Let their counsel become thick darkness, and what I have cunningly devised, let it return upon their own heads:

8 For they have devised a counsel, and it did not succeed:

9 For my hope is upon the Lord, and I will not fear, and because the Lord is my salvation, I will not fear:

10 And He is as a garland on my head and I shall not be moved; even if everything should be shaken, I stand firm;

11 And if all things visible should perish, I shall not die; because the Lord is with me and I am with Him. Hallelujah.

ODE 6

First century universalism is revealed in an interesting way in verse 10.

1 As the hand moves over the harp, and the strings speak.

2 So speaks in my members the Spirit of the Lord, and I speak by His love.

3 For it destroys what is foreign, and everything that is bitter:

4 For thus it was from the beginning and will be to the end, that nothing should be His adversary, and nothing should stand up against Him.

5 The Lord has multiplied the knowledge of Himself, and is zealous that these things should be known, which by His grace have been given to us.

6 And the praise of His name He gave us: our spirits praise His holy Spirit.

7 For there went forth a stream and became a river great and broad;

8 For it flooded and broke up everything and it brought (water) to the Temple:

9 And the restrainers of the children of men were not able to restrain it, nor the arts of those whose business it is to restrain waters;

10 For it spread over the face of the whole earth, and filled everything: and all the thirsty upon earth were given to drink of it;

11 And thirst was relieved and quenched: for from the Most High the draught was given.

12 Blessed then are the ministers of that draught who are entrusted with that water of His:

13 They have assuaged the dry lips, and the will that had fainted they have raised up;

14 And souls that were near departing they have caught back from death:

15 And limbs that had fallen they straightened and set up:

16 They gave strength for their feebleness and light to their eyes:

17 For everyone knew them in the Lord, and they lived by the water of life for ever. Hallelujah.

ODE 7

A wonderfully, simple and joyful psalm on the Incarnation.

1 As the impulse of anger against evil, so is the impulse of joy over what is lovely, and brings in of its fruits without restraint:

2 My joy is the Lord and my impulse is toward Him: this path of mine is excellent:

3 For I have a helper, the Lord.

4 He hath caused me to know Himself, without grudging, by His simplicity: His kindness has humbled His greatness.

5 He became like me, in order that I might receive Him:

6 He was reckoned like myself in order that I might put Him on;

7 And I trembled not when I saw Him: because He was gracious to me:

8 Like my nature He became that I might learn Him and like my form, that I might not turn back from Him:

9 The Father of knowledge is the word of knowledge:

10 He who created wisdom is wiser than His works:

11 And He who created me when yet I was not knew what I should do when I came into being:

12 Wherefore He pitied me in His abundant grace: and granted me to ask from Him and to receive from His sacrifice:

13 Because He it is that is incorrupt, the fulness of the ages and the Father of them.

14 He hath given Him to be seen of them that are His, in order that they may recognize Him that made them: and that they might not suppose that they came of themselves:

15 For knowledge He hath appointed as its way, He hath widened it and extended it; and brought to all perfection;

16 And set over it the traces of His light, and I walked therein from the beginning even to the end.

17 For by Him it was wrought, and He was resting in the Son, and for its salvation He will take hold of everything;

18 And the Most High shall be known in His Saints, to announce to those that have songs of the coming of the Lord;

19 That they may go forth to meet Him, and may sing to Him with joy and with the harp of many tones:

20 The seers shall come before Him and they shall be seen before Him, 21 And they shall praise the Lord for His love: because He is near and beholdeth.

22 And hatred shall be taken from the earth, and along with jealousy it shall be drowned:

23 For ignorance hath been destroyed, because the knowledge of the Lord hath arrived.

24 They who make songs shall sing the grace of the Lord Most High;

25 And they shall bring their songs, and their heart shall be like the day: and like the excellent beauty of the Lord their pleasant song:

26 And there shall neither be anything that breathes without knowledge, nor any that is dumb:

27 For He hath given a mouth to His creation, to open the voice of the mouth towards Him, to praise Him:

28 Confess ye His power, and show forth His grace. Hallelujah.

ODE 8

Note the sudden transition from the person of the Psalmist to the person of the Lord (v. 10). This is like the canonical Psalter in style.

1 Open ye, open ye your hearts to the exultation of the Lord:

2 And let your love be multiplied from the heart and even to the lips,

3 To bring forth fruit to the Lord [fruit], holy [fruit], and to talk with watchfulness in His light.

4 Rise up, and stand erect, ye who sometime were brought low:

5 Tell forth ye who were in silence, that your mouth hath been opened.

6 Ye, therefore, that were despised, be henceforth lifted up, because your righteousness hath been exalted.

7 For the right hand of the Lord is with you: and He is your helper:

8 And peace was prepared for you, before ever your war was.

9 Hear the word of truth, and receive the knowledge of the Most High.

10 Your flesh has not known what I am saying to you neither have your hearts known what I am showing to you.

11 Keep my secret, ye who are kept by it:

12 Keep my faith, ye who are kept by it.

13 And understand my knowledge, ye who know me in truth.

14 Love me with affection, ye who love:

15 For I do not turn away my face from them that are mine;

16 For I know them, and before they came into being I took knowledge of them, and on their faces I set my seal:

17 I fashioned their members: my own breasts I prepared for them, that they might drink my holy milk and live thereby.

18 I took pleasure in them and am not ashamed of them:

19 For my workmanship are they and the strength of my thoughts:

20 Who then shall rise up against my handiwork, or who is there that is not subject to them?

21 I willed and fashioned mind and heart: and they are mine, and by my own right hand I set my elect ones:

22 And my righteousness goeth before them and they shall not be deprived of my name, for it is with them.

23 Ask, and abound and abide in the love of the Lord,

24 And yet beloved ones in the Beloved: those who are kept, in Him that liveth:

25 And they that are saved in Him that was saved;

26 And ye shall be found incorrupt in all ages to the name of your Father. Hallelujah.

ODE 9

We shall never know surely whether the wars referred to here are spiritual or actual outward wars.

1 Open your ears and I will speak to you. Give me your souls that I may also give you my soul,

2 The word of the Lord and His good pleasures, the holy thought which He has devised concerning his Messiah.

3 For in the will of the Lord is your salvation, and His thought is everlasting life; and your end is immortality.

4 Be enriched in God the Father, and receive the thought of the Most High.

5 Be strong and be redeemed by His grace.

6 For I announce to you peace, to you His saints;

7 That none of those who hear may fall in war, and that those again who have known Him may not perish, and that those who receive may not be ashamed.

8 An everlasting crown for ever is Truth. Blessed are they who set it on their heads:

9 A stone of great price is it; and there have been wars on account of the crown.

10 And righteousness hath taken it and hath given it to you.

11 Put on the crown in the true covenant of the Lord.

12 And all those who have conquered shall be written in His book.

13 For their book is victory which is yours. And she (Victory) sees you before her and wills that you shall be saved. Hallelujah.

ODE 10

A vigorous little Ode in which Christ Himself is the speaker.

1 The Lord hath directed my mouth by His word: and He hath opened my heart by His light: and He hath caused to dwell in me His deathless life;

2 And gave me that I might speak the fruit of His peace:

3 To convert the souls of them who are willing to come to Him; and to lead captive a good captivity for freedom.

4 I was strengthened and made mighty and took the world captive;

5 And it became to me for the praise of the Most High, and of God my Father.

6 And the Gentiles were gathered together who were scattered abroad.

7 And I was unpolluted by my love for them, because they confessed me in high places: and the traces of the light were set upon their heart:

8 And they walked in my life and were saved and became my people for ever and ever. Hallelujah.

ODE 11

A beautiful sketch of Paradise regained and the blessedness of those who have returned to the privileges of the fallen Adam.

1 My heart was cloven and its flower appeared; and grace sprang up in it: and it brought forth fruit to the Lord,

2 For the Most High clave my heart by His Holy Spirit and searched my affection towards Him: and filled me with His love.

3 And His opening of me became my salvation; and I ran in His way in His peace, even in the way of truth:

4 From the beginning and even to the end I acquired His knowledge:

5 And I was established upon the rock of truth, where He had set me up:

6 And speaking waters touched my lips from the fountain of the Lord plenteously:

7 And I drank and was inebriated with the living water that doth not die;

8 And my inebriation was not one without knowledge, but I forsook vanity and turned to the Most High my God,

9 And I was enriched by His bounty, and I forsook the folly which is diffused over the earth; and I stripped it off and cast it from me:

10 And the Lord renewed me in His raiment, and possessed me by His light, and from above He gave me rest in incorruption;

11 And I became like the land which blossoms and rejoices in its fruits:

12 And the Lord was like the sun shining on the face of the land;

13 He lightened my eyes, and my face received the dew; and my nostrils enjoyed the pleasant odour of the Lord;

14 And He carried me to His Paradise; where is the abundance of the pleasure of the Lord;

15 And I worshipped the Lord on account of His glory; and I said, Blessed, O Lord, are they who are planted in thy land! and those who have a place in thy Paradise;

16 And they grow by the fruits of the trees. And they have changed from darkness to light.

17 Behold! all thy servants are fair, who do good works, and turn away from wickedness to the pleasantness that is thine:

18 And they have turned back the bitterness of the trees from them, when they were planted in thy, land;

19 And everything became like a relic of thyself, and memorial for ever of thy faithful works.

20 For there is abundant room in thy Paradise, and nothing is useless therein;

21 But everything is filled with fruit; glory be to thee, O God, the delight of Paradise for ever. Halle-lujah.

ODE 12

An exceptionally high level of spiritual thought.

1 He hath filled me with words of truth; that I may speak the same;

2 And like the flow of waters flows truth from my mouth, and my lips show forth His fruit.

3 And He has caused His knowledge to abound in me, because the mouth of the Lord is the true Word, and the door of His light;

4 And the Most High hath given it to His words, which are the interpreters of His own beauty, and the repeaters of His praise, and the confessors of His counsel, and the heralds of His thought, and the chasteners of His servants.

5 For the swiftness of the Word is inexpressible, and like its expression is its swiftness and force;

6 And its course knows no limit. Never doth it fail, but it stands sure, and it knows not descent nor the way of it.

7 For as its work is, so is its end: for it is light and the dawning of thought;

8 And by it the worlds talk one to the other; and in the Word there were those that were silent;

9 And from it came love and concord; and they spake one to the other whatever was theirs; and they were penetrated by the Word;

10 And they knew Him who made them, because they were in concord; for the mouth of the Most High spake to them; and His explanation ran by means of it:

11 For the dwelling-place of the Word is man: and its truth is love.

12 Blessed are they who by means thereof have understood everything, and have known the Lord in His truth. Hallelujah.

ODE 13

A strange little Ode.

1 Behold! the Lord is our mirror: open the eyes and see them in Him: and learn the manner of your face:

2 And tell forth praise to His spirit: and wipe off the filth from your face: and love His holiness and clothe yourselves therewith:

3 And be without stain at all times before Him. Hallelujah.

ODE 14

This Ode is as beautiful in style as the canonical Psalter.

1 As the eyes of a son to his father, so are my eyes, O Lord, at all times towards thee.

2 For with thee are my consolations and my delight.

3 Turn not away thy mercies from me, O Lord: and take not thy kindness from me.

4 Stretch out to me, O Lord, at all times thy right hand: and be my guide even unto the end, according to thy good pleasure.

5 Let me be well-pleasing before thee, because of thy glory and because of thy name:

6 Let me be preserved from evil, and let thy meekness, O Lord, abide with me, and the fruits of thy love.

7 Teach me the Psalms of thy truth, that I may bring forth fruit in thee:

8 And open to me the harp of thy Holy Spirit, that with all its notes I may praise thee, O Lord.

9 And according to the multitude of thy tender mercies, so thou shalt give to me; and hasten to grant our petitions; and thou art able for all our needs. Hallelujah.

ODE 15

One of the loveliest Odes in this unusual collection.

1 As the sun is the joy to them that seek for its daybreak, so is my joy the Lord;

2 Because He is my Sun and His rays have lifted me up; and His light hath dispelled all darkness from my face.

3 In Him I have acquired eyes and have seen His holy day:

4 Ears have become mine and I have heard His truth.

5 The thought of knowledge hath been mine, and I have been delighted through Him.

6 The way of error I have left, and have walked towards Him and have received salvation from Him, without grudging.

7 And according to His bounty He hath given to me, and according to His excellent beauty He hath made me.

8 I have put on incorruption through His name: and have put oft corruption by His grace.

9 Death hath been destroyed before my face: and Sheol hath been abolished by my word:

10 And there hath gone up deathless life in the Lord's land, 11 And it hath been made known to His faithful ones, and hath been given without stint to all those that trust in Him. Hallelujah.

ODE 16

The beauty of God's creation.

1 As the work of the husbandman is the ploughshare: and the work of the steersman is the guidance of the ship:

2 So also my work is the Psalm of the Lord: my craft and my occupation are in His praises:

3 Because His love hath nourished my heart, and even to my lips His fruits He poured out.

4 For my love is the Lord, and therefore I will sing unto Him:

5 For I am made strong in His praise, and I have faith in Him.

6 I will open my mouth and His spirit will utter in me the glory of the Lord and His beauty; the work of His hands and the operation of His fingers:

7 The multitude of His mercies and the strength of His word.

8 For the word of the Lord searches out all things, both the invisible and that which reveals His thought;

9 For the eye sees His works, and the ear hears His thought;

10 He spread out the earth and He settled the waters in the sea:

11 He measured the heavens and fixed the stars: and He established the creation and set it up:

12 And He rested from His works:

13 And created things run in their courses, and do their works:

14 And they know not how to stand and be idle; and His heavenly hosts are subject to His word.

15 The treasure-chamber of the light is the sun, and the treasury of the darkness is the night:

16 And He made the sun for the day that it may be bright, but night brings darkness over the face of the land;

17 And their alternations one to the other speak the beauty of God:

18 And there is nothing that is without the Lord; for He was before any thing came into being:

19 And the worlds were made by

His word, and by the thought of His heart. Glory and honour to His name. Hallelujah.

ODE 17

A peculiar change of personality, scarcely realized until the return from it in the last verse.

1 I was crowned by my God: my crown is living;

2 And I was justified in my Lord: my incorruptible salvation is He.

3 I was loosed from vanity, and I was not condemned:

4 The choking bonds were cut off by her hands: I received the face and the fashion of a new person: and I walked in it and was saved;

5 And the thought of truth led me on. And I walked after it and did not wander:

6 And all that have seen me were amazed: and I was regarded by them as a strange person:

7 And He who knew and brought me up is the Most High in all His perfection. And He glorified me by His kindness, and raised my thoughts to the height of His truth.

8 And from thence He gave me the way of His precepts and I opened the doors that were closed,

9 And brake in pieces the bars of iron; but my iron melted and dissolved before me;

10 Nothing appeared closed to me: because I was the door of everything.

11 And I went over all my bondmen to loose them; that I might not leave any man bound or binding:

12 And I imparted my knowledge without grudging: and my prayer was in my love:

13 And I sowed my fruits in hearts, and transformed them into myself:

and they received my blessing and lived;

14 And they were gathered to me and were saved; because they were to me as my own members and I was their head. Glory to thee our head, the Lord Messiah. Hallelujah.

ODE 18

A man who had a spiritual experience brings a message.

1 My heart was lifted up in the love of the Most High and was enlarged: that I might praise Him for His name's sake.

2 My members were strengthened that they might not fall from His strength.

3 Sickesses removed from my body, and it stood to the Lord by His will. For His kingdom is true.

4 O Lord, for the sake of them that are deficient do not remove thy word from me!

5 Neither for the sake of their works do thou restrain from me thy perfection!

6 Let not the luminary be conquered by the darkness; nor let truth flee away from falsehood.

7 Thou wilt appoint me to victory; our Salvation is thy right hand. And thou wilt receive men from all quarters.

8 And thou wilt preserve whosoever is held in evils:

9 Thou art my God. Falsehood and death are not in thy mouth:

10 For thy will is perfection; and vanity thou knowest not,

11 Nor does it know thee.

12 And error thou knowest not,

13 Neither does it know thee.

14 And ignorance appeared like a blind man; and like the foam of the sea,

15 And they supposed of that vain thing that it was something great;

16 And they too came in likeness of it and became vain; and those have understood who have known and meditated;

17 And they have not been corrupt in their imagination; for such were in the mind of the Lord;

18 And they mocked at them that were walking in error;

19 And they spake truth from the inspiration which the Most High breathed into them; Praise and great comeliness to His name Hallelujah.

ODE 19

Fantastic and not in harmony with the other Odes. The reference to a painless Virgin Birth is notable.

1 A cup of milk was offered to me: and I drank it in the sweetness of the delight of the Lord.

2 The Son is the cup, and He who was milked is the Father:

3 And the Holy Spirit milked Him: because His breasts were full, and it was necessary for Him that His milk should be sufficiently released;

4 And the Holy Spirit opened His bosom and mingled the milk from the two breasts of the Father; and gave the mixture to the world without their knowing:

5 And they who receive in its fullness are the ones on the right hand.

6 The Spirit opened the womb of the Virgin and she received conception and brought forth; and the Virgin became a Mother with many mercies;

7 And she travailed and brought forth a Son, without incurring pain;

8 And because she was not sufficiently prepared, and she had not sought a midwife (for He brought her to bear) she brought forth, as if she were a man, of her own will;

9 And she brought Him forth openly, and acquired Him with great dignity,

10 And loved Him in His swaddling clothes and guarded Him kindly, and showed Him in Majesty. Hallelujah.

ODE 20

A mixture of ethics and mysticism; of the golden rule and the tree of life.

1 I am a priest of the Lord, and to Him I do priestly service: and to Him I offer the sacrifice of His thought.

2 For His thought is not like the thought of the world nor the thought of the flesh, nor like them that serve carnally.

3 The sacrifice of the Lord is righteousness, and purity of heart and lips.

4 Present your reins before Him blamelessly: and let not thy heart do violence to heart, nor thy soul to soul.

5 Thou shalt not acquire a stranger by the price of thy silver, neither shalt thou seek to devour thy neighbour,

6 Neither shalt thou deprive him of the covering of his nakedness.

7 But put on the grace of the Lord without stint; and come into His Paradise and make thee a garland from its tree,

8 And put it on thy head and be glad; and recline on His rest, and glory shall go before thee, 9 And thou shalt receive of His kindness and of His grace; and thou shalt be flourishing in truth in the praise of His holiness. Praise and honour be to His name. Hallelujah.

ODE 21

A remarkable explanation of the "coats of skin" in the third chapter of Genesis.

2 And I put off darkness and clothed myself with light,

3 And my soul acquired a body free from sorrow or affliction or pains.

4 And increasingly helpful to me was the thought of the Lord, and His fellowship in incorruption:

5 And I was lifted up in His light; and I served before Him,

6 And I became near to Him, praising and confessing Him;

7 My heart ran over and was found in my mouth: and it arose upon my lips; and the exultation of the Lord increased on my face, and His praise likewise. Hallelujah.

ODE 22

Like the Psalms of David in their exultation because of freedom.

1 He who brought me down from on high, also brought me up from the regions below;

2 And He who gathers together the things that are betwixt is He also who cast me down:

3 He who scattered my enemies had existed from ancient and my adversaries:

4 He who gave me authority over bonds that I might loose them;

5 He that overthrew by my hands the dragon with seven heads: and thou hast set me over his roots that I might destroy his seed.

6 Thou wast there and didst help me, and in every place thy name was a rampart me

7 Thy right hand destroyed his wicked poison; and thy hand levelled the way for those who believe in thee.

8 And thou didst choose them from the graves and didst separate them from the dead.

9 Thou didst take dead bones and didst cover them with bodies.

10 They were motionless, and thou didst give them energy for life.

11 Thy way was without corruption, and thy face; thou didst bring thy world to corruption: that everything might be dissolved, and then renewed,

12 And that the foundation for everything might be thy rock: and on it thou didst build thy kingdom; and it became the dwelling place of the saints. Hallelujah.

ODE 23

The reference to the sealed document sent by God is one of the great mysteries of the collection.

1 Joy is of the saints! and who shall put it on, but they alone?

2 Grace is of the elect! and who shall receive it except those who trust in it from the beginning?

3 Love is of the elect? And who shall put it on except those who have possessed it from the beginning?

4 Walk ye in the knowledge of the Most High without grudging: to His exultation and to the perfection of His knowledge.

5 And His thought was like a letter; His will descended from on high, and it was sent like an arrow which is violently shot from the bow:

6 And many hands rushed to the letter to seize it and to take and read it:

7 And it escaped their fingers and they were affrighted at it and at the seal that was upon it.

8 Because it was not permitted to them to loose its seal: for the power that was over the seal was greater than they.

9 But those who saw it went after the letter that they might know where it would alight, and who should read it and who should hear it.

10 But a wheel received it and came over it:

11 And there was with it a sign of the Kingdom and of the Government:

12 And everything which tried to move the wheel it mowed and cut down:

13 And it gathered the multitude of adversaries, and bridged the rivers and crossed over and rooted up many forests and made a broad path.

14 The head went down to the feet, for down to the feet ran the wheel, and that which was a sign upon it.

15 The letter was one of command, for there were included in it all districts;

16 And there was seen at its head, the head which was revealed even the Son of Truth from the Most High Father, 17 And He inherited and took possession of everything. And the thought of many was brought to nought.

18 And all the apostates hasted and fled away. And those who persecuted and were enraged became extinct.

19 And the letter was a great volume, which was wholly written by the finger of God:

20 And the name of the Father was on it, and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, to rule for ever and ever. Hallelujah.

ODE 24

The mention of the Dove refers to a lost Gospel to which there are rare references in ancient writings.

1 The Dove fluttered over the Messiah, because He was her head; and she sang over Him and her voice was heard:

2 And the inhabitants were afraid and the sojourners were moved:

3 The birds dropped their wings and all creeping things died in their holes: and the abysses were opened which had been hidden; and they cried to the Lord like women in travail:

4 And no food was given to them, because it did not belong to them;

5 And they sealed up the abysses with the seal of the Lord. And they perished, in the thought, those that had existed from ancient times;

6 For they were corrupt from the beginning; and the end of their corruption was life:

7 And every one of them that was imperfect perished: for it was not possible to give them a word that they might remain:

8 And the Lord destroyed the imaginations of all them that had not the truth with them.

9 For they who in their hearts were lifted up were deficient in wisdom, and so they were rejected, because the truth was not with them.

10 For the Lord disclosed His way, and spread abroad His grace: and those who understood it, know His holiness. Hallelujah.

ODE 25

Back again to personal experience.

1 I was rescued from my bonds and unto thee, my God, I fled:

2 For thou art the right hand of my Salvation and my helper.

3 Thou hast restrained those that rise up against me,

4 And I shall see him no more: because thy face was with me, which saved me by thy grace.

5 But I was despised and rejected in the eye of many: and I was in their eyes like lead,

6 And strength was mine from thyself and help.

7 Thou didst set me a lamp at my right hand and at my left: and in me there shall be nothing that is not bright:

8 And I was clothed with the covering of thy Spirit, and thou didst remove from me my raiment of skin;

9 For thy right hand lifted me up and removed sickness from me:

10 And I became mighty in: the truth, and holy by thy righteousness; and all my adversaries were afraid of me;

11 And I became admirable by the name of the Lord, and was justified by His gentleness, and His rest is for ever and ever. Hallelujah.

ODE 26

Remarkable praise.

1 I poured out praise to the Lord, for I am His:

2 And I will speak His holy song, for my heart is with Him.

3 For His harp is in my hands, and the Odes of His rest shall not be silent.

4 I will cry unto him from my whole heart: I will praise and exalt Him with all my members.

5 For from the east and even to the west is His praise:

6 And from the south and even to the north is the confession of Him:

7 And from the top of the hills to their utmost bound is His perfection.

8 Who can write the Psalms of the Lord, or who read them?

9 Or who can train his soul for life, that his soul may be saved,

10 Or who can rest on the Most High, so that with His mouth he may speak?

11 Who is able to interpret the wonders of the Lord?

12 For he who could interpret would be dissolved and would become that which is interpreted.

13 For it suffices to know and to rest: for in rest the singers stand, 14 Like a river which has an abundant fountain, and flows to the help of them that seek it. Hallelujah.

ODE 27

The human body makes a cross when a man stands erect in prayer with arms outstretched.

1 I stretched out my hands and sanctified my Lord:

2 For the extension of my hands is His sign:

3 And my expansion is the upright tree [or cross].

ODE 28

This Ode is a musical gem.

1 As the wings of doves over their nestlings; and the mouth of their nestlings towards their mouths.

2 So also are the wings of the Spirit over my heart:

3 My heart is delighted and exults:

like the babe who exults in the womb of his mother:

4 I believed; therefore I was at rest; for faithful is He in whom I have believed:

5 He has richly blessed me and my head is with Him: and the sword shall not divide me from Him, nor the scimitar;

6 For I am ready before destruction comes; and I have been set on His immortal pinions:

7 And He showed me His sign: forth and given me to drink, and from that life is the spirit within me, and it cannot die, for it lives.

8 They who saw me marvelled at me, because I was persecuted, and they supposed that I was swallowed up: for I seemed to them as one of the lost;

9 And my oppression became my salvation; and I was their reprobation because there was no zeal in me;

10 Because I did good to every man I was hated,

11 And they came round me like mad dogs, who ignorantly attack their masters, 12 For their thought is corrupt and their understanding perverted.

13 But I was carrying water in my right hand, and their bitterness I endured by my sweetness;

14 And I did not perish, for I was not their brother nor was my birth like theirs.

15 And they sought for my death and did not find it: for I was older than the memorial of them;

16 And vainly did they make attack upon me and those who, without reward, came after me:

17 They sought to destroy the memorial of him who was before them.

18 For the thought of the Most High cannot be anticipated; and His heart is superior to all wisdom. Hallelujah.

ODE 29

Again reminiscent of the Psalms, of David.

1 The Lord is my hope: in Him I shall not be confounded.

2 For according to His praise He made me, and according to His goodness even so He gave unto me:

3 And according to His mercies He exalted me: and according to His excellent beauty He set me on high:

4 And brought me up out of the depths of Sheol: and from the mouth of death He drew me:

5 And thou didst lay my enemies low, and He justified me by His grace.

6 For I believed in the Lord's Messiah: and it appeared to me that He is the Lord;

7 And He showed him His sign: and He led me by His light, and gave me the rod of His power;

8 That I might subdue the imaginations of the peoples; and the power of the men of might to bring them low:

9 To make war by His word, and to take victory by His power.

10 And the Lord overthrew my enemy by His word: and he became like the stubble which the wind carries away;

11 And I gave praise to the Most High because He exalted me His servant and the son of His handmaid. Hallelujah.

ODE 30

An invitation to the thirsty.

1 Fill ye waters for yourselves from the living fountain of the Lord, for it is opened to you:

2 And come all ye thirsty, and take the draught; and rest by the fountain of the Lord.

3 For fair it is and pure and gives rest to the soul. Much more pleasant are its waters than honey;

4 And the honeycomb of bees is not to be compared with it.

5 For it flows forth from the lips of the Lord and from the heart of the Lord is its name.

6 And it came infinitely and invisibly: and until it was set in the midst they did not know it:

7 Blessed are they who have drunk therefrom and have found rest thereby. Hallelujah.

ODE 31

A song that Marcus Aurelius might have known when he said "Be like the promontory against which the waves continually break."

1 The abysses were dissolved before the Lord: and darkness was destroyed by His appearance:

2 Error went astray and perished at His hand: and folly found no path to walk in, and was submerged by the truth of the Lord.

3 He opened His mouth and spake grace and joy: and He spake a new song of praise to His name:

4 And He lifted up His voice to the Most High, and offered to Him the sons that were with Him.

5 And His face was justified, for thus His holy Father had given to Him.

6 Come forth, ye that have been afflicted and receive joy, and possess your souls by His grace; and take to you immortal life.

7 And they made me a debtor when

I rose up, me who had been a debtor: and they divided my spoil, though nothing was due to them.

8 But I endured and held my peace and was silent, as if not, moved by them.

9 But I stood unshaken like a firm rock which is beaten by the waves and endures.

10 And I bore their bitterness for humility's sake:

11 In order, that I might redeem my people, and inherit it and that I might not make void my promises to the fathers, to whom I promised the salvation of their seed. Hallelujah.

ODE 32

Joy and light.

1 To the blessed there is joy from their hearts, and light from Him that dwells in them:

2 And words from the Truth, who was self-originate: for He is strengthened by the holy power of the Most High: and He is unperturbed for ever and ever. Hallelujah.

ODE 33

A virgin stands and proclaims (v. 5).

1 Again Grace ran and forsook corruption, and came down in Him to bring it to nought;

2 And He destroyed perdition from before Him, and devastated all its order;

3 And He stood on a lofty summit and uttered His voice from one end of the earth to the other:

4 And drew to Him all those who obeyed Him; and there did not appear as it were an evil person.

5 But there stood a perfect virgin who was proclaiming and calling and saying,

6 O ye sons of men, return ye, and ye daughters of men, come ye:

7 And forsake the ways of that corruption and draw near unto me, and I will enter into you, and will bring you forth from perdition,

8 And make you wise in the ways of truth: that you be not destroyed nor perish:

9 Hear ye me and be redeemed. For the grace of God I am telling among you: and by my means you shall be redeemed and become blessed.

10 I am your judge; and they who have put me on shall not be injured: but they shall possess the new world that is incorrupt:

11 My chosen ones walk in me, and my ways I will make known to them that seek me, and I will make them trust in my name. Hallelujah.

ODE 34

True poetry—pure and simple.

1 No way is hard where there is a simple heart.

2 Nor is there any wound where the thoughts are upright:

3 Nor is there any storm in the depth of the illuminated thought:

4 Where one is surrounded on every side by beauty, there is nothing that is divided.

5 The likeness of what is below is that which is above; for everything is above: what is below is nothing but the imagination of those that are without knowledge.

6 Grace has been revealed for your salvation. Believe and live and be saved. Hallelujah.

ODE 35

"No cradled child more softly lies than I: come soon, eternity."

1 The dew of the Lord in quietness

He distilled upon me:

2 And the cloud of peace He caused to rise over my head, which guarded me continually;

3 It was to me for salvation: everything was shaken and they were affrighted;

4 And there came forth from them a smoke and a judgment; and I was keeping quiet in the order of the Lord:

5 More than shelter was He to me, and more than foundation.

6 And I was carried like a child by his mother: and He gave me milk, the dew of the Lord:

7 And I grew great by His bounty, and rested in His perfection,

8 And I spread out my hands in the lifting up of my soul: and I was made right with the Most High, and I was redeemed with Him. Hallelujah.

ODE 36

Theologians have never agreed on an explanation of this perplexing Ode.

1 I rested in the Spirit of the Lord: and the Spirit raised me on high:

2 And made me stand on my feet in the height of the Lord, before His perfection and His glory, while I was praising Him by the composition of His songs.

3 The Spirit brought me forth before the face of the Lord: and, although a son of man, I was named the Illuminate, the Son of God:

4 While I praised amongst the praising ones, and great was I amongst the mighty ones.

5 For according to the greatness of the Most High, so He made me: and like His own newness He renewed me; and He anointed me from His own perfection:

6 And I became one of His Neighbours; and my mouth was opened, like a cloud of dew,

7 And my heart poured out as it were a gushing stream of righteousness,

8 And my access to Him was in peace; and I was established by the Spirit of His government. Hallelujah.

ODE 37

An elementary Ode.

1 I stretched out my hands to my Lord: and to the Most I High I raised my voice:

2 And I spake with the lips of my heart; and He heard me, when my voice reached I Him:

3 His answer came to me, and gave me the fruits of my labours;

4 And it gave me rest by the grace of the Lord. Hallelujah.

ODE 38

A beautiful description of the power of truth.

1 I went up to the light of truth as if into a chariot:

2 And the Truth took me and led me: and carried me across pits and gulleys; and from the rocks and the waves it preserved me:

3 And it became to me a haven of Salvation: and set me on the arms of immortal life:

4 And it went with me and made me rest, and suffered me not to wander, because it was the Truth;

5 And I ran no risk, because I walked with Him;

6 And I did not make an error in anything because I obeyed the Truth.

7 For Error flees away from it, and meets it not: but the Truth proceeds in the right path, and 8 Whatever I did not know, it made clear to me, all the poisons of error, and the plagues of death which they think to be sweetness:

9 And I saw the destroyer of destruction, when the bride who is corrupted is adorned: and the bridegroom who corrupts and is corrupted;

10 And I asked the Truth 'Who are these?'; and He said to me, 'This is the deceiver and the error:

11 And they are alike in the beloved and in his bride: and they lead astray and corrupt the whole world:

12 And they invite many to the banquet,

13 And give them to drink of the wine of their intoxication, and remove their wisdom and knowledge, and so they make them without intelligence;

14 And then they leave them; and then these go about like madmen corrupting: seeing that they are without heart, nor do they seek for it!

15 And I was made wise so as not to fall into the hands of the deceiver; and I congratulated myself because the Truth went with me,

16 And I was established and lived and was redeemed,

17 And my foundations were laid on the hand of the Lord: because He established me.

18 For He set the root and watered it and fixed it and blessed it; and its fruits are for ever.

19 It struck deep and sprung up and spread out, and was full and enlarged;

20 And the Lord alone was glorified in His planting and in His husbandry: by His care and by the blessing of His lips,

21 By the beautiful planting of His right hand: and by the discovery of His planting, and by the thought of His mind. Hallelujah.

ODE 39

One of the few allusions to events in the Gospels—that of our Lord walking on the Sea of Galilee.

1 Great rivers are the power of the Lord:

2 And they carry headlong those who despise Him: and entangle their paths:

3 And they sweep away their fords, and catch their bodies and destroy their lives.

4 For they are more swift than lightning and more rapid, and those who cross them in faith are not moved;

5 And those who walk on them without blemish shall not be afraid.

6 For the sign in them is the Lord; and the sign is the way of those who cross in the name of the Lord;

7 Put on, therefore, the name of the Most High, and know Him, and you shall cross without danger, for the rivers will be subject to you.

8 The Lord has bridged them by His word; and He walked and crossed them on foot:

9 And His footsteps stand firm on the water, and are not injured; they are as firm as a tree that is truly set up.

10 And the waves were lifted up on this side and on that, but the footsteps of our Lord Messiah stand firm and are not obliterated and are not defaced.

11 And a way has been appointed for those who cross after Him and for those who adhere to the course of faith in Him and worship His name. Hallelujah.

ODE 40

A song of praise without equal.

1 As the honey distills from the comb of the bees,

2 And the milk flows from the woman that loves her children;

3 So also is my hope on Thee, my God.

4 As the fountain gushes out its water,

5 So my heart gushes out the praise of the Lord and my lips utter praise to Him, and my tongue His psalms.

6 And my face exults with His gladness, and my spirit exults in His love, and my soul shines in Him:

7 And reverence confides in Him; and redemption in Him stands assured:

8 And His inheritance is immortal life, and those who participate in it are incorrupt. Hallelujah.

ODE 41

We discover that the writer may be a Gentile (v. 8).

1 All the Lord's children will praise Him, and will collect the truth of His faith.

2 And His children shall be known to Him. Therefore we will sing in His love:

3 We live in the Lord by His grace: and life we receive in His Messiah:

4 For a great day has shined upon us: and marvellous is He who has given us of His glory.

5 Let us, therefore, all of us unite together in the name of the Lord, and let us honour Him in His goodness,

6 And let our faces shine in His light: and let our hearts meditate in His love by night and by day.

7 Let us exult with the joy of the Lord.

8 All those will be astonished that see me. For from another race am I:

9 For the Father of truth remembered me: He who possessed me from the beginning:

10 For His bounty begat me, and the thought of His heart:

11 And His Word is with us in all our way;

12 The Saviour who makes alive and does not reject our souls-;

13 The man who was humbled, and exalted by His own righteousness,

14 The Son of the Most High appeared in the perfection of His Father;

15 And light dawned from the Word that was beforetime in Him;

16 The Messiah is truly one; and He was known before the foundation of the world, 17 That He might save souls for ever by the truth of His name: a new song arises from those who love Him. Hallelujah.

ODE 42

The Odes of Solomon, the Son of David, are ended with the following exquisite verses.

1 I stretched out my hands and approached my Lord:

2 For the stretching of my hands is His sign:

3 My expansion is the outspread tree which was set up on the way of the Righteous One.

4 And I became of no account to those who did not take hold of me; and I shall be with those who love me.

5 All my persecutors are dead; and they sought after me who hoped in me, because I was alive:

6 And I rose up and am with them; and I will speak by their mouths.

7 For they have despised those who persecuted them;

8 And I lifted up over them the yoke of my love;

9 Like the arm of the bridegroom over the bride,

10 So was my yoke over those that know me:

11 And as the couch that is spread in the house of the bridegroom and bride, 12 So is my love over those that believe in me.

13 And I was not rejected though I was reckoned to be so.

14 I did not perish, though they devised it against me.

15 Sheol saw me and was made miserable:

16 Death cast me up, and many along with me.

17 I had gall and bitterness, and I went down with him to the utmost of his depth:

18 And the feet and the head he let go, for they were not able to endure my face:

19 And I made a congregation of living men amongst his dead men, and I spake with them by living lips:

20 Because my word shall not be void:

21 And those who had died ran towards me: and they cried and said, Son of God, have pity on us, and do with us according to thy kindness,

22 And bring us out from the bonds of darkness: and open to us the door by which we shall come out to thee.

23 For we see that our death has not touched thee.

24 Let us also be redeemed with thee: for thou art our Redeemer.

25 And I heard their voice; and my name I sealed upon their heads:

26 For they are free men and they are mine. Hallelujah.

THIS IS THE BOOK OF THE GREAT REZIAL

PART 1

Blessed are the wise by the mysteries coming from the wisdom. Of reverence, the Torah is given to teach the truth to human beings. Of the strength and glory, honor the Skekinethov. The power of the highest and lowest works is the foundation of the glory of Elohim. The secret word is as milk and honey upon the tongue. Let it be to you alone. The teachings are not foreign to you. This book proclaims the secret of Rezial, but only to the humble. Stand in the middle of the day, without provocation and without reward. Learn the tributes of the reverence of Elohim. Turn away from evil and journey on the path to pursue righteousness. The secret is reverence of the Lord. The worthy go directly to the secret. It is written, only reveal the secret of El to serve the prophets.

There are three secrets corresponding to the Torah of the prophets. All secrets correspond to these three. The first commandment is the first wisdom, reverence of the Lord.¹ It is written, reverence of the Lord is the first knowledge. The beginning wisdom is reverence of the Lord, corresponding to three wisdoms.

It is written, of the outer wisdom, rejoice and build the house of wisdom with the secret of the foundation. Be wise by opening the heart to the secret.

There are three kinds of secrets. The secret of the Merkabah [chariot]², the secret of Berashith [in the beginning, or Genesis],³ and the secret of the commandments [the laws of God].⁴ These are made clear by the help of Shaddai.

There are three kinds of reverence of heaven. They are reverence of the Lord, reverence of Shaddai, and reverence of Elohim. It is made clear that reverence of the Lord is to love the name of God and serve in love. It is written, man is happy to revere the Lord. It is not written here of reverence of Elohim, but only of reverence of the Lord.

It is written in the commandments to serve in love. Desire to regard in the heart and keep the commandments. In the commandments, it is said of the reverence of Elohim, revere Elohim, lest [you come] into the hands of temptation. Man is not to serve in temptation, of reverence before the king, not rising up by the name.

It is decreed, as it is written, Abraham was beloved. God spoke to him to lead his son. It is written, you know to revere Elohim. You know of love. Know it is decreed, man is happy not to journey by counsel of wickedness. It is written herein, man is happy to revere the Lord. Show reverence to the heavens all the day. Regard love in the heart. The reverence of the heavens is in the heart at all times, reverence of the purity of the Lord. Those giving reverence are loved by the Lord. There is much value in living in purity. Bathe in the glory of the light of Elohim. Go from darkness into light, divided from those led astray. As the light shines down upon the sea, that is the reverence of Elohim who spoke to Abraham. From love, understanding was created by the love and reverence. A thousand generations come after from the love.

³ Berashith is the name of the first book of the Old Testament, as well as the first word of the book.

⁴ Most people are familiar with the tale of the Ten Commandments, which were handed down to Moses on Mount Sinai after the liberation of the Jews from the land of Egypt. However, in the Old Testament (Exodus 20:2-23:19), there are over sixty commandments that were proclaimed by God to Moses. Also, see Oxford Companion to the Bible, page 736.

It is written in the Midrash of three kinds of offerings. They are the burnt offering [A'volah], the peace offering [Shelomim, or "thank offering"], and the sin offering [Chetath].⁵

There are three classes of righteousness. They are love, petition, and reverence. The burnt offering corresponds to love. The peace offering corresponds to petition. The sin offering corresponds to reverence. The burnt offering is a sacrifice to the glory of God alone. The peace offering and sin offering are for the sake of the living body. Proclaim love from the petition and petition from the reverence. From love, you serve God in righteousness. Give glory and honor to the kingdoms alone before all things. In goodness, the Lord created the universe by the word, not by labor. The God [Haloveh] and father and king is strong and wise, good and compassionate. You tolerate all things, filling all the highest and lowest, sustaining in the high places and bringing forth all creatures. You reveal the mysteries of the universe, the knowledge of good and evil. You tolerate wickedness for the sake of the restoration. Behold, all goodness to the righteous who love God. Give praise and laud over the greatest works.

The burnt offering is sacrifice. By petition, serve in the holy place, blessed is it. Fall in supplication and petition. Petition for every measure of goodness for the sake of the benefit of the body. This is the foundation of wisdom, understanding of knowledge. From this, bring light in the days. Heal the woman unable to conceive and make sons upright in the heart. You succeed in works of wealth and glory and treasures, all to the good. Petition the Lord above, thus sacrifice the peace offering.

Give reverence and serve God in great fear.⁶ Be delivered from curses written in the Torah. The punishment comes forth from the holy place, blessed is it. Its measure is longer than the Earth and wider than the sea.⁷ Receive salvation from affliction, injury, and suffering. Do not writhe in pain. Do not be ruled over by foreign lands. Do not bring death or speak evil. Fill the days in goodness and blessings in the world. Deliver from misfortune and affliction and destruction from the walls of fire in Gihenam. The wicked prepare to burn in flames on the day of the great judgment [Yom Hadin Hagedol]. By reverence of the Lord, rise up by sacrifice of the sin offering. Make three sacrifices: the burnt offering, the peace offering, and the sin offering.

Of sacrifices in the first house [Beth Achad] through the first priest [Kahen Achad] in the name of the one God [El Achad], three times in righteousness: by love, by petition, and by reverence. Complete them and be protected by God, protecting and loving you from petition and reverence.

The beginning wisdom is reverence of the Lord and love of heaven. The heart of the righteous burns as flames of fire. Keep the commandments in reverence of the Lord. This the Lord Elohim requires, not making reward for reverence and love. It is written of reverence and love, the Shem Hamephorash was created from love. Of the written word, this is the reverence of Shaddai. Revere God by keeping every commandment. (Reverence of God is not in itself glory, but keeping every commandment.)

Fall down in supplication and cry out to El. Establish the heart and grant the petition at once. Reject wickedness and condemn the wicked. Forsake reverence of Shaddai. Know to withhold mercy for sins. Forsake the petition, not revering the name of Shaddai, and not making desire or evil grow in the heart. In the middle of the house, the humble show reverence and gather in the house. It is written in the Midrash, withhold the mercy from those forsaking reverence of Shaddai. Stand and serve before God. Show reverence in prayer and receive tranquility therein. Deliver from all evil. Dwell in the secret place of the most high, hidden in the darkness of the shadow of Shaddai. Deliver from the mouth of the trap [the opening of the snare].

Petition in prayer. Speak, protect from traps. In every petition to Shaddai, be blessed by God the father [El Abiek]. By support of El Shaddai, be fruitful and multiply [Pherov Vorebov]. El Shaddai sees and turns away. Behold, be fruitful and multiply. Wherefore be silent, and bring forth from the secret place that the father reveals to you. Establish Shaddai, of sixty, four hundred, thirty and the above [Hebrew: I' AaOLH, or ten burnt offerings] is five hundred.⁸

⁵ There are five kinds of offerings described in the Old Testament (Leviticus 1:1-5:14): the burnt offering, the grain offering, the offering of well-being, the sin offering, and the offering with restitution.

⁷ This reference describes the dimensions of heaven. See Job 11:9.

⁸ The letters S' Th' L' are used here to represent the Gematria.

The man Job begets sons and daughters. There are five hundred of them.⁹ Five hundred strong ones [Aberiem], 248 sons and 252 daughters. There are four more daughters than sons. Thus be fruitful and multiply (Hebrew: PRO ORBO).¹⁰ By Gematria, the letters Tau Qoph are the name over be fruitful and multiply.¹¹

Therefore, establish to petition the name. Thus, the course of the universe is five hundred years. It is treasured by Shaddai as the measure of heaven. Speak of heaven. According to Shaddai, there is not enough to serve. Remember Shaddai by the prophet of the nations seeing Shaddai. Behold the reverence of Shaddai. Be aided by the name Shaddai, protected from the evil spirits [Hamezieqien]. By protection of Shaddai, lodge and speak prayers of supplication. Therefore the name is written upon the Mezuzah.¹² Penetrate the iron over the Mezuzah. Proclaim and remember the name Shaddai to protect from the evil spirits, that is (Hebrew: IHOH BATH BSh MTz'FTz Sh'). Of the letter Shin of Shaddai, Shin is above [or "300 burnt offerings"] in the name of (Hebrew: IHOH). Of Shin above, (Hebrew: BATH BSh ShM HQDSh GDI) corresponds to (Hebrew: ID KOZO BMOK"SZ KOZO) written in the Mezuzah.¹⁴

Reveal the secret of the fourteen signs of the holy name. (Hebrew: KOZO HOIH) in reverse Aleph Beth. Thus Yod upholds Kaph, Kaph upholds Vau, Vau upholds Zayin, and Heh upholds Vau. Thus, (Hebrew: KOZO).

(Hebrew: BMOK"SZ ALHINO). Beth upholds Aleph, Mem upholds Lamed, Vau upholds Heh, Kaph upholds Yod, Teth upholds Nun, Zayin upholds Vau. Here are fourteen signs corresponding to the three names (Hebrew: H' ALHINO). Therefore, write fourteen letters for the sake of the two corresponding to (Hebrew: H' AL-HINO). Write Shaddai with Shin Daleth Yod.

The first Daleth corresponds to the back [or neck]. The Yod of Shaddai corresponds to the fathers, Jacob, Isaac, and Abraham. The final written words are (Hebrew: BATH BSh ShDI).¹⁵ Beth, Shin, Qoph, Daleth, Mem, and Yod.¹⁶ The beginning Yod Yod Aleph is the number of (Hebrew: AHIH) ,¹⁷ When adding the numbers Resh, Tau, Vau, Samekh, Tau,¹⁸ Israel proclaims Jacob to be Resh, Yod, Vau in number.¹⁹ That is to say, take Resh, Tau, Vau, Samekh, Tau, from the fathers, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Israel, here is 203.²⁰ Combine thirteen letters from the three names of the fathers, and here is 210. Thus the signs of the fathers correspond to thirteen tributes.

There are three praises. Of the Aleph before the name are 63 aspects [Bechineth].²¹ Therefore, see the God [El] of Abraham, God of Isaac, and God of Jacob, by El Shaddai. Also the secret of Shaddai is revealed by calculating Tau Qoph. The life of the fathers is 502 years. Abraham lived 175 years. Isaac lived 180 years. Jacob lived 147 years. Together, the years total 502.

Beth [with a value of 2] corresponds to heaven and Earth. In the course of 505 years, the fathers gather to them as the days of the heavens above the Earth. Make clear as the days of the heavens above the Earth. The course is 500 years as the lives of the fathers.

The letter Shin is in the house of prayer. First consider the correspondence to Jacob, that is written Israel.²³ Thus, praise in prayer.

⁹ In the Book of Job of the Old Testament, it is noted that Job had seven sons and three daughters (Job 1:2). This name may also be Joab, who was a general in King David's army. There are a few stories of Joab involving children. In the Midrash, one tale depicts Joab slaying 500 warriors in Kinsali, the Amalekite capital.

¹⁰ The Gematria of the letters of this phrase is 500.

¹¹ Tau is 400; Qoph is 100.

¹² The Mezuzah is a talisman attached to the doorpost. It contains a prayer written on a small scroll. Also, see Trachtenberg, Jewish Magic and Superstition, p. 145.

¹⁴ The name KOZO is considered the antithesis of YHVH, or "Tetragrammaton.*" The numerical value of KOZO is 39. Also, see Joshua Trachtenberg's Jewish Magic and Superstition, p. 92.

¹⁵ The Gematria of these letters is 1019.

¹⁶ The Gematria of these letters is 456.

¹⁷ The Gematria of Yod Yod Aleph is 21. This is the same value as the letters Aleph Heh Yod Heh.

¹⁸ The Gematria of these letters is 1066,

¹⁹ The Gematria of these letters is 216.

²¹ In the text, it appears to read S"G (which is 63), however the lettering is a bit smudged.

²² The numerical value of these two letters is 500.

²³ See Genesis 32-35, where Jacob's name was changed to Israel.

Proclaim the praise, speaking: Praised is the ruler above, and the chosen cast down to Earth. It is written, be cast out from heaven to Earth, the beauty of Israel. Prayers proclaim the glory. By prayer with the letters of glory, stay upon the path of the Lord. Therefore, by the nine fathers [Thesha'ah Bab], give the crown [Apher] in the place of prayer.²⁴ Of the days of the Messiah, give praise below the crown.

It is written in the Book of Formation, the letter Shin reigns.²⁵ Bind to the crown and bind therein the heavens. Therefore, fire resembles Jacob in heaven. By the letter Shin, create fire, and see fire therein. Thus, in the house of Jacob is fire corresponding to the letter Shin, as Jacob wrestled the angel of fire.

Also, the letter Shin has three branches, corresponding to the three names of Jacob, Israel, and Jeschuron [a periphrastic name of Israel]. The letter Shin is over the noble houses [BethiemAtzel].

It is written, the image engraved in the throne of glory resembles the image of a flying cherub. Come forth to Egypt. It is written, fly over as the cherub takes flight. Revere Israel by the hand of the strength. It is written to revere Israel, by the hand of the great grandfather [Seva]. Israel resembles Jacob over the sea. Sing the hymn unto Israel. The Lord reigns forever and ever. Therefore, resemble Jacob, according to the written truth. Give the truth to Jacob. According to this, do not go forth unto carved images [Phesoleth]. The daughter, Dinah, was troubled by Shechem²⁶ and the maiden Aseneth,²⁷ daughter of Potipherah.²⁸ The tribes multiply to put forth the law.²⁹ Do not speak of idolatry. In the house of Jacob, written by Jacob, is the great name [Shem Ha-gadol] and the holy tzietz.³⁰ Take Mikal to become the wife of Potipherah.³¹ Proclaim Joseph to take the daughter.

Around the Shin, twelve prayers divide, corresponding to the twelve tribes. The three divide and three tribes spread out as they go forth from Egypt.

The letter Daleth corresponds to the back [or neck] , corresponding to Isaac. Straighten the back to unite the name of God. Daleth is the flesh of the back. All the flesh of the back corresponds to the back of the neck. Of all the flesh of the back of the neck, wring the neck. Therefore, shave the back, Place the strap upon the flesh. Inquire of Isaac. The letter Daleth is over the head in purple [argeman, a purple or reddish-purple]. Therefore, the letter Daleth corresponds to the neck.

Also, draw above and below, dwelling in the fourth firmament, the name in the Holy Temple [Beth Hamikadesh], thus the holy tabernacle [Meshikan] of four coverings. The first covering is sky-blue [Thekaleth] ,³² The second veil is of goat skin. The third is of ram's leather. The fourth covering is of Egyptian leather [Tachashim, seal, dugong, or badger skin].

In the lowest dwelling, Isaac is sacrificed upon the back of the altar of degrees [Mezabeach Shel Ha'aleh], therefore corresponding to Daleth. It is written in the Book of Formation, reign with Daleth. Bind it tight and create Mars in the fifth firmament.³³ Close 10 the Sun, it receives the heat of the Sun to be dry as fire. Therefore, Daleth corresponds to Isaac, the rising of the Sun. Mars is dry as fire and appointed over heat, and over anger and wrath. Therefore, when God is angry, remember Isaac, as he is honored. It is written, remove the ashes from the burnt offerings.

²⁵ See passage 3:9 of the SepherYetzirah. This is presented on page 155 of Aryeh Kaplan's translation (Sefer Yetzirah (York Beach, ME: Samuel Weiser, 1990)).

²⁶ Dinah was the daughter of Jacob and Leah. Shechem was the name of a province, and the man for whom the province was named, who had raped Leah. Leah and her brothers then took severe revenge upon him. See Genesis 34:1-34:30.

²⁸ Potipherah was the father-in-law of Joseph, and a priest of On.

²⁹ "The twelve tribes of Israel are descended from the twelve sons of Jacob: Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar, Zebulun, Joseph, Benjamin, Dan, Naphtali, Gad, and Asher.

³⁰ The tzietz is a shining plate or talisman worn on the forehead of the rabbi.

³¹ Mikal was the daughter of Saul and wife of David. According to The Oxford Companion to the Bible (p. 546), the wife of Potipherah, Zuleika, attempted to seduce Joseph.

³² This refers to a colored dye obtained from a mussel (helix janthina), termed cerulean purple. However, the term may also mean sky-blue, light blue, or azure.

³³ See SepherYetzirah, 4:9-4:10.

The Yod of Isaac corresponds to Abraham tested by ten trials.³⁴ Give in prayer near the side of the first house over the first name Abraham. It is written in the Book of Formation, the letter Yod reigns. Bind to the crown and create therein Virgo.³⁵ Abraham takes his beloved bride [Sarah] as virgin and form with the letter Yod. The perfection of the Lord [Kalelieh] is separated. Rise over by counsel from the perfection [Kalivoth].³⁶ It is written, rise up to the perfection. It is written in contrast to the counsel, take instruction and correspond to perfection. Give counsel and speak to close friends. The father Abraham did not learn much from the book, but learned perfection is as two fountains or springs of wisdom.

Also, the letter Yod corresponds to Abraham lifting the hand of the Lord God. The Yod corresponds to the heart. It is written, the faithful reach out with the heart.

Also, the Yod corresponds to Abraham, as according to it, God foresees Abraham serves by ten trials. Create the universe by ten commandments. It is written of the history of the heavens and the earth, the name Abram became Abraham.³⁷

The ten numbers are nothing. Thus one and two, three and four, five and six, seven and eight, nine and ten. Then all calculations repeat. Begin eleven, twelve, and so on. Then twenty is two times the letter Yod. Thirty is three times the letter Yod, and so on. Thus all calculations are perfection. Nothing is concealed by language. By ten numbers, speak and close the mouth to speak profoundly.

At first, the Shekinah precedes the universe by myriad myriads years, or as many years afterward. The glory of the universe is above or below, deep and profound. It is in the east and west, north and south. How great is the light. In darkness, obscure the firmament. Here is the letter Yod. At first is the letter Aleph. At the end is the letter Beth. Gimel is above. Daleth is below. Heh is to the east. Vau is to the west. Zayin is to the north. Cheth is to the south. The light of the letter Teth reveals light in the air. Darkness obscures all things. All is formed. It is in all and it is all. Bow down by all. Rise up and give thanksgiving in the heart. As the letter Yod bows down, the ancestors of Abraham go forth. Understand by the Book of Formation. Reveal over the Lord [Adon]. Place it in the bosom and kiss the head. Make a covenant.

Also, much more is revealed in the secret work of Berashith with help of Shaddai.

Also, the letter Yod corresponds to Abraham as Yod upholds Kaph. From Adam until Abraham is twenty generations. The universe was created by Yod. Bring forth small things, as Yod is diminutive. Yod is as a humble man, bowing down and rising up.

Also, make clear the reverence of Shaddai. Man serves God with love in the heart. Great is the reverence and devotion. Establish the heart. Keep the commandments. Rejoice in supplication to serve the creator of the universe. By rejoicing and reverence, serve the Lord in reverence and tremble in exaltation. It is written, serve the Lord by rejoicing. The heart rejoices to petition the Lord.

Revere Elohim and serve in fear of Gihenam and the day of judgment, of the suffering and torment. That is the reverence of Elohim. Judge and deliver retribution, as angered by the sins of man. Of every word, it is difficult to speak, Elohim, I do revere you and speak with great difficulty, very loudly at your feet. I shall not fall to rest, but journey to the house and revere you, lest I be punished. It is written, Elohim, judge me by reverence.

I revere Elohiel, speaking every word devoted in my heart. It is spoken, by the Lord Elohiel, revere and uphold the reverence of Elohim, not to fall from grace. In every place, revere Elohim and serve from the reverence.

Behold the reverence of the Lord. Serve in love, corresponding to the burnt offering. Be sustained in exaltation by the reverence of Shaddai, for not to revere is not to serve the Lord (That is not to serve).

Corresponding to the peace offering, fat [Cheleb] and blood is consumed [or burned]. The remainder is to the Lords [Leba'aliem]. The desire of the high priest [Kihenim] is the peace offering, bringing peace in the world. Serve from love and supplication, and strengthen the body. Give to him the Torah, of wealth and treasures and glory and understanding, revere Elohim. Serving in reverence is the foundation. Of the house of man [Aneshi Bethov], do not deprive support corresponding to the sin offering going over sins. There is great love from the petition and supplication from the reverence.

³⁴ see Genesis 22.

³⁵ See Sepher Yetzirah, 5:8.

³⁶ This term usually translates to "the inward, secret parts." This usually denotes the secret workings and affections of the soul. In this context, it probably means simply "perfection."

³⁷ See Genesis 17:5.

At this time, become wise and prosper. Of the love of the blessed, after, write the secret of the Merkabah. Let man be wise by reverence forever. Consider the wisdom of the world. By the glory, form the king of flesh and blood. Command the armies and go to battle to smite the enemies in the name of the Lord. Give reverence before going into battle. If there is not reverence enemies lay waste, prevailing over the land in every dwelling.

The king of all kings, God, exalts in reverence before going on all paths. The Lord is everywhere and in every place. He observes the good and wicked in every place. The worthy revere the Lord in righteousness. Unite the nations in order that the nation [not] be divided. Work for the sake of the heavens. Every path is created from the blessings. Establish the heart. It is written, satisfy the Lord. He is eternal, therefore established.

Blessed is the Lord. Command man to bind and calculate every season. Of the man who is a sinner or thief or adulterer of women, bind to consider much. Of the wisdom, this man is not to know and not to come near, disgraced in every dwelling created by the wisdom of the Creator.

Consider the wisdom that created the commandments, making reward for the love. Serve the Lord a little and serve much. Also, man considers forever not to forsake the wish of the Creator.

Bring the Lord of judgment [Ba'al Hadin] before the magistrates [Shellton]. Reveal that the magistrates rule over the necromancer [Ba'al Avob] and magician [Yida'avoni], or engage in demoniacal works [Ma'asheh Shedim] or works by the knowledge of the signs of the zodiac.³⁸ Do not be false or deceitful, as it is revealed the magistrates know all. Also, fear the works binding with an evil spell [Lechebierora'ath], lest [you] come forth to be judged before the magistrates.

God gives life to man in the heart. By the path of reverence, reveal all thoughts and understanding of all works. Lord over people and know to summon the Lord of judgment. Speak the words to end deceit. Rise up that the words may be true. It is written, those not pure will not rise up to know of the universe.

It is made known when shame is necessary. Speak, I will not do acts of iniquity, nor deceive by speaking or writing words, not to establish before the eyes. Thus, in every hour and minute, consider the love and search the heart. Examine the perfection. Keep the commandments and show reverence over the lifetime.

Of the root of benevolent acts [Chesiedoth, may refer to Has-sidism] measured previously, be judged by every word you write, of favor over all works.

Of the root of reverence, the words are difficult. Know you revere Elohim and perfection.

Of the root of supplication, rejoice in the heart in love of God. Rejoice in the heart from the petition of the Lord. Therefore, be loved and protected.

Of the root of the Torah, the most profound knowledge of the works of all words, it is written, all made by the Lord is good.

The root of the commandments is eight words, corresponding to the eight threads of the Tzitzith.³⁹ Write and remember all the commandments of the Lord.

The first thread corresponds to the eyes. Do not see without raising up the eyes. Do not brim with tears. After, the eyes do not close. Speak by the power of eyes, lest [you] forget the words seen. Cast down the eyes to salvation. Also, the Totephith is between the eyes.⁴⁰

The second thread corresponds to the ears. Do not be deceived by hearing lies, nor hear the ending of words. Israel hears the decrees.

The third thread corresponds to the throat. Do not swallow all abominations. Make to eat matzoh and similar things.⁴¹

The fourth thread corresponds to the mouth. Let the tongue not speak words. Of all words written, [do] not labor to make the oath, [do] not deceive by words or speaking the name, [do] not make the oath and speak falsehoods. Also, the teeth are not white in the mouth, or the tongue articulate.

³⁹ A fringed garment or shawl, draped around the shoulders of one praying in a Jewish temple.

⁴⁰ An ornament worn by the Rabbi upon the forehead.

⁴¹ Unleavened bread. The custom of eating matzoh on Passover originates from the days, of Moses. When the Jews were being liberated from Egypt, they did not have enough time to allow their bread to rise, therefore they baked unleavened bread.

The fifth thread corresponds to the hands. Do not lay the hand in sin and do not steal. Open the door with the hand. Bind the signs by the means of it.

The sixth thread corresponds to the feet. Do not walk about after strange Gods [Elohim Acheri], not stumble and fall. Walk after the Lord Elohim. Journey by all paths, as commanded by the Lord Elohim. Watch the feet as you walk to the house of Elohim.

The seventh thread corresponds to the skin [Ha'aroh].⁴² Do not commit adultery. Be fruitful and multiply. Respect circumcision [Hamilah].

The eighth thread corresponds to the nose. Let it not be irritated or excited by the sweet scent of idolatry, nor desire the oblation. Smell the myrtle on the Sabbath, and similar things.

Man is to remember these eight things for all time. Let them be in the heart. Eyes first, ears second, throat third, mouth fourth, hands fifth, feet sixth, and skin seventh. Do not sin by them. The heart is with each. Consider thoughts of every one.

It is written in the Midrash, the congregation [Asepheh] diminishes and grows. Behold them equally over the years. Cast down to the battles. The first rise up and make the offering, fixing the crowns [or ornaments]. The first rise up, fixing the crowns. Reveal what is great. Speak, to ascend by the crowns. Of the wicked, smite the sinners rotting before smelling the scent of idolatry. The eyes close before the journey and the head turns away from the Lord in Gihenam.

The first threads of the Tzitzith are the strands of the greatest length and suitable to adorn. Of the first strand, speak not to deliver the strong ones [Geborim] to vanquish the uncircumcised [A'arelim]. The body is righteous to fulfill the commandments.

First, beginning in prayer. Second, the proclamations of the Torah. Third, opening the heart. Fourth, the nose smells the Fifth, the hands give righteousness. Sixth, consecration of the Torah and supplication before God. Seventh, the covenant of the body is suspended therein. Eight, the feet walk to the synagogue [Beth Kenesioth] and the house of study [Beth Midrashoth, another name for synagogue]. Therefore complete perfection.

The root of the reverence of the Lord is to forsake the pleasures of lust by the path of the reverence of the Lord. Do not revere the Lord for the sake of salvation of the universe, or being eternal. You just revere, lest not to be perfect before God in love.

As the commandments come into the hands, you labor over the works. Make as Abraham by sacrificing the son. It is written, at this time, know you revere Elohim. At this time, it is made known. Is it not so that before the secrets of the universe were revealed, the knowledge was not yet concealed in the belly [womb]? Speak, you are not tempted. Henceforth not to be tempted by all temptations. Also, the letter reveals by the word. The heart is perfect by all commandments, as it is not necessary to be tempted. At this time, know the Lord is great. All to Elohim.

Also, by the name Aloah, Joseph spoke: Elohim, I show reverence to you. It is difficult to rise up and go forth to you by the feet. Indeed Elohim. I revere you. My sons endure in famine and the wrath of El. You, the Lord, are revered. It is difficult to rise up, lest reveal not to dwell and be slayed. However, he spoke of reverence of Elohim with devotion in the heart. He spoke to the Lord, I honor you in reverence. You, the Lord, by the holy words. The weight is upon the heart. Consider before the reverence of the Lord. I revere you, the Lord. Surely, take up your son Isaac in the name of God. Take up Nephesh and consider the power [A'atzem]. Come to bind, as a word. It is difficult to rise up, through that beyond desire.

The root of love is to cherish the Lord. The Nephesh is filled with love. You rejoice by passing over the pleasures of the body. Reign over the pleasures of the universe. Love is rejoicing in strength. Strengthen the heart. Consider always how to create desire of God. Bring forth pleasure, walking as women before the love of the Creator. More in youth and passing of the days, many women do not come before El. From desire of the Lord El, the heart burns to rise up to the Lord. From much love and desire, rise up to the Lord. Of the lightning of the early rain [Ivoreh Kachetz, or arrows of the archer], benefit much from all without making desire of the Creator. The body is kept in purity and holiness by the love.

Phineas betrayed the body and slayed Zimri.⁴³

As Abraham, place the hand to the highest when below. Until the shoe latchet [Sherok Na'al], Elishah did not desire to receive from Na'aman, and loved the heavens in the heart as flames.⁴⁴

Bind the divisions, not seeing women there and not from the word cast forth. End the words. Toil and labor, making favor of the Creator. Delight by praises to fulfill desire. Rejoice to cherish the Lord.

The root of humility is to go away from the glory and be praised when returning before the Rabbi. It is revealed, gather the friends of the Rabbi to sleep. Know when to rest. Lie down after hard labors. Know when not to toil. Speak thus of labor and desire. Give glory to the friend, but do not speak of young women.

It is written, of you who send forth to journey, speak to send forth. Do not speak to send forth before the heretics [Mieniem], not speaking by the authority in the place. They are also humble. Go before the name of the friend, the house of praise [Beth Chelel] to the house of heaven [Beth Shemiya]. The friend senses [or experiences] and stops speaking. All are able to diminish the glory. Great is the glory to revere the name.

It is written, honor the Lord with the reverence in the eyes to condemn. When seeing humility, there is no desire to go before God. Great is he. Go before Shemethbiyesh (Hebrew: ShMThBI-ISh). Be humble before the great Shemethbiyesh. From honoring them, go before the Lord.

When proclaiming, man learns of El, Rabbi Shemethbiyesh proclaims. Do not praise man much before and much after, and not speaking much. Speak thus, as it is written. Speak to him to learn of Rabbi Eleazer over Rabbi Jochanan Ben Zeketzi.⁴⁵

The friend is permitted. El beholds the heart of man himself. When you praise, do not praise the body. It is written, praise the enemy [Zer, or stranger], and not the mouth, but only of the friend. Learn to teach. From the teacher, be able to praise the body. Speak of the perfection of Ahieh. Watch the path of the Lord. Declare the strength to rise up to the high place [Bemah],⁴⁶ Lengthen the days and show them the high place. Also, lengthen their days.

Keep all the commandments in secret. In secret, go with Elohim. When keeping them, know how to work before all, such as in prayers, and by the Tzitzith. Of envious writers [Sopheriem], increase the wisdom and the commandments. All are able to make commandments for the sake of the heavens.

Speak of the righteous, you are righteousness by every commandment. Do not be occupied by other matters. Place the love of the Creator in the heart. Reverence is necessary before him. Be skillful making the commandments. Rejoice before El and speak the final words.

In every place and in the synagogue [Beth Hakeneseth, house of gathering or assembly], stand in awe before the Shekinah. Establish the heart only to him. Do not withhold passage, as there is disgrace before making the covenant. He is angered when man is not seen to revere, lest [you] make it known to human beings to be disgraced.

All passes forth, that which brothers [Shachiyem] make. Do not make labor double [or multiply]. Every man toils before the king and before woman. The Creator of the commandments sees before the king. By splendor, the king finds favor in the eyes; however, women are forbidden to see. Speak, it is forbidden for the wife of man to see even the face of the Lord. When preventing sickness [Dothek],⁴⁷ do not see before the women. The labor doubles.

Know all the increased words are brought into the hands of the sinner. Consider the suffering of the loss of commandments corresponding to labor. Let all works be for the sake of the heavens. It is good to possess more from them of the brilliance. When you make them, be happy in the world. Good things come to you forever.

⁴³ Phineas was the son of Eleazer and grandson of Aaron. Also, another Phineas was the son of the high priest Eli, see Samuel I 1:3. The time frame here appears to be appropriate. Phineas was said to be a "scoundrel" and an "idolater" (Samuel I 2:12). See Kings I 16:9.

⁴⁵ According to Kaplan, in the introduction of his translation of the Sepher Yetzirah, Rabbi Yochanan ben Zakkai lived in the years 47 B.C.E.-73 B.C.E. (p. xvi).

⁴⁶ This generally describes a hill or high place, usually dedicated to religious worship

⁴⁷ A term meaning sickness, usually referring to a woman's menses.

They come from the assistance of the Lord, who created the heavens and Earth.

The secret is reverence of the Lord. Of the secret work of Be-rashith, Isaac speaks, it is not necessary to begin the Torah, but only restore this to you. Begin by Berashith. Because of that, speak of the power of works revealed to people. All was created in order to know and understand and make wise by the greatest and most wondrous works.

Bear witness there is none as, and there is none other than. I write the book to proclaim the secrets and reveal the strength of the creator of the universe. Man is happy to learn the secrets. Revere the Lord. Shelter him, dividing the universe. Come and write over the mouth of the gates of all that is above. Know of the unity of God. Of the glory, give the heart over to reverence. Bow down to him. He is one and there are not two of him. Blessed is he.

Aleph is as God. It is first and last. He is king over all the universe. There is no other unto him. In as much as the Aleph is first of the letters, God is first of all the Malachim. The Aleph is first. The calculation is small. There is none less than. Thus a myriad calculations.

Aleph is the first letter of the word Achad [one] and Aleph is the last letter of the word Rebova [myriad]. Speak of one Achad [Achad Chad] and a myriad Rebova [Rebova Rebov].

It is written by Ezekial, the first word is El Achad. By Daniel, it is written of a myriad myriads [Rebov Rebovon] before existence. The Aleph fell, as it is the first to designate one. Speak Achad Rebova [one myriad]. The Aleph fell, as it is at the end of Rebova. Speak Rebov. Human beings know it is first. There are none second to it. It is first and it is last.

Aleph is the beginning of calculations and the end of calculations. Also, Aleph begins the alphabet, as Aleph, Beth, Gimel, Daleth. Aleph is at the end, as Aleph, Tau, Shin, Resh, Qoph, Tzadik, Peh, Ayin, Samek. It is proclaimed by three letters, Aleph Lamed Peh.

Aleph begins in the throat. Of the larynx and the tongue, it is in center of the palate. By the tongue and the lips, to speak. Let it be known that Achad is first [Rashon], middle [Amtza'a], and last [Acheron]. The last Aleph is turned away [or opposite] from the rest of the letters. The Achad is in the universe. Create the universe turned away from the universe. Speak and revere the power [Avon].

Do not understand, as foreseen by the destruction [Cherben] of the Beth. Speak, do not permit destruction in the world. Hide the face from it. Know that, in the beginning, to create the universe. Indicate the destruction of the Beth. The Beth of Berashith is the great Beth Rashith [First Beth, or first temple] of the Holy Temple [Beth Makadesh], written therein upon the heavens of the first place of the most holy.

Through the gate of Earth, falling [Hiethah] to chaos [Tohu Vobohu] by the written word [Thibeth] in the middle. By Gematria, Tau Yod, indicating the first house [Beth Rashon], serves 410 years to fall.⁴⁹ By Gematria, Tau Koph [420] indicates the second house [Beth Sheni], serving 420 years in chaos. Tau Lamed [430] indicates two temples, both serving for 430 years: That is to say, Tau Yod, Tau Koph (Hebrew: ShKNThI) is in the middle of (Hebrew: ShKIN).⁵⁰ Here is Tau Yod also in the letters (Hebrew: ShKNThI).

Also, Tau Koph is in many places, indicating the destruction of the Beth. In time, make known Beth Rashith in the beginning of the universe. Remember the destruction of the Beth to destroy all that is created. The Lord alone is sublime.

All created by Beth are in pairs. Two worlds, heaven and Earth. Mountains and hills, seas and rivers. Gihenam and the Garden of Eden. Leviathan and Nechesh Beriech. The Sun and the Moon. Man and woman. Wickedness and righteousness. Man has two eyes, two ears, two nostrils, mouth and tongue, two hands, two feet and sides, so on and so forth.

The Lord El distinguishes Beth, revealing one division. Make known to all, there is a pair. Therefore, opened by the outer Beth, he is one in the kingdom. Blessed is he.

⁴⁸ The palate is considered the seat of taste, which may be taken as a metaphor for the seat of perception.

⁴⁹ Tau Yod, by Gematria, is 410.

⁵⁰ This a discussion of Hebrew suffixes.

Also, recognize Aleph Vau. Above is the punctuation point of Vau. The punctuation point is below Aleph.⁵¹ Thus, Aleph, Ka-matz,⁵² Patah,⁵³ Aleph, Hatef,⁵⁴ Kamatz, Aleph, Hatef, Patah Aleph, Vau.⁵⁵

Of the seven above, recognize Aleph Vau. Reveal it is united above the seven firmaments. He is the ruler of all (and therefore, the name of Aleph). The name Ahieh is the beginning of the ten sephiroth, above to below. Adonai is the end of the ten sephiroth, beginning by Aleph. Aleph is first of all letters and end of letters, before Tau Shin Resh Peh. Complete to see every one by these letters.

Recognize all the most holy names. Yod begins the chosen name (Hebrew: YHVH). You are not able to write Aleph without the first Yod and also all the vowels.⁵⁶ Recognize the letter. It is not able to exist without Yod Vau, that Yod, Cholem [a Hebrew vowel corresponding to the Latin "O"] or Melaphom or Chiroq [a Hebrew vowel indicating the sounds "ee" and "i," as in "slip" or "sleep"].⁵⁷

Reveal by Yod, create ten sephiroth, the universe in the middle, and the universe at the bottom—of Aleph itself, Sheva, Tzeri, Pethach, Chiroq, Cholem, Melaphom, Cheteph, Pethach (Hebrew: QO), Petach, Sheni, Yod, Sheva, Hatef, Patah (Hebrew: QO). When the Yod is below Kametz with Yod above. Of Vau, Cholem with the middle Yod (Hebrew: QO), Melaphom, as when above the line, Chiroq without the line, Sheva or Tzeri with the line. Of three letters (Hebrew: SGL). Aleph by itself, Yod Vau Yod.

It is written of the name (Hebrew: HOIH). Reveal the Lord is one and created all the universe, the highest, middle, and lowest, filling all. There is not a vowel placed or the covenant [Hebreh] without him. Blessed is he. He is one above the seven firmaments and he rules over all.

Consider the one God [El Achad] for many myriad myriads [Reba Rebeben] years. In the beginning of the universe and in the worlds [A'avolementh], you see by them and by them, the splendor and glory. Speak in the heart. Human beings are not to consider the glory of the kingdom. Create the universe, that it is to pass. Complete the understanding of El in the heart in reverence. Serve in truth with the perfect heart, and goodness to them all the days.

The Lord [Adon] spoke, all come forth from the Ruoch of the holy spirit [Ruoch Kadesh]. It is the first of all the covenants of man. From the word, Ruoch comes forth from the mouth. Therefore, spirits are not shut up by the worthy in silence.

The tractates on fasting [Tha'anieth, or self-humiliation] are in the Book of Formation.⁵⁸ Here are words of the Ruoch of fire and water.⁵⁹ From the word, man presses the lips. By force, the voice goes forth. Sparks go forth by the Ruoch. Therefore it is spoken, as a hammer smashing rocks. Sparks go forth from stones. Fire comes from the power of the sparks coming from the mouth. Therefore, it is written, is it not so the power of the word is as fire? Here is power from the voice of man, the Ruoch of water, the heat of the fire in every dwelling. From the word, fire consumes fire. Therefore, speak of how to create fire and water. The Ruoch is the glory of Elohim, the secret word. From blessings over the days, all exist by words.

⁵¹ Portrayed by an Aleph with a dot beneath it.

⁵² A Hebrew sublinear vowel in the form of a small mark or dot beneath the letter to indicate the sound of "a," as in "father" (long kamatz), or "o" as in "short" (short kamatz).

⁵³ A Hebrew vowel to indicate the sound of "u," as in "but."

⁵⁴ A short vowel mark to indicate the sound of a, e or o.

⁵⁵ The Aleph has a dot beneath it.

⁵⁶ The letter aleph is actually four yods in the form of an X.

⁵⁷ Hebrew: AO—the vau has a dot at the top; AI—the aleph has a dot below it; AO—the vau has a dot at the middle.

⁵⁸ There is no text concerning fasting or self-humiliation in the modern English translations of Sepher Yetzirah. Tha'anieth is probably an error. See Sepher Yetzirah, 1:14.

Foreword

Forward

Four Word

The race was not given to the quick or the swift, but to the one who could endure till the end, then we found out there was no end.

The unwary soul, who fails to grapple with the Mocking Demon of Illusion, will return to the Earth as the slave of Illusion. To become a true master of fate you must first become a “Knower of Self”.

In a time much too distant to consider we as Humans splitting from the single Source entered Duality. Spiraling away from the Creator some spun in the direction of 6 while others spun in the opposite direction of 9, this is the “Spiral Force”. These two forms contain complete opposites, however, it is with their Union something new can be born, this is the sequence of life. Our Solar System houses various Binary or Dual worlds and Earth called first Tiamat is one of them. Once entering this realm the Spirit begin to develop its very narrow definition of things, as in most cases, besides twins, they are lacking their other side. In extinct we create a “stand in” which we call the ego. The ego is wholly constructed of astral energy in which we create and breathe life into everyday. At times not knowing “power” we birth a Monster which we love and care for since after all it is a part of us, our baby.

At some point in incarnations or loops one realizes they must begin the quest of taming the Monster. They realize they must flip it over and ride it. At that moment they also see how strong it has become as it is stuck in its ways, rigid in form, brutish and ineloquent. In that condition we can take it nowhere just as you never take a street dog into a royal party. The work before us then was to take this rough cut stone and form it into a chariot of fire that could propel us through the center of the Universe, it is there we will meet our other half. In this realm that is the meaning to life.

To help us through this whole process and all of its components the Most High developed a system based upon the energies of the entire Universe. Seeing that Humans are smaller composites of the Celestial Spheres it became possible for one to know how to guide their particular life in the direction that would equal the greatest amount of potential for their unique design. In each person lies the pearl of the highest potential, if developed it is a treasure to all existence visible and invisible. This wondrous Metamorphosis was possible of the Human creation, however, as you see in some parts of nature, not every creation has been given this ability. Thus there arose a challenge from lower forms of consciousness that manifested as Jealousy and thus Spirituality and Religion were created, these are the “Limits”. Once again at the close of this time segment the masses will have an opportunity to discover their true form which is not a Word and comes before even thought. It is the Highest. If you but knew.

Reason 1: Entire Universes are known to be Binary, this gives the possibility of balance and diverse continuation. The figure 8 which is the sign used for infinity is actually the sign of the two worlds that one continues to reincarnate through one after the other in an infinite loop We call stasis. Our own parallel actually exists in this otherworld simultaneously until it is merged with. It also remains just as clueless as you are right now to its existence.

Consider hot cold light and dark, is there not warm and grey which can easily fit between the two? Not to mention in temperature there is hot, cold, warm, vapor, freezing, and many more stages each having a particular use, some being very beneficial for a certain moment, and useless for others. If someone came to your door looking for a person that you loved to do them harm, would you tell them they were inside or would you lie and say they were not around? If you lied to protect that person is that good or bad? If you ask a Pastor of a Church they will say it is evil to tell lies period, but is better to allow the loved one to be hurt? As you see everything is a matter of perspective. So there can be no good and bad only reason and reason has so many parameters if all things are not considered a person could be left confused, not knowing what decision to make from time to time thus they are left and lost in time. Whatever you do in life let it be endowed with meaning and purpose.

The world is lodged in the phase of opposites right now, thus we face wars, racism, and extinction of our natural life. What I'm presenting here is the information of the inner workings of the World along with its Creeds, Cultures, and Religions that have shaped our thoughts and actions since antiquity extending several incarnations. We will see how ideas grow over time and sometimes lose their true meaning altogether. In this we will see also how we were taken off track. This due in part by the "controllers" knowing if you take humans from their original cycle they are easy to confuse and enslave. Let us not forget we faced many conquerors in the past, intending to usurp the order of the world and bring it under their sway, this they accomplished, and it should not be forgotten no matter how much the Illusion tells you it does not exist.

The foolish think of Me, the Un-manifest, as having manifestation, knowing not My Higher, immutable and most excellent form. Fools disregard Me as clad in human shape not knowing flesh cannot withstand Me. They have empty hopes, vain actions, of vain knowledge and senseless they verily are possessed of deceitful nature and become un-divine Beings. I hurl these evil-doers into the womb of distortion deluded birth after birth, not attaining Me they thus fall into a condition even lower, without the slightest suspension, proving they are not using the reason and senses We gave them. The Most High

There exist certain systems, mainly language and religion that perpetuate this fallacy of Illusion in a subliminal way. If you happen to be aligned with any of the religions or ideas being discussed, do be careful not to think of it as bad if you happen to hear something that makes you uneasy, after all, many of us at one time or another in this life or in past lives have avowed ourselves to something only to later find out we have outgrown it because we now possess an entirely different set of key knowledge. Every time we learn something new that is the truth we should celebrate, we are closer to home.

THE OTHERS

This world we are in is fully animate, it has been constructed by an "Ability" so powerful it has missed no details. Challenge in life equals substantial growth. It is after all the constant lifting of heavier weights that makes a person strong. Those weights we must lift are actually other life forms that are very dense slow moving vibrations. These weights when attached to us make us wait right here on Earth burdened down and unable to fly. Those of us who are Divine Positive are attracted to the Light thus we must get lite by releasing the weight.

But wait, the complexity of the Creator exist within its Creations and there are many of us. On 3rd Density we all appear to be about the same. Two arms, two legs, a head, etc. although if you had the ability to see each individuals astral form no two forms would look the same. Some you would see infused with animal natures, extraterrestrial life, unknown elements and essences, and everything else they had accumulated in past existences all comprised in one Auric Field. When that field is placed in a humanoid body the outer shell looks similar enough to allow you to get along in society. We are all something much more different then what is seen in the mirror, so we must never be confused that the reflection is the complete you.

On other dimensions there are so many life forms they cannot be cataloged. It would be much more difficult than listing every type of insect, plant, fish, mammal etc. which exist on such a small Planet as Earth. On their dimension they have a spirit form, the “Breathe” flows through all living creatures. When they take physical form, as we have, they combine with what is most like their character. The ancient knowledge was to know how they appeared in the “Seen World”, how to communicate with them, and which ones to avoid. Many of these Beings had no concern for the Humanoids whatsoever themselves being either much too dense to comprehend human life or much to developed to waste thought on something so distant and primitive.

There are Beings who in fact are closer to us in proximity of Creation and also endowed with reason. They possessed a fiery and airy nature they are known now as the Serpents. Mankind’s history with the Serpents is undeniable, for example:

In Columbian Mythology Bachue the primordial woman was called “Serpeinte Celestial” (Celestial Snake). Mesoamerican cultures worshipped Quetzcoatl the feathered Serpents and they await His return just as Christians wait for Jesus.

The Egyptians called them Neteru and said they came on heavenly boats and set up Priesthoods whose Priest were called Djedhi, sound familiar?

The Sumerians claimed their ancestors where Reptilian Annunaki who genetically modified them to be slaves. It is of value to keep in mind the Sumerians say they where hybridized and made as slaves while other legends simply say they intermingled with their population.

In Ethiopia stories and ancient statues can be found of the Serpents known as Naga. These Naga also went into Persia and China. Nagasaki was named after the Serpents who migrated there.

In Japan the Dragon Yasha is the protector of Buddhism. The Celts make mention of the Druid Adders or great serpents that came to instruct them in mystical arts.

The Hebrews speak of the Serpent Nakash who was ever giving them trouble and misguiding their people.

The Arabs produced thousands of codex warning of the Serpent Shaitan and his cunning ways of making man and woman fall short.

It is safe to say that we can identify at least one non-humanoid Being that in fact interfaces with our life cycle, and this is only one but there are many more. Thus we should be able to establish that we are not alone.

Reason 2: The Maya clearly show they had already pledged allegiance to a group of “Masculine” Serpents. The Serpent races are just as vast as our own. Many of the Serpents are on a “collective mind” thus they are generally out to accomplish their own agenda and stop at nothing to see it through. Humans are looked at as a resource to most of them, they are a Supremacist warrior class, also some have mated with the Human race and try to protect their “Hybrids” as extended family. Many of the Ancient Reptilians despise this union and thus a war has ensued amongst the Elders and the Siblings.

Reason 3: In the Egyptian Glyphs it clearly shows much larger Humanoids inhabited the land. They are the Nephthim bent on world domination and enslaving what they called inferior Humans. They exist now in spirit form. This is beyond Alexander the Great and Constantine in fact this is where they drew their power and destiny from. They were just the Human catalyst, Hybrids themselves although their Legends are so shrouded in myth it does them little credit to the truth of their origin. Alexander was known as “Great Two Horn” and by the Arabs Dhul-Qarnayn who built the wall.

The correct knowledge actually makes your spirit larger. Knowledge is the food for the Spirit. When this happens just like a fish that has gotten too big for its tank, you must move on. This is no different than having a small bike as a child that takes you everywhere you need to go, as a child your range is a lot smaller. When you get older you may need a car, plane, or even a ship depending on where you are intending to travel. The body itself when developed is the vehicle to traverse the cosmos and it must now be prepared to do such a thing, this is a vastly populated territory we speak of and it contains the experiences you will need to continue growth. We will discover that all the things we have gone through in life have served to get us to that point, it is only of value to realize that since nothing is absolutely still you must continue to move, this is the nature of our entire Universe nothing dies even if you blow it up it will still become an infinite amount of pieces of whatever it was before.

It is a wondrous age we have entered as we watch the mist of the Illusion dissipate, the hot spiral of reality permeates the globe. We are awakening as children of giants from a long slumber realizing that we have been living a long dream. As a Planet we have seen many ages that are part of a larger cycle of growth, this is the process of turning dirt into Gold. One thing that we can be sure of since man and woman have triumphed through the Stone Age to now meet the end of the Space Age we most certainly intend to continue on to what is next.

Reason 4: From the Stone Age to the Space Age was made to look so easy a caveman could do it. Have you asked yourself where our world is headed next? What do you think organizations like NASA, Lucent, and Sony are really doing with now Trillions of dollars?

Like a game of chess you anticipate the player's next move, so we see that it is the Age of Ether we are arriving into or more simply put, Spirit. Now we can begin to do the things that only made up the fiction portion of our previous ideas and imagination. The weight of the body, which is now the cube, will be shed and we will be open once more to higher senses. We would do well to develop and train these senses now. As we speed up and things take place it will not be time to practice. There is no doubt that we will experience a new aeon we are all Adepts of Motion, Acolytes of the Flux, we populate the Galaxy and thus we have solidified our wave through the harmonic cosmos. We are Vessels of known and unknown energies untold being ourselves convertors for multiple life forms to assimilate and grow not only on Earth but also in space as above so below.

This energy field cannot be seen with the untrained eye but exist all around you as a standing column wave. With the science of sound which is vibration we can venture to know that if a large wave is made by anything in the same pool, it will only make the smallest waves speed up and increase in size, thus the small are supported by the Great and coaxed to become bigger. Since these Greater Forces are now sending out stronger waves than ever our choice is when we face that big wave, can we ride it, or will we wipe out and hope to catch another. We can be sure that we cannot be destroyed because the soul within us, a gift by the Most High, is Immortal and without end, but ye can be made to forget which is called the second death.

Figure 5: An actual NASA photo of what appears to be a very conscious form in the Galactic looking back at us. Phillip's Astronomy Atlas Page 194. Other sentient life forms are found on Earth all the time but we have now been trained to reject clear proof separating us more from the reality of the existence of other Creations, many of whom are very intelligent.

When a person really assimilates there are other "Sentient" things in existence it opens them up to better Innerstanding the Most High through diversity. This also allows us to make a sober estimate of ourselves and where we personally stand in the levels of Matter. When one remains insolent to a fact of such magnitude, there are sure to be repercussions. Those repercussions cause a Supremacist nature; never considering what we think is the top is actually the bottom for another Being. We would assume we are on an elated level which really does even more damage than good since the sub-conscious mind factors in that we are poisoning the same air we breathe, so as the most intelligent we are really the most ignorant. Anything built on that kind of foundation will go through successions of destruction and chaos, now we have Earth's full historical description. When this changes, which it will very soon, everything will be different, fast.

My first experience with the “Others” was when I unknowingly started a purification procedure and became Enlightened. I had no doubt heard of accelerated thinking and higher abilities, however, my intention at the time was to just seek answers from a Higher Source, not to mention trusting if whether a Higher Source could actually be contacted. I knew something Higher existed, that became obvious by seriously taking into account man did not create man, it’s at least mathematically not possible. I had done this by chanting until my body had changed its complete vibrational frequency which took about 2 hours and some extreme desire. The desire I called (HSM) Heart, Soul, and Mind something I found in the Torah that was worth extracting. It was said to be the real formula of contacting the Most High, a focal point to interface with if One came to such a moment that contact would need to be made. Once I started to activate all the metal in the room was shaking I had to remove my watch, belt, and anything that contained metal. I had no idea this was going to be the outcome, the energy was far more than I anticipated thus I was extremely unprepared and confused but strong nonetheless, I had become the portal for Higher Selves.

As the camera continued to run on my PS3 catching these moments I knew we had something special, finally I had vividly captured my proof of the paranormal. I can only explain it as I went up and came back down very fast and I could feel the Essence of were I had gone inside of me, especially in my hands. My friend, who is now my witness was even less prepared, he had also experienced the phenomena by simply touching me once I reached High Vibration, this he did by accident or fear of the metal situation. This prompted him to grab me and ask me what was happening, like I knew. That caused it to spread to him instantly and later he said “he went down deep into somewhere, saw himself, grabbed himself, and started making an ascension back out with Things hot on his trail”. He was, what I later figured out, in some lower dimension being ruled by some Dominion. This was defiantly a result of his current character although he was given a chance nonetheless.

Reason 6: What the many ancient tribes have been explaining to Westerners since time memorial is that we are actually located on a lower plane that is being ruled by various Entities. The sub-Planes are indicated above by the triangles in the center. The pictures of Beings you see are of various Ascended Masters or Gods who rule different parts of the Planes. The 4 outer points are the Gates. The Kabbalah reflects the same thing indicating the Planes as Spheres or Hexagrams. They also served as Calendars because the alignment of everything from above and below is perfectly in order.

Breaking through the Netherworld with obviously his Ka in tow, my friend got stuck. How this appeared in our Realm was he looked to me to be gone, wacko, done, goosed. I was gathering myself fast, still feeling the strength, but also thinking of the full parameters of what just occurred. I knew that I had to do something fast because my friend (fiend) was saying the same two words over and over so loud eventually the neighbors would call the cops, he seemed to be in a mental loop. Using the “WORD” I yelled It into his mouth, it was all I could think to do. Later he said at that moment he saw a light and he was able to hurry to it. That brought him back to this Plane. That was my second vivid Spiritual encounter.

We will now mention with no more delay our Source, the Exact One with no Equation, beyond capacity and function, Jubilant Magnetaur Dispersed in Realities Self Generated. We swoon in ecstasy when You touch us, and we guard thy Beloved with our life as no cost. The charge is to admonish the Guided with exact knowledge of this time sequence and its mysteries we will expose as they lay bare before us. This is so all things may be made clear and the Path may be made level for thy feet. Think not these works are those of my own, nay, I was found by the Source headed swiftly in the wrong direction, it was then I was visited. In that state I was strengthened by the Hosts who perceiving in me such a lowly state but a subtle glow as we all posses the remnants of a Brighter Star in our hearts. It was through Them it was conveyed to me my mishaps. It was in such joy of returning to the true Path and turning from the Abyss that I light ultra rays Resplendid that will exhaust Plutonium fuel cells so all in the darkness may know of and come to receive the real Light.

It was then I knew that the world could raise its entire vibration by contact with just one person who could hold the frequency. The voice that entered inside of my head after “the charge” started to tell me things that I had never read or seen before. I also felt the activation of the opposite hemisphere of my brain which came first as a separate voice with a mind of its own. At first I thought I had gone crazy or had broken something in my brain, as I settled down I realized it was my other half so excited to be heard finally. I spent weeks on Google checking the information after it was made known to me and I was fascinated with such a breakthrough as everything that was being spoken into my mind was accurate, not to mention the personal hidden things it revealed. For me at that moment I knew there was something they were not telling us, this should be the first subject in school! I imagined how much the encounter would enliven the Youth this is what we wanted.

Later when I was able to enter Higher States through simple whole body breathing techniques I realized our potential as a Species is definitely a threat to anything that seeks to rule over the Human Race. It would not be possible, the energy of freedom is too great and when felt, ones life means nothing if they cannot constantly feel it again. If the Humans were to unlock their true self thus broadcasting a higher signal or frequency that would permeate the globe, it would surely burn holes in the nets and webs created to surround our atmosphere (At Most Fear) that’s keeping us trapped within. They admit the eye can see thousands of miles when there is no atmosphere, this was another phenomena they recorder when in Space.

This is the time one is now free to feel and receive the truth from the thin air which contains a stream of information of now, past, future and most valuably who we really are. Who we really are is the biggest secret period, any wise man thinking on that will agree. What I also felt more than I understood was that it was harder to destroy a Planet than it was to keep it in harmony and peace. The Planet was so strong, I watched how much She took payloads of nuclear arsenals “H” Bombs and “A” Bombs all while keeping the children snug on the other side of the world, spinning lightly on her axis with only a slight wobble. This is the true food for thought. I was convinced that the majority would want to be on a Higher Vibration and I set out almost immediately on that Quest.

What was conveyed to me then was that many people in our history all the way until our current day claiming spiritual enlightenment, especially the New Agers, were talking to Angels and Masters that had in fact corrupted our world long ago. Many of these Beings at a certain point were workers of a much Greater Force thus they learned various mental and spiritual techniques that appear Godlike to humans. In time, pride, jealousy, selfishness, and scarcity crept in the Order and ideas that they should divvy up everything that was resourceful to them became prevalent. This is in part due to the nature of the Most High which does not watch all its Creations like a micro manager.

Once the design is put in place It's off Creating more Universes and all in time will eventually take its proper form, however, there are phases in between. The Creations make up the entire construct of allowing those "in between phases" to be possible, we sharpen each other.

As with all things some Beings have more senses thus more power than others. These Beings are often times given the name Angels, although there classification is much vaster and the term Angel is far from the word that should be used. Consider this, most modern Angels names end in EL. EL is the Name given by the Hebrews of their God which corresponds to our Planet Saturn, this means all the Angels work for El and this you will see is true on various levels as we go on. You will learn to trace the Origin of a Name using a system that is infallible. Through the correct procedure you can seriously have a Guide to the Universe and a map to other worlds beside Earth Dimension 3. Breaking down Saturn you have Sat and Urn or Sa and Turn. The word with the most practical use out of these combinations is Sat and Urn. As we go on you will learn who Sat is. As said before the original name for this Planet was El thus the new Name given in English signifies some type of unity between this Being "Sat" and another simply called "Urn". When we drop the "N" to see if we can get anymore clarity since an Urn's basic meaning is just something you use to put the ashes of the cremated dead in, we find a place that syncs up Ur. "Ur" was known as Chaldea, also known as Samaria, also known as Babylon.

History says Ur of Chaldea, home of Marduk, Chaldean Magic and the Necromicon spell book was also home of a young boy known as Abram, later Abraham. According to the story Abram's father Terah made idols known as Teraphim and it was Abram's responsibility to peddle those idols to the people. It was said Abram rejected the worship of the idols because they had no power. He later discovered the true God and thus became the father of all Mankind, just like that. Logically this story has to have so type of hidden meaning because its literal definition is preposterous although almost all people believe in the literal meaning; they believe Abraham is their ancestral father even when their genealogy places them somewhere like Africa or Asia.

These household Teraphim caused much trouble throughout the Bible even after Abrams exit from Ur. Rachel stole Teraphim from her father and he could not rest until they were returned, a few other similar stories exist like this. It is revealed that the Sylphs, Serpent spirits of the Air whom I call Siths, inhabited these items and would bring forth Oracles of the future. Abraham wife is Sarah his father is Terah. It is obvious the real story here is about the unity of the Seraphim and the Teraphim both being spirit forms. Again, since the Bible is a partial account of various stories, only those who really have dissected the clay tablets are able to cross all these characters back over to their original Sumarian Archetypes along with putting together the details of their story about what went on. When we are simply looking for truth and spiritual growth this all becomes too much. So many have never researched any of this and are at the alters blindly saying AMEN, they mind as well add Ra after that, its still the same Being. Amen-Ra. Blindly they are dragged about.

All the stories from the Sumarian Tablets are retold in the Torah after a few alterations mainly with the Names of the individuals involved. By changing the Names it became virtually impossible for the “common” people of the times, most of whom could not read nor write, to realize they were actually still following the religion of the Chaldeans long after being lead from captivity. The Hebrews became enslaved by the Babylonians, along with many other Nations afterward. As more cultures are put into the melting pot of Babylon, facts become blurred with fiction and languages are turned to Babel. Terah, Abraham’s Father and Torah the first 5 books of the Bible are so close together in spelling it begs one to wonder what is meant by all this? You will soon see that many of the stories being told are the events of the cross-breeding that took place with mankind.

Amazingly many ancient nations such as the Phoenicians had no written language or culture of their own, instead they borrowed from everyone they conquered. They altered the original cultures and languages of these people saying they were “perfecting” them, what audacity. In the Western world we credit our language, English, much of our symbolism like the Phoenix, our current death and resurrection doctrine, and many other things to the Phoenicians who were really the Philistines. Philadelphia was the original state capitol of the United States. The biggest mistake a conquered people can make is to begin to imagine they were never defeated, thus placing their trust in the assailant. We are seeing the results of that now, our Government, Spiritual Leaders, and Instructors have been telling a multitude of lies many without the slightest knowledge of it. Some are sworn traitors avowed to something much more sinister. We mistakenly have trusted the same system that once brutally annihilated everything that had its own will so they could indoctrinate their falsehood.

Reason 7: There are traitors amongst us with phenomenal resources that have avowed to something far more devious then can normally be conceived. Left unchecked for centuries they have finally come to the conclusion of an agenda scheduled for the near future. Who will face them?

What now has to be done in order for us to discover our true potential is we have to put our real past back together. During the times Pharaohs, Czars, Kings, and Shahs despoiled the lands they found it most important to alter the history, culture, and language of the people they conquered. This is how they gained a monopoly over social and spiritual power, the later being the controller of the former. Most of these factions served the “Unseen Hand” very far back in our history so they generally had the same agenda. Removing a persons spiritual belief in themselves leaves them powerless. All of Mysticism has effect based on the belief of the Welder of such power. In ancient times many had such exemplary belief in their Internal Power, Symbols, and Talismans they where very difficult to conquer much less indoctrinate. The tyrants of ancient times sent entire armies to subdue them and often entire armies were laid to waste, many eluded those armies by going underground, deep into the mountains, and some even left this dimension, after all what does killing mind controlled soldiers really solve?

The greatest adversary to the human race has been the human race. No matter how much evidence we find that links Devils, Aliens, Spirits and various other life forms to the corrosion of our natural state, in all these stories you will find human traitors that gave them access to our inner circles. The entire human race was a collective brother and sisterhood capable of maintaining contact with one another across entire planetary systems. We were grouped more commonly as all Humanoids, not black man, white man, yellow man, etc. It is virtually impossible to break apart from the outside anything as strong as human will. This book is not about pointing the finger, this book is about Innerstanding our original state, how it was altered, how to grow back into it, and even excel beyond its original potential. At this moment we are in a degraded state, it is only pride that keeps the individual from admitting this. Power now lies mostly in monetary wealth, not spiritual essence one will always pass away the other is eternal. Common sense is not common.

This may sound a little confusing especially this early on, however, the earlier you see this the better. When they decided to make the Names for the Planets in English they really did began to turn things in an opposite direction. Searching for other Names indigenous tribes used for the Planets will turn up almost nothing. Some may think this is because in Ancients times we had no knowledge of the Cosmos, and of course this proves to be untrue. We are told the Sumerians, Egyptians, and a few indigenous tribes from Africa have the only details of the Names given to the Planets in ancient times. Whatever the case we can be sure that what we call the Planet Saturn in modern times may not be actually referring to the Planet with the rings, but more of an idea of Evil Sat, bought forth from Ur.

Our consciousness, when not hindered, will always look to the sky for answers. Our Spirit is from the sky or rather far out in space while our bodies are indeed flesh and will remain here as dust. When we innocently inquire about the names of Planets, Stars, and Moons wanting to learn more, we get names that are tainted with deception. The vibration of Ur is that of an animal, in fact so-called early man depicted the entire Cosmos as animal forms rather than the much greater concept Space stands for which is beyond normal life on Earth. It is highly unlikely we will find a horse on the Moon but this has not stopped them from naming the quadrants of the Moon Mare, like night”mare”.

Unlike most modern church participants those Initiated into various magical societies evoke Angels and Spirits all the time. They do this by various means; one key element involves drawing perfect stars inside of circles or squares. A symbol drawn is physical proof of ones intent. A perfect star is often made with a tool used by the Elite called an Angle. This word Angle is an anagram for Angel. The tool itself is the shape of an “L”, that’s right EL. If you notice when drawing a star it consist of straight lines, straight lines are opposite to nature which itself is a composite of spheres and circles, the body itself contains no straight lines. These straight lines are known as masculine while the curved lines are feminine. It is known that fleshly beings are categorized as Feminine despite there sexual orientation while heavenly Beings are known as Masculine due to their strong ethereal nature which can even withstand the force of being in close proximity to the Sun.

Reason : An Angle, the tool seen below the Masonic “G” in the shape of an “L” is used to draw straight lines while the protractor above is used to make the perfect circle to create Talismans.

There is recorded knowledge of 1/3 of the Angels in the Sphere of Saturn, rebelling. Those fallen ones came to Earth and intermingled with woman thus creating the term “Mankind” meaning kind of like man but not entirely. No matter how fictitious this may seem it is in fact true. These Beings go under the names of Rephaim, Nephilim, Annunaki, Titans, Giants, and Danites along with their offspring they make up the legends of various mythological creatures of various titles. This resulted from the union of the Angels with not only the women but also with the animals. These offspring became known as Demigods meaning half God, half man or animal. They possessed various powers that caused the indigenous tribes of the time to worship the Supreme Creators which was far from true.

The head of the Fallen Angels would place the Demigods over the people to rule them in a hierarchy or Pyramid structure. They would remain in contact with the Demigods from their habitations in various Constellations such as Orion. Ancient Aram indicates the Name of Orion originally being Nephila meaning Nephilim. Orion is depicted as a Giant man for this reason. There will be lots of Orion sync’s as we go on, they have guided much of what we have seen in the media as children growing up until this very day. As a child I remember watching a cartoon called Fraggles Rock which was about the life of the Fraggles especially their encounters with the Giants called Ogres of the land. In Pre-Christian Scandinavian Orion’s Belt is known as Friggles Rock, no doubt the Origin of the Name of the cartoon. There is a heavy amount of Scandinavian in our language.

Reason 9: The Daughters of Cain with whom the fallen Angels had companied, conceived but they were unable to bring forth their children, and many died. Of the children in the womb, some died and others split open the bellies of their mothers coming forth by the navel.....they thought evil continually and God bore with them for a time.

Entire Material and Ethereal Kingdoms below the third heaven were erected and hewn for their spiritual and physical residence. The task of building these lofty havens fell to the Humans in this world and the one to come, what a cruel treatment. Expansive kingdoms the slaves did build, but the fact was the Humans were in the lower dimensions with a bad case of memory loss only being allowed at times just to worship the God and bask in its false light. Those were the favored ones, the others lived much worse then when truly alive in unity with the Most High thus these lower planes became know as the Netherworld/Arralu//Amenti/Duat/Elysium/Sheol/Hades/Oz/The Matrix/Imperishable Devachanic Plane/Malkuth/Maya/Lemuria a place were injustice was allowed to rule through Igigi, Neters, Baalim, Valkries, Mares, and Manes for a time, since everything has its place in contrast.

Reason 10: Man has been the constructor for these Gods building them High Places so they may enjoy. What the Humans have gotten in return are lifetimes of being a servant with little reward. Their structures are always placed on Leylines to control the energy in the area. In order for many Regions to be free some building must be removed from the Leylines. They are binding the energy of freedom and suppressing clear thought. In history when structures bind the leylines for too long cataclysms occur to shake everything off of them.

Reason 11: The 2012 Olympics logo says Zion, even more diabolical is the final Olympian Ritual will return "home" to London on the leylines of their old monoliths. The Greek Olympians Hesta, Hephaestus, Aphrodite, Ares, Demeter, Hermes, Poseidon, Athena, Zeus, Artemis, and Apollo where their chief Gods most of them bloodthirsty Titans/Giants/Nephalim. Not many will see this all coming, only a few will escape. Disbelievers block their own way.

"We sent men, women, and even the Pure Ones to them to persuade them that there where multiple heavens and they were caught up in the lower dimensions deceived by the Stars, they were, and they would not listen." They would not forsake the Partners they had subscribed with The Most High imagining them to be in favor of their growth, in spite, the Gods gave them little and blocked the Path of Ascension. Thus there was a silence of man and woman's great deeds in the heavens and there was little to harvest, truly the people were not guided trading paper for life. Then the veil began to lift and once again man and woman recognized each other as the only source of harmony, we were all together then man and woman shaping and forming a new world. Truly our work is not in vain and just as the trees, we are numerous and patient, as We provide man and women their substance just as we all must live.

We are currently positioned in a place Kabbalistically known as Malkuth which means foundation. This is why the Gods often say the Earth is their footstool. Indeed some of the Spirit energies are so large it is true that Earth could be in fact used as a footstool by them. Malkuth consists of various life forms with limited senses, thus they are vibrating at a lower frequency in order to form something as solid as a Foundation. To make this easier to understand a rock is actually in motion although it is vibrating so slow it is heavy, hard, and what appears to be unmovable although it is just moving so slow you do not have the time to see its movement.

The more senses we lose we become more like a rock, which means our emotional movement and idea of things lesson as we descend. This is also the secret to why Gargoyles, The Sumerian Stone Cherubs, The Sphinx and various other stone figures that have survived from antiquity are all known to be in fact alive and resonating a certain type of energy. Lower life forms are also on a low vibration like rocks thus they at times inhabit stones. These figures are kept around for protection against other Entities by Magicians.

Reason 12: Pictured above are statues that have been passed from Magician to Magician. As you see here J.K. Rowling Author of the Harry Potter series in possession of the same Gargoyle John Dee, a well known magician used to keep in his possession. The spirit lives within the stone. The strength of stone is obvious by its durability. An Adept is familiar with all types of stones and the Elemental Gnomes who have wisdom of Earth and fashioning things out of Earth. Here are just a few buildings that are positioned on major Leylines. Leylines have been known since ancient times discovered by dowsing and also witnessing how things grow in certain areas. A spiraling tree is often on a Leyline. Below you see the Earth Grid of Major Leylines which you will find structures build upon. The smaller leylines are generally not mapped in such detail.

Planetary Grid Projection

There were also those who just signed up for the Pantheism since the ladder is ascending and descending, they naturally gravitated towards the negative. The lower dimensional Beings, which also make up the foundation we stand on, had its way with them while their “channel” was open and they spoke whatever message that would bring more energy and treasure to their coffers, they were led by distortion. Man and woman involved themselves with Beings that possessed and incarnated into their Human bodies. Some of these Beings either never had a vocal box or are no longer in possession of one nor a corporeal body to operate on the 3rd physical plane. Numerous they are and they could not be counted as if opening a sealed vault of misshaped things that spawn amongst themselves in what would seem like an instant. Pandora's Box, tricks of the God Pan Lord of Panic and Pandemic.

Those who were more interested in the fast route imagining that Spiritual work was a road to riches would inherit the curse of Ammon/Amon one of the first names given to Planet Jupiter and is in fact a very active Egyptian God. Jupiter is one of the largest Planets in this system. From here we will refer to Jupiter or Ammon as Amon so we can keep track of this Being. Even the Bible scripture gives a clue when it says "Thou canst serve both God and Mammon", unfortunately it didn't leave more detailed information. The "Am" in Amon is where the "Am" in America comes from and is the great I AM. You will find an advanced intelligent "Am"phibian called Oanes the fish God amongst them along with its offspring such as Dagon, they crossed into our world a long time ago under the Sumarian name E.A. (pronounced Aya) Lord and King of the S"ea". One of the greatest questions that will ultimately come to mind is; are the actual Planets themselves doing this, or are these malevolent Beings with various powers who have fooled man into believing they are the Planets?

To answer that we will have to consider a few things, the Planets themselves are in a fixed movement everything interacting together. I personally know there are many more Planets in our immediate system that most know nothing of such as Vulcan. The heaviest spiritual involvement from these "Sat"ellites seems to come from the Asteroids like Venus and Ceres along with what we call Meteorites, "falling stars", and comets, that seem to cause many of the problems. There are also hollowed artificial satellites such as our Moon Sin, and Phobos which are bases of some sort.

Think of this also, the Bible is supposed to be a Holy Book and in the end you find a passage that says something like "Whoa to the one who adds or takes away from what is written in this book, We will add to him the plagues of this Book and take away his Name from the Book of Life". There is obviously a faction that cares nothing of this warning because every time a new addition of the Bible comes out, there are serious changes. People need to start seeing that the ones who are changing it care nothing for the curses because there are none and the Book itself has stories borrowed from everywhere, such was the way of these people.

The negative forces are infamous for lying, if a Being says "I AM Amon I AM Jupiter the Planet you know as the biggest", I find this no different from a man who says "I AM the Son of the Sun and because of that I have leave to destroy everything in my path". Man has been notorious for blindly following these possessed deluded traitors who are blurred by their own desire to iconoclast themselves in the mold of time and usurp the Throne of the Great One which is unreachable and immeasurable. Surely a man can charge into battle with great strength imagining he will vanquish his foes and then the next thing, he awakes in evil Elysium Jahannon for such foolish thoughts. Everything material will pass away at some point thus it is only wise to seek immortality with everything at your disposal letting nothing impede your way. Around you at all times are those who will never see what's coming they do not desire it nor believe it thus they have shut the door on themselves and they are wandering in the dark. Protect yourself from becoming enveloped in their aura of deluded drunkenness where everyday for them is the same as the last and they see it not that time draws nigh, what a waste.

The Judgment itself is taking place now, we are in 2012 at this moment because of the delay of the Gregorian calendar. Many have knowingly forfeited their chance to ascend and thus they are like crabs in the bucket pulling everyone else they can around them into the same prison they created for themselves. Beware of those who you know are involved in some form of dark occult practice it is now time for the Unseen Hand or Dark Lord to exact recompense from them. They are now being used to betray even those they were the closest to. Many of them did not expect this time to come and were lied to. They imagined the Ritual a game a mere fraternity hazing, now they have Phantoms as their companions that fill their dreams with absurd visions, there is no rest for the wicked.

A Sorceress had done all the bidding for the Dark Lord and took pride in it. The Dark Lord promised her he would award her deeds in the Underworld. With this promise she worked more vigorously causing division and setting traps for those who found themselves in her web. On her untimely death she was transferred to the Underworld where the negative forces seized her and commenced to torturing her pulling her soul apart. She cursed them profusely and demanded to speak with the ruler of Dominions who was watching from afar. When approaching she said, "I have done everything you have required of me and even more, a have sown discord with the peaceful, and separated many from love and happiness. This I have done for you and the reward you promised me, where is it"? He said, I lied, did they not tell you I was the Father of Lies? I find more pleasure in betrayal than I do in honor, think not my titles go without proof and he waved his hand for his minions to commence as he watch.

Reason 13: The Greek God Jupiter and his consort Juno, indeed this is not a Planet this is a man, imposter! Obviously not a God for daughters. Planets do something entirely different then impersonate themselves as men who have women, nor do they ever appear as men. Think.

As will be made clear what we are dealing with at times is interplanetary, extra dimensional, highly intelligent space skum. One simply has to think that although some may perceive already that we are alone in this Universe, which is profoundly un-true, if we blew up Earth it would cause a chain reaction of cataclysms for the entire galaxy thus we have been governed by higher forces that oversee the timing of events so the crazy Dictator doesn't slip on the nuclear kill switch. There are Principalities, Rulers, Forces, and Dominions in place working out an entirely larger scheme that makes Earth more of a value subdued, not destroyed. Think of the loss of resources and biological data. Earth is a storehouse of genes working together well enough. For one moment do not doubt all these genes are in cryo tubes fully cataloged and ready to implant into other worlds which is a part of Terraforming a Planet and getting it prepared for higher life forms like me and you.

Since we know there are other Beings with other senses we can endeavor to obtain those senses also. This separates us from animals who seldom openly enlist the help of humans. This also means that some who have higher senses have already discovered harmony, the benefits of a collective mind, the power in Numbers, the Elements, etc. thus there is a place to go. It is entirely possible that the knowledge of even how to alter an entire planetary frequency with just insects that also emit sound frequency is in the Orion arsenal of technology. This moves us further into the intelligence of Beings who are more advanced in some ways than us. We could go so far in imagining what they have and what they can do and we would more than likely be right, however, what is of value here is to show that they are not the Creator of all things. They to had a Creator and if we find ourselves in service, it should be to That only. They are no doubt involved in our evolution; there can be no question of it. Just as the wheel has saved us endless amounts of time and effort so we may travel further, faster. If these Beings gave us T.V. or should I say things like the Cathode Ray Tube and the Integrated Circuit that's enough altering right there, case closed.

The way many Beings feel about Earth is they would not give something that looks like dust compared to Antares and Betelgeuse the honor of destroying this whole Galaxy. Everything must evolve in time and for this segment of the Human race that time is long overdue. The lower dimension now awaits occupying the spot we are in now. Since the information vault is now open you can gain a higher level of esoteric intelligence, without being fully Initiated, and thus stuck in some lower dimension slave world ruled by jealous megalomaniacs because you joined the wrong group chanting Namaste, "Name Sat". Some of the most valuable portions of this information has come from Higher Beings still reaching back to help along the children which we all are, they gave no names, and they demanded no worship save to the Original Creator in which all things will eventually have to face and it is patient Shrouded within itself Majestic and Wise. Many of the forces that have invisibly protected and guided the Human race have long since ascended beyond points where they can any longer interact with the Earth because of contamination and its lack of pure ideas thus there is a heavy need for new Ethereal Planetary workers, not Golden Age materialist.

On the flip side there are those working with the dark force that have kept the masses in this recent segment of time away from the true wisdom. Their doctrine is to Know, Dare, Will, and keep Silent. One should understand their Oath to keep silent, they are all around and they would never reveal their identity. Those who have read works like the Art of War and the Law of Seduction should get a general idea of how they operate in business much less in the Spiritual World. These particular books written by Sun Zhu along with works by Machiavelli such as the Prince and various other shrewd titles are required reading for the upcoming business Elite. In addition they do not just read but put into play the methods being elaborated upon as if the world is only a giant chess board with human pieces.

Even now this particular work which you hold in your hands is allowed to reach the mainstream not because they could not easily stop it, but because it fulfills another one of the Prophecies, thus they cannot plug the loop hole that has been made. Although they plan unceasingly the Most High is the greatest planner. Have you not noticed the forces that seek to hinder always tell what is to come in the future before it happens? Even in the Bible there is always a solemn warning by the Prophet before the destruction. This is in fact a Law of the Universe which exist so that all conscious Beings on a Planet may have a choice of whether they want to participate in the collectively planned future of that Planet, attempt to do something to prevent it, or emancipate themselves from it entirely which is always an option. We do hold the master button on our personal Earth life if we want to really exit, we can make it happen, some type of choice always clings to us. Our future is the beautiful fractalised shape of a myriad of choices.

As you see within the word “Planet” there is a “Plan” here which we will just call “Planned Net 10” which means the end of one world and of course many new worlds will begin after. Our status in the ungoverned worlds beyond has much to do with our accolades and milestones that we have crossed in our previous world of origin. This information always remains on our Aura even if we are unaware of it. Think of yourself known throughout the whole Universe as someone who assisted your race in Ascension. As all things are recorded that’s what the record will reflect once the deed is accomplished. Every action we make will always be contained somewhere, it determines what we are to face next on various levels of action and reaction, it can always be accessed and cannot be erased just balanced. If you were strong did you protect the weak? If you were truly wise did you share your knowledge to your best ability? If you possessed wealth did you distribute the goods committed to your charge?

It was known that each segment of astrological time is controlled by a particular Planet. That Planet is responsible for emitting the energy that is necessary to accomplish what has to be done during that cycle. The Universe can be looked at as a big clock in which the Planets rotate positions as if on massive cogs. It is known that Mars was once in the position we are occupying now in the Cosmos, they were the 3rd Planet with a lush surface, oceans, etc. What is left now after their wars is just their core in which we still find war torn life, Mars was 3 times larger than Earth, a sad story that was. The name Mars and Wars make it not hard to piece together what happened on the scorched red Planet known to be the Martial Planet of this system. The Planet was split into two warring factions that went to a stage of war we would call biologically nuclear. The effects were far reaching creating a ghost world of infected souls. Lemuria in fact means “Ghost World”. A remnant of one of the Martian factions were sent to Earth just in case their race faced total oblivion, they are today known as the Zulu Tribe of Ifrika. In their legends you will find the history of their advent from Mars, they were warriors they have no shame in admitting this. The wars fought on Mars continue here on Earth between the two factions called Atlantians and Lemurians. We find Shaka Zulu as one of the earliest African films introduced into our physic for a reason that will be obvious later. The original Phoenicians were also of darker skin tone.

It may be of value for you to start seeing these Deities, Gods, Spirits, Daemons, as Beings alien to you because there are many of them that did not originate here on Earth. In ancient times people had gained the knowledge of this and began to emulate the movement of Energies, Stars, and Planets, and thus some became completely alienated from the people. This is also when the Elitist religions of the “Chosen People” began to flourish. Those who wished to be in power during a certain era would make pacts and oaths with the Spirit energies and from there they would become fleshly vessels doing the bidding of these rouges by declaring war on all unbelieving infidels. Even the word “Peace” means something must be split up and only a portion remains. The word Unity also means a unit or part, not the whole thing. We have grown so accustomed to these words we don’t see that every time nations use it as a reason to go to war, we get exactly what we ask for, sending in the Units to tear things to Peaces. The world has now been divided into so many pieces we have all become isolated from one another and thus we think our true enemy is our fellow man and women and silently in the Cabal rules one who is not Human at all. I shall smite its face.

These factions were often at war; they began through submission and then continued with religion. This brought about complete conversion of the captor. Those who became initiated into the dark Brother and Sisterhoods Cults where taught the finer details of the Spirit World and how it works. Vile Beings in the Realm of afterlife betwixt dimensions began hording the Human souls after death. Other times we were made while living to go to physical war in the Name of the Gods which only hurt us, fragile flesh is. This was forbidden times, man was lost worshipping Gods, Stars, Asteroids, and Moons, thus Destiny was created. Just as you see in the story of Jesus, the Essenes, known then as the Magi, were following a Star that indicated to them the birth of what they had been waiting for. You will find many sects of ancient men that follow the Stars. The Ishmaelite Arabs along with the Egyptians had extensive knowledge of such things due to the clarity of the Stars in the desert on a clear Arabian Night. Of course the knowledge and Genius of the Genie which was a Jinn or Jann. Many of which are trapped in desert regions in the sand. Sand is glass they were confined there encased under sheets of it until men “removed them from the bottle”. They could beyond doubt prove that when a baby was born a star appeared first thus they had knowledge of when someone important was born.

Reason 14: The Egyptians were given extensive star charts of animalistic nature in which they emulated. The Priesthood itself was in such complexity the people were made to dedicate every act of daily life to a separate Star or Deity leaving little room for natural growth and unadulterated consciousness expansion.

Subtly this becomes another reason why we as a people become servants of Kings, Queens, Presidents, Dictators, and Icons who all follow the Procession. I will not bore the reader with tales that can seem as myth in this primitive time with a futuristic coating we live in. We will just dive right into things as they are now, this way you have little to research because it is happening all around you as you live the truth. The world has now become a very large version of the boy who cried wolf, now that the wolf is upon us few believe that there is even such a thing. So many have come saying they know what the future holds, only to disappoint those who felt foolish to believe them and this has made the people weary of warning and preparation. In this I know you will find an energy that will arouse you once more.

Listen and I will instruct thee once more how to turn this language in thy favor. Gird thy comprehension and fail not to seek innerstanding in these words. Humans have grown indeed complex and have no simple answer for their troubles so look not for something easy in explanation. The time grows nigh and many are at the end of their cycle, some raising to eternal beauty and others to layers of retribution, sheets of fire in which they must be passed through with no end, miserable. If you say "I am saved" Lo you are in error, none can be sure, if you say "I will bow down now" Nay it will be impossible to stand up. It is wise to make haste in embedding your mind with exact knowledge beyond reproach so you may position yourself to receive a fair judgment as you have been already observed. The faithful will find these words sweet to their ears while the faithless will be made to listen fore their Jinn even seek a way to escape what is to come and it will most surely not delay past its appointed time.

El A.K.A Saturn A.K.A. Father Time for short was the God known to rule the Age of Aquarius which we now find ourselves in again as of February 14, 2009 Valentines Day. The symbol of Valentines day is a heart being pierced by and arrow, it is the esoteric symbolism of when our Universe known as the Sagittarius Dwarf would be passing through the heart of the Milky Way crossing into the Parallel Universe B for a Galactic lineup. At this very moment while we are crossing the Great Divide an opportunity that has been proclaimed for Aeons is taking place for those who are in the know.

Reason 15: This is by far not the first Aquarian or Golden Age, in fact this only represents the time of a shift. The energy of the Cosmos actually assists a person, if they do a little seeking, to find Higher Truth. Once that time passes those who have not seized Enlightenment will come around the cycle again after death remembering little of what happened before. The Golden Age Movement is designed to get the whole world to rewind and re-live a time long past. The most recent Golden Age in our history was the times of Hitler and Nazi Germany.

The opportunity is the merging of collective minds and frequencies allowing an individual to become the portal for higher essence and their higher purpose, purpose equals energy. This other world is what we glimpse ourselves in at times while we are sleep or in vision, in this world everything appears as it really is and there are few limits. One has higher senses, can fly through the Ether, considers not time, and can make contact with multiple Beings. Omnipresence, the art of being in more than one place at a time, is possible in this parallel realm thus you can visit multiple people all in one moment. This is why it is easier to contact other Beings while in Lucid Sleep, so the controllers do their best to keep us from being conscious while in that world, even more than they do in this one. We tend to watch our dreams rather than control them, as in society we have a tendency to take things as they come and react accordingly rather than getting directly involved in the big picture.

On the 3rd dimension there are physical laws against Omnipresence generally you can only separate your body into 2 parts while on 3rd dimension. One of those two when split is basically a vegetable, the body, when lacking a soul will appear limp with shallow life signs until the Spirit reinters it, the technique itself when not a natural gift takes proper training as Dr. Monroe revealed in his Hemisphere Synchronization techniques before the CIA gained control of his work and altered it, or maybe he was the CIA all along especially since his father was a known CIA agent.

When you are “Lucid” riding the dream like a wave you can call forth Beings and if you have the might to withstand them they will appear, then you will see what they really are and you will learn why many of them we should not be worshipping. Destruction is a main part of keeping up the Chaos on Earth and many of these Beings are destroyers. Now that the Hindu Pantheism is the preference for the New World Order they have unleashed a whole retinue of Destroyers like Shiva, Kali, and Latchme. They con “Khan” the person by telling them to think they must be destroyed completely to be made new again as they dissolve into nothingness. They are instructed to chant and meditate on the Destroyer which is a weakening tool. This is no different than nonsense like boiling frogs’ eyes in pigeon’s blood which Agrippa used to recommend to Caesar. The end if these things could never be positive because it began in negativity. Kali is bedecked in the severed heads of the victims she has destroyed. We will have to learn again how to judge with common sense and take things at face value.

For many of us our life is attached to time, the clock is one of the most valuable tools in controlling the mind. The Elite know there becomes no use in counting time unless you plan on it running out. Imagine in immortality and infinity someone actually counting the hours and minutes, talking about useless. Saturn, also known as Cronos, which is where words like Chronological and Chronograph come from, was elected for time because of His rings which signified like an old tree His length of time in the Galaxy. In other words those attempting to learn the age of this Universe looked first to Saturn and the debris in its rings containing residue of lost Planets that entered the Golden Age of Destruction and Chaos now long forgotten although their essence still remains.

Reason 16: The stunning rings of El, rich with the debris of forgotten Planets. Planets such as Maldek and Vulcan are seen clearly on ancient star maps but are now somehow gone. Some I believe are still in existence, others have left this Galaxy, and some were destroyed in wars.

The sign of Aquarius or the Golden Age bears witness with two wavy lines in which some say are signs of water and others that of lightning bolts. Known as the Age of Man the Water being dumped out signifies the cleansing or deluge. The mystery of lightening was shown by shooting an electron in sterile water and watching as a single cell life form appeared out of thin air or a portal depending upon your perspective. That showed us that life could be created from nowhere out of virtually nothing except energy, this of course destroys the Evolution Theory. At this point there are many Beings leeching from the Human race, under many guises.

Reason 17: The classic white bearded depiction of Saturn. Few on the outer circle have figured out Saturn is affiliated with the Serpent. Notice the larger Serpent underneath Saturn's arm, not to mention what is happening to the child. They also refer to the Bearded God as the Great Architect although He destroys everything He builds. This is why Santa and the Wizard of Oz fit this motif.

Reason 18: The Brotherhood of Saturn is in big service today underpinning various organizations. Depicted below are the Inner Circle. The Outer Circle consist of all of the religious projects erected for global domination this is Sat. Saturday, Satan, Santa (Satan), Saint (Satins), Sabbath, etc. Sir, Sur, Sar, Ser, and Sor are all Names for the Serpent energy ye shall know them by their works.

Long before the Third Reich, Amon was worshipped as the chief Deity of many nations. The knowledge of Amon being one of the largest Planet in this solar system was known since ancient times. You can then see why many wanted to find favor with Amon since they believed it was the biggest thus it was also the strongest. Again, it is the name changes that sometimes throw us off the trail and that is of course if we have even decided to investigate what could be going on beyond the level of petty politics. Amon is also Pa, Thor, Jove, and Pater pronounced Potter.

*Reason 19:
When you see the Bearded depiction you already know who is involved.

Europa, a Moon in Amon's orbit is where Europe got her name from. This Goddess from Crete daughter of the Giant Sidon set up a civilization where we now find Europe. Many of the Beings are referred to as Giants because in other civilizations their home Planets are much bigger than Earth. It can be assumed that their height proportion is in conjunction with the size of their Planet. Amon has 63 moons orbiting it while we have only one and that one Moon has a lot of influence over the minds of our planetary inhabitants because of the magnetic energy. As will be seen more and more Humans are energy and we have a magnetic core and poles just the same as a Planet hence the term Bi-Polar.

To show a brief link we will talk of another tool used against us which is money. This is by far the most effective tool so I will discuss its "Spirit Origin". The money we use now is "Pa"per we are no longer really using currency made of metals as you may have notice. In the old days if you had lots of Silver or Gold you at least had the energy of these metals around you and they carried certain types of strength that gave one certain spiritual advantages, now we are on paper. Why? The main advent of this was with the first Pope of whom his parents were "Pa"pists. A Papist is a person who makes paper or "Pa"rchment. This magical art was known to be taught by one of the fallen Angels and is discussed in the book of Enoch under, cutting of roots. Certain trees when blended together and formed into parchment have a binding effect. This is the basis for the special paper a talisman must be inscribed on. When you look at the currency of the world, which has been revealed with the U.S. one dollar bill, you will see many magical symbols, especially Stars, and even a magnetic strip to give it power. The paper itself holds a binding energy that perpetuates our desire for it; this was one of many wicked things done by the "Pa"pacy by direction of the esoteric knowledge of the Jesuits.

Reason 20: While pretending to teach moderation and piety the vice generates for the Wicked One spew their poison of money/Mammon over the Earth. Few know of the Black Pope which controls the Jesuit arm of the Papacy. Money has become the stumbling block of the world. I've heard many say "he is our Pope" indeed they will share his lot. To the left is an "astral depiction of the Pope" the use of trees for magic has been their main tactic. Tree, Three, Word, Wood.

Looking at our world today one should not be surprised that destruction and chaos beyond preconceived proportion could be possibly looming in the future. We have the NWO Zionist who no longer want money only blood, The Annunaki Ship Nibiru or Planet X which can be seen from the South Pole lazily headed this way, the End of the 13 Moon Mayan Calendar, Global Warming beyond reversal, Anti-Christ's in Las Vegas and India, Quetzalcoatl the feather serpent scheduling a tour, the proposed Alien Invasion warming their ships, The Galactic Line up clicking into place, a population doubling by 2012 and a host of other wild cards to give us a jolt into the future. It is safe to say maybe one should start tuning in to Higher Energy and phone home just in case one of these things just happens or maybe even all of them all at the same time.

In any event this book will serve to prepare the sincere, while still making a good read for the ever remaining skeptic which I began as myself. It is better to think of it this way, since the Earth continues to be polluted and mistreated with no clear sign of massive reversal, we can move a step ahead and just come to the conclusion that all this is happening to promote us to wake up from the "s" mothering and see what else is out there. We must connect with our other half then with Spirit newly mended we can go to the next wave length. With this formulation we are now wholly prepared or re-"membered", everything we need being internal, thus we are self sufficient to move about the Galaxy to meet new life which equals new experience. This ensures our proper growth and of course that we don't get bored in Immortality caught in infinite loops of Qlipoth.

Just how long can we as a people really wake up every morning, battle traffic, suck fresh smog, get to work, give half of what we earn to Fascist, come home and eat Codex Alimentarius infested food, get digitally mind controlled by the Flat Screen, go to sleep, not remember our dreams and start over again the next day. C'mon have you noticed that for many it seems like the movie Ground Hogs Day, February 2, the 33rd day of the year, and why are we taking this? There is something that has not been figured out, not because of the lack of intelligence, but rather the height of distraction. I personally believe that right now in your hands is what you need to get your perspective focused once again on the main picture.

The census says our population will actually double by the year 2012 the reader should highly consider if the Earth can handle double the trouble it is in now. It is due time that the world change and the same energy used to destroy for so long will now consume those who used it in vain as they are consumed in the reflux current. The Elite knew there would be those that would come able to convert their negative energy they spewed upon us into positive. They tried to tell us it was only One, the anagram for Neo, that could do it which is far from the truth. They feared and anticipated that the younger generation, who seem to have the unique ability of converting bad into good, would catch on at some point and Break the Matrix. This term The Matrix comes from the head of the Greek Goddess Pantheon known as Medatrix of whom their descendants come from Medea/Media.

Reason 21: The youth of today withstand heavy bombardments of mind control and degradation some becoming stronger and smarter than their predecessors while others hopelessly face early termination if the mental and physical poisoning of the Elite continues.

There are those who serve consolidated dark energies under a Elitist pretense and thus have been eating away at society for centuries. We will uncover their deeds and their involvement in this Golden Age amongst many other things it behooves you to know as they are trampled beneath our feet. This will not be to stop them, no it is too late for that, the judgment is Set for the children of Seth and they would just as soon push all the nuclear buttons before they would cease and desist, what a miserable brood they are, even now our Government looms over 50 pounds of weapons grade Plutonium in which it would take only one to blow up the whole Earth. This Plutonium is being kept in the satellites we have in orbit over the Planet. This serves as a way to keep the benevolent forces from entering our atmosphere and saving the many species besides Humans that exist here, not to mention it is our responsibility to emancipate our own race.

The world government has proclaimed to benevolent extraterrestrials that if they seek to “physically” intervene then they can pick up the ashes. This is why you don’t see vivid aid from other Benevolent Humanoid factions, they remain at the status of “unseen”, they show us the way through signs and seldom materialize. I have personally viewed videos recorded by NASA showing the use of the Plasma Cannon developed by Nikoli Tesla to shoot at other space craft seeking to enter our atmosphere. Whether those craft were friendly or hostile cannot be determined by the video, however, it is safe to say that the prison Planet is being guarded. Our minds now serve as the only link to those who seek to give us assistance, internal clarity is all they need to contact us, it is good this is all. It takes millions to go in space by physical ship, but it is free with your body. What a treat the Most High gave us a million dollar ethereal vacation vehicle.

This is written so you will be able to recognize friend from foe allowing you to steer your course to what comes after the destruction and chaos which is surely new worlds. You will do all of this while evading what you will see so many get caught up in because of disbelief and none preparation. The world leaders are not the allies they have showed on numerous occasions they are merely puppets that are fully animated and can put on quite a show that often deludes the non-observant.

Reason 22: Politics is all a game, the joke is on us. Time and again the masses fall for the trick.

We sent Warners to them and they taunted them saying “Show us this God you speak of, you are crazy and deluded were is It we cannot see It, thus they imagined they could see Pure Energy with two eyes and not the one given to them by the Creator which they kept closed and beyond function in the center of their heads. So they where divided amongst themselves wondering if what was spoken was truth and they fell under conviction. They returned to one of the Warners with threats saying “give us the Name of your God and we shall see” but alas the Warner could not provide a Vibration familiar to them so they stoned him, raised him as a Martyr, and invented a Name that was pleasing to them.

Reason 23: When the Third Eye is activated the Illusion collapses and then you see the world as it truly is.

The Oath of Silence has kept many people from telling you what is detailed here in this fabulous work. The first reason most were told to keep this under the strictest confidence was the ability for it to allow a powerful system to continue unchecked and running with few interruptions. Those keeping the secrets could only benefit as long as what they were doing, in its totality, remained a secret. Most organizations especially secret societies are compartmentalized in a way where each group is only holding a fraction of the truth thus the new initiates never know the complete plan.

Reason: Old plans are now coming to their completion and all the workers for the Unseen Hand are in key places of Government waiting to carry out the next part of the plan.

Reason 24: All important positions of power even past the Presidency are run by individuals who are initiated into Secret Societies. They don't keep their involvement a secret just their practices. One only needs to go back 200 years and they will find the entire "civilized" world involved in dark magic and Grimoires. Countless novels were written by men who had made pacts with demoniac life forms to represent them and do their bidding. This became so popular demons trapped in jars, talismans, gems, and various tools of dark magic were sold on the black market at high value. The underworld operates in the dark, it is hidden from plain view.

The leaders of this world go about every day with ease and receive little attention by the masses as they crush the weak expressing no remorse. A simple look at the Criminal News Network “CNN” and you will see glorified slaughter in high definition. Many that have risen in efforts to oppose the tyrants have often been unsuccessful due to their lack of knowledge about the High Places and also in regards to how the Elite possess and control power. It is time that we admit we are not dealing with dummies that just need to be voted out of office, there is more evidence of a massive plot that need be put to ruin.

Leaders like Martin Luther King arose attempting to free the people but still remained trapped to the Religion that did little for those he represented. The first ship that brought Nubians to America was named Jesus. The most Christianity seemed to do for the Africans was make them more passive brainwashed servants. In fact pacifist movements always come into play when the people were finally ready to rebel against the oppressor at the cost of their lives. There is a certain power that possesses a person when they are willing to lay down their life so that the children may have one. This power often preserves the life of the courageous; this is the true act of unselfishness, a noble deed. After all, the adults that have lived till at least 30 in our current era have seen so much of life already. We have enjoyed what it took lifetimes for our predecessors to experience all in one vacation. We should thus do our duty in carving out a world for the innocent youth who already bare the gifts of the future in their complexly beautiful minds. This is something I believe our earliest ancestors attempted to do thus we must finish what they started.

INTEGRATION LEADER RECEIVES AWARD
... Rabbi Jacob Rothchild presents bowl to King

Reason 25: Martin Luther King receives an award from Illuminist Jacob Rothschild. The Illuminati planned Pro-Peace agendas all over the world to make the people docile while they put the finishing touches on the New World Order. The tactics often used remain the same; many have become traitors to their people for a moment of power that they will forever regret but they lack reason deluded by promises of great material wealth which will corrode under the inevitable pressure of time. We shall take up account with their souls.

When looking today at those that still rule, their high ranks have been depleted thus they are making new pacts and selling what does not even belong to them. This extends beyond material resources and has crossed into Plasmic and Ethereal supplies bartered throughout the trade routes that extend beyond Earth. All the miles that have been walked, all the pain that has been endured, all the walls that have been torn down we have but one final task by delivering the final blow to the tyrants before they reinforce or re-legion.

The soldier can no longer continue in this present day since he knows what he is doing is obviously not for patriotism. So they now put him behind a screen to kill and make it look like a video game as he flies the drone like its on Playstation 3. What he kills no longer brings a feeling since even the victims appear as just white light's or blobs of infrared on the screen in the tank, plane, or battleship. Since the world is now in the information age every soldier has access to Zeitgeist and many more publications revealing the intention behind the hideous wars of the past. This makes him question his role in such disasters since he sees that it is not to protect the country that we continue to kill thousands. Since they foresaw this happening the chemicals already put into the soldier's diet to keep him subservient were increased, he was removed from the frontline and put behind the computer to deal out death still remaining under the foot of the "Gen"eral.

Reason 26: With movies like Zeitgeist, Fahrenheit 911, and numerous Youtube videos the modern soldier is well informed of the internal plots and "Black Bag" jobs of the Elite. Soon the true Hero, which is given another name entirely, will rise from amongst their ranks turning the tide against the negative forces. Injustice will not continue forever. Even a broken clock is right at least two times a day. The HERO-HORE-WHORE was a temple prostitute esoteric story character. We are much greater, encrusted seven fold with positive energy as armor, the Mighty.

The biggest issue we have with overpopulation is people seldom greet each other anymore. When passing by on the street, jogging in a park, walking on the beach or pretty much anywhere unless people are drinking and then nothing is clear. Truly if we are prepared to see a one-eyed green Alien and accept them before we can see our own neighbor who may be of different ethnicity but a Human nonetheless, we have missed the mark. There was a time that if you happen to see another Human while in transit you immediately greeted each other with hugs and kisses of astonishment as you tried to communicate by first giving gifts and showing them things you had found on your journey as they did the same. You would explain to them the various territories you have crossed, what resources were there, and what to be aware of. Often times you learned their customs and came to respect their individuality marveling at how the Creator made things so diverse. Now that has faded away and people are looked at as expendable, some even as worthless by others as racism increases. They have forgotten if you have climbed up on the ladder you are in a perfect position to help the person below you. Instead they give them a boot in the face knocking them down further. We must re-establish communication. When you look around you if you see someone is lonely or troubled, speak to them. I find it amazing men will speak with devils, demons, and brutes but not their own Kin.

Reason 27: The unique blend of ethnicities is one of the greatest assets of Earth. We have so many things to share with one another while religion has kept us divided, teaching us not to mingle with one another. Our souls are all unique and none are the same thus we operate as a team with multiple functions endowed with splendor and beauty, it is only the blind that cannot see this.

People, no matter the color, never overcame and they still face a constant barrage of self degrading tactics especially by the sell outs of the Music industry bombarding the world with low frequency sounds. This is not just exclusive to the African Americans but all races that have members who in thinking of only of themselves have become the catalyst used by the dark Elite to deceive their people. The Brotherhood of Ma sent “Ma”hat”ma” Ghandi a firm contact of the Theosophical Society, as the Mahatmas and “Ma”treiahs have always been. They where sent to quell the disturbances in India with a pro-peace movement so the British could regain control as the uprisings began. The Indians, a people tired of being enslaved on their own territory by the British, finally reached boiling point. They pacified them through Mahatmas pro-peace teachings and kept them from taking back Persia until England could regain strength from spreading itself too thin in its hasty plans for complete world domination. Now they have turned their country into a giant telemarketing call center.

Reason 28: Modern research in behavioral science and gestures has shown all the individuals on the left to be insincere. The latest Lord Matrieya positioned in the center of Globalist Benjamin Crème is scheduled to make his advent once the U.S. Economy collapses. Lord Matrieya has already appeared in several countries of the Orient and all the Spiritual leaders are endorsing him. Matrieya says he is the Matrieya, Messiah, and Mahdi that all religions have proclaimed to be awaiting the arrival of. His miracles so far have been magnetizing water in which people can enter and become healed. There will be no limit to these types of deceptions in the last days as the science and energy of the body produces what appears to be miracles to people who don't know they can do the same thing.

If you ask me did these men and women know how they are being used, I will tell you that I believe some do not. It seems they believed in peace so much it filled them completely beyond understanding of bigger pictures. They could not be themselves if it was under some type of false pretense, to me this is no different from the Pastor of the church, the Congressman with the beautiful family and the great smile, the Bartender, or the inspired Musician who bring forth the works of degradation.

Reason 29: Media Mogul Shawn Combs is actually wearing the Maltese cross which symbolizes a heavier involvement in the Zionist Agenda. This cross cannot be worn unless you are an Initiate. Even Rapper Jay-Z under the label Rockafella Records could not use that name without some type of "granted" affiliation by civil law. They are willing puppets selling out to the Illuminists to push "Rape Music" that gradually destroys the mental and physical moral of the listener. Rock has always been a Tool and right now the pieces fit on why all this is coming about.

There are others who are very conscious of what they are doing. We find people like Emperor Hallie Salassie still revered by the war torn Ethiopians of Nubia who are clueless to the paramount role he played in subduing that once rich fertile country. He turned their remaining resources over to the Queen who he was in constant retinue with. You see the Jamaicans jammin' to Rastafarian tunes with little if no knowledge of who Ras is. Ras is another form of Ra/Marduk a God introduced into Nubia by Ramses II on his maddening mission to be the greatest Pharaoh to bring about conquest of the whole world. That position he never achieved thus he defaced the Temples and Shrines of the Egyptian ancestors removing the names and bodies of the previous inhabitants. Surely this was a dark man that would do anything for his personal gain thus he prostituted the people to the Gods of the Underworld more than any in his lineage.

Reason 30: First Hallie Sallassie was exiled from Nubia and reared as a child by Zionist. He is given a first class education and then reinserted back into Nubia where he becomes Emperor. He then proceeds to divide the land and relinquish its resources to the Monarchy. He is seen here with a Young Queen Elizabeth, Theodore Roosevelt, and the Pope.

When you see and study all this you begin to realize why not much progress in the right direction has been made for Humanity. The people we are taught to idolize, our Revolutionaries, Presidents, Dictators, Religion Leaders etc. are placed in front of us like a carrot dangles in front of a rabbit. We want to believe we can elect one person to handle all the troubles of the world so we can go back to our daily programs. It is decreed that until we come together and take control of our world, those in power now who do not care about Humanity like me and you, will continue to decimate it. As long as we keep trusting them and remaining lazy and insolent to what we get to do, which is take our world into harmony, we will not feel the yoke lift. As good people we want to believe that someone like Obama could change our course although every indicator told us he would not. This is no different than thinking Christopher Columbus discovered America when there where already entire maps conscribed before he was even spermatozoa detailing the whole world from an aerial view and it was not flat.

Reason 31: As shown on CNN Obama has more Elitist in his lineage than most Presidents in U.S. History. Zionism is not a color it is an idea that is not even Hebrew.

It is safe to say that what is put directly in front of us, especially through popular media, needs our personal investigation and common sense before it can be trusted. The sheer energy of crowds envelops all who are in the midst. As hearts begin to sync up all are in the hands of the so-called world leaders and in the past, few have lead in the right direction as they grope about the darkness of Kali Yuga gathering all the resources for their private groups consuming far more than the average citizen and never loosening the yoke. We cannot continue to be looked at as resources rather than Human Beings. Taking the mainstreams word for it seems to always prove unintelligent, they are liars and they will say and do anything to make the masses disbelieve in what we have felt for so long which is that Religion, Politics, Social, and Educational structures are developed to hinder, not free the people less they raise the whole Earth which can be seen itself as a large ship, into the higher heavens that those that have fallen cannot ascend because it burns away all impurities.

The Gods need not money it is man who needs the money while the Gods divvy up what is more precious to them, the Gold or the Soul. With taxes taking 40% and church taking 10% what is one to do about the baby? The religion of Christianity has done enough on its own for anyone with a keen eye to see something may need to be questioned. Even the scripture says "the proof of wisdom will be within the type of people it produces". As I often say many of those who are in church are only there because of the "con"viction of the Lord, whatever that statement really means, it sounds more like a jail sentence. Anyone who does not see religion as simply stairs to the top will often get stuck on one level or another thus never entering complete enlightenment and only perceiving its premature phases. Enlightenment itself comes with having a firm foundation of truth, unshakable, not able to be moved as it is fortified in exactness. That exactness comes when the real truth of whatever faith you elect falls upon your ears. At least at that moment you have an opportunity to really serve the God you claim to worship. You will now have the hidden doctrine of these faiths which is generally reserved for the Priests.

Reason 32: When Rome merged with Egypt they borrowed the Rites of Isis casting Jesus known as Iesu as the new Horus. We are not saying this individual did not exist he in fact did, however, what we are questioning is the final destination of the Christian soul which is the Underworld just like it was with the Rites of Isis. Ra is ruler of the Underworld he is better known as Amen-Ra. This is why all Christian p"ra"yers are concluded with Amen. The Latin word for prayer which is Oration indicates their power is in Orion.

In 1999 a movie titled the Matrix was released and made its way to the top as the box office churned the propaganda machine with numbers rivaling Star Wars. The city of freedom they gave the name Zion, blatant Zionist propaganda as even churches pride themselves on being called Mount Zion. Just as Bob Marley heads sway to the tunes as he sings about Zion the city depicted as having no worries and this is anything but true. The defeat of the mind of the masses was subtle, not by force, when the flutes, cymbals, and lyres play then the formidable human force is lulled to sleep.

Reason 33: Many love the flow of Bob Marley's Rastafarian music, never once noticing the Zionist connection. When the shields of the mind are down the enemy is sure to invade. The New Age movement now insists there is no enemy and this is just a figment of a mental hologram, poisonous vipers their words are sly. We need to take back Earth or get ready to leave it entirely. What is to come can not be escaped this was set in motion a long time ago and does not reverse so we must work beyond it. They say humans unlock their true abilities under the scenario of fight or flight through the adrenals. Learn to simulate those expressions and began to work on you. Remember what is happening does not come from a particular race of people it is an idea that many are aligned with and has consumed their rational senses.

There were of course many things hinted and eluded to in the movie the Matrix itself that we now in fact find to be true from various levels. It leads one to ponder the exact design of what we are really faced with currently and in our not to distant future. What kind of force would show us in something we are supposed to find entertaining, that it has us trapped in an Oz like mechanical Netherworld where our senses and abilities are limited and our energy harvested? It beckons one to ask "Are we really in a Matrix"? Can we be pulled out of the Matrix? Is there an actual Code to the Matrix? This book will show beyond the shadow of doubt that the answer to the questions being proposed above is yes, and that is not all.

This book will awaken your memory and quicken you thus causing your DNA to reformulate which I will prove to be possible by the end of this composition. DNA itself is manipulated by the mental state, surroundings, and acquaintances of the individual subject. When any these are altered for a constant period the DNA itself also alters and reformulates according to its environment. This means that once you become firm about what you know to be true, especially about your special abilities that have been dormant, the DNA will reconstruct itself to make what you will believe again to be possible, happen. That is one of the main secrets of creating the Superhuman, you have to give it "Reason" to activate itself. This takes consistency and as we talked about earlier a firm foundation grounded in truth to what reality is, not what Maya or Illusion attempts to make you perceive.

The value of this to your future would be of catamount benefit especially in the world of today where knowledge is power. You can thus remove yourself from the cubes known as the hexagon or the bee hive. At one point long ago a jealous force recognized that certain types of knowledge meant unlimited power to those in possession of it thus much of the valuable knowledge was removed. All written copies were burned although at least one copy was placed in the 5 mile library under the Vatican. In replacement we received lies mixed with truth which does a horrible job on the mind as we watch the masses plug about clueless, still searching for themselves because religion has fulfilled almost none of its promises.

Reason 34: The Elite depict the world full of worker Bee's, trying to be something but they are trapped in Hexagonal cubes. This Platonic knowledge introduced the dark square or cube. Pythagoras introduced several methods of trapping Organic Spirit into Matter/Cubes. We will speak more of this later.

We are talking about the level of foreknowledge which gives you the ability to know what will happen before it takes place, this is the time it is most useful as things speed up. You will be able to do this without the aid of books and scholars thus you will be placed back in the driver's seat of life exiting the checkered cab. The issue we all individually face is that we wait to see what is going to happen next before we react; this is called reactionary. This leaves you with no preparation and little time or ability to shape the future. I say that one should confront danger and fear before they become closed in by it instead of allowing it to greet you on your doorstep while your loved ones are inside. Run and face it so you may prevent it or at least prolong it. This may in fact give those you care for the edge they will need to prepare. Again think of the 7 year old who will have to live at least another 10 years in this world and what they are to face in those 10 years. What kind of monsters have we left for them to battle? Supplying people with this information will at least allow you to say that you did the best you could, which is also why I write this to you before my departure.

When comprising this particular work what came across my mind, since I had long since discovered "The Code", was to write a book that even when the reader is finished they could continue to write their own unique personal novel of experience. Due to the fact that we are all entwined in some way or another to what we are experiencing now in the world you will find amazing syncs in your life that all roll into why you are here. Just because few are using the collective consciousness channel does not mean that it is not always broadcasting, we are always linked to it. In fact it is more like two lovers who have both fallen asleep on the phone and the lines remain open although there is no one speaking.

It is time you begin to unlock all the mysteries and most importantly yourself. Often I began lengthy writings only to leave them incomplete, pieces of these writing you will find in Italics throughout the book they serve as tidbits of poetry to ponder. The rabbit hole is far deeper than I expected in the beginning, not to mention the fact that after you get deep into the rabbit hole you must climb back out, which they forgot to mention. You do not want to be in any hole, trust me. When you learn the whole system, you will have so much knowledge you will not be incapable of fitting it all in one book. What should be kept in mind is once you start to “unlock” you will see what used to remain hidden, everywhere in plain view. This also means that everything is not contained here, only the framework that is needed for you to build your own ladder out of the Cube of Flesh into the Sphere of Spirit. After that the statement will come true that if the oceans were ink and the trees were pens you could still not write about everything that you will know in fact to be true.

With that being said I have done my best to narrow the book down to what is of highest worth to know. It was originally meant to show how words themselves play one of the most valuable roles in your individual awakening. That later morphed into a detailed story of our true past, present, and future. Even the Elite cannot simply say “the old language is no good anymore so from today you will use this new language”. That only happened one time in history in the confusion of Babel, when tracing the story of Babel or “The Gates of Ishtar” a far more complex story arises than the brief chapters dedicated to it in the Bible. In the ancient texts one story holds about Babel. This Tower or Ziggurat had multiple purposes and it was also connected to a Gate, the two went hand in hand.

In most ancient tribes some type of structure was built to serve as the portal of communication between the presiding God/Goddess and the people. You will find a precise geometric layout of some type of construction whether stone alter, pillar, temple, hollowed tree, or various other portals. You will learn that the geometric structure, especially its number of sides, has everything to do with the type of energies being evoked and from what dimension, plane, expanse, or abyss they hail from. In Reason 35 you will see a rare picture of pre-historic London now synchromystically called Babylondon. It seems the Atlantian style art deco is preferred. The Pyramids have four sides because they are massive Gates to the 4th and 8th dimension. These dimensions although very different from the 3rd, are functioning and highly populated unbeknownst to the masses. It is time to innerstand that multiple worlds exist already functioning, some far worst then the one we are currently in, and some in complete harmony (Harm Money) like a Utopia but not by that word, let’s get there.

Reason 35: Ancient London was more like a rather large Stonehenge/Atlantis. Few know of this part of London's history and the ongoing attempt to restore its sacred layout. Notice the model of Atlantis as seen on the right. Later you will see this particular design can be found everywhere you find Atlantis affiliates especially in Government and Parliament.

What is most amazing is how the obvious goes totally unnoticed, this would mean that we are out of focus and we need to actually zoom in or scale down to look at what is right in front of our face, for example: Christmas is a anagram for Mithras once you remove the "C". Mithras Day was December 25. Do you think it would be of value on various levels to at least investigate who this individual is? What I find is those who think an inkling about their souls want to prepare it for afterlife. This would mean knowing as much as you can about what that involves rather than just imagining that being a servant in the afterlife forever would actually be a reward. This is what determines whether or not you end up in a place that will mean total freedom, or the opposite. Servants are always slaves to something. It is already obvious that our current Overseers seem to be very detached from the people, so this means you must build yourself to learn of the higher things. The future can only be the future for so long and then it becomes the present.

Another ploy is the fight we get dragged into all the time with these Two Brother Archetypes that appear in many religious texts whether it's the Astrological Jupiter Vs Saturn, Sumerian Allalu Vs Anu, Egyptian Osiris Vs Set, Hebraic Ishmael Vs Israel, and my all time favorite classic mind job Cain Vs Able. This is the roots of Duality.

After reading hundreds of Testaments, Vedras, Hieroglyphs, Steles, Tablets, and spending months in meditation on what had been gathered a very clear picture began emerge. When this quest began it was in earnest desire to find God. My ideas have never been to disapprove the existence of God or other Beings, only to create a clear path that I may enter in constant communion with them. There can be no benefit in falsely disapproving something that could emancipate us all. In addition I not only studied these faiths I immersed myself in them. There can be nothing more unnerving than someone ousting a religion that they have not even studied, much less participated in. What I did also since I was very serious about the quest was I sought to become the highest in each faith I was deluging in. So while I was a Christian, I was a Pastor and Prophet, while I was a Muslim I was also an Imam and Sufi, etc.

There can be nothing more positively life changing then following the truth even when it goes against everything you have been taught. I believe many headlong in their religion have discovered through one book or another the true origin of their proclaimed faith. At that moment and subsequent times after, the person enters a strong duality phase. One side insists that it is the Wicked One who is trying to steal their faith. This side tends to use no facts only emotions barraging a person with memories of past divine experiences. The other side finds constant facts that debunk what the emotional side is suggesting. It often shows that paranormal experience should not be the only gauge of determining if something is true or false, especially positive or negative. Sadly the emotional side tends to win because a person has also gained friends in the religion, a home or fellowship place, and all these novelties weigh heavier on making the correct decision to disavow. As a Pastor it was hard for me to walk away from Christianity, however, since I was also infused with the Spirit of Truth it was even more difficult to keep denying the obvious which was its demoniac esoteric doctrine.

Once engulfing the Spiritual terrain there is indeed a common story, it is only the names that change. We will examine this story once and for all because it is the backbone of all belief systems which we will call ME's (pronounced Mays). Belief Systems and Words are ME's. In the Sumarian text it talks about something described as only ME's. If one gains possession of the knowledge of these ME's they can control large parts of this dimension. All authors on Sumarian religion never present a definition of what these ME's are just that they are very powerful. It is noted that the ME is not a weapon, they describe various weapons that belong to the Gods in the Sumarian text but they are sure to keep the ME's separate. The only hint they give of them is that they are written on Tablets. The resin of information that remains coated on our Aura of what happened in past existences will always serve as mental triggers for our minds. This is how stories of the our past is linked to religion in order to bring about devoutness, fear, resonance, and loyalty under false pretenses. I cruel mental scheme designed around ethereal based historical facts.

Reason 36: The Sumerians inscribed their religion on stone tablets that have survived since antiquity. All the stories of the Torah were first Sumarian minus the name changes. The ME's were known to be inscribed on such Tablets just as Moses was proposed to receive Tablets inscribed by the God YHVH/Tetragrammaton. Shem, Noah's son, also finds a secret stone with engraving from before the flood and conceals it from his brothers later to use its magical formulas.

I learned that some ME's were certain words of power encompassed by a doctrine that could be incorporated around those words. The one who controlled the Names could control whole nations. First we will examine the doctrine. There are things that have happened on our Planet that even reincarnations cannot completely erase the memory of and that is the flood. The flood is mentioned in every ancient text although it was not said to be related to man's sin but rather a natural phenomena. The "punishment for mans sins" story did not come about until the Sumarian and Hebrew text which mainly operated on fear and reverence of a Terrible God rather than unconditional love, this is obviously the product of guilt. The main reason for this being the leaders of these groups were always warring with surrounding countries so love was not a good angle for them, war, vengeance and favoritism was more ideal. The occurrence of the last flood has left residue in our Aura thus all stories that begin with floods are entertained by the subconscious because it knows for a fact the flood was true, the details are of course not available. Many people have a phobia of deep water because of the last flood.

The Ark is the other part of the subliminal entrainment of doctrines. The word itself resonates to escape something that is fearful and impending such as the Dark. It was known that you could traverse the Netherworld on a Bark which meant a special boat. There were few who made it onto the Ark and those that did were given a Mark to show they had been saved. After the Dark came the Sun which we unconsciously assume will rise every morning. The Sun awakes the whole world and gets the next day started. The Sun and Son were made synonymous in English because of this. The Babylonia name being Sam, Son of Sam or is it Samson? The Son God religions embed themselves in the natural occurrences of nature. There is always a Mother sometimes two since we are in a binary system this always leads to one good Mother and one Evil or surrogate mother, Eve and Lilith. The Mother Archetype will always survive because the Planet can never be seen as anything different than a nourishing Mother, thus when a name for the Mother Earth was given all would revere it as they do their physical Mother. The name was spoken as Gaia then Maia/Maya then a thousand more. Often the Origin of the name was never examined; the people remained always too trusting of their rulers.

The dying and resurrecting Sun theme was all in a days work the Sun died at night and resurrected in the morning. This always left the door open for a host of nighttime nightmare creatures that played the role as adversary to the Son, thus the Devil became night/knights or Set as in Sunset still a Sun God nonetheless with a host of worshippers that gravitate towards darkness. Once this began the idea of a City with eternal light was hatched, a place that was never dark and of course there were requirements of how to get there. Those requirements were made known by the numerous Prophets, Shamans, Seers, Holy Men, Gurus, Yogis and various others playing the role of predictors of time. They later became just as revered and reversed as the God itself. Notice how in Christianity Jesus is now worshipped more than YHVH, many in church don't even know who that is nor do they care Jesus has it all covered. In Buddhism there is more discussion about Buddha than the Divine concept of the focal point which Buddha presented, this is no wonder since they say his mother's name was Maia/Maya, all around the world the same song. Various sects of Islam suffer from the same problem revering Caliphs, Imams, and Mohammad more than Ilah at times. The Rabbis get more air time than Ain Soph especially since they are convinced "He" is incomprehensible and cannot be conceived by impure flesh.

Last but far from least comes the chaos and destruction. Since mankind is not immortal in this physical state many assume a time will come for everything to die thus we falsely decree the Earth's time will come also. It should be obvious by now the Earth is immortal and passes through various phases. We watch it happen everyday as animals die, bugs die, we age, the house or neighborhood gets rundown. Decay is inevitable, however, the glass half empty approach of modern religion in which the whole world and most of its inhabitants must be utterly destroyed by plagues and horrors falling from the sky distorts an act that should otherwise be looked at as the entrance to a Greater Phase. The truth is the heaven and hell these distorted belief systems propose are one in the same. With their Spiritual technologies they have mastered how to keep the soul in stasis, true Spirituality is the growth of the Soul. This allows it to become quite the opponent to forces that would attempt to capture it once it escapes the body. Any Shaman can tell you this, when he/she enters the Spirit world there are various things its inhabitants consider before they interact with the Shaman. Many Shaman have various types of protection but their main asset is the strength of their Totem. The Human soul is a force to be reckoned with when it is fully in tune, this leads to other Beings just leaving you alone so you can live.

Reason 37: Religion has constructed an entire ideology of afterlife that plagues the believers mind with absurdities giving birth to distorted forms and the imbalance of fear. When consecrated belief is put into such things they are given the energy to materialize and believe me they have already. Places like Purgatory, the Fields of Elysium, Hyades, Abaddon, the Netherworld, and many others really exist. Remember there are now billions of people who believe in these places and most end up in them.

The doctrines of today are combined in more or less a religious buffet based on collected information gathered over time. Some systems more creative and poetic than others although the story itself only served to captivate and implore the Neophyte, it was the names which are vibrations that created the “staying power”. All throughout this work we will be examining various names of power. The commoner is enticed to a place of worship for one reason or another. The High Priest, however, must understand how it all works especially the Spiritual realm. Chanting is a major part of Priestly duties beyond ritualistic observances. What chanting does is bring the body into the frequency of whatever Name is being chanted, once the frequency match is accomplished the portal is open. We are the fifth element being comprised of Earth/Flesh, Water/Mucus, Air/Breathe, Fire/Blood and the Fifth which is the Devine Breath liken unto fire none can produce save the Most High. Many have tried and reasonless abominations they continue to bring forth when “Practicing” as Doctors and Magicians tend to call their Art of non-perfection.

One of the real reasons this is happening is the Most High has decreed all will eventually return to the Source and it does not exist in time thus it is extremely patient. It also says it is sufficient enough to rule its Creations and does not need representatives that claim to magnify but in all actuality block the way. If man or woman wanders off the true Path they easily lose focus by being divided amongst Gods vying for power splitting the person’s energy at least 3 ways which they call the Trinity. Instead of following these Gods who want sacrifices and servants all the time I went to look for something that is not as petty and sadistic and guess what I found it and I’m giving it to you. When you give something good out you get the same in return. That is what we were supposed to do no matter what everyone else is doing. Just remember if they don’t know “The Code” their entire form as it exist before you is being effected in more ways than you can even conceive so you can afford to give those you have grudges against a pass.

This is pre-history, however, Gods abound across the globe in various lands and they are increasing. This is because the term God is being used so loosely you even have people saying that they are God. I know the popular argument is God is experiencing itself through us. This is another one of those things that just sounds good and is never questioned. The Most High brought forth all experience from Itself and shared it with us as a gift, there in no need for The Most High to live through us, I’m sure better things are entertainment for an All Powerful Being building multiple galaxies with a spiral force than playing the Sims with Its Human creations.

The truth is sayings like this are fuel for the ego, which can make us think a little too much of ourselves while still not in constant contact with the Most High. We are living in a society where most things related to paranormal and esoteric matters that have been proven are still hidden from us, imagine our maturity rate compared to freed societies. With the Entities the stronger eventually becomes the victor and they are warlike Gods. The Most High is not involved in such debased and petty things; this is the key to proper distinguishment. With the Gods their strength comes in numbers, those numbers are individual Souls who get caught up in the religion and die with it freshly on their mind and aura. Its time you finally get the truth so you can be what your dreams used to say you were when you were a child traveling worlds with endless imagination creating things in your perfect undistorted image.

I will make it clear if it wasn't for the brain screwing by those sinister groups that administer Medical Drugs and Procedures, Cartoons, Candies, Toys and Education to kids while they are in their most sensitive growing phases, naturally we would have a beautiful world full of joy. For those that came out ill they would be showered with love and positive vibration. This would bring up their frequency thus curing them, simple. So there is someone to point a finger at and this is exactly why the New Age movement has hatched, because people once again are rising up as the burden is getting heavy. One now has to work 2 or 3 jobs to keep things going, not to mention their habits and they are tired of this and with just cause. Silently we know this is not our fault and when I found the Code in the language at that moment I knew it wasn't the peoples fault, before then religion had me thinking that it was because they didn't worship the right God so they were suffering, or it was some past karma from another life so they were paying in this life, I would silently think, what, can we be sure of that?

Reason 38: There can be no doubt the Elite are implanting the children with corrupt ideas. They propagate and insinuate war while the child is still growing; thus it becomes more natural later on in life. It is no "Sur"prise to see the Dragon and Skulls mixed in with this poor child's cache of death dealing plastic.

This is what I came to stop, the misinterpretation of the Most High and I give my life proudly exposing everything that I can to make the world better and to restore the power to the people for free. Why not it is a noble deed, what else do we really have if we lose the Earth and don't know where our next home will be? People expect the afterlife to be some big happy festival where something invites you into a higher realm with rivers of warm Honey and Milk, streets of fine Ophaz Gold with Gems and Diadems running through the current of Sweet Water cool to the touch as compatible Mates are all around you basking in the glow of the God. You can see how that can lull a person into a deeper sleep than they already are in. What is being described here is something you can have on Earth, the real Heaven is much much more, if you but knew.

Medical drugs are now, according to rehabilitation institutions, far worst than street drugs. This is not suggesting one should use street drugs, however, we should find it daunting that our organization formed to look after our health are actually the orchestrators of a slow mental and physical arsenic death cycle. It is now known that Alzheimer's disease, the disease that makes the elderly forget all their precious memories, is mainly accredited to the cocktail of drugs given to them prescribed by the doctors intentionally. These drugs contain high amounts of Mercury which melts the brain as chemical ether melts the soul away. Even the word retire (Re-Tire) tells a person to go back to sleep, incredible! The chemicals in baby formula are mostly metals exhausting the child's natural nutrients like enzymes in which never develop again once they are depleted.

Reason 39: This man was prescribed all these drugs over time for chronic pain, the more he would take the more they would prescribe. Since the doctor is only interested in billing the insurance company they don't really care. The medicines in fact caused the continuous pain.

Many of the individuals who work for the organizations that administer these things are unaware from the sense that they have been compartmentalized in the mind. The dream of being the doctor with the white coat, sloppy handwriting, Rolex, and BMW infested the grid that we all plug into. Compartmentalization is done through the language. It takes at times thousands of years to alter a language and since words are really vibration the actual true meaning can never be destroyed, you feel it through emotion. Of course many things will be exposed and made known to the reader that is riveting. I would only ask that one should not concentrate on what they do not know but rather what they will and should know. When something is introduced that is new it is often times rejected at first, this rejection is really fear. It seems we often forget that this is how we learned everything that we know right now. At first it was new, then you learned and practiced it, and some things you even perfected. New always equals fear at first, something like your first on stage recital especially if you had a speaking role.

I will tell the reader now, nothing will be the same after you finish this book, it cannot be. The world itself will open for you and you will be given back what we have unknowingly given up or lost which is true choice. I will also say that what I offer is the truth, nothing more, it is the persons own unique decision, after it has been restored, that although the facts will be made clear beyond doubt, to ultimately believe and react to what surrounds you at every moment is your own individual responsibility. The system itself is comprised in a way to make the individual feel a dependency upon it and a false love for it; this is what keeps an Illusion solid. This becomes the key to determining whether or not you are prepared for ascension (Ascend Sion) during this lifetime or whether you need to come around the loop again. So wasting no time at all you may accompany Us in a journey through the rabbit hole, trust We know our way around as true light does at times pass through the lower regions of Hyades as a box is the final residence of all foolish men, Kings included.

The Word

How this all came about this thing we call the Matrix was through a play of words. Language is the Microsoft Windows or Unix for the brain. The Bible says, “In the beginning was the Word”. This did not mean the whole book because it would have read “In the beginning there was a Book” but instead it refers to an actual Word that can create things. This ability is referenced here in the first book known as Genesis. Since we are in the Image of the Creator we can do smaller versions of the same thing depending upon how well we understand the ability and how to use it. Although the need to create a new World/Word is now at hand the gap between creating multiple Worlds and creating the things within worlds is vast, thus the original keepers of this knowledge used this ability to form many things after the first creation; we will call them “Secondary Creations”. These Secondary Creations were not created by the Most High but created by the Beings the Most High created, this is of value to remember how to distinguish one from the other. Through the real Kabbalah, that 4 letter Word, and its many formulations were made known to a few men and that gave the original man the ability to step onto the level as baby creators.

The word Kabbalah itself means Oral Resuscitation which means that the true Kabbalah can only be given verbally due to correct pronunciation of these words of power, it is never written. When this knowledge of such magnitude came to be known across the land two more Kabbalah's were introduced, the first being the Abjad, the Arabic Kabbalah, then came the Kabbalah of Canaan or the Grimores of which the latter can be easily downloaded from the internet, while the former has remained hidden. Imagine how many people downloaded a copy of the much more common Cabalist Grimores when Madonna proclaimed she was studying Kabbalah.

Reason 40: YHVH known also as the Tetractys or Tetragrammaton is the Name Judaism and Christianity revere as their Father. Tetra means four 4. Forefathers Reason 41: This chart known as Shemhamphorash survives from antiquity although not very legible. You can see the Name DIOS on the right side of the wheel. In many Latin countries they refer to God as DIOS however He is but one out of the many Names constructed in Ancient Kabbalah. Many of these Names are reported to be Ineffable meaning that one should never utter them verbally but should only contemplate them in their mind. Uttering them off the mouth is said to be a sin because the flesh is impure. Such tales kept the people separated from the true Origin of these Beings since when uttered they are enlisted to appear at some point, however when they arrive one must gird themselves to deal with such strange overwhelming forces.

This particular Kabbalah which we will call the Written Kabbalah of Cain was known through circles as the Lesser Keys this work was eventually identified as a text of dark magic responsible for uniting man with horrid beings from the lower dimensions. This did not stop its reproduction, just as books like the Necromicon, the Book of Shadows, and the 6th and 7th Books of Moses are easily available and many have become possessed reading books such as Sepher Raziel, Sepher Yetzirah, and Sepher Hashmoth which are still in mainstream production as people are subtly coerced to lend an open ear to the dangerous degenerating Art of Goetia, the evoking of departed Souls and lesser Jinn.

Reason 42: Various Cabala's were formed as many descended the inverted tree of life which as can be seen here lead to heavy serpent and beast worship. It is unmistakably obvious that this has gone beyond some mere hobby for wise men; this has become an Art that has corrupted minds and made men into the pawns of spooks.

Let us keep this in mind, if you are a powerful high vibration Being and someone from Earth is summoning you its obvious you have no time to fool with the Earthlings to do their selfish bidding which generally involves controlling people and making money. Being very different the lower Forms have something to gain by making pacts and acquaintances with Humans because they are on lower dimensions some of whom have forfeited their chance of ascending, what a loss they have lava to drink.

To sum up Kabbalah for the reader I will give this explanation. The original oral Kabbalah consist of only one word that masters every spirit energy on this dimension. The entire body was put into formulation to pronounce this word. The written Kabbalahs have been proven to a degree to teach the Magus how to control droves of elementals that can be bent to the will of the Magus, however one should keep in mind that the use of these Beings to gain advantage in everyday life rather than doing it naturally always “spells” trouble. It has been documented several times that these Beings are very different from Humans, being lower life forms they have only one ability, thus their name Elemental meaning simple or base, a controller of one element. They are referred to as Sylphs, Undines, Gnomes, and Salamanders which correspond to Water, Air, Earth and Fire. It is known that they often play tricks on the Magus, hiding things, and breaking things, which becomes a can of worms that the Practitioner wishes they had never opened, those are the normal experiences. Deeper forms of this Practice have lead to haunting, unknown strangulations and death, as the otherworld will continue to entreat the Magus driving him or her mad especially in Goetia were the departed souls drain the life force from anything alive in the vicinity when evoked, especially the Magus.

Reason 43: A classic depiction of a Magician who has evoked too many elementals. The art of magic itself is very real, dark magic is dangerous and leads to encounters that can stunt the Seekers growth. Magicians have been known to also create two part Beings known as Golem to do their biddings, there is now concern in certain esoteric circles in regards to Golem who are said to be revolting because they to are evolving and want to be free. Stories such as Solomon controlling Jinn has fascinated many into believing that it is mans right to control the Jinn. The attitude of seeking to master something you do not understand will always lead to trouble. There is generally no trial and error or learning curve in magic. One mistake can lead to a lifetime of problems.

That one Word mentioned above and its correct pronunciation was lost because of abuse and was before then only known by the High Priest who learned it from the High Priest before him. The Name was said to be pronounced only once a year during ceremony. The Name itself when pronounced responded instantly with no delay thus the Name was alive and not dead like the many slow responding Idol Gods of the time. Although I believe the true Name was removed long before then, the Holy Name possessed by the Hebrews was recorded as lost during the time the Romans sacked the temple of Jerusalem. It is said in legend that the High Priest was caught up by a fiery chariot into the sky just so the Name could not fall into the hands of the profane. The Arabs protected their secret Name so tightly that few know the Abjad (Arab Kabbalah) even existed. The Shriners', Aleppo and various Secret Societies for Spiritual adepts studied under the Arabs.

The written Kabbalah of Cain was purported to be the Path of recovering the original true Name of the Lesser God after you descended the Tree of Life like a serpent and met the Pantheon of hosts of whose Names and position could be deciphered by working through combinations and equations. It is safe to say many became lost and possessed as they attempted to make brutes as allies. Its claim that one could arrive at the original name through contemplation of 72 Letters and Numbers has remained unverifiable. In Holy Languages the letters also double for the Numbers. In the end many became insane moving the letters and numbers around and bringing forth energies untold. The Art itself gave birth to what we know now as Sorcery the control key being the Tetragrammaton a 4 sided cubic diamond also known as the Tetractys made of letters and Numbers with 18 functions or Luciphers, I mean Ciphers. Kabbalah is a life study so explaining anymore of Kabbalah here would only be confusing for the reader, but not for me and I will tell you just as you see the word Tetra meaning four, Grams, and Tons, these units of Spirit energies can overwhelm the mind and if the person is not strong their senses leave them forever and the body becomes the host of 4 counterparts. The have named this state of insanity the Jerusalem Syndrome.

Reason 45: This is the symbol of the Magus once he has joined with the 4 animal traits he will no longer be the ally of normal men he feels elated over his fellows.

The deepest and darkest part of Spiritual knowledge lied within the Art of Goetia and Necromancy. Apparently this ancient knowledge from Sumeria eventually spread to the Western schools of thought creating multiple offshoots. The Necromicon, the Sumerian Spell book of Marduk/Ra was the Initiated Doctrine of dark occults, few Initiates knew this. What I find even more interesting is Marduk had three main enemies one was Tiamat. Tiamat was the old Name for Earth before Earth had its last encounter with Nibiru also called Planet X. One of its orbiting Moons slammed into what is now Earth but was then Tiamat. This indicates even more that a war took place in the past involving these invaders who had some issue with the Planet we now call Earth. Even known powerful Adepts like Eliphaz Levi who many believe along with himself was the thrice born Hermes/Thoth in his last incarnation advised to stay away from Goetia, and this comes from a man who practiced almost all forms of dark magic. He purported that this was the worst and had extreme negative results that were far reaching extending into the Spirit planes of past and future.

Reason 46: This is the Seal of the Necromicon of Marduk the sworn enemy of man, if you see it, head the other way, Necromancers are lower life forms looking to gain energy. They are distorted and not fully developed thus they know not what they do and have no guidance save their dark lord who is blind, We shall use his body to stir the Lake of Fire. The sigil is a series of imperfect pentagrams meaning flawed.

Necromancy as a game entered the U.S. through the Parker Brothers and Milton Bradley who where Illuminist themselves. First it came as the Ouija board and then the game Séance. Once the organic portals, “Humans that sometimes have unknowingly formed pacts with Spirits per game instructions” were open, it became something of a greater proportion. This was the knowledge of the Ghost World which was populated with lost dismembered souls looking for answers and various other 2 dimensional Spirits. These were those who had spent life in vain and thought death was the end, many Warners we sent to them and they rejected them. As you notice in Christianity they speak of a Gospel (Ghost Spell) and entreat the Holy Ghost. What business does the church have with these Ghosts? Someone call the Ghostbusters.

Again the only one really responsible is the individual person. There is definitely a point of no return and that point is reached at times within the first ceremony. If you could see the spirit world, which some already can, you will see that many are watching and waiting for the opportunity to weave their way into your world. These days many have already let them in. Look around your whole habitation and see how much evil is resident manifesting in the forms of skulls, guns, horror, harsh music, and killing games. All this carries energy and at a certain point it can overwhelm your atmosphere unknowingly if you don't keep balance. Why do you think media is still stored on magnetic disk? What do you think happens when these disks are stacked or even spun at high rates of speed? Negative magnetic information generates and emits a field of binary aura that fills large areas.

Reason 47: Most never questioned why these games entered the U.S, who brought them there, and for what purpose? This dark Art was made to look like fun and was everything but that. All the tools were in the box to open a portal to the lower dimension or your money back.

Looking deeper we find an ancient text explaining the final termination of the first round of early Earth Gods that ruled mortals through Oracles and Pagan practices. Along with the captured Gods more than 8 million Warring Angels were carried altogether to Makavishtu, in hand, the Most High says: We cast them into the unquenchable fire where there was already more than ten million who were in chaos and madness. For awhile the Earth was clear of the Gods, whose chief labor had been for thousands of years to capture the Spirits of the recently dead, and make slaves of them for the glory of the lesser kingdoms. Their end was swift just as one rises and falls in power, however, the cursed Magicians invited them back into this realm once more, and the people, ever lacking in reason, welcomed them back by their abhorred actions and impurities to no extent.

Some of these Beings are further along the evolutionary cycle than we are, thus they appear as Gods to the primitive. The Art of Deifying or creating Gods was perfected in Egypt. They discovered upon death that if a person knew the secrets of the soul they could become like Gods to the mortals, living on the dimensions below them. This feat involved forever relinquishing a chance to ascend which believe it or not many have accepted. The gravity of dissention at a certain level is too strong to turn around. Notice Grave and Gravity are almost the same word not to mention you go “6” feet down in an 8 sided box. The “Dimensional Transport Ritual” still stands today in the western world. If you notice in the Arab countries the dead are buried immediately in a white sheet, no box, and faced toward the East.

Reason 48: The Saturnalian ritual of the eight sided rectangular box insured the departed soul was transported to their dimension or sealed. It exists today without the slightest notice as people are unknowingly being boxed up and transported. As the scripture says “the day the dead will come out of their grave”, because many are trapped there. We should ascend the moment we are released from the body however the disposal of our shell must be back in the dirt, from dust the body comes so it must return.

The God making business set some men up to become Lords of the Underworld and its grotesque inhabitants. Egypt was first known as Kem the descendants of the lost Atlantis then Ogygia in esoteric circles a name long forgotten. Also called Sidian by the Mystics where we get our English word City, then Egypt by the commoner. Much later it was found out that the word Genesis actually was formulated from the words “Genes of Isis” or “Generation of Isis”. None of these are Hebrew terms. Even the word Bible comes from the word Byblos which is the place Isis set up worship to mourn Osiris. Likewise Ishtar did the same with Adonis long before the Holy Bible and King James were thought of. The Hebrews now refer to their God as Adonai, this is Adonis. Decoding the Bible you will find that all the prophecies are occurring exactly as they have been foretold. This is because millions of people believe the prophecies of the Book will come true due to their religious preference, thus they are actually happening because we manifest what we think collectively out of thin air. I for one know that prophecies are for profit and that will become more evident later. Many have attempted to authenticate when the Books of the Bible were written, after many investigations it was at least safe to say many of the Books were written long after the actual events took place, thus the details are solely dependant upon at least second hand information which is always partial to who is telling the story.

I once read an ancient transcript of a meeting that took place between Kings and Emperors in regards to powerful languages. Being a person that sought to model myself after wise men I was curious of why there was such emphasis put on the formation of languages. I soon discovered that language codes and directs the mind and this was known at least since the time of the ancient Arabs although evidence proves way before then. According to the Bible at the Tower of Babel man faces a confusion of languages by the God and that is the word used, confusion. A few chapters later the same God remarks that He is not the author of confusion. Huh? What is all this about? This made for quite a puzzle for me that made no sense.

—DRAGON FROM THE ISHTAR GATE IN BABYLON

*Reason 49: The Dragon
Hath Horns of a Stag, Head of a Camel, Eyes of a Demon, Neck of a Snake, Belly of a Clam, Scales of a Carp, Claws of a Eagle, Soles of a Tiger, and Ears of a Cow, by these symbols you will know them.*

Parts of the puzzle we will unravel slowly so nothing is missed. The Ishtar Gate is one of the most controversial relics known to man. Just as the pyramids are gates, the Gate of the Ishtar also known as the Gates of Ilu were first located in Ur. This was the first gate ever constructed to open the Portal of Inanna/Ishtar/Ashtoreth/Astarte/Asherah/Venus a channel to androgynous vampiric serpents and various other life forms that hang out in Club Shemhamphoresh. She is Inanna consort of Marduk/Ra also called She-Ra and Rat, connected to the Seven Sisters in the Pleiades their protector the Dog Hyades/Anubis they are Ma, Maia, Ma'at, Mag and Mary who give power to the Magus with them is the Serpent Sor who is the Source of the Sorcerers power of Hathor. This is the Dragon its first depiction then called SUSA our abbreviation USA land of the Serpents who guard the Sedona time portal to SIAM. Their Art is sedation which brings about delusion and seduction. When approached by these Beings one feels a pressure around the anus they are androgens thus they masquerade as female and male this is God “S”, Dragon Queen or Drag Queen.

They falsely Illuminate men to the wisdom of the Serpent thus eliminating them from the Great Race, this is the Gate of Ilu. Many Men have made Ishtar their consort and then have been betrayed such as Sumerian Gilgamesh and Solomon. As the scripture says “Solomon went after Ashtoreth and sacrificed in the Groves and the High Places and after this his wisdom was naught”. This is the Bacchanalia, Temple Prostitutes, the Cult of Yoni. They have connected with many of the daughters of the Gods called Fates, Ferts, Nymphs such as Morganus, Medusa the Gorgon, Persephone, Europa, Nemesis, Sothis or Sirius, Sekhmet, Saba, Sofia, Nephtys, Nut, Kadesh, they have legions with them they are Succubae draining vigor from their captives.

Many an overambitious power hungry fool has wandered down the path of false Illumination and few have return. In Ancient times men would war against each other to find favor with Ishtar then erect a High Place in her name to serve as a gate or portal, this is key to know now because you will see them everywhere.

Reason 50: The Gates of Ishtar the main reason we went into Baghdad above the oil. Who ever controls the main Gate controls all subsequent Gates. Those on the ground in Baghdad said “the first thing they went for was the museum with a team of individuals that looked like they stepped out of a James Bond film. They were definitely looking for something, some type of artifact or relic”.

Another use of Ziggurats like the Tower of Babel seen in Reason 10 were as Arks in which several had been constructed through various times to escape floods. People of the time seemed to always have a foreknowledge of these floods whether it was through the Adepts or by records left by previous civilizations. As said before the Ziggurats had various uses. Our current world leaders have all of the information in regards to not only future floods but also which land masses will submerge as the world adjusts during the Shift, they will give none of this information to the common people and it seldom leaks out. Instead they continue to extend the underground caverns for themselves, building space cities, and terra forming other Planets securing their future. The new Tower of Babel is in Dubai, Marduk/Ra finally accomplished what he set out to do which was to build the tallest building in the world. Through ancient geography we learn that many regions that are deserts now where actually oceans before and you are looking at the sandy bottom of them.

Reason 51: Many indigenous tribes left several warnings about Earth's flood cycles. They also had higher consciousness to astral travel to other places before such things occurred. The Elite are expanding their underground domain in preparation of future cataclysms; these machines borrow 3 miles per day and pave the wall behind them at the same time. Inner Earth cities are beautiful.

Reason 52: The new Tower of Babel the tallest building in the world, built by the construction company “Wafi” which means “One who is Loyal to Pharaoh” that Pharaoh is Ramses who was the fleshly vessel for Ra. Keep in mind these Spirit energies are immortal and they incarnate into willing vessels who are all connected by bloodline. In the last Olympics the Chinese Government showed their alignment with the plan of a new world order as they danced around the Tower. This is why many of the Chinese people protested, unfortunately to no avail. What the world leaders have done however is revealed their true identity. This is priceless for the Guided, truly a big answer in a world full of questions.

“Memory Tower”
(from Beijing closing ceremony)

Language allows us to communicate and express ourselves embedding itself in the framework of our mind or mental Matrix. When the words we use are manipulated by the developer of the language, it is possible for us to think and feel like we are saying one thing but in all actuality we are saying another which would change the outcome of our intended desire. The most damaging thing about many languages of today is they are not only backwards “Back Words” as the word indicates but they are also heavily laden with the names of various Deities from our past fetish with Pantheism. It is now evident that many words with certain vibrations pull energy while others restore energy; this was shown through water crystals. Our body, being 70% water, is extremely sensitive to vibration. Thought is also vibration and this is how thought forms are created and given life.

It is apparent that in the history of man and women there has been lots of meddling with negative energies which can be seen within our warlike nature and bloody history. The development of weapons began the downward spiral. This art was blamed on the Fallen Angel Tubal-Cain the Kenite Goat God who in legend taught man how to fashion the first sword from a plow share. From that point man looked for anything to make a better weapon to pummel and plunder his brother. The discovery of gun powder and various other explosives by the Alchemists produced a fatal time of misuse of energy that continues more now than ever. It has also morphed into genetics. Everything is alive so imagine what Radiations character is. Our “Kind” have become fascinated with force, not energy and ability which is entirely different. It can be looked at this way: Some things are passive like steel, we can fashion it into a plow, till the soil, and bring forth abundant food or we can make it into a gun. This is my definition of “Passive Energy”. Then you have things like Mercury and Radiation that have no nurturing assimilation for Human beings they are what I call “the Force”. Their use is generally to deteriorate anything they come in contact with.

When asking about the various fuels that are used as food for different energies and spirits I learned that first it was Plasma the lower vibration Beings fed on, the wars were fought with swords and the blood was up to the bridle. Many ancient accounts note that the battlefield when war was finished would glow with an eerie light and you could see gaseous life forms absorbing the energy of the blood. In time “Ra”diation was in preference, the nastier the element the more degraded the Host that feed upon it, this is the wisdom taught by “Es”. Now you see they are using depleted “Ur”anium and you should know enough by now to get the clue on where the Hosts that feed on that energy come from.

Our history also shows that many have had a fondness for worshipping and serving rather than mastering and leading. True Spirituality benefits the one who is able to enact such rare talent as communion with the Most High. What remains is religion which for the most part borrows from everywhere orthodox faiths and tales of Villains and Heroes may have sprang up. Where most people get lost is being able to imagine this unseen world is real. The world we live in now is very populated with other forms of life. In history these Beings were given names in which many people, especially those that speak the languages of the Latin Vulgate, evoke everyday. As the wise men always knew behind your words lies a certain force depending upon how serious you take it. If you speak only idly there are those who take that as an opportunity to release you of your power and use it at their advantage, they understand how it works. Of course the biggest move is to detach you from belief that such things could be possible. The names used for these Entities have survived without the slightest bit of notice by the average person, until now. The one that can control the tongue is on the path to controlling their thought, and not before then.

Reading a book from the 1800’s in regards to making Spiritual contact will shine light on just how lost and off track many have been. This book proposed that you must wait for the New Moon, burn some wheat, be sure to face the west, wait for a certain star to appear, look up to the heavens and say this prayer while gripping firmly the throat of a frog. The prayer itself was a combination of Holy Names some I recognized to be in direct conflict of each other. I thought to myself then, surely if one must do all this to contact the Most High then maybe we are lost. Of course one does not have to do all of what was described to make contact but let us not believe someone has not tried this recipe of foolishness and reaped the results. In addition when the unseen negative forces perceive that one will go to extremely barbaric lengths to make contact, they normally lead the person into a whole host of rituals which tend to involve sacrifice and blood thus they never meet the Most High and are headed in the direction of a place foreign to anything made of flesh, with no light to guide their steps.

We are now living in a time that it is almost necessary for the religious system to “re-boot” due to the amount of legends, myths, and fables that have been all rolled under the subject of Spiritual Ascension. This book to me was a final effort to get a rope around all the belief systems as they continue to merge becoming more and more difficult to weed through and track the origins of. I’m sure that if something is not done now, the future generations will have a very difficult time telling truth from falsehood if this is allowed to continue. This book is a key underground tool for innerstanding whatever happens in the near future and getting through it. History books continue to be revised as more incorrect information is added. If you notice the hive mind mainframe, Wikipedia, now the number one portal for information, constantly updates their data and they are owned and operated by the Elite. I’ve witnessed various alterations to certain topics which take a person completely off the mark of Truth of the topics of high importance.

Before we move further I will state again that I’m not at all an advocate of Christianity but it is now a fact that the Catholic and Christian religions have restarted a much older design and have introduced it to the world under new packaging. Some addition name changes and a sprinkle of hyperdimensional magic is all that’s needed to mislead the masses. This makes it of value to dissect certain things that we know about the religion in order to fully perceive what is really going on today. You should keep in mind the amount of followers dedicated to each belief system thus the direction of energy and how it flows about the world you currently live in.

Although you may have opened your mind to search for whether or not there is more truth out there, many refuse to read anything related to the subject of Spirituality. Another portion will not read anything else unless it is the Bible, Koran, or the particular book attached to their Faith such as the Book of Mormon. In fact these religions teach that one should not read anything else less they become lead astray or should they say, led to the real truth. One is looked at as a devil when asking too many questions and they are often rebuked. There are the others who get lost in all of the complex disinformation produced in works such as Liber 777 and various other novels that claim to be references on the meaning of esoteric knowledge, its symbols, etc. Besides avoiding falling asleep while reading these tales one is sure to get the feeling they are following someone who has no eyes, guide dog, or cane, they bring a whole new meaning to lost.

That of course is for the confused wishing to be witches, the Illumed knows of things entirely different. It is nothing like the exhausting sagas and ceremonies of the witches. Direct and constant contact is necessary and thus I will reveal how it is accomplished. The Eight Pointed Star is that of Ilu. To the Illuminati this also signifies all Eight legged insects, such as Spiders who weave webs. At the entrance of the Bohemian Grove where their rituals take place it says, “Spiders weave not your webs here” indicating they cannot use magic on brothers, however, the masses they prey upon. This Star is also used in their evocation and transportation to Venus and various affiliated locations.

Reason 53: This is the cross of Ilu. What should be drawn from this is the Elite use an 8 sided portal for hyper- dimensional travel and as their insignia. An Eight is also known as a double cube or Solomon’s Temple. $4+4=8$. This star is generally behind the head of Jesus when he is depicted.

Reason 54: The gate configuration of the Dome of the Rock and CERN both are portals.

The word we must introduce in the Code first is the “OR”. The “OR” has meant since ancient times the Gold. As a people we have always been mining Gold whether it was the mines of Nubia, the Gold Rush of North America, or many of the indigenous tribes throughout Central and South America. It was also known to other Beings that the Human soul was the real Gold, they sought after it within our mind “Mine”. The Element gold itself was known to carry a special vibration due to its conductivity which made it in fact alive and able to channel wealth and material energy. Gold emitted a certain type of energy that kept one on top in the material realm not to mention what it did to the soul when it was ingested in its Monatomic state. Monatomics also known as ORMES was the preferred Spirit enhancing elements of the Alchemist. Against common belief one did not have to be a chemist in order to make Monatomics, they were often located in the desert in dry lake beds that the Sun had cooked for hundreds of years. Caravans would collect this substance and peddle it as secret salts at values higher than Gold. This is the legendary Salt worth more than Gold.

This is also why the Pharaoh's entombed themselves in Gold and were found in bask reliefs consuming it or being offered it by the people in cones. It has always been the most common standard for currency despite the introduction of more expensive metals such as Titanium and Platinum. Gold symbolizes the Lion who you even hear R"oar". The Hebrew word "Ori" means golden light, and there is also the "Or" and "Ori" in Orion the most known part of our galaxy next to the Milky Way. In Yoruba or Voodoo they evoke Orishas, Gods who do their bidding at the cost of various sacrifices. I will not heavily elaborate on this word now. You will soon see in time why the "OR" leads to everything going on here in the w"or"ld. You have the words "Ori"ginat"or"and Creat"or" could any words be more powerful than these? This is how the trail leads right back to who fashioned it and they cannot escape it as you will find. One of the first Egyptian Gods Ptah is anagram for Path which is the word we use to refer to our Spiritual quest or personal road. In order for the system to work and in "or"der for our minds to be fooled we are made to subconsciously believe they are the creators through word play, which they are not. So the next question would be of course who are "they" and this we will get to in due time.

Reason 55: These Talismans' are Voodoo veves. Amazingly the Elite are also using Voodoo which is another Venusian dark Art. The dark forces are in leagues together, the common symbols we use everyday mean things much different than we assume. For instance the heart is the sign of Erzulie another name for Venus. The heart is not a symbol of love but evol/evil. You will see these two snakes associated with the Goddess even more as we go, and of course the M.

Reason 56: Another Golden Age was the time of the dominion of the Pharaohs. Eating the Gold/ORMES/Philosopher's Stone amplified their Spiritual stature. ORMES changes the cellular structure of the DNA to various fractal patterns of Sacred Geometry. Aegyptus who escaped the catastrophe of Atlantis is who Egypt owes its current name to, he was Atlanto-African. In Atlantis Venus was the head Mistress being worshipped among the Daughters of Poseidon they were known as Hesperides which also linked to the Seven Sisters of Pleiades. Amongst them are Aegle Mistress of Magic, Erythea Mistress of Earth, Arethusa of Hades, vestals attending the shrine which was a Tree which brought forth "Golden Apples" set in the middle garden of Atlantis.

I will take a moment to elaborate a little more on the Code Breaking witch is Spell Breaking. What you search for first is the smallest word of importance that you can think of let's take for example: JAIL. Now it is actually the guttural tone and key spelling that you are searching for as everything is a vibration. That would then make the word, JAEL. It is of value to go to this extent so you can see all the words that are not so positive but used everyday as such. So let us begin.

AEL- Ale: This is the word for the intoxicating mind numbing drink of poison bluntly and rightfully called Spirits.

Reason 57: We have never had a President in history that showed bluntly he was a drunk. This was to send the subliminal message "you can drink and still be President."

BAEL-Bail: This is not only one of the main Deities of the Babylonians but also the term used when you need to get released from JAIL you must be bailed out by the bail bondsman. It also means to run like never before.

CAEL- The "K" and the "C" make the same sound when solo thus there is a more deeper meaning not to mention "X" can be manipulated to make this same vibration. What you have here is one of the most dangerous words. KAE, KILL, to temporarily terminate life.

DAEL-Deal: Of course everyone loves a deal but this is what got us into the financial mess we are in now. Think of this, in antiquity there was such abundance barter was not even the form of transaction it was giving. We had no reason to even keep food because it grew everywhere and we loved it fresh, especially when we were on the right diets. No wheeling and dealing.

EAL-EL or L: As you see this is the keyword, it is also a one Letter word which makes it a "Core Word" when pronounced. The bible says "and the Elohim said, let us make man in our image". This is the controller of the Matrix from multiple angles personifying itself as various Deities. L is also an upside-down 7 which is the sacred number of most belief systems.

Reason 58: Another depiction of El Saturn gliding through always sure to keep the serpent affiliation somewhere in His depiction. This is Sat, Sam, San, Sar, Sab, Sac, Sad, Sag, Sal, etc. Sargon, Satan, Santa, Sacrifice, Samael, Salamander, Sabbath, Sadistic, Sage, etc. Many of us have these words as the roots of our names, colonization was truly about deluding and mixing bloodlines.

FAEL: Fail: Besides its obvious meaning which is to not succeed it is also the past tense of Fallen. The story is really here. The Angels that fell they are the fallen ones. I will bring up now that most religions still share the same 4 Angels from Catholicism, Islam, and Christianity even in Hinduism they talk of Michael, Gabriel, Rapheal, and Uriel.

GAEL: The Gael with their mystical Ogam script can be found in various parts of interesting history as their leader Wooten was known to discover America and parts of Canada setting up trade routes before Columbus was thought of. Wooten is where our word Wednesday or Wooten's Day comes from. This is also the name given to a destructive wind.

HAEL: Hell Hail: Again besides its obvious meaning, this is also a term used to salute various high rank officials' especially in the German army. Since in ancient times you would name your forces according to where their power "hailed" from. As you see in the Bible they say the good Angels come in Myriads and the bad Angels come in Legions. What would it mean to re-legion? Would this not mean to gather more troops to a previously depleted Legion? Even deeper how did their Legions become depleted anyway? Could it be that that various beings such as the Venusians had been defeated before and fled to our Galaxy? I believe so and that is why we have to make sure to not join their ranks and if we know we have joined them through one folly or another, disavow.

IEL: Ill: As in not well, sick, like the so-called Illuminated Illuminati and their Illusions.

JAEL: Pathetic these losers are using magic to imprison people thus most criminals are really victims. The Code is so heavy it is a wonder we all aren't insane criminals even though many are and silently act it out in their mind or on video games. Behold look what things have come to man traps his brother in cages like animals for profit. The legal system itself I took personal interest in. All the Post Offices and Court Houses that belong to the United States are all built with the same Granite no matter how far they have to ship it. This granite comes from "El"berton Georgia. Crystals and Stones can be programmed with intent, and since all the stones come from the same place it all holds the same unique frequency. The police officer is a Mason, the Judge is a Mason, the Lawyer is a Mason and the Prison Guard is a Mason. From the time one gets in the system they are in the hands of the Masons modern day slavery chain.

Reason 59: One of the Unseen Hands of the real Illuminati. This is how they have received information of such high caliber on the subject of Galactic domination they do abide by a strict Hierarchy. Those who join are so far on the bottom of the pyramid they get crushed by the Titans on the top thus they are putty in the hands of these Beings who must be dealt with by the "Enlightened Human" on Astral Planes. One cannot concentrate too long on why they are doing this the Light does not comprehend the darkness.

Reason 60: Another part of the Unseen hand is the Red Dragon they are not shy in telling you they serve him. Their symbol is also the Lion and the Serpent, false Wisdom and Nobility.

"Evil has found a willing servant."

Spoken by George Bush

LAEL-Leo: The Lion who has been "Lying" since the beginning proposing to be the "Li"ght of the world and the King of the Beasts. The best depiction of the Lion is on the Wizard of Oz" and they now lack the courage to face what they have done.

MAEL- Male-Mail: This is the exciting part about the Code. Sometimes you crack into things that have such a deeper meaning that you know you still have a lot to learn. This is a powerful term all the way around. It is used to denote the masculine sex and its relationship to Ma. A book written on Secret Societies spoke of a Brotherhood of Ma that predated most Secret Societies, period. This Brotherhood was said to be in conjunction with Mars and Maldek a Planet in our system that was destroyed. This is also a form of communication and a form of armor as in “Chain Mail”.

NAEL-Nail: I was in deep meditation one time and I was asking about the “T” and why it was so important to Christianity as in the Trinity. When I finally got a response it said “the “T” is a nail James and that blew my mind, obviously I get excited easily, but seriously I knew there was defiantly a connection with Jesus being nailed to the cross which is what they emphasis the most when they re-enact that whole terrible scene of the sacrifice. Nails and hooks in magic all have some weird dark use. What is being clearly shown is sharp objects that poke like forks “The Devils Fork” Swords, Daggers are all tools of darkness. The Devil is often call “The Nail”. This doesn’t mean to freak out next time your at the dinner table but what you will find is most indigenous cultures eat with their hands. Cutting and poking things clearly has its own subconscious effects and was the real sign of savagery.

OEL-Oil: The destruction of mankind on Earth. I was swimming the other day in the Ocean and I could not help but to notice the amount of plastic washing up on the shore. Since I feast on vegetables and fruit I can throw the rinds and peelings in the compost but the plastic must be thrown in the trash. I started noticing just how much plastic is really in circulation just between bags for nuts, groceries, zip locks etc. Every time someone tries to disarm your intent on changing things attempting to make you believe that everything is okay and its just all in you mind, think of the plastic, when they try to Namaste love and light you telling you to consider only yourself, consider the plastic and how its choking and suffocating our Mother. The Government could ban plastic right now and big industry would be forced to use the alternative that has already been laid out for them but they will not do it because we have to overthrow them on the Spiritual Plane first. It is there things can be handled, it only takes one of us and thousands of them fall by the waste side, mighty we are, Immortalis.

PAEL-Pale: An Angel that spends more than seven days on Earth is substantialized and becomes pale and opaque. Many of them dispersed into Canaan called afterwards, “Pale’stine which is now Israel. They swept the world with terror those who also came from the Isles of Albion which is Britain they looked lifeless this is where the term Albino comes from. Venusians have this same appearance.

QAEL-Quail-Still wondering why this is the state bird of California?

RAEL-Real: This is as real as it gets as you see you are on the target, this is what is really going on not the Illusion and of course their latest addition to unguided Spiritual mayhem, Rael, who is most assuredly down with the diabolical plan inciting his followers to all out blasphemy and hedonism. In this condition they can do little for the world.

Reason 61: The Country of Canada is actually funding Rael to go about his Ministry of basically “do whatever you want there is no God”, just another hedonist cult on the surface however because they are linked with Thule as you can see by their Medallions I knew they had to be up to more. Sure enough they run an actual baby cloning facility where a mother who has suffered a miscarriage can actually have the baby. They use the Blood and DNA of the deceased baby and make a new one. Of course this is a very expensive procedure so they attract very wealthy candidates. This is like the movie Omen where these evil babies were put into wealthy households to later control major companies. Earthier way this is big time E.T. action Rael has at least a dozen surrogate mothers on staff waiting to hatch a baby. Their website promotes all of this, no legal problems whatsoever, pure Zionist breaking all the rules they enforce.

SAEL-Sale-Seal: What you will find with the Serpent energy since each “S” is a symbol for a serpent like Hitler’s SS. Cracking the Code when you come to the “S” words, Swords, they always are deeply embedded with meaning. Now Sale and Deal go together and that makes business, the art of swindling our poor fellows. On the other hand when it comes down to it magical Seals are the most powerful. The purpose of a Seal is to close something in thus trapping it to do bidding or holding it so it won’t escape. Solomon’s Seal which is the Star of David was designed to do just that, trap things. When Solomon would Seal Jinn in bottles he would put the Star of David on top. Once again you can see that even Metatron’s cube which has hit the #1 spot in Sacred Geometry is none other than a hex used time and time again to keep souls which are seeking higher truth passing back and forth between this demented dimension and Saturn. It is a mental weakening tool as many have already admitted since its main purpose is only to weaken the cube it should never be placed in the mind.

Reason 62: The knowledge of the organic cube was taken from Egypt now given the title the Flower of Life. The Egyptians used this to visually encase matter within in it. Then it was used to move things, especially large objects, around with their minds. Meditating on this Geometric Shape incorrectly will help solidify the Cubic frame of the body we are already trapped in thus it is not the chariot. The real purpose for these shapes is an Art called Tesseract, which is the shape you see on the right. This is for bringing things into this dimension from the 4th. 6 Protons 6 Electrons 6 Neutrons, our body is the Carbon structure of the Cube, the Beast, but not our Spirit. The Flower of Life later became Metatron's Cube when the lines were made straight.

TAEI-Tale- Tail- We come to our favorite Reptilian appendage the tail along with the word always used for the erroneous stories we are told especially as children i.e. Fairy Tales, Wives Tales, and Tall Tales.

VAEL-Veil: A very powerful word from my point of view, this is what creates the Illusion. The world walks about Veiled meaning unable to see the truth.

WAEL-Wail-Whale: To continuously cry and our aquatic friends known to originate on the Aquatic Moon Europa and also Sirius along with Dolphins.

Yael- Yale-Yell: To scream and also the famous University which still has the Seal of the Urim and the Thummim, the ancient Hebraic Rune Stones. These are objects of magic used by the Levite Priest. This is also the home of Skull and Bones code number (322) March 22 turn of the Equinox.

Reason 63: The Name was placed under the Breastplate and would cause it to glow opening communication to the Tetragrammaton. Lucifer also had his body encrusted with special stones.

As you see with this simple (4) letter word that we have examined there is a lot more to be extracted from language. Due to the Truth itself never being written nowhere near its entirety, this provides one of the only ways to extract the manifold story of what happened here on Earth, it survives in the language. Societies like the Druids never wrote anything down thus everything of value was committed to memory. As it states in several places the memory banks of man and woman were a lot more vast then they are now, they did not have to write things down. Even looking in Egypt it has been discovered that even the Hieroglyphs where a product of latter times in Egypt, the original inhabitants left no written records just Djedhi Priests. This lends more credit to the results of magnetic shifts which is extensive memory loss. I believe if a person does not have a strong sound aura, magnetic shifts can erase most past, present, and future information pertaining to the person.

Reason 64: Our Ancestors had at times larger brains and greater memory capacity. This is never talked about because of course it would destroy the Theory of Evolution. These skulls date back millions of years ago. The Bible starts the first Creation of man at roughly 8,500 years ago, what a hindering lie. Sometimes when you are dreaming you may even see people you knew in elementary school however if you are asked while conscious if you remember them in such detail the answer for most will be no. Because so many quadrants of the brain are powered down ultimately most people are walking about with a bad case of amnesia. When one forgets who they are they become clones behaving like everyone else.

People that can really see Auras can read things off a persons Aura, not just the mood of the person. It is known that information like where they have been, who their descendants are, and various other deeply enlightening things about their character. When examining the controllers of this system I did come across extensive information indicating that pole shifts could now be caused by the technology in their possession which had been used before in previous times to reverse the effects of a natural pole shift. Seeing 2012 line up as the Zionist Code it would indicate not only the ability to possibly cause shifts but also the ability to traverse the space time continuum. Most make the mistake of calculating what everyone in the world is capable of based on their personal intelligence level not realizing there are men who spend their every waking moment solving complex problems of Quantum Physics and various forms of Science. One who spends their time in the club and drinking should not believe they are on the same caliper as these great minds, that is the ego that would believe such foolishness. It makes sense that they are doing nothing in vain and have truly discovered something far beyond the imagination of the common slacker.

MASTER CODE BREAKER

Reason 65: The date 2012 is actually the numeric Code for Zion used across encrypted machines like the German Enigma and the Code of the Psyconaut. The 2 is a Z, S, or N as you can see the obvious similarities, the 01 is binary and can be interchanged and finally the N. Tis true they will reach completion at least by 2012 although 2010 is the “vivid” beginning of the shift. The Elite used Zion as the logo for the Olympics scheduled for Babylondon in 2012. They are bluntly pushing forward.

These topics are never covered and our strictly out of the box. A long debate will go on amongst individuals questioning whether or not time travel is possible. Sometimes they will go a little deeper and report things like the Philadelphia Experiment where it was purported a major project took place to create a jump hole between 1940 and 1980 approximately. Few ever make it to the point of questioning what was being done with this “Time Gate”. Let us ask the question, with the ability to traverse time still under the laws of physics what would the Elite want to change? That is a big question but to me there is one simple answer, they would want to make themselves rule as long as possible and anything that could disrupt that they would thwart somehow as long as possible.

Reason 66: On the left a fresh jump gate installed right outside of downtown Detroit without the least bit of curiosity, of course who's looking at Detroit these days. On the right the jump gate on Stargate SG1 equipped with Enochian writing. You should begin to see how fact and what seems at times to be fiction blur together. Everything we can think does in fact already exist.

We will talk a little of traversing space and time and how one can get in a position to even be able to accomplish such a feat unless they were Spiritually incline. It is known that if you are carrying a low vibration you cannot physically travel through higher vibratory fields with the body, obviously, but you can get to other Planes, Planets and various territories with capable ships. This is what is meant by the term "External Merkaba". When the space race began it was Russia and the U.S. Let us start looking at all of the Russian Territory known as "the Great Bear" as under one very divisive Monarchy in which the people are expendable. Let us include even Germany in this although many think the Russians don't like the Germans that was something created by their mutual governments to formulate a plan of divide and conquer which the Elite do everywhere, they are all still Aryans. VENE VINI VECE we just call it "The V".

Reason 67: Russia, a long standing Occult and Technological Powerhouse made it to the Moon first with ease. Their space technology was far more superior than the U.S. as they had already made deals with the Gizans. One would need to keep in mind Russia had one of the first Inner Circles. True they lost many people in depressions and civil wars but their Elite continued to increase their ranks, again, the people are expendable to them. Lennon, Trotsky, Stalin, Gorbachev, Putin and many others fed from Mother Russia like Vampires at a blood bank. Not to mention that's where those that choose Plasma as their diet get it from, no time to be hunting people in the night when you have to be in a fortune 500 meeting in the morning.

The race was to the moon, as they say. One should start thinking what was really happening on the Moon since we know a silly race isn't the reason these two Juggernauts take off on a goal. Furthermore trust they would use every "Channel" they could to be sure they could make the trips with the least amount of error. They would need star maps, statistics, temperatures, pressures, permissions and various other guides. Many think we just logically came across this information through trail and error which would create enormous time issues for explaining how fast we prepared for the mission. Here is what really happened.

In the Spiritual circles of Thule during Third Reich NAZI Germany the greatest magicians of all time had come together. Blavatsky was only a component of this group. Men like Dietrich Eckart, who trained Hitler, were far above her. Madame Blavatsky possessed an array of esoteric goodies she picked up from the Black Tibetans during her trip to Agharta/Shamballah. In such a male dominant society Blavatsky entranced the mind of various key individuals with obviously not her physical charm. Books writing her off as a quack are disinformation. She begins her Book "Isis Unveiled" with a stout beginning making her allegiance in BATH KOL ISIS known.

Reason 68: Madam Petrova Blavatsky mother of the Society of Thule recruited the best Magicians of the time. She made contact with the Black Tibetans known as the "Green Gloves" found later scattered throughout defeated Nazi Germany in houses where they had committed mass suicides. The "Green Gloves" were hyperdimensional Tibetan Masters. They showed Blavatsky Shamballah/Agharta, the Inner world. She made the pacts with them and thus the Third Reich became the heavy instrument of the Dark Tibetans all aligned with the Gizans.

This is how the Swastika of the Black Sun got into circulation in Germany. Since once again we are in a binary world we also have another Sun directly on the opposite side of this Sun. You have to be in special locations to see it, they refer to it as a Sun Dog. The Black Sun is the opposite energy, a taker of life for strength rather than a giver. Madame Blavatsky had Master El Morya, St. Germaine, Koot Hoomi, Sanat Kamara, Sananda, Aliester Crowley, McGregor Mather, Frater Achad, Krishnamurti, Leadbetter, and Besant all Immortal Masters of Astral Travel and devoted members of Great White Brotherhood.

Reason 69: Rare images of a Sundog, the view of our Binary Sun sometimes even appearing as three suns. These are government facilities fully staffed located far away from civilization on the poles which are the only places you can see this phenomena. These places don't get visitors often and if they do they are not civilians.

With this arsenal Thule hatched a deeper plan in conjunction with the Paranormal Division of the Third Reich. Deros, their contact who wrote the new Emerald Tables of Thoth, dwelled in the underground city of Agharta. The Paranormal Division was said to receive more funding than Hitler's total Armament Division due to its importance to the Reich. They lay burdened with the task of gathering all the powerful Shrines from around the world which eventually ended up in the vaults of the British Museum. Those who have done study on holy artifacts will note that most of them are in the British Museum, not in their original place of origin, they won't allow it. Many of these objects do strange things when placed back on their corresponding leylines. It is known you can only get into the vaults of the British Museum if you are a member of The Golden Dawn. The Golden Dawn was a Society setup by Thule in which Aliester Crowley was made head of, he had Frater Achad as his apprentice. Crowley and Mathers were always in competition with one another, this is how Blavatsky penned them against each other to broaden their potential. These two Adepts birthed the greatest horrors mankind has witnessed in this era. Many of their works were published by Blavatsky's Lucis Trust, again another obvious clue she was part of the Luciferian agenda.

Reason 70: The Holy Grail and the Spear of Longinus, which was said to pierce the side of Christ, where both seized by Hitler. These artifacts are charged with energy due to the belief millions of people put in them. Childhood stories of Knights, Princesses, and Dragons all serve to mold the mind for future indoctrination. Most of these items had much different histories. The real Grail was not even the Chalice it was a succession of women carrying pure bloodlines, like Mary.

Aliester was far more sadistic than McGregor it was he the Beast decided to incarnate in. That did not go without the key use of McGregor who had a gift for languages. McGregor was set to the task of translating the Keys of Solomon from ancient Hebrew to Latin and English. This had never been done and it was awaited by every Magician of the time, especially since not many had access to the libraries in the British Museum. After translation McGregor's life was very short and his scribe admits he had been affected by some curse which the book even warns of called the "Reflux Current". Dan Brown is scheduled to release his rendition of The Keys of Solomon to follow up his Angels and Demons. I sure hope you are off this Plane when this hits the media and people in their curiosity download the original book, which is also available for free. The Beast has incarnated in several men such as Jack Parsons the creator of the nuclear bomb who was also a Satanist, Albert Pike the 33° Mason responsible for bringing new forms of the corrupted Brotherhood to the U.S. and of course Crowley who set Leviathan free.

As they completed the circle of ceremony all was silent, everything that needed to be said was said, the order, perfect, the incense, in measure, the offerings received, in vestments they waited and as time past they assumed the ritual to be barren. Then there was a flash of energy as the portal opened, a green trapezoid, many collapsed with the sudden change in temperature as the deep cold permeated the room, they had done it, they had unleashed the Ancient Forbidden One. What have they done, they have released Leviathan who is C'thul'u. Aliester Crowley's ritualistic experiments in Loch Ness.

I will take a moment to elaborate on this book the Keys to Solomon since I personally believe it will play a huge role in the reality shift of this dimension for a few reasons. When Dan Brown released The Davinchi Code it was instantly a Best Seller, meaning the media pushed it to the top fast. He followed up with Angels and Demons and that solidified his career, they had the perfect Puppet Icon. Anything else he releases people are going to swarm to. They warmed everyone back up again when they did the Davinchi Code Movie with everyone's favorite Mr. Forest Gump Tom Hanks. This gave Dan more prestige. Now they are finished with the Angels and Demons movie and the subtitle is Revenge of the Nephelim which you can do your own book on all of what that entails by now. So next of course will be the Keys to Solomon.

The original book, the Key to Solomon, does not read like a story book it is strictly Talismans, Prayers, Repentances, Evocations, and illustrations of Ceremonial Magic. It is not wise to speak against anything you do not understand. This book I Innerstand very clearly as a horrible danger. Why? During the time I was a fresh Pastor I was fascinated with Solomon, he was who I chose as my Archetype as many men of the cloth often do. Solomon has all the wisdom and most affectionately all the ladies, something abolished after Solomon's time but still it allows the deprived Pastor to dream a little. I wanted to read everything Solomon wrote especially since it actually says in Proverbs Solomon wrote over 5000 books. I wondered why if Solomon wrote 5000 books we only had (3) Psalms, Proverbs, and the Song of Solomon one of which was not written by Solomon but by Lemuel. Some say Lemuel, Solomon, and Jedidiah were all the same person.

I began to search and came across two more books, The Testaments of Solomon and the Keys to Solomon. Both were full of demons. In the Testament of Solomon, Solomon is actually interrogating demons under the power of the Ring which he says was given to him by YHVH. The Keys to Solomon had the names of demons inscribed in the Talismans that it instructed you to make. Of course I didn't know the names were those of Demons failing to do the translation from Hebrew to English at the moment in addition my Dictionary of Angels by Gustav was still on the way. But that wasn't going to stop me from exploring a little of Solomon's wondrous Talismans eh.

In short after doing all of the rigorous work of constructing a Talisman for wisdom this is what happened. First I will note that some of the rituals in the book involved animals blood which made me think a little deeper about Solomon, however, there were plenty that did not involve blood and since there was also a warning in the beginning of the book about using animals blood I came to the terms that someone had maliciously put the spells there since they were towards the back of the book. When I would fall asleep with the Talisman or Book around me I would be transported to another world. Once I realized I was watching the dream I could begin to control it thus starting the lucid phase. From there some monstrous form would appear and we would do battle of which I noticed the Seals from the Key to Solomon played a heavy roll in trapping these Demons once they had been subdued. Sustaining any kind of blow from them would result in real physical damage in this world. On one occasion a Demon got hold of me and slammed me before I could break the dream. When I woke up I had the pain and the bruises, after that I learned not to get grabbed. All along I was imagining I was doing the Lords work, in the Army now.

The dreams could always be broke by Holy Names in which I kept a complete arsenal in memory. I also noted there where a lot of other people there all involved in doing something in this strange world full of Spirits. The Demons got bigger and bigger and I seemed to get better and better at dealing with them and then the Dictionary arrived. I was horrified to find that the Talismans contained the names of Demons. What I now know is that all the Demons I was fighting I had evoked and if I had lost they could have done damage to my soul. I will tell the reader now, I was born on the 22nd which is a Master Number so I have a buffer that allows me to dissect these things without immediate danger to my soul due to positive intent, however, I know beyond doubt many have been taken by this book, maybe my work about it will reach the peoples hands in time so they can steer clear of it.

Back to the plans of Thule. With the Talismans of Solomon in hand they began to travel the opposite Plane which anyone trained in Lucid Sleep can do. In this Plane you can go to various places and the main feature is you can call forth Beings and they appear. Apparently they called forth the Enochian Enchained sons of Cain and they appeared to them. They consulted with them about world domination and how it could be brought about. They gave them first a special language of power to use amongst themselves in conjunction with Vril power. They gave them the strategy for using young minds as processors in ("Universe City's) Universities. The idea was to use the brightest minds to develop devices to create external Merkaba. This vehicle could be used to travel dimensions, a real time machine. The alchemist became the physicist.

Following this in the "seen" world we find Germany at the head of jet propulsion technology. The Allies and Axis were in the bed together behind the scenes, but in plain view they pretended to be enemies. The Black Sun Cults, White Brotherhoods, Luciferian, Saturnalian, Atlanteans, and Venusians all had a mutual cause, Galactic domination. Of course declassified CIA Project Paperclip indicates the transferring of the German Scientist during the staged fall of the Third Reich to U.S. soil to work for NASA. Basically they destroyed Germany set up the biggest Human sacrifice known to date, the Holocaust, to feed the Valkries and other demoniac forces they where working with, and they continued a plan few would even venture to believe.

Reason 72: Several Nazi's scientist were imported into the U.S. Them they were brought under the NASA umbrella to help with rocket propulsion. These rockets where not used to power space shuttles but to kill innocent people by the thousands.

Reason 73: The Hyperdimensional Being known as Aiwass channeled through Crowley gave him a coded language of power to use amongst the Psyconauts which they came to be known as. Aiwass is also the sign of the Single Bolt in Ancient Germanic which can be found in (Letters and Numbers). Aiwass was the classic "Gray" alien sent by the dark side as an extraterrestrial imposter. They are more similar to Golem, two part Beings created by Sorcerers that just follow orders.

The idea was to rearrange occurrences in history to erect new Saviors. We will call this Project Eighth Ray which I will get into more in the Second Edition, if there is a Second Edition. It takes at times to be showed this by Higher Beings to believe, my Word can only stand for the Guided who know of some of the things I have already spoken of and thus will venture to trust me further as I will still show how it all fits together, so reason, not belief, is needed. In many of the ancient paintings it shows what appears to be Spaceships in the atmosphere during the crucifixion of Jesus. Those ships bare the 8 pointed Star of Ilu. These Ilu are very advanced, which is why they control the world. Jesus was a "NAZA"RITE a special sect of whom Samson and almost all Prophets of the Bible belonged to; this is the Rites of NAZA who all leave this world at 33 years old. The part of the Oath of the Nazarite is to never cut your hair. Samson and Jesus both left the world at Age 33.

When the German Scientists came to the U.S. they joined up with NASA the "S" of course is a backwards "Z". They formed the new NAZI party who now have many angles they work from because they have unlocked the ability of hyperdimensional travel. Always remember the technology they show us in the open is the old stuff, look how long the Military was using microwave technology before they decided to let everyone else give it a spin introducing the Microwave into the home. When the Microwave hit the market people were amazed, look how fast it heats things, at a price of course, "Ra" diation which will always cause some form of cancer or tumor most times undetected.

Reason 74: We will see a lot more of the Project 8th Ray and their hyperdimensional capabilities.

This means large pro-peace movements similar to the times of the Hippies may have been removed from our memories. There may have been a lot more uprising in history then currently remembered, especially the Great Battle. I don't think I'm the first person to figure all this out, however, I'm aware it is only exceptional people who really discover the truth to the Matrix, they do a little work, and then they are removed as if they never existed in this world. A slight little alter and we perceive things different in the future which is shown on the movie I AM Legend were the lady cannot remember Bob Marley in her memory, just Dameon Marley. The T.V. series Heroes does an exceptional job at showing the cause and effects of altering the past. These subtle hints are often dropped by the Elite because it makes them laugh on the other end when those who know what happened are watching. This occurs a lot in Hollywood Movies.

Reason 75: The most common person knows the T.V. is a mind control tool by various degrees however that does not stop them from watching it. This is part of the mind control. Many believe the mind control is only suggestive however it is done more from a technological standpoint. As the new digital network is reaching completion in the U.S. a very different kind of programming will ensue.

SONY

High Definition. It's in our DNA.

Reason 76: SONY which is an anagram for SION since in English the "Y" is substituted for an "I". Of course it makes sense coming from the company that has introduced the world to some of its greatest technological gadgets of the time. As they are already letting it become known they will be adjusting the viewers DNA with the new digital upgrades. When this begins there will be little more one can do to explain anything to the masses, they simply will not be interested. They will be dulled out and controlled, embedded with layers of digitized mental programming.

Reason 77: Mushrooms along with hallucinogens like Ayahuasca are Gateway Drugs, meaning that once taken they open the gateway of your soul which is normally kept closed by default. An inexperienced person can suffer from several types of possessions when taking these substances if they are not trained in the knowledge of out of body experience OOB. As you see Dr. Mario lured millions of children into taking Psilocybin Mushrooms.

It is said that the true purpose of a Galactic line up, is to allow ascending and descending to take place. Many will be coming and going from this dimension once this happens. Those who hold the power of creating realities, which can be done in the mind, can transfer souls/minds to another reality on a mental bridge. I know a person who went to India and then Peru and testified of Yogis being able to take untrained students into their minds. Then the student was transferred into another world in which the Yogi was ruler. Madame Blavatsky did say that the lower dimensions were ruled by the Buddha's on the Devachanic planes above us thus placing us in more of an Onion of Realities. Layers of what we call Planes, Expanses, Dimensions, and Realms. Since this is the case it would be wise for one to seek how to escape this whole matter altogether or at least how to go in the positive direction versus the negative. If you do not make a decision, one will be made for you.

Reason 78: Hollywood lets us know one more time that there are snakes on the Earth Plane. The symbolism is key, as you can see the Caduceus is being implicated as one of the culprits.

I know for a fact that we have now descended 2 dimensions already. What Leonardo Davinchi was explaining in his paintings which are full of sacred geometry is the Human body has a 5 fold nature. Five senses, 5 fingers on each hand etc. There is an actual seam running down the middle of the body showing we are two five fold sides put together. What is happening now is most people are operating on 3 senses versus the 5 senses they think they have. How this occurs is many people think they see but in fact they are not seeing true reality just illusion, some taste but they need seasoning to even enjoy the food not to mention the kind of food they eat for nourishment. Some would rather talk thus they don't hear well, and others touch but don't feel the energy of what they are examining. For each person the mixing and matching is different. The drawback is if we can't operate on all five senses not only can we not "unlock" the 6 sense, which is how you feel when all five senses are being used at their height simultaneously. In addition it takes the six senses to unlock the 7th and so on. As explained above the perception of various dimensions is within the amount of senses you have. A good example of this is when the 3rd eye is open you are immediately perceptive of another dimension.

To clarify the statement of many languages being backwards I will bring forth a few facts: Fact one is that all holy languages, as they are called, like Arabic, Hebrew, Amharic, Aramaic, and Sanskrit are written from right to left. English, Latin, French, and Spanish, also known as the Latin Vulgate, are all written in the opposite direction from left to right. The reason for this is the direction you read and write plays a heavy role in the direction your mind is moving since the mind turns more of a wheel in thought. Also this effects what side of the brain you predominantly use. Many of the words in these languages, especially the Vulgates, when looked at backwards or sounded out the vibration when taken literal gives you the actual origin of the word and its manifold involvement in the erosion of the intelligence of the Human race.

AMOR is the word for love in Spanish. AMOR is the son of Venus. When you look at it backwards it spells ROMA which is of course ROME. This proves that when you turn the word backwards you don't get the opposite meaning you just get more of the meaning. That is another valuable key to learn. Since letters are truly Numbers lets say ABC is 123. No matter how you move the words around it will still equal 6. In English LOVE comes from JOVE wife of Jupiter. We can conclude a J is also an L just facing the other direction.

At times what will be uncovered will be shocking and hard to believe, if you remain patient and strengthen your courage you will see that this will become the key to your emancipation and self empowerment. The system in place redundifies to the lowest degree, once you are on the trail you will find multiple connections. The Art of magic itself involves an accurate system that cannot be altered too much or else it will have no effect. Much power lies in repetition this is why so many words are often spelled the same, but each is given a different meaning to increase its use. For this reason it is easier to spot them once you know the basic parameters does this make sense, since, cents, sins?

If you may think for one moment that your mind is not directional consider for a moment that the eyes see everything upside down first. They then must flip the image you see before it sends it to your brain, all of which happens so fast you never notice. As we may at times forget we are actually standing on a globe that rotates and our feet are stuck to it by gravity less we just float off in space so in fact we are at times upside down. If we are only using the two eyes as a gauge to authenticating higher life forms we will remain disappointed at our discoveries, one must use other abilities in conjunction with their eyes. Such as the third eye or Pineal Gland. Most have calcified Pineal Glands due mainly to fluoride intake, meat, processed starches and artificial sugars. To reverse this one will need to ingest good amounts of Gota Kola, Alfalfa, Parsley, Wood Betony, and Mugwort. Gota Kola is by far the most effective of all these.

Reason 79: The eyes are easy to be tricked, in fact many places in our Matrix have Optical Illusions over them so you cannot perceive what is really there with you naked eye. As seen in folklore they often spoke of hidden doorways to other dimensions. Focus your eyes on the dot in the center of this Illustration. Now move your head back and forth, notice the wheels spinning? Your perception can easily be manipulated by those who innerstand the complete body down to the atomic and cellular levels.

Reason 80: When looking at Gates like the one pictured in Reason 66 in Detroit you will never see anything enter or exit the Gate they remain on a frequency none detectable by the eye, this is not very hard, they have mastered invisibility because of the inaccuracy of the two eyes, the Third Eye however cannot be easily fooled. Focus on the cross in the center of the Illustration, you will notice the dots disappear altogether, if you focus longer they will reappear and then change color to green.

There are a few things that should become obvious to the individual about many of the Gods. There Worlds have run far longer than most can fathom especially since we have a hard time remembering what we did last Saturday. I call this the war against the machines except it didn't involve the Terminator it was the Terminal they used. The computer has the feature of a huge memory bank. I've seen computer hard drives into the Terabytes which is at least 999 Gigabytes. The Cray 6, a government computer, has in its memory banks the dial tone of every phone in the United States. It's funny that to our ears when you pick up the phone the tone sounds the same as any other phone but in fact they are all different.

Part of what is happening to our short term memory, which is very important because it makes the transfer to our long term memory, is we store on computers everything we should remember on our own thus our memory wilts down because it is unused. Even numbers of our close family members are stored in the phone memory banks not our personal memory. Now people change numbers so much it becomes no use in remembering their number. When we stop logging numbers and watching them, an entire world of fact is closed to us. If you could watch the random numbers of the day your every step would be guided in perfection. Numbers are what we call the "Master Language" there will always be a 1,2,3 in every culture thus it is the strongest language. As you see in the Kabbalah and the Abjad there exist numeric magical cubes, boxes that equal the same amount no matter which way you add them. In short we lost the battle of the machines on various levels, this is just one. We must regain the desire to pay attention to Letters, Numbers, and Names. This is the actual exposed program to the Matrix, you can read it if you can decode it.

Reason 80: The war against the Machines took place in the office building not on the Battlefield. The real Terminator, Arnold Schwarzenegger, is busy at work dismantling our future. Sources say the Elite are considering making him the next U.S. President.

For the first time that I have seen directly we will reveal what is at the end of 4th dimension. You may see this as a briefing since we will all reach a point where we must guide our Spirit through the Planes. Those that have become masters of astral travel report that when encountering and passing through 4th dimension they knew not to stop. They reported heavy reptilian E.T. activity of a weird unwelcoming kind. Upon reaching the end of the 4th region their appeared what seemed to be an Artificially Intelligent computer barrier. Something like a giant computer that was alive that made a noise as if some type of giant engine was running within it. Some would wave this off as absurd and of course I would to if I didn't have something more to ad about another strange sync with this "Ma"chine.

First off we will note on the last Matrix movie it came down to Neo talking to the A.I. (Artificial Intelligence) and making some sort of deal in order to free the people from the Matrix, but that is just a movie right? AI is actually an important city in ancient Sumeria this word is pronounced (EYE) like the all-seeing-eye. The Atlantians were also known as the Borgians which is where the French term Bourgeoisie comes from, they claim to be descendants of Ancient Atlantians. A BORG is known to be part Human part organic technology. If you have read any Atlantis lure you will see their affinity for first Crystals and then Technology. We also report for those who had made it to the point of the Gate, if they could go that far they had no trouble getting through, it had to open. I wonder if Bill knows about that Gate. Oops (Ops)

Reason 81: This Synchromistic Tarot card is right on the money featuring as number 17 BORG. 17 is a favorite Masonic number since $1+7=8$. As you see they deal with the double cube and the cube is evil just like they showed you in the Hell Raiser Movies. The Masons sent to the U.S. where charged with building the new Atlantis. Atlanta Georgia has a Lodge next to just about every church if not the church itself. You have great Athena "Athens" right up the road not to mention the Georgia Guide Stones, Dr Malachi York's Pyramids in Eatonton Georgia, the Olympic arrival of 1996 and many more things linking Atlanta as a key location for numerous plans brought forth throughout history to arrive us at were we are now. The tree in the middle of the Garden with Apples is wholly an Atlantean concept, just like the flood.

The truth is the masses have still been worshipping the same pagan Gods throughout history clueless to the outcome of such carelessness for the soul. When we fail to investigate the eternal destination of our Spirit it is most certain that it will end up in the hands of the vile, they want it, they know its value. This after life is serious, it is this world that is the Illusion and yet you even see in this world the innocent pay penalties in which we would think is unfair. This is not about fair and unfair this is about you taking the training wheels off and becoming firm about what is your greatest possession rather than trusting it in the hands of some money loving Guru less they lead you astray as they have done many. Did I mention Guru actually means Jupiter/Amon in Hindi.

Ideas of saving the whole world are obsolete. People are at various stages of their own personal growth thus in the beginning you may have to be a little selfish with your time and attention as you gain new balance. Many are still earth bound and ideas of even leaving their hometown may seem like too long of a journey, they cannot be forced to grasp concepts of space. This book is written for those who feel their future is in the cosmos and in fact many things will not make sense if a person is looking to remain on Earth. There is no reason for one to accept the truth of the future if they want to remain on Earth, thus they will believe nothing you tell them. These people are making plans for several years in advance as if they knew of the hour We would release their souls. Many make plans in vain their highest goals are riddled with limits and they have forgotten that we are not the body.

Reason 82: Many people have confused Spirituality with monetary prosperity in which the two are almost complete opposites. Consumption is the enemy of compassion. If you notice the main trait we have been given as Humans is reason, this keeps us from acting like insects and animals being at times purely instinctual. When one charges money to give a Seeker knowledge they are in gross error and the Truth will elude them even if it is in plain view, many will not believe this. Their deeds are written thus We will declare them back faithfully to them on that Day in which it will be too late to balance. That day comes for everyone at some point it is the only guarantee in this world.

We shall put a barrier betwixt them so none may cross, on one side they will see what they forfeited and on the other they can see what they escaped, contemplate this in wisdom.

Real Gurus travel the Buddhic and Devachanic Planes that many already inhabit, they are doing the bidding for the Beings who control the Regions. They've promised to serve them during their initiations. I'm speaking here of the initiated Yogi, Guru, Llama, etc. as far as the Pastors the Holy Ghost suffices for them and the Witches have their 13 Covens. Paranormal feelings and experiences do not denote that you have reached the True Path and one should carefully access all of what is happening in the surroundings when they begin to occur, especially in the future, they will be widespread as many activate. Due to the level of mind control and suppression of thought many individuals never get the opportunity to truly ponder this stuff in fear that they may be struck by lightening for offending the Gods thus they become stuck on the step of what appears to be an enormous religious Pyramid fully animated. I've wanted at times to feel the charge of lightening so I will present the facts and you remain as the judge.

It becomes obvious that if the Gods could do something about this world to make it better they would have done it a long time ago before many innocent humans and animals have perished many of whom are now extinct. I feel I am in the position to make these statements because I have traveled many paths to their completion somehow escaping the irreversible initiations. As many great men have put it, if you need to be initiated into it, it cannot be wholesome for the people. Was not our first command to give freely of what is the best for us to our neighbor who are like mothers, fathers, sisters, and brothers to us? So why keep a secret from them? Indeed these men and women have something that needs to be kept a secret due to its abhorred nature.

Reason 83: There is an inclination within us all, no matter how minute, that wishes to be part of something mystical and elite. These leechers of life feed upon that craving that exist within us as a residue of who we really are, except they distort the image to their favor. A Midget standing on a giants shoulder can see much further than the Giant however if the Giant fails to see the Midget below him the Midget will be trampled beneath his feet. Joining secret societies always gets one trampled. The moment you relinquish yourself to such a hierarchy you are admitting you are in a lowly state, this places the strong above the weak and this is how they operate. Most never obtained what they where looking for and even forgot what that was.

Reason 84: Their Oath is to keep silent; the ritual keeps the Oath in place. As you see above the Pyramid is full of the Spiritual Leaders, Bankers, Businessmen, and various others in key places. Joining would place a person on the bottom of the Pyramid to be crushed. Their capstone has yet to descend, meaning they are waiting on their God to return to this realm this will be in 2012, possibly 2010.

It is sad that in the end I found most religious Dogma's, or should I say Ma's Dogs, along with their characters to be inexplicably linked to a common cause of keeping us ignorant and under the yoke. At great lengths I wanted to believe the world was perfect because "God" was perfect and this was the highest form of teaching. Then true knowledge rebutted and said we are the active creation in which the Creator passes knowledge through, if we can no longer see what is in plain view and use our senses to react against it, if it be judged harmful to innocence, then we have forfeited our gift which is the right of good choice. The Creator is perfect however the creation is started from a state where it must learn perfection amongst many other things. Part of the practice is repairing society with the ability that is bestowed upon us. One may write, paint, teach, sculpture, speak, fund, volunteer, and many more things to bring about perfection that will at least reflect on their own personal self which is the world, but we cannot sit back and do nothing, this is insolence.

We have above us now rulers that are killing everything we love with their filth like oil. Has one sat down lately and thought about how many family members and close friends we have lost to this system from all the diameters it takes hold of such as its medical poisons? They are the real causalities to a silent war that takes place on the battlefield of Illusion where we sometimes forget to look around us to see those that have fallen. It is easy to ignore it as long as it wasn't someone that you may have known, but when it is your Uncle that gets called to the meaningless war, your Aunt who dies in the Twin Tower Ritual, your Sister who gets abducted into a Cult, your Brother who overdoses, or your Baby who is born deformed due to the chemicals they gave you as the Mother, then you feel like doing something, and it is then you will find you are alone. No longer do we rally together I saw a woman speak to a stray dog and then look at me and say nothing.

Reason 85: The silent battle still goes on with oil. The Elite have placed war and disease at the forefront while the contamination still continues in the background. The Arabs discovered oil looking for water, how ironic, before then they considered the desert cursed. After they found the oil they perceived it as a gift from their God to make them rulers of all lands especially over their brother Israel thus they suffer from mental delusion and greed prostrating ritualistically at 90 degrees as if We hear them not knowing the Most High examines the Heart and the knowledge of man is foolishness on Height.

The night was unforgiving since we could not find wood the fire did not carry. We lost another to the wolves in the night, a new child, the world was not deserving of her. I' m not sure how much longer we can hold on, as the Older I must lead because I have escaped death often and although my limbs have long since given way but I cannot show it. Hopefully we find others who know this strange land less we perish in it with no story of our existence. My Pre-Adamic Life

A little old lady that did everything the Bible told her to do had an issue with God. Good old Mother Love was praying for the innocent girl next door to be healed but instead the little girl got sicker and God forbid, she died. Being a Pastor I was faced with dealing with this situation. Of course the ones who play the role as Spiritual leaders are taught to stay on their toes and have some default answers always ready. If all else fails a solemn "It is Gods Will" will suffice but of course you only use that one in emergencies, creativity is key. Adding more fluff I came up with "Everything is by the will of God and He does what He pleases which will ultimately work out for the good because everything God does is good", nice one eh?

Since God does both good and evil as it states in the Bible what can you really do but just hope they haven't read that one and come back wanting more answers. Most Christians have never read the complete Bible thus they lack the big picture. When they get into the vicinity of the Pastor it's seldom question time just time to shake hands and smile. P"raise" the Lord brother! Why would the Lord need to be raised? Could that be what the final plan is, to raise their Lord, we will see.

Reason 86: The Phoenix is used in the Occult Symbolism due to a hidden story of all the Savors that have descended to the Underworld will rise and return. This is Tammuz, Mithras, Jesus, Quetzacoatl, Horus, Adonis and others. The American eagle was going to be a Phoenix but this was deemed too obvious since Europe has always used the Phoenix as its insignia and they did not want the settlers to know that the British were silently orchestrating the development of the Americas. The Phoenix is also the hidden sign of the Phoenicians who designed much of our corrupted language; this is where we get the term Phonetics.

I learned default answers that I picked up along the way from other Ministers that were quite sinister. Of course I had to learn all these things if I intended to be a good Pastor and bare fruit. We will skip for now that the Christian God is a male which is the obvious clue that it isn't the Most High. The Ultimate Creator being gendered is erroneous seeing that it would have to be way more than a He or She to create multiple universes, but we will go with it for now not wanting to begin digging into history "His Story".

So this God did not find it important to save a family from grief and increase an old ladies faith. He would rather not heal the child and leave the old lady hanging on a limb which made no sense to me. We will examine what happens here more closely as we take this journey together into the doghouse. I would like to state that it is clear that only one of two things are happening. Either the God cannot do it because of lack of power or it does not want to just wave its hand and remove the problem for some unknown and strange reason called the W"ill". After all, the God described in the Bible has so much power it can just wave its pinky and poof a better world.

The easier route would of course be to heal the child, which would build the old ladies faith even more, thus possibly convincing the parents of the sick child to attend church. But that is often what does not happen in fact seldom any real miracles anymore, but lots of new cars, why? My personal favorite was always "God gave me a new car" I would think oh really did he give you a gas card for that new Hummer to? As you can see Pastor Bomær just wasn't cut out to carry the cloth after awhile and if I hadn't already made contact with Shekinah and various other unexplained Beings, by that point I would have been out the door. Due to the paranormal experiences I had with these Beings inside of the church I was able to at least come to the conclusion that there was still something alive invisibly orchestrating itself in the church. It wasn't all Catharsis as they would like to make you believe, Spirits actually made contact. So then I learned a valuable lesson which is what looks Good does not always come from Good.

First off because the language is backwards when you say God you really say Dog, don't laugh this is something very serious "Sirius". Many people have always been curious as to why God's Name backwards spells dog. For a moment while carrying the Cross I tried to make sense of it so I leaned on the notion that the Dog was God's opposite because Dogs were very bad. This made no sense whatsoever since many Dogs are very kind and plus there are much more evil things than Dogs described in the Bible like Demons or the Devil which would be more like Gods opposite. I could only conclude for awhile that they all begin with D.

Let us just think for a moment, if you where an all intelligent God and you intended for your Name to always mean good, you should probably make it something like YAY, that way no matter if a person pronounced it backwards or forwards they would still get the same thing, right? Surely the Creator of multiple universes re-splendid and furnished would know this if his lowly creation could figure it out. Not to mention the Creator of everything cannot be confined within Names, Numbers, Vibrations, emitted from the human mouth and if it did it would be much too powerful for us to assimilate and then reproduce. It would be worth it to conclude that the Gods, who are separate from the Most High, know exactly what they are doing down to a quantum level.

Reason 87: This is the Dog Star Sirius A, the star of Illumination for many Secret Societies including the Egyptians. They called it Sothis its symbol is the 5 pointed Star. There is also Sirius B called the pup or esoterically "Great Five" this is Anubis, 5 was the Sacred number of Atlantis.

As I began to look at a lot of the terminology being used in certain places it seemed to take me closer to the truth as long as I was willing to take it literally. Our ability to discern what is happening is deteriorating because we think everything is just a coincidence even though there is no such thing. It is of value to make note of the syncs or déjà vu's of your life, also dreams. This is how the Unseen Ones communicate without swooping down on you in full flight scarring the crap out of you which would not accomplish the purpose intended.

Many ask why the Most High does not just come down here and straighten things out? We say, "Shall the Creation ask the Creator why did you make me this way"? Some even further claim that "He" did. I will venture out for a quick moment to imagine what the Most High is. This of course is very unwise since I'm now trying to comprehend such a storehouse of catamount vesants of condescend Aeonic beams, the Wise, with five puny senses and to add insult to injury I have to use English words, but here it goes. PURE UNRESTRICTED ENERGY, thus if the Most High arrives anywhere near our Galaxy well welcome to the next life because nothing can withstand such force based on common sense, Physics, and Mathematics.

Anything that has come saying it is the Most High is a Deceiver and the truth cannot be found with them and their works prove it along with their words. Notice that when people "Pray" as the word indicates they actually are saying they are becoming the victim and are being hunted, that is after all what pray is, so who is the predator, could it be a wolf? Were the Pastor stands is called the Pulpit, but what is being pulled into the pit? They call themselves Saints which is an anagram for Satins? All books of power indicate the Most High is inside of you so why do so many people when they pray imagine that God lives outside of them, possibly in the sky? This becomes one of many errors we make when we channel our energy to make contact. As it teaches in religions where chakra systems are at least discussed, focusing internally and concentrating on certain energy centers located in your body is one sure way to Enlightenment. Once you have accomplished that you begin to manipulate the energy through your Chakras which are the organs of your soul. Full activation of the Chakras will bring an individual to clear unadulterated contact with the Most High.

The real miracle is performed by the one who has trained their mind to bring about such phenomena without the assistance of an external Being of invisibility causing the phenomena to take place. This does take a certain level of dedication that many have tried to get around. The result of cutting spiritual corners has always been an even greater setback to ones growth. There is no easy way because it is not hard, it has just been made to seem like it is. Once finally emancipated from being dependant upon the rules and false impedances of natural growth you will clearly see our purpose here is to become complete. Not fused and packed together with followers who posses nothing of their own creative thoughts and are just reciting like robots what they learned from those before them that where also incorrectly being lead about behaving like clones.

On the flip side when a person prays they are in fact relinquishing their power and beginning a process of Servant and Master. Our Planetary Ether is saturated with multiple Beings on various frequencies above what the untrained eye can see. The ear can detect some of the Beings which will sound like a ringing in the ear. These Beings have developed an outer Aura incasing their body that makes them invisible thus they can carry out their work on the material realm without notice. Their voices are whispers that people imagine as their own thoughts unless they are Guided. The prayer of the individual which is often known before the request is even made is taken into account and a design begins, this is one of the powers of the All Seeing Eye.

We have way too much evidence linking the Christian faith to Atlantian, Egyptian, and Sumerian Rites sometimes being directly plagiarized from the originals. What I am saying in this case is if a person does their research, which can be done on the internet, and they still do not find the above statement to be true, they could be a victim of mind control which is okay we can work through that. Let us remember that the secret to mind control is never letting the person realize they are under its influence. When the ego is created it will never admit that something like that could happen, it thinks it is too smart. Thus a perpetual system is in place keeping you stagnant, Mind Control, and the Ego/Eagle. Its time that we realize steel sharpens steel the only person that can fix you is you. So as the Book says one should make a “sober” estimate of themselves everyday to be sure they are not off the path and have not deluded themselves all puffed up with pride which comes before destruction.

*Reason 88:
Every part of the physical mind has been mapped, one will have to work with their spiritual

Let us examine why it could be possible that the term God is more of a hidden term which traces to the land of Canaan and many other trails. Throughout our recent history lots of attention has been put on the land of Canaan. This is the so-called Promise Land of the Hebrews. Most literature on Canaan is very non-descriptive as to the people that originally lived there and this of course is done on purpose. Their religious beliefs, artifacts along with its true name often remain hidden and obscure. After much Guidance pieces began to come together.

According to the story when the cursed Cain slew his brother Able he was marked with a sign so that all who see Cain would know that he had been marked by God thus they could not destroy Cain. It should seem odd that although Cain has killed his brother he is then given a symbol of great protection, just another one of those Bible concoctions where the true story is an esoteric mystery embedded with hidden symbolism thus taking it literally makes no sense. They do so much of this in the Bible it's a wonder the book is legible at this point. Generally the member is trained heavily in blind faith to counteract the feelings which occur when continuously uncovering inconsistencies. Enoch son of Cain who wrote more literature relating to the "Fall" for a profound reason noted that this was the double cross. This cross was used in Gnosticism taught in Gnosis, Crete. What is also odd is according to the Bible at this point only 4 people have been created one of which is dead. So Adam and Eve and Cain are the only people spoke of. Here is the scripture:

Genesis Chapter 4:16-17

And Jehovah set up a sign for Cain in order that anyone finding him would not strike him. With that Cain went away from the face of Jehovah and took up residence in Nod the Land of fugitiveness to the East of Eden.

Afterward Cain had intercourse with his wife and she became pregnant and gave birth to Enoch. Then he engaged in building a city and called the city's name by the name of his son Enoch.

Once Cain is evicted it says he left into the land of Nod, the land of fugitiveness, and he knew a wife. This mysterious land of Nod I have traced to the land of Canaan which became Palestine than Israel. In Palestine they have discovered caves completely excavated by what appears to be a very advance race for the time that must have been of great stature according to how the caves were laid out. Our biblical story of Abraham also starts off in Ur of Chaldea and Abraham when leaving Ur enters Canaan where he experiences his first encounters with the God of the Bible. This is also the reason the Children of Israel deemed Canaan the land that was promised to them through the covenants made with Abraham by Jehovah that had to be fulfilled.

Beside the Bible's report the record reflects that after the destruction of Atlantis the few that survived set out on ships. It goes on to say many of them reached land in the area we now know as Canaan. They began rebuilding their Empire warring with the various people currently inhabiting the land. It goes on to report that many sailed further into indigenous territories inhabited by various Indian tribes. Many of these tribes recorded the arrival of the Atlanteans and report that they taught them various sciences, mathematics, and of course a new religion. Being more technologically and spiritually advanced the natives began to worship them as Gods and knew them as Feathered Serpents because of the religion they taught and the appearance of their Deity.

Since there has been so much talk of these serpents we have to at some moment approach the question, are all serpents and reptilians evil? I can only answer this as are all men evil? What follows now is perspective, think of this. If you were born a lion is it natural for you to behave like a sheep? Obviously not so we all have different characters that at times directly oppose the nature of other species. Just as when ants invade your kitchen because you spilled some sugar, you become their apocalypse when you wipe out hundreds of them with the sweep of a cloth, drowning them as you clean the rag watching them go down the drain. Many would say this is different they are not sentient, We would say all things that move are endowed with the Divine Spark and if you could split it, it will create an explosion such as you have never seen this was done so you could marvel at the Creation and them reflect back upon the Creator.

I tell you the truth there are high life forms that still call Earth home, they are interwoven in its fabric, and to separate from it would be spiritual death to them. Earth is also our current reference point, if it is removed it is possible our memories will be disposed of when we reincarnate again. This is of course if we continue to reincarnate after what happens in the future. The best most could hope for is another repeat of life with no memories in which I'm not really up for. We must admit Earth life is dangerous after awhile in our current atmosphere of illusion. It is easy to bring about so many excesses we not only destroy things around us, but we also bring about the degradation and degeneration of our Souls. Experience is not the only thing the soul needs to grow; in fact experience is a relatively small portion when you consider the Soul can eat Elements, Essence, and Gaseous things found in the atmospheres. We must now build a superhighway down the Path of Truth. Why?

During the invasion of the Anu known also as Ana, life forms from another constellation called Nibiru came to Tiamat/Earth to subdue it. Tiamat known as the Dragon fought the Annunaki who fought back using highly advanced weapons that ultimately split Tiamat. This is the story in the Bible of the Dragon fighting the Angels. Many of our religions are Annunaki propaganda. Their main interest was our natural elements especially the Spirit of man and woman termed, the Gold. Several situations ensued amongst these Beings even a mutiny amongst themselves. These Beings are responsible for the Nephilim stories of the Bible, they altered a race of what appeared to be then pure spiritual Beings of various types, into spirit forms incased in flesh in which they could slave and master over.

There was said to be a few amongst them that did not like the way humans were being abused and thus they began to teach "their favorites" the ways of enhancing their bodies by linking them to their spirit to become as powerful as the Annunaki, if not even more powerful since we had the spirit element in us given by the Most High. These mysteries of enhancing the body later became known as "the Wisdom of the Serpent". The correct term would be "the Wisdom of the Spirit" who many relate to the serpent because of its spiraling movement and fiery nature.

As things began to intensify word got back to Anu the leader of the Annunaki about the humans and their new abilities. Anu sent Marduk in a ship which is Planet X to handle Tiamat called the Great Serpent and her offspring the humans once and for all. This ship the size of a Planet similar to George Lucas's Death Star entered orbit around our Sun as the 12th Planet in the 10th position from the Sun hence its name Planet X. This marked the last crossing of Nibiru. Marduk used a weapon known in the Tablets as a Net called also the Net of Indra. This is some type of atmospheric net that keeps souls trapped on Earth/Tiamat not allowing them to continue their evolution. Marduk who is Ra set up the Pyramid systems which I explained above as the first Matrix. Ra then became ruler of the Underworld which is the place where souls go when they remain trapped in the net but have expired their current physical body thus they are waiting on a new one, this is re-incarnation, a curse.

You can clearly see the Egyptian God Anubis serves Anu and is one of them. The Queen of England, who is the ruler of this world, has instilled the worship of Ra, Anubis, and the rest of the Annunaki pantheism under various Sumerian, Egyptian, and Hebraic guises. This is why religion is now so limited except for the few who become high initiates. It is their duty to continue to suppress us. They are doing this at the bidding of their God Anu who they say is returning with Planet X by 2012. There are many more in high places who also serve Ra such as the Arabs in Dubai.

Reason 89: Parliaments are tools for the Annunaki, they run mystery schools, governments, and practically the entire globe. I have yet to find anyone who opposes this force. They are supremacist such as the ideas the Talmud discusses about Gentiles thus if you are not in leagues with them, you are only a resource that can be abused. Christianity was hatched to seem as if it opposed all of this however it was just another plan to keep humans powerless thus continuing to stall anyone from activating by denying them information of Chakras. We will face the Annunaki in what will appear to be the first extraterrestrial contact on Earth, currently it seems Earth will face utter destruction and enslavement by them, however the Most High holds the key Element of setting such plans to ruin. You must at least individually entreat the Most High.

The Annunaki themselves appear to be originally Reptilian, however, they have blended with various life essences and thus their appearances vary. In addition the Annunaki themselves seldom interact with humans directly, they use their underlings who are humans infused with Annunaki genes and in that state they are wholly indebted to the Annunaki and are controlled by them through a mentally collective cellular connection.

Other names of the Annunaki and their offspring are Anakim, this is why Anakin Skywalker is Dark Vader in the Star Wars Series. They are the Celtic Tuatha de Danaan Sons Dan or the Danu. They are offspring and servants of Sumarian E.A. (pronounced Aya). This is why the new name for our planet is "Ea"rth, three wise men came from the "Ea"st, and the major Christian celebration is called "Ea"ster. They are the Sumerian EL, Akkadian ILU, Babylonian ELLU, and English ELF called by their worshippers the "Shining Ones" or is it Sinning Ones? They altered man, a downgrade, calling them Lulu meaning "mixed one" and Adapa, "model man" who the Hebrews call Adam.

According to the Sumerian text Tiamat's seas were full of souls that could be harvested. This is the hidden meaning behind the Fisher King and Jesus being called "the Fisher of Men". When Planet X divided Tiamat into two parts she released an ocean of souls or cosmic essence into the cosmos. The Greek version of Tiamat was Demeter which is where we get the term Diameter, the cutting or dividing a circle in two, or split. This is how we became separated from our other half. The Egyptian termed these two parts the Ka and the Ba. Ka'bah.

Fig 1

—Indara's X Bolt or "Thor's Hammer" on Ancient Briton monument, (After Stuart.)

Fig 2

—Taxi as "Michael" the Archangel bearing rayed Celtic "Cross, with Corn, Sun Goose or Phoenix on Phoenician Coins of Cilicia of fifth century B.C.

(Coins after Hill)

See the Phoenician legend MRLU or "Makaly"; and in c Phoenix Sun-bird before the altar, with bearded Corn and two-barred handled Cross.

Reason 90: Indara is seen in this rare Plate carrying the Double Cross/Net. Indara is Cain and plays the role of Ra/Marduk. Their descendants are a different breed created on the 8th day from dust, offspring of the ones who beguiled the pure world.

What self aware spiritual entity would agree to a life of slavery? I was enlightened and made aware of what is transpiring and since my eyes have been open, I would rather die on my feet than live on my knees. The Annunaki see the Earth bound souls as slaves, criminals, deviates, prisoners of war, detested social and racial groups, non-conformist and undesirables. Hammurabi's Code, which later became the Ten Commandments found also in the Egyptian Book of the Dead became the guidelines issued to this race of souls to give them rules and conformity. Various plans have existed to keep us from reaching our real potential through the Art of Conviction.

Ninharsag the Sumerian Hathor or Isis was called the Great Cow. Legend says she is the true power behind E.A./Aya. She was called the Carpenter, the Coppersmith, and the Lady Potter. Later her name was changed to Gabriel feminine such as Gabriella. Gabriel appeared to the Virgin Mary alerting her of the birth of the Christ Child Jesus. In 600 A.D. she visited Muhammad dictating Koran to him. She is a Seraphim, meaning serpent of Raphim or Rephaim another Nephilim Hybrid connection. Gabriel used the caduceus rod to translate the soul of Christ along with "the Holy Ghost" into the body of Mary. It helps to see this as advanced technology of Spirit insemination.

Reason 91: The caduceus staff was in fact some type of Annunaki technology used to transfer spirits into matter and manipulate energy through the tuned vibrations of the carrier.

Again the level of mind control brought forth here is profound since we are taught that we are all children of Abraham and we have all descended from the Twelve Tribes of Israel. For some this may be true but let us not forget that Abraham had a father also and while they were all in Ur of the Chaldeas you had Nubians populating Africa, Asians in the Orient, and various other races that had never heard of Abraham. The Bible speaks of in Genesis a Man and Woman created on the 6th day in the Image of God and another set created on the 8th day from dust. The difference between these two creations was one had spirit/compassion, while the other was very base. This is the main drawback of the genetic manipulation. Many underlings are of the other race of Adams of whom care more for material prosperity and could care less about a dying world, helping children, etc. Still others are now mixed with both. There is obviously a silent war going on between at least 2 separate races.

Looking deeper into the K-9 affiliations to clarify the Dog itself is a domesticated Wolf so what we are really dealing with here are Wolves which fits the term, Wolves in Sheep's clothing. Sheep's clothing is a metaphor for a human body. In Canaan which has its roots in the words Cain, Canine, K-9, and others relating to the Canine species there had obviously been some interaction with the Wolf later domesticated into the Dog. This interaction can be looked at no different than the Chinese and the Dragon in which they claim in their ancient tales where their original descendants. To explain many things that have drawn a blank to most historians it may be necessary to look further into the true meaning of the Animist involvement in various Nations.

Following the pagan tradition many would leave their young in the woods around packs of wolves to see if they would take the baby as their own. Of course this led to hundreds of babies being torn apart by packs of wolves. It is said some were taken into the packs of wolves and the she-wolf would care for them. It is said at times when seeing these youth full grown in the forest they had inherited all the traits of the wolf, just as the shaman follow certain animals around to gain their traits. This gave birth to the mythology of the Werewolf or Likan.

Reason 92: Romulus, where Rome gets its name from killed his brother Remus. They both were suckled by a she-wolf who found them abandoned in the wild.

The scriptures say the Nephilim that roamed the Earth during the time Humans were created sinned against woman and then began to sin against the Beasts. What I have more than enough evidence to prove is that statement meant some type of insemination between animal and Demi-God that brought forth what we would now call mythological creatures. In the old days they became revered, feared and worshipped. It can be proven that many of these Beings make up the tales of Ancient Mythology when Centaurs, Cyclops, Cthulhu, and various other part man/part God/part animal creatures were roaming about, this was known as the abomination. In addition it states in the ancient text that when these Creatures died they had Souls thus they did not perish but roamed upon the face of the Earth and man called them evil Spirits and they could be evoked. This is the accounts that can be found in the books of Enoch the first man to write about the God of the Bible and what was taking place during those times. Interesting enough his books did not make it into publication and remained in the esoteric circles for hundreds of years. The list of the names of the Fallen Angels located in the books of Enoch were very important to the Elite for evocation.

Reason 93: Some of the offspring of the Nephilim that were reptilian and amphibian hybrids lived much longer and became kings. This is how the bloodlines began. The intermingling with woman continued in order to spawn successors.

Since the ruling powers have clearly sprang forth from Ancient Egypt a little Egypt 101 wouldn't hurt. The Great Pyramids point to the Sirius Star system more commonly called the Dog Star in Canis Major. On January 1st Sirius reaches the Meridian Point at exactly midnight. This is of course the beginning of the Gregorian Year. In Egypt this was the most important star, it is not only the brightest star in the sky it can also be seen from anywhere in the world which many stars cannot.

The Egyptians called this star the Goddess Sopdet pictured riding side saddle on a large Dog and at times as an actual Dog. She is known as the wife of Osiris who is Orion. She was also known under this same star as Sothis and Sophis which is where the Greeks got the term Sophia from their channel of Illumination. Sophia was the exact equivalent to the Holy Ghost and Shekinah which is the power Jesus used to bring about miracles along with the wooded staff passed from Aaron. In the actual Egyptian text Isis/Sothis is noted giving birth to the Morning Star Venus. The Morning Star is Jesus of Nazareth. As the Bust of Isis says, I AM Isis I have brought forth the Sun/Son.

Reason 94: The Pyramids of Egypt are the portal to Sirius and also Amenti the Underworld. Once again Sirius is indicated by the 5 pointed star. This would mean all those using the 5 pointed stars are evoking energy from Sirius which spells the Underworld in the afterlife. The Atlantians built the Egyptian pyramids as temples and portals to the Deities worshipped in Atlantis. Atlantis means "Is" daughter of Atlan.

It is a fact that Pantheism can be confusing at times which it was created to do and since the Egyptians had over 3000 Gods and Goddesses there was lots of confusion all the time in Egypt. With the advent of so many people entering Egypt the local Gods of the Egyptians were always picked up by surrounding tribes who admired Egypt's success accrediting it to their patron God and thus becoming devout worshippers. There is a constant sea-sawing back and forth between Osiris, Horus, Isis, and Ra. Consider how many servants are in this world versus Masters, the Gods abound and the Humans are left powerless and made to serve. These Serpent Dynasties never stopped ruling they simply branched out and comingled setting up hierarchies and pyramid systems of control everywhere they could subdue the people by war. They roamed/Rome about the land seeking who they could devour leaving a trail of blood from the Delta to the Americas.

Reason 95: The various Demigods of Egypt were of the lineage of ancient Atlantis. Other Deities such as the African Bes became part of the Pantheism due to the power accredited to him by worshipers in Africa. Egypt absorbed all the powerful Deities throughout the land and thus the people were wholly dependent upon serving and carrying for the Gods who often manifested as the royal families. Generally they were trained in techniques of mental power, then given a rod to intensify those powers. To the people they had the power of Gods.

Everything that is living first examines what it was before, so it knows what to become next and this can be seen even with microscopic life forms. This means that if they tell us lies about what happened in the history of this world, as a race we face not only heavy mental alteration but also possible extinction. We are not continuing on our true cycle as I explained above about descending. Real Zodiac does give a pretty accurate layout of your character but we have the ability to change our ways permanently thus altering our DNA, this is the marvel of the Human race. Considering how long this charade of playing God has been going on, this may be the first time at least in this segment that such knowledge of the inner workings of our society has been placed in our hands. Not to mention this is probably the first time a mass of people are at a comprehension level to at least grasp what is happening. In the history of man the masses have been powerless with little intellect.

The Human mind which I mentioned before is more like a wheel turning. When we get set into habits it creates a groove in the brain. Deeper grooves are habits that have been practiced for longer periods. This is where terms like “stuck in a cycle” or “getting into the groove of things” come from since a cycle can also be looked at as a wheel. It has been also observed that it takes 22 days to make or break a habit, good or bad, which has the effect of allowing the grooves to flatten back out. So the Human mind becomes a record with grooves playing often times the same vibrational song everyday. The first thing you realize during astral travel is that you are not the body, you are more like the Alien on the movie Men In Black that is very small but powerful sitting in the operations seat of a giant body, something like an organic Montauk chair. The other thing you will notice when you look down upon your body is that obviously your memory and senses are not contained in your body because you are still using them.

This is one secret of obtaining Higher Character, even if you have not astral traveled before, knowing that you are not the body releases you from the many expectancies of normal life and gives you another framework, the soul, to build upon. When you have dreams if you notice the sheer detail that is involved in the environment you realize that we are a lot more than they are letting on about. We are capable of doing amazing things. There is even a part in our mouth that makes 3 different types of saliva for different situations. It becomes obvious that we are not in a Ford with the standard parts we have been fashioned with bells and whistles that we have not even explored. This knowledge of enhancing the body has been held selfishly by the Elite Alchemist but now we are hacking Morpheus/Orpheus and in a moment he will tell us everything.

Most are completely unconscious of who they were in former lives. Sometimes we catch glimpses of it in dreams, often smells and sounds remind us of something that we remember but cannot wholly identify. The Sacred Order of the Mary's in fact had unlocked the secret of certain essential oils that had the ability to regress anyone smelling them into memories of their past. The loss of collective life memory has everything to do with how strong your Spirit is when it departs from this world. We are living in a time where if you look deep enough you can find most of this information. This is all we need and possibly all we will get. I see it as useless to keep coming into lives in which we have no full knowledge of our previous experiences. The best advice I can give the reader is to begin to work on growing your Spirit which we will talk about as we go along.

SYMBOLS

The Elite communicate in Symbols and Designs which are far more powerful than words. These markings are embedded in our consciousness and serve as triggers for various emotions and concepts. I will take this time to tell you that you should not become a warrior when you begin to discover what is going on and anger or vengeance moves you to combat it directly. You should always keep your weapons in your mind and not in your hand. Warrior also means a person who worries/worrier so much once they figure out how much strength and cunning the other side possesses that they actually send energy to the negative forces when they become overwhelmed and behave foolishly.

Remember what we face as a society is something that we all must confront at some point; one person can not fix this world on their own but each person can do their part in getting out information of the Truth. This way those who are still confused can make up their mind as to which side truly resonates with them so they can go about it fully and not half heartedly. The whole construct of this Book is not to down any religion race or belief system. It should be seen as a detailed observation and not a judgment. In the Book of Revelations it says “how I wish you were hot or cold but you are lukewarm and I shall vomit you out of my mouth”. This means that individuals should not straddle the fence, whatever they are going to be they should get on with it. This whole activity of truth seeking does wonders for our complete growth so it should be looked at as such. Everything that you have experienced will all come to your aid one way or another when you have purpose. Let everything you do have purpose.

With this information you now have a chance at saving yourself and others. The last thing you want to do is become so scared you no longer want to know anymore. In the unknown you can be found because you have not yet discovered your true self obviously because you are not even flying or at least floating yet. I give this pointer very sternly; fear is indeed the mind controller. You are stopped at times from learning anything more because of the internal feeling of death and the lies about what really happens after death. Many people hold on to their religious preferences because they feel it will save them in the end even though they break most of the rules of the religion. It would suffice to know that when you die you go to the place corresponding to your mentality or frequency hence the term Judgment or a Judging of the Mental.

Society has been trained to love lure and ceremony thus the preacher with a “fiery sermon” gets more attention than the sometimes boring metaphysic who is explaining how the body can really work the miracle they are so busy ranting about to make it seem like such a big deal. Individuals will begin to need their powers in order to survive, that is the pressure placed upon us in the end of this segment, evolve or face extinction. Once the mental portal is reopened and the person becomes “open minded” again, most of the instructions, activations, and experiences will happen during sleep. If you where completely transported from this world never to return, it would take place in your sleep. It is unclear what happens to your body here, some say it continues as if it's you and behaves just like you through residual memories action and reaction, people never know you are really gone. ☺

In Egypt where much of this is amplified we find the Cult of Isis. Many believe with the masculinity of the Pharaohs the women played only roles as normal Queens called by them, Ferts. In all actuality the Egyptian Empire functioned as a Trinity and the female part of the Trinity became absorbed under Isis. To maintain it as a Trinity all the other Gods and Goddesses were summed up under the main ennead. Clearly Osiris-Horus and Isis make up the Egyptian Trinity. Sin, Shamash, and Ishtar make up the Babylonian. Isis represented Ninhursag, Nin-Ella, Inanna, Ishtar, Ma'at, Mare, Mary, Mut, Nephthys, Hathor, Nut, Diana, Asteroth, Astarte, Aphrodite, Athena, Tuat, Bast, Usertesen, Ida, Mylitta, Baalath, Anahita, Ashur, Aasith, Kodesh, Sophia, Sothis, Sodet, Shekina, Magdelina, Europa, Ganeymead and many others.

This became possible because it was the so-called God "S" "female energy" that equated to the enlightened portion of Spiritual training so when an Initiate came in contact with the actual Spirit of the religion it often personified itself in one of these Goddesses who all remained under the same umbrella. This is why even to this day Isis under many forms is worshipped heavily. Our statue of liberty is a rendition of Isis. Her main sign is ($) which is the word ISIS compressed into one symbol. Some of the countries of their origin are Assyrian Ishtar, Phoenician Ashtoreth (Astarte), Syrian Atargatis (Derketo), Babylonian Belit (Mylitta) Arabian Ilat (Al-Ilat). Again their home is the Asteroid Venus, Sirius, and the Pleiades.

Their species seems to be completely foreign hiding under the guise of Illuminating Warrior Goddesses. In the ancient text it says a fragment landed in the river Euphrates shaped like an egg. Somehow those who interacted with this egg became infused and infected with its essence. Those infected became the first communicators of the knowledge and message these Beings brought to Earth. These are also the Beings movies like "the V" and "the Knowing" are describing. They have an agenda to take over the world completely and they have major assistance from just about every main religious and social group. This is due in part to the powerful role they play in religion.

The natural instinct for man to gravitate toward a "Mother Goddess" figure comes from the separation of our other half. The want to interact with this magical feminine Being is played on and exploited by these imposters, some of whom are responsible for the initial split or Maya as it is more properly called. In addition for the woman, since the God "S" is androgynous, he gives her the Son of the Sun. She begins to see this as her husband, protector, and father figure. Most women are deprived of one or the other if not both in today's common society. There is obviously not just one faction doing all this. You would have to think, man and woman are a very advanced species it would take a collaborative effort to keep them in the darkness of what the true reality is.

Reason 96: There was a saying “the devil has many names” I first found that to be untrue when learning who Satan was. Especially since Satan and Lucifer are actually two different Beings. When considering ISIS however it all makes since, this is how the re-occurring Savior theme exists, and the key component is always the mother with Immaculate Conception. Immaculate Conception is really the Deity having some type of intercourse with the woman producing an offspring. This offspring then attempts to become ruler of the world in his father, “the King’s”, stead. Many of the hyperdimensional Beings want the title “Lord of the Earth”, so they never cease these “divine conception stories”. This happens now through the royal families such as Prince William becoming the next King. Their family history however is riddled with the involvement of various Forces. They are carrying the “Bloodline” so they most certainly are not completely human. I do believe we have something in our constitution about that, what a joke.

We as Human Beings are utterly ruled over in this dimension, our needs are extremely meager compared to what we are originally entitled to and yet those needs are seldom fulfilled. These Forces also extend into the Dream World and the Afterlife so there is no rest for the weary. Until they are confronted they are consistently hatching plans to make an individual believe none of this is going on, somewhat of a strange zombie phase. I will tell you now you can live every day in such a high state of energy and these Beings are jealous they cannot do the same, they are forbidden from it. It has gone asleep in them never to awaken again because of their corruption. All the blending, enhancements, and greed for power has made them numb they don't even feel alive, they are the undead.

This state I speak of that you can return to is not just the feeling of everything going well, but the feeling of having the perfect companion. Something so gratifying that everything external does not take an inkling of attention from it as if it does not exist. You become wholly endowed with it spiraling together forming endless states of ecstasy. Their most powerful weapons are their religions, this gives the power to them directly from our own Souls; it is time they are removed. I'm not sure if this will take place in large numbers however I am sure that it does not matter, it is what you do individually that counts.

There is a lesser light which emanates from below that spawns countless distorted images, soon they will be placed in Shoel in which We fixed a door for entrance and none for exit, then the world will see Freedom, if you but knew. Many looking now will say "he is joking" but We do not jest.

Now unveiling the Goddess will take place as Madam Blavatsky claimed to do when she wrote her book Isis Unveiled. She of course was in no position to do such a thing being fully initiated herself and remember their oath is to keep silent. However, they are allowed to push propaganda and disinformation. Once again the Goddess as we know it was a play on words. There is actually a symbolic story being told about Adam and Eve in the garden with the Serpent. It is known that this story should not be taken literally but has a much deeper meaning. It started with this uneasy feeling that there was something that was a big secret about the word women. You find Omen in the remaining part of the name meaning a deep hidden meaning. Eve is the root to the word evening. The Hebrew version is even weirder since the name used for Eve in Hebrew, Haveh, actually means serpent.

According to the original Zohar, a major root of the creation story, it makes it clear that the Serpent in the Garden was a female serpent not a male like it is commonly believed. Pre-Adamites or "before Adam" were Masculine Spirit Beings called Sons of the Sun who took physical form and mated with these women. These female Serpents known as the race of Namaah and Lilith, caused Chief Angels like Aza and Azrael to fall from their post and mix with them.

The Zohar continues to blame AMALEC as the wicked Seraphim while Metatron is called literally "The Good Serpent". This is incredible, it admits Metatron is actually a serpent and goes on to admit that Enoch became Metatron once he was translated to heaven thus Enoch was also a Serpent. Several times the tribe of Shem makes it clear to indicate they are inbred with serpents. This makes it concrete that the Enochians are linked to the Serpents. It says "the Priest came forth from the dead Sophanim who died in labor. The baby was born with the sign of the Priesthood which was a lustrous (scaly) hide. The baby had just been brought forth but sat upright immediately and showed the sign of the Priesthood and they where struck with terror." In the many Hebrew texts where it says

“He created Man”. To them HE is the feminine attribute. The Tetragrammaton is Yod-He-Vau-He. The “Yod/Yah” is the Masculine fire entering the Feminine “He” birthing the Child “Vau” ”V” and the world will return to “HE”, so they believe. Cohen, Hebrew for priest is an anagram for Enoch.

Reason 97: Thousands of children every year are indoctrinated into Animist religions depriving them of their true potential. One of the most widespread religions in the world, Judaism, still keeps Moses' depiction with horns on his head. The Kabbalistic Tree of Life is the same tree from the Garden the Serpent offered the so-called fruit from. This fruit was signified as an apple which has a Pentagram in its center when cut in half. As said earlier that Pentagram is the symbol of Isis/Sirius/Sothis and her consorts, also her opposite, when inverted and they are together not separate which we will address when its proper?

Someone once said that if you ask a person for an explanation and it becomes very confusing it means they do not know themselves or they are hiding the truth. When asking someone in India teaching through Hinduism or someone in Judaism teaching Kabbalah how to increase union with the Most High you are buried in thousand page Gitas with confusing Sanskrit words or mile long scrolls of Rabbis with nothing better to do than take one passage from the Talmud and make a thousand page explanation. Truly do you believe it is that hard to enhance the spirit? Of course not these people are placed in the way to make the journey lengthy and hard. As I said above many have not obtained what they originally sought, which was freedom. Now they are enslaved by the religion and their subconscious wishes to have company in their misery.

Reason 98: The Five Pointed Star is not the symbol of the perfect man it is the star of contact for Sirius and all the various Beings that make up the Pentagram including the Inverted. These "feather weights" think the Most High has left this world never to return, and they are having a free-for-all. They know not we even watch the All-Seeing-Eye.

Looking through ancient times the Moon was actually not feminine but masculine. The Moon went by the name Sin and Ah. In so many ways the God "ES" shows that it is actually an androgynous serpent. Many women become Moon Goddesses to link with more women that are about healing and tapping into the feminine power which of course is wonderful. However, I have seen the start and finish of many of these groups and it almost always leads to initiations and then if you reach the height of these organizations like those in Mount "S"hasta or "S"edona just like ancient "S"aqgarra they go into deeper forms of Yoga like Hatha/Hathor. Giving the neophyte strange names with false meanings to chant while opening chakras. Doing things such as imagining thousands of Buddhas filling their soul. Then they tell you that it's really all Hinduism and the power of "Sam"ahdhi and learning to wield "S"hakti, the serpent energy comes into play heavy with "S"iva. The person is subtly lulled to sleep while the flute plays with the lies that the Serpent just means complete wisdom. Yes the serpent has a lot of wisdom and it has been fooling man and woman with it with the helps of Hybrids and Traitors.

Of course many men joined the cult of the Goddess imagining that it was a haven for beautiful forest queens who when approaching or should I say flowing towards you, bathed you in swells of spring Marigolds as rabbits and deer bound behind them joyously laughing and singing in delicate waves of Solfeggio. The Serpents could of course create that Illusion long enough for the person to be lulled into the trap. They eventually become so laden with negative Spirits they are deluded and confused. The Masons, Rosicrucian, and Ishmaili Hassassin's are a primary example of organizations that have tricked the spiritual arm of men with this type of nonsense. The most they could produce was a debased Bacchanalia. I encourage woman to keep yourselves on guard. Just to show you how much the serpent is suggesting that it made things look at these words of power.

“S”piral: When you go out to the ocean and look at the shells you will see the spiral force, when you watch waves of energy you will see the spiral force, when you look at your fingerprint you will see the spiral force, all the way to the “S”wirl in your head you will see a spiral force. It’s safe to say our Creator uses a spiral force when making things, no straight lines.

“S”pirit- The Ethereal Being of consciousness.

“S”phere: Our cellular level exists entirely of spheres.

“S”pin: Another word to describe the spiraling motion.

“S”oul-“S”ol: The life force of heat, warmth, and vitality.

As discussed before the “S” is the primary symbol of the Serpent in the English alphabet. All of these forces, like the Sun, Soul, and Spiral had other names that did not begin with “S” it was simply motion, however, when the 70 languages were introduced across the world they all received this indoctrination of “S”’s vibration and thus a false relation to the Serpent that has permeated the subconscious mind. This mind control technique makes it easier for us to go with the story that is being told more and more which is the serpents are our creators. A serpent has no voice box and can only whisper thus everything they say sounds like Ssssss. They are sometimes called the Whispering Ones. A famous prayer in Islam says “Allah protect me from the whispers of Shaitan”.

Reason 99: ADDA NARI is androgynous and keeps a serpent around the neck as most all Hindu figures. Hermes the thrice born who is Thoth was also androgynous. The joining of the masculine and feminine where taken to these vulgar "literal" levels as another deterrent from true spiritual unity. In Hindu teachings one is taught to work from the root Chakra up, thus much of their teachings are based on Tantrics and the manipulation of sexual energy. Many are now saying the proper ancient teaching was from the crown Chakra down thus the person escapes the traps of getting stuck in an animalistic carnal phases which often happen when lower chakras are turned on before the higher ones. This is also why many New Age leaders such as Rael are heavily into sexual expression rather than mental and spiritual enlightenment. Their doctrines are based on sexual freedom which feels good but does not feed the original desire of enhancement.

To understand these Entities is to realize that the world is a lot more diverse then they are revealing to you and we are not the only intelligent life form here by far. Here is a big example. When the United States went to the Moon, which happened although not when they filmed it, the speech that was written for Neil Armstrong read thus, "one small step for man, one giant leap for mankind". What is this difference between man and mankind that they must be separated? Could they be possibly alluding to something here about another race like we pointed out in Genesis? Furthermore what kind of man leaps? Of course I know the answer but I'll leave you to do the brainwork. If you can't figure it out, read on and it will come to you.

In legend Isis is always with Anubis a dog-faced God sent to be her protector. Nephtys Isis's sister is said to be a female dog also. What is also interesting about this tale were their strange relations with one another. It is said that Osiris mated with Nephtys by accident birthing Anubis. Nephtys was Isis's sister thus connecting Isis to also being part dog part serpent. The child between Osiris and Isis became Horus/Horse/Mane/, Isis did not suckle the child but instead allowed the child to suckle from Anubis the Dog. Isis relocated to Byblos and wept that she could not bring Osiris back to life after he was cut into 14 pieces by his brother Set, until a certain time since the 14 pieces signified the 14 phases of strength of the Moon.

The story continues, it was during one of these crying sessions that a woman named Astarte appeared to her from the Court of the God "S". Astarte is where we get the word star from. The arrangements made between these Beings have always been kept a secret until now, not to mention this whole story is completely allegorical. On the Masonic tracing board at the top of the middle pillar sits a seven pointed star known as the Star of the Pleiades also called the Seven Sisters or Seven Hathors. It becomes evident that there is actually a group of female spirits, who are immortal, that are enlisted by the God "S" who have been attempting to steer the destiny of the Human race, these women are better known as the Fates.

These Fates are the key women who mated with the Nephilim and produced the offspring of heroes and villains with various forms and powers. Originally the cult itself was under APIS the Bull thus many of these women were depicted as cow goddesses. Later that morphed into something entirely different including them now being looked at as some space faring group of Illuminating Goddesses rather than a cult that would sacrifice a Bull while the vestal virgins bathed in the blood. How soon they try to make us forget as old forms attempt to take on new ones but We have the records as the Agents of the Most High will always dictate faithfully.

Reason 100: The inside story is the Initiates were betrayed by the Goddess who sold them out to the Serpent. As you can see by the Masonic tracing board this stems all the way back to Mars. There is no telling the extent of what is really going on and what kind of trouble the Elite have gotten us all in to, even worst their code of silence keeps their lips sealed.

Let us keep in mind men cannot bring forth child whether immaculate or through inseminations thus the creatures that are part humanoid resulted from the union of woman and various Beings. It is no doubt this was sometimes done by force. Alchemy was the title given to the Art of blending elements. These elements were not always base chemicals, many where organic. The blending of plants and animals to see the results was something of a religious science in Atlantis. This is why many of the creatures have aquatic appendages.

Reason 101: This may all seem a little weird now because this part of our past has been placed in the dark for obvious reasons however these Beings Deified, meaning they are worshipped and are still alive today. Many creatures where part amphibian part beast with incredible spans of life and Spiritual energy. The Ocean is vast unexplored territory. One could not amass the resources to attempt to find their kingdoms and even if they did they would never return. At the current level of human intelligence there really is no reason for other life forms to take interest in such an uneducated limited species we have been turned into. The real mystery of Atlantis is the Island was submersible it never sank they rule from below. Under Sea, Davy Jones's Locker, David and Oanes.

Before we get back to Sirius business I will say that the human has extreme potential. I will show you how it is clear that the knowledge of who we are is being hidden. Even while writing this I can feel the doubt of the people that will read, but it will lessen as the realization sets in. This is also what symbols do on a very deep level. I have purposely embedded this novel with certain symbols that will allow you to remember who you are. Be sure to think of my definition of remembering which is reconnecting your various scattered members as if you were also cut into 14 pieces and had to find all of them to become whole again. Smaller in number we are but great in mind.

Reason 102: From what I have studied thus far it is highly possible for a company like Sony to make a game that would activate and balance your entire chakra system all while you were trying to break your previous high score, its that easy. The body has a system of various energy wheels. When they begin to oscillate, it is unexplainable the things that you can do. Laying crystals on Chakra centers and going to sleep is another way to get Chakras at least cleared. There is a big difference between cleared and activated Chakras. When one Chakra opens, even if it is the root Chakra it will be accompanied with a paranormal ability. The system can be powered up through breathing techniques such as whole body breathing. The Chakras are the Jewels encrusted inside our bodies, once they began to shine again the true splendor of the Diamond Body will be seen.

There are certain abilities that come by default when the body is fully activated they are: Make oneself small in an instant. Become infinitely large at will. Defy gravity with a levitation field. Touch any object at any distance. Dive through solid ground like water. Total control over all the elements. Create and destroy matter. Instant materialization of thought. It is also clear why such abilities may need correct training and also correct judgment on timing of when to bestow such gifts on a person. If this was the norm in society we would be an entirely different race. Giving a person these abilities with the mentality they have now developed due to our world status quo would be a problem. So this makes something of a catch 22. This is why one has to work on separating themselves from the normal mold of thought. Something is always watching and always guiding. The moment the student is ready, the master will appear.

A few important facts about the Binary Star Sirius: Sirius is a white Sun many times bigger than our own Sun. One looking at the size of Earth compared to many of the other Planets may be left with a dismal effect.

Reason 103: Be sure to keep in mind Venus is an Asteroid almost the size of Earth. Mars was three times larger than the Earth and now this is all that remains. Amazingly each human corresponds to some Quasar or Star.

In Roman times Sirius was known as the Red Star and they sacrificed red dogs to the star. Sirius B contains the entire mass of our Sun in a globe only 4 times bigger than the Earth. Sirius B's surface is 300 times harder than a diamond while the core is 3,000 times harder than a diamond. This Planet makes "23" rotations on its Axis per minute thus generating a huge magnetic force. Every 50 years Sirius A and B come so close together they begin to spiral around each other at enormous rates. Once huge tidal forces are generated by these two Stars they eventually flip-flop positions. This energy is eventually released to flow on magnetic lines to the Sun, which transmits it like a lens to all the Planets. Sirius B is the far more massive out of the 2, in Harry Potter the evil character Sirius Black or Sirius B is introduced. Despite that Sirius plays the bad guy one should not believe Harry and the rest of the Witches and Warlocks are good. This is a game the Elite love to play. They make two sides that I like to call bad and worst, then they make people choose, either way they win, like Democrat and Republican.

Earth's cycles have been full of various creatures of a different variety as you have already seen. Some have died out and only their Spirit remains. Some have been hunted and killed for various reasons and still others remain underground. The floods did from time to time wipe out many land mammals, however, aquatic Beings such as amphibians always survived thus the oldest kingdoms remain under the Ocean. The primary oceanic race to come forth was Atlantis. Their species include that of Oannes known as the Fish God. Oannes was Father of Poseidon and Dagon. Many say he had 12 sons. These Amphibians had at times war with the Reptilians and that's why through history it appears the Serpents are actually fighting each other. True, the Serpents do at times quarrel amongst themselves with a survival of the fittest dominance embedded in their cultures, however, they heavily quarrel with the "Am"phibians which all look the same to the commoner.

Reason 104: Oaness God of the Sea who connects with all aquatic creatures, dolphins, whales, octopus, etc. Dagon the Son of Oaness is pictured here also, the fish being the reason why the Pope wears a Fish Hat, they worship Dagon and various others. Remember Pantheism is the belief and worship of more than one God. A hidden mystery is in the Holy Sea/See. They are referring to the Sea in which Oaness rose from. In addition Caesar means Sea (Cae) Snake (Sar). The Mother of King Dagobart was said to be rapped by Dagon while taking a swim in the Sea. His name means Priest King of the House of Fish. This was the beginning of the Merovingian Bloodlines. The Mer is the root of words such as Mermaid. Mer means a special light they are called Meropes who also connect with Mount Meru.

This is how they control you in the Matrix by illusive consent which cannot be reversed unless you are aware of it. This is the doctrine of the Holy Sea. The Soul is seen as a Fish/Ishim out of water when it enters into Earth the material square. The instant the mother's "water" breaks her ARGO/Cargo descends the birth/berth canal. There is a Doc/Dock on hand to take the delivery. Once born the baby is under Earth jurisdiction of "Mari" time Law as opposed to Natural Law. These are the laws of the Matrix one must abide by. A certificate of Birth or "Manifest" is written itemizing the condition and specifics of the ARGO/Cargo. The baby or Vessel is given a "SS" number then granted privilege to go ashore. If it gets in trouble the accused Soul finds itself in court once again standing on the dock/docket. The Soul is considered dead while sailing in the "Earthy Container". It is a ship in the bottle seeking the dock that will allow it to unload its cargo, the human biological transformational apparatus, and re-enter the Cosmic Ocean. If all this doesn't seem fishy to you keep reading.

To perceive in all this that one Human has value without personally doing Spiritual work is a drastic mistake in proportion to size. The current theme is that we are all connected and the Human is very valuable to the future of the Universe because of that connection. It would be better to perceive it this way, we are all connected to something, how that something effects the complete system is what's of value, meaning are we just one screw in the device or are we the generator? Surely we can lose screws and replace them easily but the generator is another matter. What part we play will be determined by whether we educate ourselves to the highest potential possible to reach our full magnitude to gain the choice that exists beyond the influence of such large celestial bodies in space and the diabolical fiends of Earth, this is called the Great Reward.

The Fleur-de-lis which is one of the most popular symbols of today has many meanings as you can see above even Dagon has it on his crown. First it symbolizes the three pieces of Holy Wood of the cross. This is the deepest meaning. Apparently this Tree of Life was actually a real Tree and pieces of it were taken about through history by important personages until finally they crucified Jesus on it. The Tree had more meaning than Jesus in the Gnostic sects as Jesus twin sister "Ma"gdalena would carry the Bloodline and birth the future Anti-Christ. This lineage has birthed a succession of Anti-Christ and Christ personages through history. To have an Anti-Christ you must first have a Christ so they created both. Symbolically the Tree is also the Three which is the Trinity the Triangle, or the top of the Pyramid. "The Cornerstone the Builders Rejected", which is Masonic jargon.

Reason 105: On the left Jesus is seen using the Holy wood to heal. On the right Thoth is building energy with the rods and transferring that energy through the Ankh.

Below you will find a story that barely survives written or should I say carved in 1483 before the King James Bible was written in 1611. This reveals the true origin of the Christ and the Cross less they continue to lie and deny it altogether and have us all confused in the Lake of Fire with them groping about wishing a drop of water would be given to cool the tongue. The latest ploy is Jesus had a cousin named Jesus also who was from Gamala and he was the imposter, not the real Jesus. They will continue to create more and more explanations until every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess Jesus is Lord. There is no way a story can survive for thousands of years with the exact description of what occurred. It is a fact that the story of the Savior created through immaculate conception along with special healing powers who dies and is resurrected is shared by Chrishna, Hindoo Sakia, Thammuz, Hesus, Adonis, Alcestos, Atys, Crite, IAO, Indra, Aeschylus, Bali, Mithra, Quexalcoate, Quirinius, Thulis, and Wittoba. Do not be unwise and believe all these figures where attempting to imitate Christ. Christ was attempting to imitate them.

Seth buries Adam and puts the three seeds of the Tree of Life under his tongue.

Reason 106: The letter that looks like an "f" with no cross is an "s" so this reads Seth buries Adam and puts three "seeds" of the Tree of Life under his tongue.

The three seeds spring up.

Moses always has the three rods with him.

David leaves the rods for the night.

In the morning he finds the rods have taken root and have become one tree.

L

St. Helena gives a portion of the Cross to Constantine.

Constantine deposits his portion of the Cross in Byzantium.

NOTICE THE WIZARDS HAT ON THE TOP OF HIS THRONE.

Heraclius takes possession of the relic of the Cross.

Reason: I only took the time to place these woodcuts here because they are on the verge of being lost, the originals remains in the British Museum. This story concludes with a peace of the Wood being taken to Rome and used for magical purposes. All those in possession of the wood became world rulers. The last Czar of Russia had a piece of the wood in his ring. This is Aaron's Staff that Budded, and the Staff that turned into a Snake and swallowed that of the Egyptians. Symbolically this story is all about the Tree of Life which made men magicians, and gave them supreme dominance connecting their lineage back to Set, I mean Seth. As you can also see the 4 beast surround Christ on the Cross in the final cut. INRI, Igen Natura Renovatura Intergra.

Reason 107: As you can see by these three artifacts predating the arrival of Jesus the story of the crucified divine savior on a cross is nothing new. Even the picture on the right which seems like an exact depiction of Jesus on the cross is actually Osiris conscribed way before the story of Jesus on the cross. Every era has been accompanied by a crucified savior story, there is no use in reinventing the wheel it always serves to disarm the people making them believers of something that is coming to save them and wash all their sins away. Your sins and wrongdoings are your own past get over them and balance them out in the present by your deeds. Nothing or no one can do this for you. Adults are behaving as children with such naive beliefs. People will soon see where all this leads and who these men really are.

The Fleur-de-lis was also the symbol of the exotic Blue Lily. This was a flower that grew out of the marshes of the Nile. The Kemets/Egyptians were masters of chemistry and Alchemy this was the core religion of the Priest. Kem is where these words derive from in fact, the Egyptians had extensive knowledge about minerals, plants, and animals this is the meaning of each side of the triangle.

A little digging uncovered that during the Initiation Rites, the Kemites, would procure concentrated doses of the Blue Lily and administer it to the Initiates. They would then place the vibration rod more commonly called an Ankh against the back of the Initiate's neck to transfer vibration. After this the Initiate would be lead through the inner chambers of the great Pyramid, each room carried a particular frequency that would prepare the body to go into an astral death state. Finally they would be placed in the Sarcophagus and depending on the initiation his or her soul would descend to the underworld, Mars, or Sirius due to the Zero Point field of the Great Pyramid lined up on the Van Hallen Belt on 6 major ley lines. In that moment they would meet the Lord Dog of the Underworld Anubis, Bael, and others all surrounded by the hounds of hell and many other goons like Ra hanging out in the Netherworld of Dar which is were we get the word Dark.

The Fleur-de-lis is also the symbol of the Jester's Hat or simply the Trickster or Magician who concocts magic and illusions. Just as you see the Three Wise Men come from the East also known as the Magi. You will begin to see that although it is profusely banned in the Bible for all others, often time people who are in the "Grace of God" are affiliated and acclimated with magic. It goes further to admit that Moses himself was schooled in all the wisdom of the Egyptians. Even in Egyptian legend there are stories of other men parting large bodies of water just to find jewels that had been accidentally dropped in the sea by the women were rowing the boats. Janus and Jambres had no problem duplicating Moses' magic when it came to turning the staff into a Serpent his magic seemed to be a little more powerful. These acts are also symbolic but are mistakenly taken literal. It also mentions Dathan a well known name in Adept circles connected also to the Nephilim. In the Bible it says it was Dathan who caused the Hebrews to make the calf again. Tis true the Nephilim have enticed man to do foolish things like worshipping a calf. Of course this also has far reaching issues that effect the Spirit but let us just consider what this does on a basic level. How much time will one waste and how dense will it eventually make them if they consider their Ultimate God, a calf? Then they turn around and eat it.

The true meaning of the word Magi is lost at times in the modern pronunciation. It was originally pronounced Magus like maggot the larvae of a fly. A Magus also known as a Mage, Magi, or Magician gave themselves this name because they worshipped Bel-zubub the Lord of the Flies better known as Baal and Bael. Many names like Baal, Jahovah, and Moses are Titles and not actually names of individuals, they form collective energy. Those who followed a certain God would change their personal name thus joining themselves to the God. Ezekiel and Daniel were both servants of El while Isaiah and Nehemiah for example were servants of Iah called also Jah. Many of these Names connected to the same Godhead.

Reason 108: The Mage and Jester played an important part in the King's retinue as it was their responsibility to keep the King entertained and informed of things of the spirit nature. Eventually the King would be hypnotized by the Magician thus the Magician was really the King. In this picture you see the Magician standing behind the King and the Jester at his side.

The Beings of the Underworld are the overseers of the Illuminate and they give all the orders as part of the Unseen Hand. It was understood that a person would never disavow because these Beings were capable of hyperdimensional travel, shape-shifting, etc. Once the predestined time elapsed the Initiate was resuscitated by the Kemetan Adepts and that was the beginning of the induction into higher degrees.

Reason 109: The Pyramids are constructed to produce a Zero Point Field. What you see above ground is duplicated below ground giving the whole structure the shape of a Diamond or Platohedron. The lowest point of the Pyramid is known as Amenti or the Underworld. These Pyramids also link up to the Plateau on Mars creating Gates for hyperdimensional travel through a series of Wormholes.

If you came to these areas in the old days and asked for Moses they would laugh at you because of how many were initiated into the Art of being a Moses, like Thutmoses III. The same thing is true with the title Jesus which was an entire Egyptian Mystery School in conjunction with the Nazarites. Looking for Jesus in those times would turn up various characters with magical powers even in the Bible Jesus himself runs across another man named Bar Jesus the Magician. Even Jesus warns that when he leaves another will come with the same Name as him saying he is him but do not go and see him. Jesus alternates as this rouge character that doesn't even want to get crucified as seen in the Garden of Gethsemane. There was no limit to the pretenders of the old days attempting to create new religions to find worshipers and servants for their Gods; some were far more convincing than others. Many of these schools connected under Solar and Lunar Brotherhoods sharing common Gods, Goals, and Ghouls. Others were in direct opposition wanting to create their own religion to harvest members at least for monetarily purposes, many times spreading of the new religion came down to the “purse” or money issues which it took more members to increase.

The scripture says the Serpent took a third of the host from Heaven and they fell to the Earth. If you see how numerous the stars are which all correspond to living Entities, you began to realize how many of them are here and they never tire in fooling man and women into worshipping them. This story of the Serpent even survives within the stars as a star chart will reveal Alpha Draconis (One Female Dracon) wrapped around 1/3 of the stars including our Pole star Polaris. It is said this begins the importance of the number 33 or a third.

Old tales from England concluded that you had to defeat the Dragon if you wanted to exit this Universe because it guarded the Pole Star which corresponds to the exit and entrance points of our immediate Solar System. Later it was found out by western thinkers through Hitler’s Paranormal division and Madame Blavatsky’s meetings with the dark Tibetans that the stars also corresponded to actual places on Earth the Pole star was thus in Antarctica. An opening was found there that lead to a jump gate with various uses especially instantaneous travel throughout the Planet through wormholes.

Reason 110: The Pole star has been mapped since ancient times. The Earth contains various entrances to the center of the Earth. In other places natural wormholes have been located that have served as portals or gates entering and exiting Earth.

The 33rd Parallel located 33° longitude on the Planet Earth has been the main spot of esoteric activity. The Roswell crash that began the Alien phenomena was mapped on the 33rd parallel. Nazareth the birthplace of Jesus is on the 33rd Parallel, Nagasaki is on the 33rd Parallel, Babylon in modern day Iraq is on the 33rd Parallel, The Mother Lodge of American Freemasonry lies on the 33rd Parallel, Bill Clinton was born in Hope, a Town on the 33rd Parallel, U.S. Highway 666 is on the 33rd Parallel, The no fly Zone for Baghdad was on the 33rd Parallel, “S”idon the seat of time on Earth and the Temples of Baal Bek are located on the 33rd Parallel. The White House is on the 33rd Parallel. The Twin Towers fell exactly 33 years after their ground breaking ceremony in 1966. Samson and Jesus both died at age 33. The Number 3 was sacred to the Egyptians and in the Code it is also another form of an S. $3+3=6$ “S”ix which is also the Letter G. Notice the similarity in Black Letter “Luc”inda and Algerian 6, 6. This is of course another hidden meaning to the “G” in Masonry beyond “Geometry” and “Generation”. Much of this will make a lot more sense, if it already doesn’t, when you get further along. You will begin to see the Matrix fall everywhere right in front of your face.

Reason 111: The use of Sacred Geometry has profound effects when it comes to binding and controlling regions. There is a perfect relation in Color, Shape, Sound, and Number. If we were taught only these things and not the garbage of the Curriculum, we would all be extremely intelligent and gifted in a high degree. The Elite have taken this knowledge and used it against us. Unless we begin to have a firm grasp on how all this works at some point in the near future the Positive will eventually have to face, or risk being wiped out, by the Negative. In true Reason one does not assume good will always triumph, they morph into the role of good and insure they have put in motion some type of "true" energy to bring that idea about. We should always ask ourselves "Did we do our best"? The answer to that should be based on a point in life when you really know you had done your best, that's called a point of reference it is of great value especially in meditations.

A hierarchy system exist amongst these Beings just like the one set up in our military, except much more animated. Demigods like Beelzebub, Baphomet, and Quetzacoatl have their own followers although they all answer to something even “lower” than them. Their job is to gather the people any way they can and the dividing of Power goes on in the darkness where you cannot see. As they often tell you this world is more of an Illusion until you “wake up” to what’s really going on. Many of these Beings are responsible for creating this so-called Illusion or Maya/Maia. The play on words here is obvious for example. Illuminati, Illusion, Ill, Illegal, Pill and Kill, in time I will show you how they are all related and who is the culprit behind such illiterate treachery. It would suffice to say now that it is very “ill” as you can see by the words it uses to express itself. The world’s largest pharmaceutical company is Lilly-Illy.

Reason 112: The Illuminati is actually an Italian word. The organization founded by Marchesa Isabella Aldobrandini Pallavicino. There is still the Ordinati, Intrepidi, Umoresti, the Academies of Esquilina, Infecondi, Occulti, Deboli, Immobili, Richelieu, Lynxes, Arcadia, and Liturgica to name a few. Some of these groups make the Illuminati look like the YMCA. Last time We checked they had thousands of members. The underworld has remained cloaked, and many things you will never see and never know, especially if you don't enhance your spiritual position. When these groups Illuminate they enhance themselves with the strongest of Archons such as Baphomet/Temophab/Mohamet.

Some will ask, “why all this to take the soul”, I will say chess does not begin with checkmate, it is a procedure, consider this: Every pawn has the opportunity, no matter how slim it may be, to make it to the other side of the board where it can become any piece it wants. All around you are pawns who don't know they are pawns thus they make “illegal moves” imagining they are Knights or even Queens. Your current world is run as a 64bit Hypercube designed by Hybrid Queen Hydras that reside in Hyperborea. This is the Matrix. And you say you can handle the truth?

The word Maya actually meant to divide or split in two first, then occurs its modern meaning of illusion which happens after the former takes place. In the ancient books its states the division was about cutting us off from our other side which included our right brain, our other soul called the Ba, and our contact with the other world where our closest parallel also known as our doppelganger or double exists. This world that I speak of is actually the world that precedes this one in time because time does not exist there. Many people believe the Reptilian Annunaki upgraded us, in all actuality it was a downgrade. Deactivating our Pineal Gland and genetically inserting and activating a Reptilian portion in our brains that's attached to ceremony. There has been a large amount of research on the Reptilian portion of the brain. It makes us only think of survival, food, clothes, shelter and basic instinct. It begins to deactivate the much more creative Human portion of the brain that conceives beyond daily life into Art, Feeling, Creativity, and Expression.

When you can operate in both worlds you can move things around because time does not exist in the other world like it does here. When you come back into this world things manifest immediately which is called keeping a foot in both worlds and was shown being done in Egyptian art. This world could be naturally reached through the dream state if there weren't so many nets and webs that ones astral body gets entangled in when they go to sleep thus keeping them from traveling beyond the immediate globe of influence. This is why the Maya depicted 2012 as being the end of the Illusion because all this would be found out. The gig is up.

Reason 113: The Maya, more correctly known as Maia which is one of the seven stars in the Pleiades did much of the Leyline work for the Serpents. Other tribes like the Aztecs, Yucatán, Toltec, Incas, Tezcaucans, Peruvians and Araucannians all built Pyramids or other structures on the Leylines and began human and child sacrifice by instruction of their perceived Masters.

People tend to forget that the Maya also predicted their own destruction 500 years before it happened, this occurred because they were taught to believe in destiny so much they could not avoid it. The sheer fact that Destiny has Tiny at the end of it turns me off; this word is too small for me to dissect. Our future should never be associated as such, it's despicable this kind of degrading. Their extensive knowledge of time was given to them by the Serpent. This is mainly evident because it wasn't even a time chart for Earth's processions but Sirius. They are often seen in sculptures and pictures bowing down to these Serpents who gave them this faulty system of time. Let us think clearly, the one who gave us time was the culprit known as the Watcher or "Watch" just like a time piece this is another name for the Nephilim. We find lots of hope also in the indigenous tribes many of whom had unlocked the ability to disappear totally from a reality in a blink of an eye which can be done when groups of people get together and pull all of their energy in collectively, thus creating a Gate to other worlds formed within the collective mind of the group.

Reason 114: The Maia long count calendar functioned as a clock of the Universal time of Earth's evolutionary development based on the energies of Sirius/Sothis. As you can see on the right this watch maker obviously is in the know.

I will take this moment to elaborate on the damage of the split mind. First with the mind split there will always be some type of internal duality within the individual, a constant pulling from one side to the other depending upon what time of the season it is. This Duality was remarked by the ancients as the two Horses pulling your chariot as can be seen on the #7 Tarot card. Unless you could get them to run together, they will go in separate directions eventually ripping you in two. This other side has a lot to do with being complete in our thinking; it is given the term masculine or feminine depending on your sex. There is no space in this book to elaborate on what is masculine and what is feminine because of the complexity of the individual Creation, but there are a couple things that can be of value to consider.

Reason 115: The Chariot is the body comprising two different sides that are the energy +/- just like a battery. When the sides are balanced progress is made, when one side is unbalance there will be no movement as one side will always pull or drain the other. As far as the first card all the symbolism is indoctrination. The 8 Pointed Star of Ilu, the Sphinx, the Square, the Egyptian Solar Disk, Crescent Moons, etc.

Feminine energy is intuitive while masculine energy is analytical power of reason and strength. Women say men need to be more sensitive to their surroundings in order to get in tune, which is true. There is seldom any response by men on what woman get to do. This is what I've learned, if we "sense" all the time without "analyzing" we will just go with the flow of life. That current flow of life in our present world condition is actually going in the opposite direction of progress, it is headed towards decay as anything material will, it just is, and this is something that has happened before. It is also true when we become too analytical all we have is mountains of data that are not attached to feeling thus higher senses cannot be activated so there can be no power to do anything about your findings. Especially when it comes to divining the "real truth" or the "root" of what is going on in your individual life so it can be adjusted properly so you can have a stable foundation.

For males it is of value to know that females make at least 50% more paranormal contact than males. One main reason these Beings can communicate with woman better than men is because they possess a womb, this is known as a "Soul Matrix". The fluid is highly magnetic and as any Yogi can tell you there is actually brain tissue around the stomach region, in short the stomach area is the keeper of Chi/Force/Power this is where it is harnessed and stored. Women have a high generative cycle of this magnetic fluid in their Menstrual Blood or Plasma which is also a high energy substance. This was known by the Knights Templar as Sangrail which they would drink in their rituals of the Holy Blood the Holy Grail/"Mag"dalena. Unfortunately this also results in more women being used to harness the dark powers without questioning whether or not it's correct, they just go with the "flow". As the "New Age" woman develops more analysis she will again deal a heavy blow to the Wicked One who is no match for the Fury of Woman but is ever seeking to use her prowess.

Reason 116: This type of propaganda is being directed at the young women so they can imagine Witchcraft is a coven of woman sticking together. In all actuality it is to place one under the service and spells of the Horney Gods, this reflects in how women's bodies are desecrated and disrespected by these cults. These are also called Corn Gods which is a term coined in Egypt where their entire economy depended on Corn at times. As you watch the "Orn" continue it is obviously wicked like we talked about with the "Or" you have words like Torn, Porn, Morn, Worn, etc. all implicating the culprit once more.

Men are no better, without the feminine side they personally need to see the physical result of their Spiritual practice, if it be any, in order to believe. Due to many practicing for personal gain they only engage in the arts that produce fast and vivid results. This form of magic is the most dangerous as it is not a graceful energy but a magic based on receiving not giving thus various pacts are formed by men with lesser Spirits whose presence can be felt easier because they are dense slow moving vibrations, Chaos Magic. This is called the Gambling of the soul which is why gambling is forbidden by wise men. Even the numbers on the Rolette table added up equal 666. What gambling does is it allows the person to jump to a higher phase in this material world without proper preparation. If a person has many bad habits and they happen to "strike it rich" the latter condition is far worse than the former, they now have money to feed their every corrupt desire.

Reason 117: This is Baphomet the Horned God of Mendes. When inverting the Pentagram this Being and Legions of others are evoked. As you see with the propaganda above Witches and Warlocks use both sides of the Pentagram and both sides bring about various energies we will call Negative Feminine and Negative Masculine. These are extremely unbalanced distorted energies. The flute in the hand of Sothis is the same flute Pan, another Horned Goat God, is often seen with.

The balance comes in play when you are open to the emotional, sensual side of the world thus giving you extra perception, while your analytical mind is able to place it in its proper category due to previous experience and research. These two become the perfect self sustained match being capable of handling energies the proper way, expelling darkness and elaborating on the true light. It is also of value to realize that to become a teacher you will need both of these in order to deal with the “two states of mind” if you expect to mend them. I will also remark that masculine and feminine personalities are not limited to any particular sex. You will find many individuals with a mix and match of these traits and it will be your task, if you choose it, to replace what is missing like a Surgeon.

With that being said do make a mental note that SIR which is a title given to a member of the high court and SUR normally used as the root of words like Surgeon along with SER as in Serpent, SAR as in Sargon, and SOR as in Sorcerer all are head serpent terms meaning that this is the common acronym they refer to themselves by on this dimension. Also keep in mind most Surgeons have no idea of the root of the word, nor do they care. The Caduceus is the only hint at times they get that the whole medical institution is none other than a Lab belonging to the Hybrid Serpents set up for the various manipulations of the human body such as vaccines.

This also gives us a better resolve about choosing the proper companion. There is seldom a bigger hindrance when you are on the first levels of the Path than the “un-significant” other. Many times two people have paired up for a prolonged period and are now only together because of the amount of time they have been with each other. I overheard a person once say, “Well we have been together for 6 years and I owe it to try and make it work”. When leaving this Earth there will be just you, unless your mate is on the same frequency. Of course in this life we desire to find compatible partners, however if we are personally just beginning to learn the truth of things, how can we expect our “old selves” to have chosen anything good and balanced for us?

I was able to sum the whole relationship paradigm with this mode of thought. If he or she is concerned about their soul and its growth then there is a chance the relationship will work. If they are not concerned then the other conscious party will most assuredly be dragged down. This will come about often times not in the intent of the idle individual, but rather the things they engage in. For example, if you are cleansing your mind and body seeking more clarity and a mate comes home after being in a bar for hours they are actually carrying a great deal of negative energy. When you share a bed with them you are even more vulnerable than they are since they as a vessel no longer matter to the Spirits, it is your fresh energy the Spirits want, they already have the other individual. Even deeper than this, as long as you are “yoked” to them you are not only carrying them, but also the load that each of you acquire through life along with yourself. So in short if a person does not care about their soul, which is of the highest value, how can they care about you?

Although there may appear to be something there, it is not complete thus it will falter at a certain point, most assured when you need it most. The weak link on a chain only breaks when extreme pressure is applied. This is the danger of the Illusion, many people are pretending, and this makes them very unstable in certain key areas. One of the main tactics of the Deceiver is to match you, the Seeker, with an unbalanced mate that may only have an exterior show of compatibility. This is why lustful pictures, flirtatious men and women, risqué scenes, and various types of propaganda all are put in place to distract the Seeker and convince them to first try to find eternal happiness outside of themselves which is not possible. Of course you attract what you are so if you are incomplete but searching, you attract another incomplete person that is also searching and thus the blind follow the blind until they both fall into a pit.

This Magician or Magi who I call the Wizards who worship Lizards collaborated against man and woman a long time ago in exchange for individual favoritism. The pact simply reads that in 6 lives they will “Reign” over man and woman and will make up the group we called the Elite. Those who are closer to the top of the pyramid generally are of the pure bloodlines that have remained the same since the first intermingling. This is called Holy Blood or Holy Grail. They maintain a constant link with the collective hive mind. Those further down the Pyramid and degrees after initiation sometimes realize the horrible truth which is they not only have to do these Deities bidding in this life but they also belong to them in the lower dimension, a maddening reality that consumes from within.

Many may say they would never make such an agreement, however, they just have never been presented with such a deal; they would be ashamed at what the result may be. Imagine how many of today’s youth will do anything just to become a star in Hollywood. It is of value to understand that the Elite do not need a person to join their team they have a waiting list. Also you will do well to remember that although you would never do it there is always some Joe Smo around the corner who may be a little down on his luck that will. Until a person knows what’s fully going on everyday they sub-consciously make an agreement to also align with the negative force, there is no neutral grey area, everything must stay in motion. These people are often used unknowingly but are just as effectively. There is no shame in it, a person can be used and manipulated in various ways until they take back control of their life which comes first in knowing what’s really going on.

Reason 118: Again, there is no limit to how many people will join the Illuminati Circus if they are given the opportunity. As I said before once you are in "the know" you will see it everywhere. Imagine, these two artist both released CD's related to the Circus, the home of the Animist. One is called Womanizer, clearly a term that should not be respected and yet thousands of women bought the CD upon its release. T-Pain whose name is enough explanation shows the "33" on his cover and of course the Skull. All this is looked over by the fan who just wants to hear the tunes. Pan and his flute win again. All this is for a reason. Stay Alert

Since this Matrix is based on Colors, Sounds, Shapes, and Numbers you have an opportunity to "view" the program. Thousand if not millions of Americans faced heavy levels of mind control in the 80's and 90's just by leaving their T.V. on after the last show and falling asleep for a good 3 hours of low vibration frequency which was the prolonged sound you would hear before the station went off the air. It is of value to also point out that these Entities are not ignorant, doomed possibly, but not ignorant. They have been here for Aeons and carry the wisdom of Aeons and many in exchange for that wisdom have sold their very souls.

Reason 119: Max Headrooms aired sometime in the mid 80's in the United States, few remember this show however so much mind control went across every episode with the colors, shapes, and design of the background along with Max's Frequency enhanced voice, there is no telling how extensive the programming could have been. Coding like this has everything to do with why people are clueless to reality.

As you see with words like Sly, Slick, Sneaky, Sick, Seduced, Slain, and way too many to itemize here all these words have one thing in common. They all begin with "S," so now you are beginning to learn about the Symbols of the English language. In the English language there are words that are kept as triggers to use by the Elite. Words that are laden with "S"'s always tend to be bad news like Possession, Hitler's SS, and men like Hallie Salassie, Samuel, Saturn, Satan, Shamash, Santa, Sananda, Sodom etc. We call what belongs to us our possessions although this word has a dual meaning as many words do, possession means also to have something that is taking over you thus changing your character. We find this true with rock and rap CD's, horror movies, violent video games, risqué clothing, weapons, idols and many other things really possess a person which makes it of value to rid yourself of things that are carrying negative energy.

Reason 120: Idols have always been a problem throughout time. No matter what one may think the idol represents the true origin of many idols are unknown by the possessor. Think of this, if the statues and depictions of Jesus and Mary used in Christianity are of Anglo descent but Jesus was supposed to be Hebrew, who do you think they are the renditions of? Do you think it matters? In addition the subconscious mind can sustain heavy altering when put to the extent of placing the subjects of belief, deliverance, and assistance in an inanimate object.

At this point some may say the word thing may be a little too excessive. As things speed up there will be much more addressed with the words as the story unfolds. You must know how to piece it all together and this makes it that much easier to explain to all the people you will have to tell. After you are finished with the book reading it again will unlock even more things you did not see before. When they teach you how to write in school they call it learning to “Spell”. This word “Spell” can not be confused with anything else besides a Magical Incantation which is what it means. To go further to show no coincidence is being made here they go on to teach you how to write in “Cursive” in which the root of the word is “Curse”. In writing I can leave no moments to think but that is pretty profound. What we are instructed to do from the time we enter grade school is become little dark magicians along with a little help from people like Disney.

Reason 121: The Illuminist Walt Disney introduced the young mind to a world of Magic and strange characters. Movies like Alice in Wonderland had entirely different meaning. Seeing movies like Angels in the Outfield analyzed by Film Expert Lennon Honor on Youtube revealed profound amounts of Pedophilia. It is clear Disney and his group of Dark Magicians are out to hurt children, introduce dark magic into the household, and bring about the continued plan of population mind control. KEEP YOUR KIDS AWAY FROM DISNEY FILMS!

Just as we faced as children a constant array of sick suggestive media indoctrination, the new generation faces a hybrid version of the same thing. Parents are unknowingly opening the gate of negative forces to the children at an early age. It may be fun to watch the baby dance to your favorite hip/hop or rock song, but what is it actually doing to such an innocent unprotected mind? Especially since it is not condoned but promoted by the only person the child may know as its guide at such a young age. I'm not saying this needs to change, I believe its to late for that, most children now run their parents, what I am bringing light to is the results of such things. Like I said before the hybrid version of indoctrination wants more than just the innocent body, it wants the Soul. Many parents are responsible for delivering it to the Deity on a silver saucer because they are themselves under illusions.

Reason 122: The original story of Pan's Labyrinth in dark esoteric works was that of Pan molesting little girls placed in his labyrinth by sadistic worshippers. The story gets a rendition, some graphical enhancements, then comes out in theatre and wins tons of awards. Once again the Ill's have fooled thousands into loving their sworn enemy. You have learned enough about Deities now to innerstand that this card of Persephone, used in this children's game, actually encourages a young girl to evoke the dark Queen damned to the Underworld. People are still acting like none of this is going on. Many are sitting back watching the children get hurt and won't lift a finger, it's amazing I have received little "human" support on the Path, mostly ridicule, and I do this for their children. Indeed the weight is heavy lifting the world and Atlas. So it be written let it be done. Unsluggish strength We have.

We have a little sign amongst those that I share thoughts with which is when we crack into something because the Code is constantly revealing new stuff, we often put our hand very close to our faces, that is where all the information is hidden, right in front of our faces. Of course being that it would be the last place that you would ever look. As you see the Great Pyramids are four sided pyramids not three. If you notice everything around you such as doors, windows, rooms and even work cubicles have all adapted the 4 sided 2D or 8 sided 3D cuboid shape or box.

There are certain words I call “power words” like instead of going backwards we should be going forwards but what are the “Four Words”. Are there Four Words that give us foreknowledge “Four Knowledge”? We are even told that our ancestors or forefathers “Four Fathers” made history. The Tetragrammaton (YHVH), which is the Hebrew word that remains as the root to many esoteric Names such as JeHoVaH and YaHWeH, consists also of only Four Words. As we continue to see there is something diabolical going on here with the 4 which in sacred geometry is a 2 Dimensional square, 4 dimensional cube, and 8 dimensional Octagon this is how worlds connect. All words like Dionysus, Dios, Diana, Diamond, Die, Divide, Diabolical, and Diablo, are all intertwined and related with a story in antiquity.

The “D” itself in the English language is the symbol of a circle divided in two. If you open your breaker box right now and look at the manufacturer of the breaker you will see the company Square D, the logo is a D inside a square. They control everything related to power, as will be shown. The esoteric Masonic studies were focused on what they called squaring the circle. Since all organic life contains no straight edges and is always curved and circular this was the art of trapping organic life and holding them in various forms of stasis. Trapping natural organic matter like me and you in Inorganic Cubes like the cubicles we are sent to work in everyday and the houses we are given to live in or sometimes foolishly build ourselves in the wrong designs. Putting ourselves into cubes and calling them home, this is another fine example of subtle programming. They are Masters of the 2D primitive world of Matter which is black and white no color thus the black in white checkered pattern is one of their signs.

Reason 123: As what is hidden comes into plain view you will see their signs everywhere they own huge companies such as the Checkered Cab of New York. He makes the sign of the “L” as the Owl, the sacred bird of Isis is also in the picture. Some are still human, some are not however we will face them. Their plan is almost complete even “Sir” Winston Churchill was in on it but that should not “sur”prise you. Their magic is that of mastering the cube as the world is treated as grand chess board. They also master knowing how to move about the square without getting caught in the web. Have you ever seen a spider get trapped in its own web?

All of the Pyramids at one point in history were connected and they had functioning capstones on top. Not to mention many of the Pyramids were completely coated with a substance that was washed away during the last flood, this substance allowed these great structures to reflect the Sun’s energy giving them the ability to become like large solar panels generating various energies depending upon the tuning. In deeper writings it states that the Gods would land their ships on the top of these structures and they would serve as charging stations. Those traveling the desert could navigate their way by the shining light of the Great Pyramid which could be seen for thousands of miles.

The much older Hindu Puranas and Vedas describe detailed accounts of ships used by hyperdimensional Beings. When the Gods visited Earth they would arrive in large ships which were in other written accounts as large flying beasts because they made such monstrous noises, obviously the sound from the engines. Then they would set themselves up in the temples man had built for them, lounge, and get served. This was one of the earlier versions of the Matrix that was washed away by the last Aquarian Age flood. It seems that the destruction and chaos of these Aquarian Ages are not limited to just the unsuspecting people but often the Deities themselves get destroyed by the Forces of Nature. When I say false I don’t mean they don’t exist I mean they lie and what they say is false as in not true because they never make good on their word.

This is how the whole Cosmic Clock is tuned, right at the time things are about to reach critical mass and all hope has vanished. Right at the time were people think there isn't even a Most High. Right at the time Deities, People, Beings and every created thing is in motion, a click happens that expands or contracts the experience, it is up to you to choose. The Egyptians actually admitted that there was a Most High Being greater than the Gods but because they had not made contact with it, probably because of their dominant attitudes, they choose to obey the Entities that they were already familiar with. They are called "Familiar Spirits".

It becomes clear with the sign of Aquarius that the water bearer is dumping out a bucket of water upon the earth thus cleansing the earth from its current pesky inhabitants and getting it prepared for the next edition. The Great Pyramid itself in Egypt is said to have had 18 inches of special coating washed away from its surface. Many people look at the Pharaohs of Egypt and try to grasp how such an ancient empire was so far advanced. You will also see how the Feline which is the Sphinx plays an important role. The sign of the Lioness is used in modern symbolism relating to the ruling Monarch. Female, Fertility, Feline, and Feminine all begin with "Fe" for a reason. As you see on the crest of England the ruling power personifies itself as a Lion which can also be mapped in the cosmos by the constellation Leo. The females were hidden by direct order and the female role remained hidden and protected or simply put, veiled.

As can be seen in Egyptology the Egyptian Female Goddess Ma'at was the third eye of all Egyptian Gods also known as Wadjet. This means that the eye on top of the pyramid is actually the eye of Ma'at. They keep the Female Sphinx in front of all their main lodges for protection against various Spiritual forces the Elite are at war with. Egyptians kept large amounts of cats in their temples. Cats carry lots of Prana and are very sensitive to other life forms. They are known to contain an Astral Spirit that can be trained. As you will be delighted to find out, since it gives you power and strength to know, this is none other than one of "Ma's Tricks" or simply the Matrix that we are caught up in now.

The Egyptian worshipped Matter as the primal cause. Our word for matter comes from the word Ma'at. The Atlantians perfected the ability to take matter, which is flesh formed and fashioned into a human body, and then take a soul and animate the body with the soul. The matter was their creation and the soul was of course the creation of the Most High. To do this they would have to pull souls from lower dimensions, other worlds, or wherever they could get souls. Finding souls was like mining for Gold. This whole art is called Necromancy thus one cannot simply die and think it is over they must somehow bypass reincarnation which was always considered a curse as if you had been netted like a fish and pulled back into the Planet/Planned Net. Cloning makes it possible to make the body, Necromancy makes it possible to animate the body with a spirit, this is the other variation of the Philosopher's Stone, in which the Alchemist used his body as the test subject. He would then add more elements/forces/spirits to his own body to enhance his abilities. If the Alchemist did not have the correct formula of how to control the Matter while the process was taking, it would result in his own death or complete possession and that my good friend is the Alchemical Key.

You can trace the most recent use of this soul tampering to the Sumerian Annunaki who are now professing they are the Creators of man and woman and created them to be slaves. The true story is the Danu also known as Tuatha de Dannan, the Tribe of Dan, the Danites who where known to be giants did discover the secret to DNA/DAN. The old Celtic doctrines speak of the Danu and some of their origin in which they are clearly part of the Atlantean Club which explains how they also had the knowledge of how to alter humans. They are also known as simply AN. The “A” in the English language is the symbol of Atlantis omitting the crossing of the A. The crossing makes it a pyramid with a capstone. It was normally written to look like an upside down V which still meant 5. Mary’s mother was named Ann, she was carrying the lineage of the bloodline so they could erect a world savior that all would eventually bow to no matter how many they needed to create, this has been going on at least since Mithras.

Reason 124: The Egyptians symbolized the spirit as a snake. In this glyph they have already trapped the spirit inside of these holding tubes, they are now placing the spirits in the clones/matter/golem so they may be endowed with the intelligence and reason of the soul thus they make better servants rather than organic machines which need to take orders before they will engage.

How the Elite work is they expand their rule like a pyramid and elect many consorts in a system of hierarchy. Then they consolidate all of the power that they pull from the people back into the main Deity and close the top through the Hierophant, seldom distributing anything of true value. When Beings come to a new Planet they first set up a Gate. When gates are destroyed, which has been happening, a Being can no longer come into this dimension, trapping those who originally came through the Gate on the Planet until they are able to reconstruct the gate on the proper Leyline and make the “jump” back to their original Planet. This is often referenced in many chronicles, annuals, and even the Bible. It often reads, “they tore down their Gates and dispersed their Gods”.

Reason 125: The Eyes of Wadjet/Ma'at always shown separate so you cannot visualize what the complete Being would look like but now you see it is not Human it is more like the Predator.

The Great Pyramids wormhole/zero point configuration is probably how continuous reincarnation or should I say “soul snatching” is happening on Earth. Necromancy obviously became primitive when new ways to harvest departed souls was discovered. There are smaller cult groups still practicing Goetia the old way. Due to the information already known about the Pyramids, if you happened to come out of your body while in the vicinity of the Pyramid, it would eventually suck you in like going down a sink; this is called a vortex/wormhole/black hole. When that happens you would come out somewhere and as I mentioned briefly it seems the Pyramid could be tuned to determine where those entering its Vortex would come out. Those with strong spirits have the “thrust” to trust they can jettison away from the whirlpool. World Pull

This book is being composed as Greater Israel is being realized, of course at the expense of thousands of Palestinian children’s lives who have no clue of the significance of their land and bloodline. Even in Baghdad soldiers were issued swords and began cutting off heads of the people with certain last names by instruction of their Commanding Officers. The people of Baghdad still contain the bloodline of the Ancient Annunaki, however, organizations such as Thule who have now the U.N. and several world leaders behind them intend to take over all Gates for their purposes.

Saddam Hussein went rogue after he began excavation and restoration of the Ancient City of Babylon located in Iraq. He was noted to spend at least 300 million using the best archeologists money could buy. This is what the U.S. wanted so they allowed Saddam to get to a certain point. Once he compared himself to Nebechnezzar they knew it was time to remove him since Nebechnezzar conquered the world and the U.S. was not going to see another rendition of that. Everything that is going on in Baghdad has to do with the Stargate of the Babylonians and the Tower of Babel. Babylon is on a very powerful Leyline that has the ability of becoming a portal to cross dimensions with proper geometric setup. Marduk/Ra declared Babylon his eternal city and coated everything in Gold.

Reason 126: Here is a rendition of the Babylonian Ziggurat or Tower. The King resided in the top with the Gods in the clouds.

As we have already discussed Pantheism is the belief and worship of more than one God so we will review a few popular Gods amongst the people. Marduk who is Ra takes most of the spotlight, he is at times head over the Demoniatic Pantheism of the inverted Tree of the Underworld or Netherworld/Neterworld. All world leaders are now rebuilding towers to Ra who is their Lord. Here are a few of his Generals, we will call them The Dark Side. Abaddon, Adramelech, Ah, Ahiriman, Amon, Apollyon, Asmodeus, Asteroth, Azazel, Baal and the Baalim (not a singing group), Baphomet, Bast, Beelzebub, Behemoth, Beherit, Bile, Chemosh, Cimeries, Coyote, Dagon, Damballa, Demogorgon, Diablos, Dracula, Emm-O, Eurononymous, Fenriz, Gorgo, Haborym, Hecate, Ishtar, Kali, Latchme, Lilith, Loki, Mammon, Mania, Mantus, Marduk, Mastema, Melek Taus, Mephistopheles, Metztli, Midgard, Milcom, Moloch, Morm, Naamah, Nihasa, Nija, Oyam, Pan, Pluto, Persephone, Pwcca, Rimmon, Sabazios, Saitan, Samael, Samnu, Sedit, Sekhmet, Set, Shaitan, Shiva, Supay, T'AN-MO, Tchort, Tzezcaltipoca, Thames, Thoth, Tunrida, Typhon, Yaotzin, YEN LO WANG. There are of course many more than these mentioned, however, these in particular are in the German Satanic Bible so their should be no questions with the Beings listed here if whether they are good or bad, they are the orchestrators of evil and 100% darksiders keep them and anyone representing them away from anything you love and care about. They are a sad lot We shall place great chains around their necks and drag them about in ridicule before they are particlized and dispersed to the winds.

Reason 127: As you see they are not really hiding their affiliation with Babylon/Bel/Ra/Marduk. The picture on the left has inverted pentagrams and the people are shaped like cubes. These types of images are rich with symbolism. The Tower itself is complete and several other Towers are nearing completion.

It was even more fascinating to see Vin Diesel the Actor with a tattoo of the Necromicon Sigil on his neck in the movie Babylon A.D. In another movie The Chronicles of Riddick he actually battles Necromongers, holy half—deads from the Underworld who take over worlds by combining their souls with Humans through non-voluntary possession. In Babylon A.D., his role is to protect a woman who will birth the final seed of Babylon, the Anti-Christ twins with genetically enhanced powers. What is being said in secret circles is once the line-up happens the Gates will be open and many Beings will have the opportunity to go into different Planes and Dimensions through Portals. This is a time of great going and coming.

The stars of Hollywood are “as below” resonators of the stars above. A person seldom gets into the acting industry and establishes a career unless they are “in tune” with their position. Many actors can be found playing the same type of role such as the savior role Keanu Reeves is often given in movies like the Matrix, Johnny Mnemonic, the Day the Earth Stood Still, and A Scanner Darkly. This is all a part of the heavy programming being done to the viewer. It is a fact that many people in Hollywood are initiates and know for a fact the roles they play are at times initiations.

Madonna who we talked about briefly actually initiated Cristina Aguilera on stage during an award show while dismissing Britney Spears with a holy kiss just as the ritual entails. She begins by walking down a 13 step Pyramid in front of a million viewers who only a few knew what was actually taking place. Watching Britney’s career after that night was like watching a horror show while Christina became Miss Teen, Cover Girl, etc. The same thing is witnessed with Rianna in her Umbrella Video which LennonHonorFilms on Youtube did a profound job at exposing amongst many other astonishingly things about the film industry.

This particular topic about how movies, cartoons, comics, and various other types of propaganda through history are all being used to communicate and portray Masonic and Elitist ceremonies, inductions, current information, and the status of world domination has all been rolled up in to the modern title Synchronismysticism. This word means the clear identification of certain patterns that involve esoteric activity embedded within the media for various reasons. This has become so popular a Synchronistic Wikipedia has now been formed.

Reason 128: The Media keeps a constant broadcast of esoteric information going which works two-fold. It serves to keep various members of the Elite in the know of current situations, while making the average person continue to believe its all a part of the entertainment. The year 2010 will be anything but entertainment for those who are not prepared. Watch.

With this unraveling of secrets that seemed to begin after the Twin Towers collapsed those who have begun investigating under the pretense of conspiracy have uncovered a trail of immense proportion. Many things reveal that not only are we dealing with a force that has the ability to traverse space and time it also has the supreme intelligence of a Master Architect or Master Builder. When you begin to look into these matters you find an inner network of people from various nationalities and backgrounds all “in the know”, which allows them to be more mentally, financially, and physically superior than the average person. When the Twin Towers collapsed, which was the Tower Card #16, the consciousness of the Planet shifted starting in OZ/NY. The Twin Towers themselves were giant tuning forks with the base of the structure infused into the chambers that kept the Gold Reserve.

Reason 129: The Twin Towers which we will call Jaochin and Boaz were tuning forks setting the frequency and consciousness for the City which is silently the Capitol of the United States, New York the Land of Oz. The globe placed at the base of the fallen towers is now the controlling device until the Freedom Towers are complete in 2012.

There has been profound amounts of publications found that date back as far as 1960 indicating that the tower would eventually be collapsed in some massive Masonic Mega Ritual. There are enough books and movies on the full details of the 9/11 plot so I will only discuss what many of the conspiracy researchers have missed. Now that 9/11 has past it is for many just another moment in time because they did not lose any loved ones. For those families that lost a loved one they are torn between this conspiracy and that conspiracy. It is fact that this was an orchestrated event that signaled the dawn of a new view of how we see our leaders. I will also say that I believe those people did not die in vain. It was that single event that made many wake up and see things deeper. Thousands of lives are lost everyday due to plans that we could interpret, interrupt, and prevent if we would wake up and learn how the spiritual world functions, along with its signs and symbols.

Reason 130: Since the Elite are notorious for following the 22 card Tarot deck it was already divined that they would cause the Tower to fall. In this FEMA Terrorism self-study manual the Towers are shown with the Bulls Eye/Aldabaren over the South Tower. This manual was published in June 1999 way before the Towers fell, they already knew it was going to happen.

The Gold that was contained in the WTC Towers was moved to Dubai. In fact most of the Gold in the world is now in Dubai. If one has investments in Gold bullion and would like to take delivery, it has to come from Dubai. In Dubai it is clear by the architecture they are expecting the arrival of a Being. Since the Annunaki bloodlines trace mainly through the regions of what is now the Arab world it is almost guaranteed they are expecting the return of Marduk and have gathered the Gold as instructed. These Beings are at the root of the mental and physical enslavement that has faced man and woman, it is also their bloodlines the Elite are attempting to keep preserved. It is also clear the Annunaki are masters at keeping their identity unknown. Although the Sumerian tablets are some of the oldest writings discovered, stories of the Annunaki which are contained on Cuneiform Tablets did not start to really leak until after 9/11. Zacharia Sitchen wrote extensive books on their workings, these books did not get much attention from those who did not already know about the Sumerians and the Annunaki until recently.

Reason 131: The Annunaki are possibly the oldest Reptilian faction to infiltrate Earth. The elder Annunaki eventually left Earth with the ship Nibiru to return once their Ship makes its next pass by Earth as it does every 26,000 years. They left their sibling and offspring in charge while they were gone. It just so happens that 26,000 years comes to completion on December 21, 2012 at 11:11 a.m. Reports say Nibiru can now be seen approaching from the South Pole. The Annunaki are shape shifters so they can take on many forms such as Birdmen, Cherubs, and Dragons. Their offspring such as the Danu Nimrod became the Kings of Sumeria, they were of large stature.

Before we move from the subject of the Annunaki there is one more thing that must be known. It is apparent that the interaction with the Annunaki males and the Earth females seems to parallel Genesis, especially since all these stories are Sumerian and of course the Sumerians had the Fallen Angel story first. These Angels were actually advanced winged Reptilians. There is definitely a link here. Furthermore these bloodlines have now claimed to be the Blue Blood Elite that have been ruling like tyrants, Blue is the color of the Serpents blood.

Magdalena was said to be the twin sister of Jesus who was carrying the bloodline. She was married into the House of Windsor/Hanover/Mero/Goth/Viso etc. these are all Blue Bloods. Finally the Grail became Princess Diana and as planned she brought forth Prince William of whom many are implicating as the Anti-Christ. It is of value to remember that the Anti-Christ does not have the Power it is the Beast and the False Prophet who he teams up with and they form a trinity. Lord Matrieya was seen on the boat when a major meeting of the world's top secret societies, such as the Knights of Malta, took place. It is highly possible Lord Matrieya will be the False Prophet. The Pope has agreed to take the position after Matrieya rather than before. The Beast is the Red Dragon and I don't feel it is time to reveal who that really is due to the amount of disbelief which will occur. If the "Second Edition" is allowed to come forth I will reveal it then and by that time much of what I'm talking about now you will already see.

When Princess Diana began to date Doti Fayed it seemed the Royal House was very sore about this, or was all this part of the plan to mix the Reptilian Bloodlines with Annunaki? Another name for the Annunaki is Annu"doti". When Diana's autopsy came forward it stated she was pregnant with twins before her death. It is known also by those who meditate day and night and expect their Maker at any moment, that the Jesuit Priests are now training one group of twins. Twins have the specialty of both parallels being born in the same womb thus combined they have heightened Spiritual ability if they pursue it.

Reason 132: As can be seen here by this statue made by instruction, Prince Charles has no problem depicting himself as the Prince Lucifer who was cast out of heaven. The royal family are the laymen of the demonic Pantheism and they now control most of the world. The Bible makes sure to include that Satan is the Ruler of this World. As I said before they will have to be faced or they will continue to decimate everything innocent and pure as their ranks increase with the youth who are conned into practicing the things abhorred in the High Heavens. Prince William "The Golden Boy" is continuously prepped for his role as the new world Anti-Christ ruler, surely he will be struck so hard his jewels will fall from his crown.

There is another Planet that used to be in our system known as Meldek that is no longer with us due to another civil war which went nuclear on their surface. I personally believe this is a very big connection that will put pieces together for many who have already engage in finding out what's going on but can't connect certain things. Here is what I know; Salt Lake City is located on top of a vast underground cavern system predating this interim of man. Those cavern systems connect through underground Nevada Area 60, 13, 51, and probably every major underground hub up into Mount Shasta and various regions of Alaska. Generally when they dig underground it is to extend this system. This system is controlled by the Unseen Hand built by the Atlantians; it can be seen as the backbone of the Matrix. Zion is already running and is underground which can not be seen the movie Matrix but also the movie Ember.

When entering a Mormon sanctuary the highest priority is to trace your genealogy, they contain the world's largest database of genealogy rivaled by only Israel's. The Jews keep extensive records to prove their lineage and bloodline. You cannot enter inside the Temple unless your genealogy can be verified by them. We will continue to establish the link between the Annunaki the Hibiru's, Nibiru, Meldek, and the Melchizedeks as we go on. The entire priesthood of the Earth reside under one roof. The divisions between religions are now mending because they were always together in the background. One part of the design was to get the people to continue to quarrel which is chaos called in Latin CHAO, this buys time. Chaos produces a mist or smoke screen. When chaos is breaking out anything can go on because everyone's attention is on something else.

Let us look at the division of the minds of the world for a moment to see why there are not many coming to the aid of those who really wish to go beyond this Universe/University and into the Cosmos because the course is over. Some have the knowledge while other have the resources, they must join or it is left for ones individual self to make your body a ship, activating a portal and exit the dimension. When you head to the Arab world they are Monotheist and are waiting on the Mahdi the Twelver or Twelfth Imam. Hmmm why is it taking these Masters so long to show up, their people are dying by the masses. In reason there should be no way the U.S., who they call the cursed Dajjal a serpent beast known also as Nakash, should be able to infiltrate the Great Orient and murder everything in sight unless their power has somehow waned and they have been fooled to believe things that are not true thus depleting their spiritual shield which is the real personal barrier before the physical.

Many are angry and have taken up arms against Tubal-Cain! I ask the Arabs and Jihadist did not your great Master say Tubal Cain the Black Smith was the Lord of weapons of great destruction, you cannot beat him at his own Great Art. Our strength does not lie in weapons fashioned of metal it is with Spirit, Crystal Power and control of the Ability particle energy which moveth massive stones even mountains with the mind, lay to waste powerful Beast, and keeping malignant Jinn at bay. We learned this from the Most High, the Wise who will always remain above all things. The quarrel is between Archons like Jaldabaoth, Dominions such as Jesu, Rulers such as the Queen Lizard Elizabeth of England, Principalities like Lucifer, and Kings like Asmodeus.

Reason 133: Top Left, this is the Official Seal of the "Dominion" of the Order of Melchizedek the High Priesthood. This links Christianity, Judaism, and Islam altogether. The Jewel of the 33rd Order out of Chaos. I still find it amazing that although a few people have already made it known, the 33rd Degree is made to look like the highest degree when it is not. I know of 90 Degrees by Title and there are 360 in which only one can hold the title of each.

Here is another thing to think about. If everything is based on sound and every combination of those sounds can be found on a piano scale there are then 12 octaves on the scale and a 13th overtone. If we are at 3 which is C we are 2 scales away from the lowest dimension. When you hear the low keys on a piano you can feel the vibration of danger those keys emit. It is time to wake up and really innerstand where you are in this whole thing rather than just imaging everything will work itself out. We must begin to engage life the proper way or face the results of such negligence as things run amuck.

Continuing on the trail we find that the Arabs contained detailed information in regards to the involvement of these invaders and us. They have accounts that have survived for ages of ships they called the Shams visiting Earth. It is safe to say that the Arabs had already familiarized themselves with these Beings and even worshipped them. I find an uncanny similarity in the name of Allalu the first Annunaki to find Earth before his brother Anu, and the Muslim God Allah. The story of Allalu's discovery of the Earth is the first part of the Sumerian Tablets which is seldom mentioned amongst scholars since Anu becomes the chief God of the Tablets. They immediately go into the story of Anu as ruler, Enlil, E.A, Marduk, Inanna, Ningursag, Gilgamesh, etc.

This also lets us know these Beings are not referred to as Annunaki amongst themselves since it is clear Anu the brother of Allalu earned the right, because of his victory over his brother in battle, to name their lineage on Earth Annunaki. The Sumerian Tablets that proceeds the one in common publication states that Allalu made the journey from the home Planet of the Annunaki first in order to find a Planet that contained the resources to save their World. He was then considered the bravest for accomplishing an almost impossible task. After lengthy travel through the solar system Tiamat was discovered and Allalu set a course to enter the atmosphere in which ended in a crash landing into the ocean. With atmosphere suits he came upon land not knowing if the air was yet breathable. Once Gold was found Allalu send communication back to the home Planet of his find.

When I think of all this the movie Predator comes to mind again. Apparently the second to arrive was Anu, Allalu's brother who challenges him for the new found territory by a wrestling match. It says Allalu lost this match and was exiled along with his trusty companion. Later it says that Allalu challenged Anu again and lost a second time. It says that Allalu was so angry about this that he bit off his brother's penis. For this the council of the Gods banished Allalu to Mars a world that was only inhabitable underground. The face on Mars is said to be the face of Allalu a shrine to Him who found Tiamat first and saved their home Planet. Amazingly the story of Osiris and his Brother Set are somewhat similar missing penis and all.

Could the Muslims be worshipping Allalu as the one and only God because He was the first of the Gods to come to Earth? Getting back to the Gold we find that all the Gold of the world has now been transported to the UAE Dubai the strongest financial superstructure in the world right now. For those who can truly appreciate architecture and sacred geometry they will find the structures of Dubai spell binding. A brand new version of the Tower of Babel has been constructed boasting itself as the tallest building in the world shaped just like a modern ziggurat. The Gates of Ishtar have been reconstructed to be in at least three times their Original proportion. You find 8 sided pyramids rather than the old four sided pyramids which makes it clear that everything is evolving they now have crossed into the 16.

As I said above when the Gods return their Spirit often takes up habitants in the Temples man constructs for them. It is clear after awhile that those who were Pharaohs allowed their bodies to become vessels for the Gods so thus the Deity spoke through them. It makes sense that no common man will become ruler of this world, he would have to be in close association with the Powers and Dominions that be.

The world sits and watches powerless as the Elite in the U.N. play like they cannot stop Israel from bombing Gaza back into the Stone Age. Why is it that they really don't want to hold back Israel even after they bombed a U.N. convoy? It is as simple as the name, "Is" "Ra" "El" "Is" stands for Isis and of course her consort "Ra" Lord of the underworld from the land of Dar and "El" who is Saturn the "The Lord of the Rings". The Star of David carries the hexagram in its center, words like Elect, Elite, Elevated, Elohim, Elysium and many more are all Saturnian words. Just as Earth is alive as people often forget, other Planets are alive also and can be contacted through frequency, shapes, and colors tied into a perfect system. Pythagoras the old Python from Samos taught this in his schools. The Elite have coveted this information and have used it to rule the people thus barring the way to Ascension, while not getting through themselves what joy will come when they shall prevail no longer.

Reason 134: Saturn has Hexagonal North and South Poles. NASA pretends to be baffled by this phenomena. This is also why the Seal of Solomon, also called the Star of David is a Hexagon Star because it evokes the Spirits from the Sphere of Saturn. Other Planets also have geometric correspondents that serve for evocation purposes.

A branch of Hyksos Shepherd Kings left Egypt under Thutmoses III a.k.a. Moses to take over the land of Canaan which became Palestine then Israel. This is told in the tales of Egyptology as the story of Ra deciding to depart from Egypt. This was the time the cult of Ra left Egypt and spread through most of the world. Even the other day I overheard a Bob Marley song with him saying in the beginning “If a man does not serve “Ras”, he will never see no peace,” what kind of talk is this? The takeover was initiated and much blood was wrought up to the bridle. Once they gained a foothold it gave birth to Zionism. These bloodlines all connect by way of Babylon, Sumeria, Egypt, Chaldea, Syria and even Nubia and together the Brotherhood of the Snake began to expand and divvy up the world and its resources and the Humans remained completely unsuspecting, for a time.

When bad things happen in this world people begin to pray, this gives the Deities more energy to make more bad things happen so the people can pray more, a vicious cycle. All main religions use these Beings as their backbone and seldom teach self empowerment through the manipulation of body energy. They say “true you can reach higher states, but not without the aid of so-and-so”. There are two separate doctrines, one for you and one for them. Generally if the Spirit is alive it will manifest that is the doctrine of the Elite. The people are taught to remain in blind faith never seeing the God and only maintaining a one sided dialog with a crucified Lord. All real Prophets, Yogis, and Brahmas maintained vivid contact with the Spiritual realm. The doctrine of the Elite gives them power which is instilled by communing with these Beings. The belief system for the commoner leaves them powerless. As they say the more prayers go up the more blessings come down. “Be Lessed”? These are the words that have to be analyzed by the individual believer if they expect to discover why they are still waiting on something that should have already come.

So the truth behind Israel is they are evoking the assistance of Entities they discovered while playing with written Kabbalah along with some creepy residue from Ancient Egypt all the way back to the Groves of Ur. Although thousands of people from different countries are protesting the Gaza situation they find their governments doing nothing because in secrecy they are all working on a plan that has NOW the name of the NWO or simply OWN a.k.a ZIONISM. “Own” is actually the correct pronunciation of the word we know as “ON”. “ON” was Oanes the main Deity worshipped in Babylon and Heliopolis. The “ON” has embedded itself so deep into our words we find when we need a light we must turn it “ON” thus a false light is created. All units of energy contain the word “ON” in it because “ON” is a type of power for the Elite for example Neutron, Proton, Electron, Tachyon, and Orgone, to name only a few.

The real mind control is people are not dealing with their Spiritual condition they are holding on to Spiritual beliefs that they in fact live contrary to everyday. Many Spiritual beliefs contradict each other all in the same book and since the sub-conscious mind has picked this up by more of intuition, it is generally not dedicated to religion, while the conscious mind which becomes diseased by the ego, is. Thus it will “play church” just to say that it is better than most and will be slaved, I mean saved by the God when He returns.

Reason 135: Contrary to what most people believe Jewish “Holy Men” do not support Zionism, they recognize it as an infesting plague rotting away the morals and culture of the 12 Tribes. However they are not part of the Israeli political party so their words are not heard.

In Genesis Chapter 3 it says and then the Sons of God, plural, saw the daughters of women. Since it is clearly indicated that there is more than one “Son of God” why does the New Testament insist all of a sudden that there is only one Son. Not to mention in the Book of Hebrews located in the New Testament it even says that Jesus was from the Order of Melchizedeks the Priests of Ha Elyon also indicating that he was an Initiate and not even the most powerful of his Order. These Melchizedeks lead directly to Sirius. The Melchizedeks have always been involved in the deeper esoteric course of our future. Those who have come into the spotlight representing the Melchizedeks have always been on a higher Spiritual level bringing portents of an impending visitation by the Sirians and the Annunaki. The two men of our time openly representing the Melchizedeks are Drunvalo Melchizedeks and Dr. Malachi Z. York the former is still conducting deep initiations in Peru, last time I checked, and the later is jailed in Denver Colorado super max for 140 years for several counts of child molestation which I know for a fact he committed. It took the F.B.I. 30 years to find that out but they can catch a bootlegger in a minute.

It is clear the extraterrestrial card is about to be played. There are several documents about a future staged invasion by the Beings that have already been here that are not humanoid. Basically it seems the Unseen Hand wants to step a little from the shadows for the next phase of their plan. The “arrivals” will serve to unite the world under one common enemy, the Aliens. This will bring about various systems that will ensure everyone remains safe, traceable, and immune to foreign viruses through vaccine. Just recently the Swine Flu scare made millions go and get injected with not only a foreign virus but whatever else is in the vaccine. One should be very careful of these types of scares that force you to go and get vaccinated because of fear of catching the disease. In the vaccination there are mind, DNA, and health altering drugs that will have various effects as we continue into the New Age.

281.—Probable Form of the Ark of the Covenant.—Exod. xxv.

Reason 136: The Melchizedeks are similar to the Levite Priest put over taking care of the personal needs of the Unseen One. When they manifest into flesh they are always carrying out a main agenda and their information tends to be several cuts above the rest. Drunvalo states that we should expect the Sirians to begin returning by the end of this year. Malachi York was one of the first men to bring information of Nibiru. Dr. York introduced the religion Nawabu to the world thus bringing light to the whole Sumerian ennead of Anu a great misguidance to African Americans.

When one takes a look at the Bible in the Old Testament you are immediately confronted with a God who demands large sacrifices of animals. Still many fail to make the connection that animal sacrifice is Black Magic. Those closely involved in the inner order tend to have dark characteristics because they must participate in these senseless sacrifices of cruelty. I noticed even in the Islamic faith an animal must be sacrificed during weddings, holidays, and various occasions. Why do we continue such practices? The ancient law even says if it can run from you don't eat it, look upon it, can it feel pain, now see yourself taste death. The Creator made many things for man and woman to marvel and cherish so their character may be pleasing and entertaining to you.

Now would be the time to get to the root of where much of the power of the Zionist movement lies. That becomes as easy as looking at the name Solomon to see how all this connects. When the works of Solomon were introduced it involved the evoking of demons. The more popular book is the Keys to Solomon removed from his sepulcher. Solomon himself proclaims in the Bible that he built the Temple with the assistance of demons in which he had subdued and put under control with a ring that was given to him by the God of the Bible. “Sol” is Latin for the Sun, “Om” is Sanskrit for the alternate Sun, and “On” is Sumerian/Babylonian for Oanes. Many adepts learn that the name is a sign of collaboration between three different Brotherhoods that decided to combine forces and knowledge to achieve complete dominance over the world. Solomon brought it all together. Solomon not only wandered after Ashtoreth he also sacrificed once a year to Bel. Jewish works further claim that Solomon was rebuked for doing these things but was absolved nonetheless.

While Solomon was ruler Kings and Wise Men came from all over just to hear his words and see his accomplishments thus many were induced into a deeper version of mysticism that involved commanding the lower Genii. When one thinks the Solar Deities are the Evil ones and the Moon Deities are the nice ones they still haven’t gotten the picture. All of these Energies seek to master what will serve them often times by fooling the worshipper into actually believing they are in control. As I was told by someone very wise Demons are strong enough to hurl men far lengths, they are not your companions and you cannot trust them. They are jealous and seek respite until the Day if you but knew Iblis (Satan) said he was made of Smokeless Fire, stronger than flesh, thus he would not be a friend to man. Failing to realize we are created in the Image of the Most High showed he lacked reason and was deluded by pride so We stripped him of his Jewels and his Beauty and placed him in the darkness.

Indeed we where made aware that when trying to duplicate the power of our Most High Majesty ” the imposter Nakash”, pointed all the people who found themselves not sure of their origin, to the direction of a dying Sun who is Shamash called also Samael. Yes it was that dismal light which proclaims itself as sustainer of this Earth and rises every morning in full 90 degrees. This faint hue the “uncounted” perceived as the Splendid One incessantly wanting to make their God visible and not seeking sensibility and reason. Even great Egypt was caught worshiping only what they perceived in clear view impatient they where and they failed utterly, trapped in the world of no return thus they beckon others to join them in misery. They are still known by the wise and chaste to be misguided death dealers residing even now by ritual and pact in the lowest places. Their abode is nothingness they are leechers of life and feast on those who are misled into the wants of material matter.

Just as always the female role is kept secret. It was actually Saba/Sheba who is Balkis who taught Solomon the Wisdom of the Stars. Saba actually means Star or Seven thus the Seven Stars or Pleiades. The Koran tells of a people called the Sabians who would make good converts. I found that Saba was more of a energy like Sothis, and not an actual woman. Sheba was a temple in Ethiopia not a physical Queen. The physical Queen of the time was Makedah who had as her consort the converted Eunuch Candace who commanded Elephants. The Elephant was a sacred Deity in Ethiopia they have many temples to commemorate the Elephant although all books say the meaning of these temples have been lost. The ancient elephant is called Mastodon this is where our word Master comes from. This is like the woolly Mammoth looking Elephant. Even hearing the name Makedah brings Oprah Winfrey's movie The Color Purple to mind. In the movie when they go back to Africa they are singing this song "Ain't no ocean ain't no seas, Makedah dah, can keep my sister away from me, Makedah dah". This was sung while a blood letting ritual and scarring was taking place.

There is nothing new under this Sun. Now that information portals are opening it is much easier to connect the dots and see that we have been lied to profusely since day one. This should be enough for one to realize they cannot trust what others say and must investigate it for themselves. Everything that I bring forth I can prove even at times down to the Quantum level. Those who are at the head of many religious circles are pushing propaganda that they cannot validate the origin of thus everyone is told to have blind faith. If my charge is allowed to continue it will be amazing to watch them attempt to answer questions about their connections with what you have seen so far. Now is the time media such as Myspace, Facebook, Youtube, Scribd, and various other free information channels can be exploited to actually reverse their otherwise useless brain high jacking effects.

Once information like this begins to leak there are others who are the siblings, spouses, and workers of various individuals they will now know are affiliated with spiritual corruption. When they figure out they have been used and lied to, they will begin releasing information that could have never been obtained by any other means. Such as a Masters copy of a High Initiates Protocols that may have been kept in the private possession of the family of a long deceased Master Mason. As I said before we are hacking Morpheus and soon he will tell us everything. Their devilish doings will bring forth their ruin just in time for the Cosmic showdown.

Reason 137: This Temple of Sheba is actually below ground. Nubia became Lower Egypt maintaining the Pantheism of the Pharaohs even when it was lost to the common world. Solomon, who was clearly of Hibiru descent, entreated Balkis to give him the Wisdom of the Stars and the doctrines of the Underworld. With these instructions what is now modern Christianity was given more form. The Ethiopic books of the Bible predated all other works. The Ethiopic books became the main resource for writing many versions of the Bible in other languages. The most recent story of the death and resurrection seems to be plagiarized from their books of another Savior and his Virgin mother who was black. Mary and Jesus are modeled after them.

Oprah Winfrey we know to be Initiated. Not only did she endorse Barack Obama which gave him the edge over McCain, she also has an entertainment company called Harpo which is her name backwards this is known as backwards magic. Horus, is the Christ-like savior of Egypt in which Barack emulates. Horus is also called Harpocrates. In Chicago where Oprah and Obama both hail from they have the famous “L” or EL Train. This train runs across the ley lines of Chicago in some type of Masonic pattern. Obviously this book will have to expand out into other editions where I can detail more of what’s going on. The more I write the more I see how much has to be written, however, something must get to the people now. I want the reader to know that even if some of this seems hazy now just keep with it and you will see the pieces connect. I’m not telling you anything but what has been unveiled to me. With that being said I’m intentionally cutting the book short and we will call this the first edition.

Several mind control “Triggers” were used when the Elite made the moves to make Barack Obama President. In several movies that made it to the box office before Barack came into the spotlight they showed the President of the United States as an African American. Those movies were made to be favorable box office hits and the viewer was then set in the fertile soil for the future move. This way it almost seems like it already happened when the actual scenario starts to take place. This makes people more comfortable in thinking it was their idea. Many of these types of methods were learned from German mind control scientist and were put to the test in the CIA's Project MKUltra. Their work on compartmentalizing the brain was phenomenally riveting.

Reason 138: This is how suggestive mind control works. The "Dream" poster was to "Trigger" the feeling of Martin Luther King Jr. getting African Americans to believe that they would finally be treated with justice when Barack came into Office. Since African Americans don't generally vote, not believing in such nonsense as politics, this time they showed up at the pools which caused the Republican Party, who always vote, to be outnumbered. Although they could always just cheat and rig the vote, it is better when it is a conscious decision by the people. This way a pact or agreement is made thus the outcome will be entirely the fault of the Voter for participating in the "El"ection. As also seen here they prepped everyone first through the Media for the African American President who is really an incarnate of Pharonic energy.

We will discuss briefly a topic that is way out of the box, my hangout. Since the inner core of these societies have mastered death and resurrection they know how to reincarnate into this world again and assume various roles of leadership. Below I'm showing profound proof of this. Remember many people were lured into these Occult Circles by the promise of consecutive lives. I believe for some that promise was kept due to their particular position on the Pyramid. I doubt that those on the bottom of the Pyramid enjoyed such mystical prestige; let us look at those who may be closer to the top of the Pyramid.

Reason 139: Once you hear real truth it's much stranger than fiction. When addressing the Nation from the Whitehouse Obama will stand in a Pyramid which will be on the floor below the podium traced in Gold. In the magic evocation of Entities the Apparition will appear in the Triangle drawn by the Magician, if the Magician stands in the Triangle he becomes the vessel for the apparition to communicate through. For a novice, standing inside the Triangle can result in death as the Spirits that are not trained, then tamed, will tear apart the Magician. The Adept strikes fear in the heart of the Spirits by having in their possession certain things such as daggers, swords, jewels, crooks, rings, herbs, and various other consecrated magical items designed for such purposes.

Some of the Secret organizations were known to possess the secret of bringing one back in contact with their double. This was of the greatest value because it gave the Initiate the natural powers associated with being completely balanced and assembled or re-membered. This also took place in the Pyramid while lying in the Sarcophagus. This also gives the Initiate the ability to sing, dance, and act to an amazing degree of perfection since they are now using the side associated with perfect articulation and true genius. Those who are still “split” marvel at the accomplishments of these people and become fans, groupies, gopis, and worshippers of these false idols who use the secret to their advantage.

Reason 140: In my studies into the Occult there can be only two explanations for this type of "Doppelganger Effect". Either the same Spirit has possessed the same individuals that look similar to each other, as strong Spirits are known to change the facial appearance and sometimes bodily features of the Host. Or they have actually pulled their Doppelgangers from the parallel and are living double lives. Both of these scenarios can be accomplished by a very skilled Adept. In each photo there are 2 different people.

When King Nebuchadnezzar entered Jerusalem he set the Temple of Solomon on fire. When asked about it he said he was carrying out the will of Marduk. This would solve one of the biggest issues we face with deciphering who is on what side because this shows that although both of these Sects appeared to worship the Sun, Planets, and Serpents it is in all actuality some worship Serpents, and others Amphibians. Still others worship the Horned Gods like the Ram, Ramses, Ra, Mendes, Tet, etc. The Bible says that the dragon had several heads and they began to devour one another until two remained. Of course we find the tales of Solomon in much of the Hebraic lore and in the Masonic Rites in which they confess that Solomon was the first Master Mason. The Temple itself was known as the "Double Square".

When locating the ancient depictions of the real Solomon, which are very hard to locate, I came across two, one by the Russians, and the other by the Rastafarians. Solomon is depicted in both the motif and the bask relief as half man half reptilian or amphibian. Religions like Islam, Catholicism, Christianity, and Judaism all support and defend Solomon as the wisest King, so it is better to throw them all in the bag together. When reading works like the Testament of Solomon which details his dealings with nefarious demons who are made to confess their crimes and then put in service of building the temple, it becomes obvious all who studied the Gnostic doctrines of these groups became Magicians, Wizards, called then Wizar and various other types of Mystics.

Once Israel subdues the complete portion of the Promised Land it fulfills a much awaited prophecy which is obtaining all the land that was originally promised to them by the God of the Bible. It becomes obvious that the God of the Bible promotes the Israelites to kill in order to obtain what clearly belonged to someone else before they invaded. This becomes no different then what the so-called founding father of the Americas did to the indigenous that were there first. Even the Hebrew Book of Light states that the Children of Israel who wandered around the wilderness and never made it to the Promise Land were those who found favor with the true God thus they gained an attachment to the wilderness and nature verses a city flowing with Milk and Honey. Milk and Honey were just symbolism for the Cow and the Bee the two animals sacred to the Egyptians. We now see returning to the Promise Land was more like becoming the Egyptians for the Hebrews based upon the way they are ruling now. There is absolutely no excuse for such barbaric behavior unless of course you are serving a blood thirsty Deity which brings up the point again about sacrifice.

How can it escape a person's judgment that if something is asking you to slaughter thousands of cattle and various other animals into a huge furnace of fire it could possibly not be something negative? Putting yourself in the moment is key. Throwing a living cow in a furnace 10 times heated would sound horrible. Just think of thousands of them back to back mooing to the Moon like crazy. This would not smell like the drive through at Burger King since the fur was not removed. Some will say "Well Jesus did away with animal sacrifice" and I will say so we moved on to child sacrifice? This God now tells his so-called only son to sacrifice himself? No parent in their right mind would participate in such demonic activity, thus many in history not in their "right" mind did, this is the drawback of only using your "left" mind. This does not come up only once but at least twice in the modern Bible where Abraham is also told to sacrifice Isaac paying no mind to the strict rules against child sacrifice in the Bible. For the God to even use this as some test seems unethical and hypocritical.

The behavior of an individual will ultimately determine what they are about, so through treachery and subterfuge the world has been set in array. Once the prophecy is fulfilled of Greater Israel it indicates it will be time for their next move which is to rebuild the third temple of Solomon in Jerusalem using the demons again of course. The New Jerusalem is spoken of in Revelations coming down from the sky and that cannot be fulfilled until the third Temple is complete. What remains of the last Temple of Solomon in Jerusalem is only the Wailing Wall which is why the Zionist are so fond of it. Obama was even instructed to pay a trip to it yamiluke and all. The proposed location of the new temple is where the Dome of the Rock, a sacred Islamic Mosque, sits now. It is known that if something happens to the Dome of the Rock, Muslims beyond number will become extremely violent and spread real terror upon the Earth such as it has never been seen.

Reason 141: The Zionist, who are now making the rules as they go, intend to rebuild the Final Temple of Jerusalem. If this Temple is allowed to be completed it marks the end of this world as we know it. This of course is in the prophecy that has so far been correct up until this very moment. All that is left is to remove the Dome of the Rock.

This becomes the ultimate setup for the Humans by these bloodthirsty Deities. The Islamic prophecy reads that when the “Ma”hdi returns he must have his feast in the Dome of the Rock before he emancipates the Muslims. The Muslims are charged with making sure the Dome of the Rock is available at all times just in case he returns. On the flip side unless the Dome of the Rock is removed and the Temple of Solomon rebuilt, New Jerusalem cannot descend from the Mount.

This of course the Zionist will not stand for and neither will the Muslims. So this equals a no win situation for these two brothers who have been fighting forever and the clock is ticking down for them both. They have also dragged everyone else into their battle through religion although they refuse to give the masses the full details of what took place on Tiamat the enemy of Marduk. So let us look closer at the similarities of these faiths to see that this has gone far beyond belief in the Most High and is about domination, destruction, and chaos. Do keep in mind this is all an inside job and the people that war with each other are the sacrifice.

Reason 142: The Dome of the Rock. This is the most sensitive spot in the world. If it's touched it will be like getting into a small box with thousands of Queen Hornets who are protecting their larvae. Many Muslims have lost the focal point, their language was one of the first codes to the Matrix so they face a different matter that the Most High will have to deal with personally. I will just say when one is wise and ready to grow they will be flexible like a reed thus they will bend a little for Innerstanding, this is growth. If One is brittle they will break the moment something comes that blows surprise towards them thus in a world full of surprises they do not fair well and the Experience eludes them. I know this because I was the most brittle and the Most High soaked me first so that I would not break under the Truth which is heavy for man and woman and must be given in stages. On this ladder there are those who are coming up and those who are going down. They now use "El"evators so if the Guided do not rally behind the one with the Idea which comes before the Name then they will not see "ABAD" eternity, without end and may find their Companions in the Fire which is Purification. I'm just an agent myself dictating faithfully what has been revealed to me by the Most High who controls all things and which all must draw their substance as all expect to take their next breath but see it not before it is goes into the body.

First off the Temple of Solomon has already been reconstructed and I will show you two of them although many more exist, they serve as portals. The wormhole amongst many things allows a person to travel anywhere on Earth in an instant. Not just anyone can travel through the wormhole. The Auric field of the person has to be enhanced. It is said the elements on the wall of the wormhole dissolve anything they come in contact with that is not geometrically configured properly, this is necessary to disassemble and reassemble the atoms in perfect form. The common worshiper is told the Temple it yet to be rebuilt, what a hoax. One of those Temples is the Rosslyn Chapel and the other is in Winnipeg Manitoba the heart connection of Canada and North America. In sacred geometry a double square makes 8 points thus linking the double square to the 8 pointed Star of Ilu.

The Rosslyn Chapel founded by "Sir" William Saint Claire called Sinclair (Prodigus) Knight of the Cockle and Golden Fleece changed their name to Roskeyln which later became Rosslyn, Sir Henry, and "Pent"land. This is also the lineage of Sir William, the first Grand Master Mason of Scotland. The Chapel contains 22 Masonic marks. The rights of Master Mason was granted to William by King James II, the two were great friends. This family became so famous and respected they were even allowed to coin money. Passing three times around the limestone or boundary stone of Rosslyn was known to grant whoever was allowed to do it, unique abilities. The Temple was always guarded to prevent anyone from doing this without the leave of the hierarchy until the Chalice was removed. The Temple was a great resort for Gypsies who ever inhabited the place and the “physical” Holy Grail was stored for some time in the Chapel until it became unsafe and had to be moved.

Reason 143: Most are un-invited to the hyperdimensional party, how I see it is the Earth is near its regeneration cycle just like after the close of Atlantis and Lemuria when the Earth laid dormant on the surface for thousands of years before it could be habitable again. The Elite are only taking care of their own thus a few must come together and make a bridge to higher planes or get left behind.

The Muslims and Jews bear witness that Abraham was their father and all races descend from him, which I pointed out earlier is absurd. I found the stories of Abraham and Sarah to be none other than the stories of “Ab” meaning Father and “Braham”, a Brahman. Brahman and his wife Saraswati can also be found in the Hindu Paranas which is much older than the Bible and of course the Koran. The Brahman’s were a group of Beings that leaned more toward the masculine side and may be some of the first Sun worshippers themselves being Sons of the Son which meant endowed with “discovered” immortality. This also means they have completed a succession of incarnations in which they know of their previous existence and are continuing their cycle of Ethereal Development. Beings that are aware of this are far more advanced than those who cannot remember past lives. Imagine what another 100 years of memory would do for your perspective of things.

The Bible’s composition itself is a hodgepodge of several ancient books and powerful works accomplished by various individuals, especially of Sumerian origin, all combined in one final novel next to the Koran. Both of these books say pretty much the same thing. The Koran is a book of repetition, repeating the same poetic words over and over in various ways about the penalties for not serving Allah. It pretty much boils down to being completely obliterated by fire and demons that rip the flesh apart, then brought back to life, and obliterated again for the sake of the pain. This is to take place for an eternity; talking about scare tactics. Other penalties for sins are described in such ghastly detail the Believer is generally in fear of Allah. Both religions maintain they have delivered the final book and all other books that do not bear witness should not be entertained by the Believer. The Koran bears witness to the Old Testament and what it calls the Injil which is the New Testament as being authentic works of the same God, thus whirling the two faiths together even tighter.

Both Books claim to be storehouses of Numeric and Alpha Numeric Codes in which only those who are trained in Kabbalah or Abjad can decipher. I read the Bible three times from cover to cover and it was only until the third time that the book “unlocked” one must agree that most Christians have never read the complete Bible. They may have come close, but skip books like Leviticus and “Numbers”. In these books there is lengthy detailing of numbers especially in the section concerning the building of the Temple.

All these numbers are actually the Codes that can be deciphered to bring forth immense amounts of Gnostic information. All letters in Hebrew double as numbers so the numbers actually spell words. Those words were the names of various Energies related to controlling whatever was being discussed in that particular scripture in some symbolic way. For example if it was 13 bushels of wheat, whatever that translated to in Hebrew was the God or Goddess of wheat lets say IS. Furthermore it should not escape the reader’s attention that the Priests of this time had to be from the tribe of Levi, Levi is also an anagram for Evil which makes even more sense when you consider the role of the Leviathan that seems to be playing a heavy role in controlling our mind especially while sleep. Leviathan is said to also be Cthulhu. This name Levi given to the Priests called in Hebrew Cohen, another anagram for Enoch, can't get anymore obvious but as the Yogis say people are sleep walking in an illusion. The Spanish word Noche which is Night is also an anagram for Enoch.

Reason 144: There are in fact several Arks constructed for the purpose of keeping items Sacred to the Deity. There was the Ark of the Covenant, the Ark of Ra, the Ark of Mary and numerous others. The word Arch means Bo or a vessel such as Noah's Ark thus the original Arks were used as crafts. Contact could also be accomplished by these devices through transport, hologram, or wormhole. Just as we upgrade constantly these Beings have upgraded also, imagine the difference in a Cessna and a Stealth Bomber.

The dispute between these two nations remains partly due to the issue of the birthright that was stolen from Ishmael although he was the eldest son. It goes on that Abraham built the first Alter with the assistance of his eldest son Ishmael who later became the father of the 12 Tribes of the Arabs Ad, Samud, Jadis, Tasm etc. This alter was known as the Ka'bah of Mecca. In the Koran Solomon talks to Birds and even commands a Jinn, Ifrit, to go and steal the throne of Queen Makedah of Ethiopia who was said to be worshipping the Sun.

Solomon's gift for communicating with birds can also be compared to the highly mysterious Language of the Birds which was known to be given to those who had reached higher Spiritual levels and thus received instruction from angels. In certain books I've watched Magician after Magician stumble over the origin of this language most saying it was bequeathed by the Angels. This language is really The Language of the Bards more properly known in the highest circles as SKALDSKAPARMAL. This is said to be the language spoken before the confusion at the Tower of Babel. The knowledge of this language bequeaths the possessor with the ability to communicate with all animals. The original Bards were half man half bird just like you see in Reason 131. Because they had wings they became easily associated with Angels but they are the Fallen Ones the beginning and end of our troubles.

When studying Islam I noticed certain inconsistencies right away. The main one being the story concerning the intelligence level of Prophet Mohammad. It is said that Mohammad could neither read nor write and this put special emphasis on the Miracle, the Koran, purported to be given to him by an the Angel Gabril/Gabriel. After all, it lends a lot more credibility if a man who can neither read nor write all of a sudden appears with one of the greatest Spiritual works of the time, rich in poetic meaning and Spiritual dialog. The original Book was said to be numerically equivalent to the number 19 and was never translated into the vulgar languages. This book remains protected by the Sudanese till this day.

Many anomalies exist within the book itself like all the chapters when added up produce a number divisible by the number 19. How many times Allah is mention in the whole Koran that number is divisible by 19. The first chapter Al-Fatiha when said correctly causes the tongue to touch the roof of the mouth 19 times. It exceeds a normal person's capability after awhile to keep the consistencies of 19's going. Even our modern computers could not do it since a story is also unfolding while the perfect numbers roll in place. This became the sign of the Muslims that Muhammad was Guided and in contact with the Great Deity Allah through His Host the Angel Gabril. The Angel Gabril is known to be the of the Moon Gabriel. It seems where most of the Scholars and Spiritual leaders of today get lost is thinking that these religions are so separate.

Also in question is the mandatory ceremony of Aqiqah established by Muhammad himself which consist of a sacrifice to Allah in the name of the child, two he-goats for a boy, and one he-goat for a girl. This incantation must be said during the sacrifice and feast "O Allah! I offer to thee instead of my own offspring life for life, blood for blood, head for head, bone for bone, hair for hair, and skin for skin. In the Name of the Great Allah, I do sacrifice this goat". Why does it appear that Allah would even want a child to be sacrificed and something must expiate that? This is something that continues to reoccur in the history of mans involvement with these Gods. All of this I believe shows the reasoning of mankind is deluded. Even the people who are said to be the most devote in purity. If there is a God that wants us to sacrifice our children to Him then we have a war at hand. I'm saying this after millions of children have already been sacrificed and thousands continue to disappear. Who will face this foe? Bomar has fastened his Armor and who will join him?

In Islam it says that Muhammad married Khadejah who was a rich businesswoman who choose Muhammad to run all of her business dealings because he was a wiz with numbers. This begins to shake the foundation of Muhammad being illiterate seeing that if he knew how to add and subtract he also knew how to read and write, remember Arabic also has the same letters for numbers. There was no doubt two Mohammads existed during that time. One was teaching pure Monotheism and the other was an invention of a man named Musalymit, a political leader who saw the charisma of the real Muhammad and attempted to entice him to be a political leader. Muhammad, they said, would have no of it so Musalymit became his sworn enemy ultimately succeeding in getting Muhammad poisoned or was it the other Muhammad? Do you think they could poison the Guided? Did they not say We could drink the poison of vipers and it would hath no effect? We are not the body it is only the vehicle to traverse this dimension and it is sluggish and moveth about like a square wheel going uphill.

The Ka'bah itself in history was used at various times for idol worship although it is said the Mohammad came to do away with such things. The Ka'bah had been destroyed several times by razes, fires, and natural causes through history. On those occasions it was always men from Egypt of High Nobility who paid to rebuild it. The connection between Egypt and the Ka'bah is very heavy. It is known better as "the Shrine" and has been an object of veneration for hundreds of years. Laws exist such as if you walk around it 70 times all your sins are forgiven, if you pray in special section you get a better position in Paradise. As children these stories can be fascinating but as adults we should know better. No amount of times walking around a cube will expiate you from wrong doing; life itself is the biggest example of that. Things are taken at times from the Ka'bah and sold, like the water from the well of Zem Zem and dust from the covering.

Reason 145: A great deal of "Illumination" came from the Arabs and their affiliations with the Genies and Jinns called also in Hindu, Jaan meaning Devils. The religions of the world all connect and it is only the blinded that hold fast to their faith while talking about another. The true belief is internal. Pictured here Ila-Al-Ilahu, the Muslims are forbidden to carve images of the God for purposes of secrecy and sanctity. They used designs and their rich language to express what they viewed. Notice the Swastika on the Medallion. We see the same thing with Rael. Are you beginning to see that the inner circle is not as separate as they claim? It is the people who are divided defending the Gods as if they need the protection of Man, offering to them as if they eat food and spend money.

The Interior of the Ka'bah

Reason 146: There is no doubt that the Ka'bah itself is on a major Leyline. Islam contains so many Sects from Sunni, Shiite, Sufi, Wahab, etc. its inner circle of mysticism remains unable to be included in the general religion itself. By this I mean the Arab world abounds with Sorcery, and many such practices however it is easy to pin that on the individual not the Believer since the Koran forbids such things. I believe one of the Four Gates of the world to be contained here. The belief in one God is also found in this faith however I question if the 1 God has a 5 letter name that is tossed about before acts of vengeance. Likewise the sacrifices are senseless and should be treated as such.

On of the most sacred parts of the Ka'bah is the Stone Jewel placed in the corner as seen above. In another more detailed account of jewels falling from the sky Lucifer in legend was struck by the Great Angel so hard it knocked the jewels out of his crown and they fell to Earth and those who recovered them were said to gain magical powers. This does sound a little more like a camp fire tale however there are 12 known Synergy Crystals that are said to enhance the human ability, they are Moldavite, Danburite, Tanzanite, Azuizulite, Phenacite, Herderite, Tibetan Tektite, Satyaloka Quartz, Petalite, Brookite, Natrolite, and Scolecite. Most of these stones are Meteorites that have fallen from space throughout time. Whether they came out of the crowns of Angels could be metaphoric. They are made of foreign elements hardened into glass while entering our atmosphere.

In Catholicism there are four great Angels Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, and Uriel of whom the latter is sometimes swapped for other Angels but at least the other three stay the same. If you go to a Baptist church they will assure you they have nothing in common with Catholicism yet when the main prayers are taking place the names of the Angels are sometimes mentioned and they are of course the same. In Islam the same thing happens and even in the New Age movement one often receives emails from someone who has channeled the Arch Angel Michael who sends light into the grid as we make our transcendence into the beyond and all that mumbo jumbo. So what does this tell you? It's obvious that if the main workers for the religions have remained the same then all of the religions are in some way linked to the same source. Even deeper you will find that the name Michael means "one who is like God". If I remember correctly there was only one who pretended he was like the Most High and We hurled him from space. Some may believe this is a stretch to advocate that Michael may be a Fallen Angel, however, let us think again where the term Angel really comes from.

Reason 147: This is a well known painting of the Angel Gabril and Mohamamad that has survived since antiquity. It strikes me as odd that Gabril has black wings, which signifies a fallen Angel. In addition to this in several texts many men who went to the East to become mystics say that Baphomet and Mahomet where the same Being and were worshipped in mystic Islam. A Muslim would call such statements sacrilegious however Baphomet also has black wings. It seems that all the old religions are tied to horned Gods some way or another, the Age of Ram.

First off it should be mentioned that in the Hebrew doctrines they classify their Angelic Beings as Aralim, Chesmalim, Aphanim, Ophanim, Malachim, Chioth Haqudush, etc. This means they do not group all their Spirit forces together and just call them all Angels in fact that term is foreign to them. This is because in encountering these Beings through evocation the Magicians and Cabbalist learned that many of them were very different from the others so they categorized them as such. Again the term Angel comes from the word Angle. It appears only Fallen Angels respond when evoked. In other writings it says many tribes wandered after what they called the Chaldean Baalim, although it has not been determined that all the “IM’S” mentioned above can be grouped under that one title it seems highly possible. In other cultures Angels are given names such as Sukallin and Amesha Spentas.

The main concern is the actual uses given for these Beings. It describes that some reveal treasure, some make women fall in love with you, some give you amnesty etc. I would highly consider again why would a High Vibration Being want to grant a human undeserved favors just because they knew how to do a ritual. There is of course much more at stake when entering into leagues with these types of Spirits and most have unleashed a never ending karmic sea-saw for tampering with spiritual forces for selfish means.

Reason 148: Since their plans have reached completion they are now prepared to tell the world bluntly about their involvement with Angels, Demons, Baalim, Gregori, Nephelim, Rephaim, and who knows what else. We can assume there are always things that will not be talked about until they happen, just as its never good to tell anyone your desires before they come to pass. Be watchful of these Watchers. Some things I have put direct emphasis on and may have been a little repetitive, I have done this on purpose so that it may stick with you. Spirituality and Science as a couple have first birthed monsters just as Cain was the first child of Adam and Eve. It is these monsters that have become very strong thought forms moving about on their own will and totally uncontrollable by those who originally brought them forth. We have been given the task of removing them. Intel has now released it Nehalem/Nepalim computer chip.

The Geometry which has now been placed over our Earth Grid through Crop Circles created by sound devices like the HAARP, have allowed the Elite to erect a new grid which has been termed “The Earth Consciousness Grid”. This keeps Humans somewhat trapped in the Matrix until they learn the methods of building up strength to break out. As you see they call the new system the Internet or “Internal Net”. The biggest hint is the Ethernet cable, why is it given such a Name? Ether itself means Spirit so why is a term like that being used in comparison to computers? Since the Ozone “Oz Zone” layer is melting there is no telling what the potential is if it’s dissolved. Favor is often disguised as misfortune.

Reason 150: It becomes obvious that Crop Circles are not created by benevolent Alien forces from space trying to communicate to us. They are created by the same Hyperdimensional Tricksters that plague our Planet and continue to fool us with their lies and God-like Technology.

After examining the two faiths of Islam and Judaism it became obvious the one was holding the power of an older God from the Age of the Ram, the other the power of the Lion and the Serpent. Getting all the details becomes burdensome as many lies are woven in with the truth to discredit the other side much like the modern Republican and Democrat candidate scenario. This becomes the power one has over you once they can tell you what happened in the past and you have no way of proving it. They even tell a person how long a second is thus what time it is. That type of control is mind control in its purest degree very hard to notice due to its subtlety and necessity.

Reason 151: The Elite are playing mind games on a stage wasting our time, they will assume any role to sway opinions as necessary, and this is master chess with an occasional Gambit, Lincoln.

This false light that has come to the world has deceived many. It is the same false light that says it has come to illuminate those who are humble and worship it. Light in the Latin is Luce named after Lucifer the bright mourning star or Venus. The strategy they are using is to give you two choices in which both are no good. The word Democratic taking its root from the Arabic word Demos or Demon and Republican taking its root from the word Reptile or Rephaim. So the choice is Reptiles or Demons you choose. To prove this one simply has to note how many times leaders and Presidents have been photographed making the sign of Baphomet the Goat God of Mendes. Due to bloodlines of the Presidents of the U.S. having Merovingian origin they are definitely blue blood reptilian hybrids walking around the White House and Parliament hailing from the Orion constellation, Venus, Agharta, Mars, Vulcan and who knows where else. Ruling over us pretending they are like us. This is why they continue with this bloodbath with the slightest show of regret or resolution. I'm sure many reading this are familiar with David Icke's work so it is unnecessary to reiterate what he has been explaining for years in detail thus I have been mainly covering how the blending took place.

Reason 152: Here is what commonly happens. Because the Light cannot comprehend the Darkness many who do not have such strong evil inclinations refuse to believe anyone, especially their leaders who have such charisma, could be involved in such a vile plot of enslaving humanity. The recent Zeitgeist movie, obviously directed by the Elite, shifts the blame of our current world state on the by product of humanity making the wrong decisions in regards to how the Planet is preserved, thus their solution is the "Venus" Project. Anything related to Venus you will find the Dark Lord in the midst of. This is why it gives you power to know such things so you cannot be easily fooled as the masses often are. The same companies that were talked about on the first Zeitgeist were those who funded it, they have no shame in admitting that. Highlight the problem, provide a solution.

First off the term itself is Animist. An Animist is a person that emulates worships, and sometimes mates with animals in order to gain the ability of that particular animal. In Africa there was no limit to how many tribes were Animist and much of the information on how to do such things came from Africa. The ancients played a dot-to-dot with the stars in the heavens making animal outlines in the constellations based on the energy they “felt” was emitting from the stars. One of the main tribes known to do this were the Nubians from the Temple of Sheba discussed earlier. It is true the actual Garden of E.DIN was somewhere in Kush the lush land of Nubia where the 4 Rivers flowed and the Queen of the South was in position as ruler over the “horn” of Africa.

Remember Nubia had all the gold mines that made the Pharaohs rich beyond their imaginations, that is of course when they could subdue it and collect Tribute. The Nubians proved to be a challenge as the Annuals record lengthy wars between the Nubians and Egypt. Even Alexander the Great, the Legendary “Two Horn”, known by the Arabs as Dul Qurnain who built the wall to keep the hordes away from the Holy Land was turned back at Nubia when faced with Candace commanding Elephants in legions for war. This I believe fueled much of the “animosity” between the Europeans and the darker Nubians which they later enslaved and dragged the Americas.

In the end Nubia took over Egypt completely right around the time it was due to crumble anyway, just as Obama has taken over the U.S. The Nubians later inherited the “new version” of Christianity by Missionaries infesting their country. It is said in Arabian Prophecy that the Nubians will rise again and destroy the Ka’bah and it will never be restored. Ethiopia has Ether as its root, the people have smooth dark beautiful skin, silky hair, and lulling eyes. The first stories of the serpent who were called Nagas, were in Nubia first and then they migrated to Persia. They are called by the Nubians Negusi, which is a well respected last name in their country till this day.

Reason 153: The Naga are more in the image of the Serpents described in Japan and China rather than bipedal hybrids. As I said before the Serpent races are as vast as our own possibly a lot more diverse. It is clear man has inhabited this Planet, along with the serpents for thousands of years intermingling, we easily forget the Dinosaurs. Will there ever be a truce?

Walt Disney put so much work and emphasis on Animation because he was deeply involved in creating the framework for the new wave of animalistic mind control that began on a person as a child. Let us examine one story of the biggest cartoon maker in history Walt Disney. The story itself begins before Walt Disney steps on the scene but has to do with a certain man that Walt Disney was well acquainted with. This man grew up in Russia during hard times. In order for one to even seek the audience of the Queen or the Royal Court in these times, you had to discover something exceptionally useful for the Empire. If you were not of wealthy stock this was the only way to turn around an otherwise miserable life for you and your family as the Black Plague swept over the land. This gentleman deemed he would do it through the Occult and soon enough he discovered what was later called Phantasmagoria with the tag line “Optical Illusions and Mechanical works of Art”.

Reason 155: People are made to believe Disney was a big kid like we all wish to be playing in a fantasy world of Castles of Medieval lure with Dragons, Princesses, and talking mice. Disney, along with other very sick men positioned themselves to be the corrupters of the innocent youth. The fantasy world of Disney was the fantasy of a satanic pedophile that we all had to visit because our parents knew no better. What you don't know "can" hurt you.

Since I'm really in this for the children I have a special assignment to dethrone this Devil Disney. If we pull together as a people it should be because of things like this that hurt children no matter the color or race. He not only used Pedophilic suggestive mind control techniques in his films, his organization, obviously run by the Dark Lord himself, continues to put forth mind altering media that gets worse as time goes on. Phantasmagoria is the Art of evoking Demoniatic Spirits which obviously Disney knew all about since he wrote Fantasia. Taking a look at that movie now with your eyes open will reveal an entirely different picture versus what you may have perceived before. In the English language the play on the word "Kid" is obvious. A kid is a baby goat.

In the days when Phantasmagoria first began they lacked the T.V. so they accomplished it by smoke, pre-recorded sounds of actual torture, and lights. Showed above, many participants claimed they had never seen or heard anything so horrifying. They could not tell if the Demons were real or still a part of the light show. Of course the demons were real. On the back of many Disney titles it still contains the Trademark Phantasmagoria meaning this special art was used while making the film. Of course people thought this was incredible becoming lovers of horror. That was all an outward scheme and many suffered mental and spiritual damage while trenched in the frames of Wonderland.

This brings us to the Gregorian Chants. A long time ago it was discovered that when singing certain twisted hymnals you could actually bring the lower forms forth by sound. One would have to be a Master at singing these hymns perfectly and to this end the Masters of the Gregorian Chants were created. When you are listening to certain music from Gothic times always featured on the soundtracks of Disney films and many others, it is actually the Gregorian Chants playing at least in the background. Remember Gregori is another name for the Fallen Angels and is actually the creature Nimrod is always seen holding in his hand.

I cannot put enough emphasis on how powerful sound is and how it effects humans, animals, and even other Beings. The Chants have lead to possession in humans just as the Serpent can be charmed with a flute. Rap is now wrapping up the mind of the youth so their minds are so tied up they are immobilized, but not for long. Sound is also a key ability we can use. A frequency can be fired at the body causing all shells, lower life forms, to break free from the body. It is at that moment a person knows that they were actually on them. One can never know what it is like to be clean until they are truly washed, but not in the blood of a lamb, come on look what they are saying. This is not just a figure of speech, the sub-conscious mind has to make sense of it all and it does it literally.

Reason 156: On the top left you will see the Ancient Gregorian Hymnal used by the Holy See, 3 Horned Fleur de lis in correct position above the Venusian heart of Voodun. There is now one group of Masters of the Gregorian Chants that even perform in Las Vegas, people think it sounds just like good Opera. One of the Four Patriarchs of Catholicism was Gregori; he was with no doubt incarnate Gregori. He wrote the Hymnals, also keep it mind it was the evil Gregori who created the Calendar we are on, the Gregorian Solar Calendar. It is also known that when the Arabs visited the Russians to see if they would pay for mystical secrets the Russians made a large Banquet for the Shah, the actual menu I will be sure to put in the second edition, if there is one. While the Shah was stuffing himself the Russians were playing the Gregorian Chants in the other room. The Shah was put into a trance also known as Mesmerism and his tongue went lose telling them all the Secrets of Arabia. It was not long after that the Hoard covered their land and many fell before them, the wall could hold them no longer, its weakness revealed.

As said above many factions have come together under one roof by intermingling bloodlines. We will just call them the “V”. The V as a symbol is the Roman numeral 5. Five is more properly called “Penta” the “Pent” on Penta has the same meaning as the “Pent” on Ser”pent”. The original origin of the word “Pent” is a feather thus the word “Serpent” actually means “feathered snake”. This also links to our main strategic defense building the Pentagon which still means “feathered dragon/snake”. If you remember the movie The V the story line goes that some reptilian like Beings from another Planet came to Earth saying they could help us with technology but in all actuality they had come to take over our Planet and enslave everyone. They did this by infiltrating the government replacing various key people with clones until they could make willing servants of the rest. The only force opposing this was “The Resistance” the name of my first website before I even knew all of what I know now.

During the times of Oracles unity between the woman and the serpent was elevated and many women became worshippers of the God “S”. One of the most popular was Europa who was worshipped in Sidon. The time center of the Earth the Serpent wrapped itself around they call him Ouraborus. Europa moved to the island of Crete to establish a full serpent worship and occult training center. If you don’t believe this is a fact I will tell you a secret. The word is actually “Se”Crete” which also means venom that comes from the pores, a white puss or emission. The island of Crete also contains a place known as Gnosis and of course this is where the whole Gnosticism movement began which is where you find more roots of the Serpent. When looking at a statue of the Goddess Europa you will see her holding snakes in each hand. She is simply another part of the pyramid and the “Is” in Gnosis is the sign that Isis is present. Know Isis/Know Sis?
JESUS/IOSUS/ISIS/OSIS/OSIRUS/SIRIUS.

Reason 157: Indeed Old Ouraborus knows many things but it is a Deceiver trapped in the abyss of the Universe and will never ascend. Here is a secret, the planetary symbols you see on the right are all the Planets that are already in on the Agenda. On the left you will see the cycle of life. This cycle can be moved about fast or slow forward or reverse depending upon your outellect and intention, it is the wheel. Is it not better to be an ant when you need to eat and a mountain when you wish to rest? I will give you some advice, never serve anything that has been created and you will get far. Keep the Most High as your focal point only and you will fare well in the future. If you come to a fork in the road, go straight. I will not be with you long already my place has been prepared, I see it, and I long for it, if I must taste death I will dine with all courses.

The word "Present" is actually an anagram for Serpent. This means that every time you say to someone "I have a present for you" you are telling them you have a snake for them. This is why I became so persistent at cracking The Code because I realized that we owe our children to stand against this. Some adults will read this book and due to the mental and physical damage that each person has been put through all their life this work may at times fall on deaf ears, but the youth of today are clever and they sense something is up so this lets them know. Remember if they get our youth we have lost our greatest result, we must free them from the loop known also as the Halo.

With that being said I will explain a little of what has happened during our days as a child that has lead ultimately to most not being able to perceive what is right in front of them. This of course starts as a baby the moment that you exit the womb of your mother. While a child is in the womb it is in all actuality seeing in 5D. The reason this is possible is due to the baby looking through the water bag or amniotic fluid of the mother. Anyone that has seen Spirits often note that they appear more superfluous with no clear edges and at times gaseous. This is what the baby is seeing so it becomes easy for them to recognize the mother. They are looking more at the mothers design or pattern rather than her actual physical appearance.

When the child is born the damage begins through the procedures the doctors are using. Remember that Doctors are under the Oath of Caduceus and have sworn to uphold many things detailed in the Oath that most Doctors don't even understand what they really mean. It is almost like putting your right hand over your heart and pledging your allegiance to the flag. You don't really know what you just did, but that will not stop it from having an effect. WHAT YOU DON'T KNOW CAN HURT YOU. If the eye on a stove is on but you do not know it and put your hand on it, will it still burn you, of course. This is by no means saying that all Doctors are initiated into some Serpent mystery school and intend to kill off the youth, of course that would be extreme, but what they do has an effect and this is its ultimate intention whether they know it or not.

Those that created the backbone of the studies entailed, along with the procedures of medical care, were completely aware of what they set out to do as far as hindering the mental, physical, and Spiritual growth of people seeking their help. This has been done through their constant introduction of new medicinal "potions" more properly called "poisons". Along the way many practitioners notice several things that can be done much better and some even switch to becoming Naturopathic Doctors. Most remain involved and when they become Doctors they simply become prescribers of medication not healers. It becomes as easy as locating the symptom and then prescribing the drug. The drug company will be sure to let them know which drug takes care of what along with at times free vacations if they promote the drug.

I don't need to remark here about the many side effects of drugs, however, there is greater damaged done to the actual Chakra system of the person than anything else. For example when a person experiences heart problems Rejuvenators know that there is some type of blockage in the heart Chakra. This could be due to a lost loved one, intense stress, or various situations related to the heart. The correct healing method is to begin working on the persons heart Chakra so they can get clearance. This removes the Spiritual ailment from the soul which will in turn remove the physical ailment from the body. The physical ailment itself is just another method the body uses to tell a person about a mental or spiritual problem when it is not getting a solution for it.

This fact was known heavily in the mystery schools of the ancients, especially Egypt. These types of treatments free a person however and that is not the goal. They would rather begin to administer medicines that actually block Chakra centers giving the person a false sense of temporary relief. There are many more Chakra centers than just 7 and each play a unique roll. Blocking them will bring temporary relief but cause long term damage over time.

Another example is when one takes an Aspirin for headaches the Aspirin tells the brain to kill the headache sensation. This does not fix the reason why the headache originally occurred. When you do this too many times whatever was initially causing the headache will choose another center to convey the information of the problem which could then be the stomach. So the person may begin to experience stomach aches, then they will take something like Pepto Bismal which is more like a liquid Aspirin that dulls the stomachs senses blocking the Chakra and not curing the original problem. This goes on and on until the person is now taking drugs for everything, which will of course increase the problem. After awhile the over-the-counter drugs cease to work and the person finds they are very sick being totally polluted by over-the-counter drugs. So they move on to stronger prescription drugs.

Reason 158: Traditional Chinese Medicine, Reflexology, Colon Therapy, and several other techniques have showed Western Medicine is about Psychotropic Mind Drugs not Wellness.

When a baby is born the incandescent light located on most birth tables does extensive damage to the child's retina. This begins the process of stopping the child from naturally seeing other dimensions thus other life forms. Full spectrum lights are the only lights found not to cause damage to the eyes. If the child remains able to see other dimensions when it gets older it can easily see that this world is an Illusion. They can see all the different Entities that inhabit the world on a different vibration, children often call them “special friends”. Of course the agenda is to take this ability away from the child.

Next they begin the shots which lower the child’s vibration dramatically through the injection of viruses that are foreign to the system. All vaccines contain the actual virus it is designed to prevent in lower dosages in order to so-called “develop” your systems immunity to it. It also means the virus is now in your body at low levels and that can’t be good for the natural system especially as a child. Not to mention the Doctors hands all over the babies head during the time the “soft spot” is still fresh. Many doctors are stressed and have been delivering several babies in one day. Some even smoke cigarettes between deliveries and when they touch the child’s soft spot all of that energy is transferred to the child. The delivery procedure has now reached a state of barbarism with the advent of the Caesarian Section/Caesar/Sea Snake. The child no longer experiences even coming through the mother’s birth canal which is a very sacred time for a baby which prepares them for entry into this world. Instead the baby is cut out.

Reason 159: The body consist of wheels of Chakras all sensitive to light and energy. The Chakras control the images and sensations that are projected to your mind. The thread or cables that connect us all plug into the Chakra centers. Learning how to stimulate and manipulate Chakras is a major part of dissolving Indra’s Net.

After the horror show the baby arrives at the home. If they are put on Formulas and not breast fed the Formula changes much of the genetic makeup of the baby. As one can see this stuff is not called milk but a Formula indicating some type of special mixture for transformation. The mother’s breast milk contains all the specific nutrients needed for the baby that are uniquely calibrated for it. Anything else besides water or pure juices will alter the babies Ph balance on many levels.

Next the baby is placed in a crib which normally is fitted with bars. The baby has its first maddening experience with the cage/cube. Most parents place the same toy that was placed over their cribs when they were babies, that circling chiming toy with the animals dangling. What this toy does is begin the frequency programming. Has one never noticed that the nursery rhymes from long ago still survive today being played by these chime boxes? The famous “Go to sleep, Go to sleep, go to sleep little baby,” you can hear it even now. With this thing spinning over the babies head in a circular motion using certain sounds the baby is tuned even more. One can imagine the results of thousands of hours the baby spends alone with this insane toy in the cube.

As the tot begins to get older it is introduced to cartoons. The word begs one to ask what exactly is being “Tuned”. A quick search will show that “Car” was actually a blood thirsty Deity that abused children but is that such a stretch to what’s really going on in an innocent children’s cartoon?

When the cathode ray tube was invented many men including Disney used it as a catalyst to the next level of mind control through Hexagonal Color Embedding. Next the Widescreen Digital Television was introduced. The key is the “aspect ratio” which is a way to “open the mind” of the viewer. When a person is viewing a widescreen their eyes become slightly cocked in separate directions in order for them to be able to view the whole screen. Those studying Metaphysics know that the position of the eyes equate to different states of consciousness. When your eyes are spread wide your third eye is stretched open. This is a much more effective portal for mind control.

Even now many tribes maintain that they are descendants from Serpent races, however, what they are always excluding is that the Serpent races generally cross bred with them in a forcible manner. These types of Serpents, which are not your common garden snake, do not stay on the surface but remain in underground cavern systems; few report actually encountering these Beings face-to-face although some have, like myself. I will tell you they are Shape Shifters and take on a Humanoid form however it still becomes evident by the shape of their skull and brow, which is something like a diamond, that they are Reptilian. It would be of value to know that the Serpent races are far more advanced than we are at this particular moment. They bought many things that made them appear as Gods to the indigenous people who were discovering a new world after the flood. These Entities were so far ahead they had already accomplished hyperdimensional space travel. The Serpent races are resource gatherers and it is known they have been robbing the Earth and other Planets in this system of various resources since day one. They have interfered “Enter Fear” with our natural cycle.

Pyramid means Fire “Pyra” in the Center. This symbolizes the flame or fiery nature of the Serpent. These Pyramids the Serpent races used to not only access there underground cavern systems but also as way points for hyperdimensional jumps much like what’s depicted on the movie Stargate.

Earth has a history of great cataclysms that not only put many of the pyramids underwater but also removed their capstones. The Earth itself has a cleansing mechanism that seems to activate approximately every 12,600 years. During these times the Earth is inundated with water or scorched by fire. Many of the members of the Serpent races during these times simply burrow deeper into the ground towards the center of the Earth in order to escape the damage that is wreaked on the surface. Even as this is being written deeper tunnels are being constructed to house more underground facilities due to the fact that the Earth is currently due for another cleaning.

Reason 160: The Pyramids are everywhere not because it was just a popular style. This was the pattern of construction given by the Serpent Races in order to allow energy to be harnessed developing working portals that could transport more than one Being or person. When the stars realign the feathered serpents known also as Pendragon/Quetzacoatl will return to this dimension to escalate chaos. If you remain, you must be spiritually equipped to fend them off. Basically the Elite members of R1 A1 haplogroup such as Serbs, Poles, Slavs, Goths, Ashkenaz, and many others have sealed their fate in being servants of the Dark Lord. They see themselves as creations of the Dark Lord and are awaiting the line-up for the return. They believe they will “morph” into the same type of creature the Dark Lord is and will commence to the feast upon flesh. No matter how sick and sadistic this may sound this is the backbone of their belief in the Old Ones. The entire structure built on duality it is scheduling its next showdown or Armageddon within the next year and a half. This is an age old battle that existed before our consciousness evolved so we have little internal memory of our role in all of this. The darksiders have however accepted their role, sealed their fates, and are willing servants.

Reason 161: Time travel is a thing of the past, lol, it has already been discovered and is in constant use. Disinformation has tried to make us believe the Pyramids were tombs and it is true many wanted to be buried in the Pyramids to ensure their soul would have no problem making the trip into their next existence, memory intact. The next existence for us is supposed to be Ethereal not taking on another physical body, what a drag, this has been happening since the Elite have been manipulating this technology and using it to hold souls in stasis.

The Earth has a fail-safe due to the type of Beings that are living on and inside of it. Because many races do not get along for reasons that I will explain next, Planets tend to go through many wars. A large set of visitors came from the Sirius Star System better known as the Dog Star. To understand how these races have become more advanced than Humanoid Earthlings is a matter of 1. Their Star Systems in distance which is time have been around Light Years longer than ours and life has developed similar to the way we are now evolving on their worlds but much earlier. 2. Just as you may see an insect go through an entire metamorphosis phase within the span of only one month while it may take a Human several lifetimes to go through that same genetic leap, some Beings evolve faster than others especially when they are unhindered.

A word on time, the English language does work two-fold. When not knowing what the words really mean it does begin a sequence of mind control. On the other hand when knowing what the words mean it puts you in the loop of secrets. It is obvious that we should exist outside of time, this is immortality. The mistake many Magicians have made when being offered Immortality is not considering these two things. 1. We are already immortal and if we were not purposely made to forget that profound fact, we would know that. 2. Just because you are immortal does not mean anything more than ye shall not perish, it says nothing of the details of your lifestyle in immortality.

What does it mean to be locked in a perpetual cage for eternity? The conditions of solitude may have been lifted however I have seen several lions trapped in one cage and those born in captivity lack the images to imagine what it was like to be free, thus they cannot conceive it and perceive the current condition has always been as such. They think they are really free, an illusion. This is what it also means not to fly and have hyperdimensional and extraspatial capability you are grounded your wings stripped and you now think you always walked because you don't have images of you flying, except in your dreams and you think they are just your imagination. The Most High said I will make them in my Image/Imagination so thus your imagination is not to be taken lightly.

Many think they have time so they may give it another week they are too weak, not knowing they are in a daze they go about this for days not knowing time does not actually exist for the Immortal. Master knowledge is knowing that the movements of things hold great external knowledge, but there are parts of that knowledge that should never be placed internal as it will effect the Host as something foreign, changing the entire makeup of the Host. Imagine if the Sun never rose again, would people sleep all the time because it was dark? Of course not, however, people still consider when the Sun goes up and then back down one day can be counted. They age themselves with ideas of their birthday but we will not stray to far down the path of the wisdom of agelessness.

It is known that the Moon better known by the ancients as "Sin" was placed into our solar system at some point in time however it was not originally here. Many of the indigenous tribes who had already made contact with other constellations had maps that did not include the Moon on them. Then at a certain time in history all of a sudden the Moon begins to appear on astrological outlines. One should understand the effects of this particular Moon on this Earth. The Moon controls "Moo"ds. The Moon controls tides, the Moon controls growth and thus decay, and most importantly things like gravity and magnetic energy. I noticed when the Moon eclipses it is easy to get out of the body. So it is easy to see that there would be a big difference in the energy of our world if the Moon was not here. Many do not know that the change would actually be positive. Many have done studies on the notion that the Moon was somehow towed here and by the size of many of the ships belonging to these Entities that is entirely possible.

So I know you may be saying the Moon, okay maybe it could be towed because it is not hot but nothing can tow the Sun. Today you will find information on a top secret project known as the Lucifer Project. In this project an attempt is being made to detonate a plutonium payload into Saturn thus causing it to go Super Nova and become a Sun. Other Planets have also been considered. This was already put into trial when NASA detonated the Cassini Space Probe with Plutonium on board into Jupiter creating a whole the size of Earth. The idea was to create a chain reaction; it is good that did not succeed or maybe it did. It would then appear as if we had two Suns in our sky and we would begin to receive lots of Planetary energy through the rays emitting from the new Son.

One would have to look deeper into things to understand where man received this type of knowledge from. If our current Sun was not transported here through black holes it could have been another Planet already, perhaps Vulcan, that had been given a boost by detonating various types of elements that make Planets go from frigid worlds of Ice, to Suns, let there be light! Our word Ice comes from Isis in their theories men are Suns and women are Ice, not Moons, two opposites. This entire matter becomes a little more difficult to exactly pinpoint due to the fact that most of us have never traveled into the cosmos thus all the information we receive is second and third hand and surely altered. The Elite of course have never been famous for telling the truth.

Reason 162: There are so many habitable Planetary bodies in Space it is hard to know what is going on until we have the opportunity to travel the Cosmos which can be done with the body.

There are Planets and Beings that have long since graduated beyond such petty things as what we are now experiencing on Earth thus we take notes from them. They are entirely self-sustained like a person can become when they are fully “unlocked”. In these stages one does not need to eat food or breathe air thus his or her higher dimensional imprint has reached a phase of totality. Once that phase has been reached you will “Awake”, currently most are asleep literally walking around a dream world, a dream within a dream, or a T.V. displaying another T.V. displaying another T.V. ad infinite. Strong persistence is necessary to be revived out of such a debased state. Inside of you, there are those that want to work, those that want to play, and those that want to disrupt your work. Be mindful of which one is controlling you. There is The World, You, and the Outer Forces. You must consider your Arrival, Transition, and Breakthroughs. Your states are Physical, Emotional, and Intellectual. Being conscious of how you perceive things through all of these channels is key.

One can easily see that dissecting the Gnostic story in the Bible takes heavy pondering. It would be good to remember that when the Bible came into wider circulation in 1611 most people could not read. The Bible was kept as a Talisman or something of the sort that was believed to ward off evil by having it around. This is the clear indicator that when they begun swashbuckling lands and beating the people into submission they were in no position to examine anything about Iesu, Nazarites, Grails, Illuminati, Jesuits or anything of the sort. They were following blindly their lusts for riches and rank. So truly it is only recently that the Bible has ever been properly dissected by someone who is none partial and not in fear of death and excommunication, after all that is already happening. The path our parents chose was generally what their parent chose and so on down the line.

Another point is what takes place in the Universities. This is normally where lots of trickery begins. Often times many embark on professions that really contain no skill without the aid of some type of Machine. This is the other part of the war against the Machines. A false sense of intelligence is created when a person learns how to operate let's say an Electron Microscope or Array Device. Without this device however there would be no place for their particular skill. Having the ability to operate it proficiently falsely elevates them in mental status. The person usually cannot build these devices from scratch because they lack the knowledge and especially the equipment for fabrication. If they ever go into a country where the basic skills like agriculture, irrigation, construction, and other core abilities are required they will go from Rocket Scientist to Janitor. Nothing they have learned is really of value; they have not learned or understood the true inner workings of things. This is very similar to how many people view the world, all the real information about what really controls things they simply don't possess, that's now about to change.

We have witnessed this with the fall of Silicon or should I say "Silly Con". In places like the United States the Elite find the people very hard to control now and much too independent. This is why jobs have been moved to places like India and China where the people are much more passive and less opinionated due to thousands of years of Dominant Monarchist rule. Even now there are plans being discussed about a population decrease. You can imagine the Elite have made the people build a world to its capacity and now they want to enjoy it all for themselves and remove those that are not a part of their groups from the more pristine places. In the event there is all out chaos they will watch from the Moon.

All major cities are located on energy centers, the middle of the vortex being given the name "Down Town" alluding to the center of a vortex. People are naturally attracted to these energy centers like pigeons, so they tend to pile up in cities. When looking at states like Texas you see miles and miles of unused fertile land that could ease the tension of the masses if they were allowed to inhabit these territories. When going to some of these places you will find one or two people own thousands of acres that they are doing nothing with. What kind of buffoonery is this when a person can just come and say “this is my land and if you want it, it will cost you “X” amount of dollars” when that land was stolen from the original inhabitants in the first place.

In various countries where there are limited resources and harsh weather, if borders did not exist they could easily inhabit other parts of the world. The Elite have created a false sense of prejudice that makes the people hate each other but love their Leaders and I”cons”. When the United States joined World War II which seemed to turn the tides, the stage was set for America to appear as if it had saved the world from the terrible Anti-Christ Hitler. Nothing could be further from the truth. As thousands of soldiers died on both sides the rulers of many countries began to orchestrate the division of the people, drawing new borders and boundaries.

When the war was over high ranking officials from the Nazi party depending on rank went to other places to enjoy their plunder. Hitler and members of the Theosophical Society went into Antarctica after long stays in Argentina sipping the finest wine from Argentinean Vineyards. They eventually returned to the Hyperborean entrance to the Pole. Other officials went from Argentina and traveled through South and Central America through the extensive cavern systems located there also. The only ones who did not get an upgrade were the regular people who succeeded in only killing each other. They received a war torn nation that had been reduced to rubble, a sound hatred for their neighbor, and a secularism that has yet repair itself.

While the Elite laugh and toast a job well done they began another phase. The Theosophical Society set up right in the United Nations and proclaimed itself the religion of the future. This will be how the world is prepared for the Beast, the Dragon, and the False Prophet. Thule/Cthulhu is the brain behind the New Age Movement and the return of the Golden Age of Aquarius. All decisions are made by the Ascended Masters of Thule and those decisions are then passed to their proper representatives in the U.N. This is already going on so this is not a warning of something to come. This is something that is already happening. The 800 Billion borrowed by Obama was to allow those high enough on the Pyramid to go abroad, change over the currency, and set up elsewhere before they snatch the carpet from underneath the U.S. They are only waiting for the green light that most in the inner circle have secured themselves. When the U.S. market crashes the spiritual leaders of the world will come together once more like they did in 1986 in Assisi Italy at St. Francis Basilica. They will once again play the show of all coming together and the belief in the same God. Then they will unveil God’s new representative to everyone. The Power behind this individual will be Sanat Kumara I anagram this as “A Mark Satan” there is a U “You” left over. When these Beings come on the scene if one did not prepare before you saw their actual arrival, it is too late.

In known interviews that were done with the gentleman on the left in Reason 21 with Matrieya in the middle. He does the traveling about bringing portents of Matrieya. When I personally saw the turn out I was amazed. Not to mention this was done in one of the nicest Convention Centers in NY. His current talent is he can “oversoul” Matrieya. This means when he is talking he will shift to Matrieya although the two, of course, look nothing alike. Then he will change back at certain points. I tell you the truth people will wander astray when they see these signs and wonders which can be done through spiritual powers or technology and they have both. Look at how they show up for Chris Angel and he doesn’t have an ilk of charisma compared to the Ascended Masters.

In all works it speaks of this time when humans will have a final moment in making a choice to give there freedom and souls up for what will appear to be an answer to their problems. It will appear there are no other options for those who do not begin to prepare now. Most will accept it no problem as they see their leaders and Icons direct them to it, just like they did when they wanted to endorse Obama, that was a test run, but not without its drawbacks. It will last for only a moment if it is a second and then they will see why they should have listened to all the redundant warnings that everyone keeps getting and ignoring on some level or another.

I believe this also to be a pivotal point in our future existence on a level extending into our afterlife. This is all happening now in you primary reality, so no matter who tells you “it’s a hologram” or “it’s your perception”, if I pinch you will it hurt? Our world needs us to begin to act like who we really are. Simply imagine if you were “fully activated” all Chakras on, could you not make a difference that would echo across the world? Indeed you witness it now before you. This was my first move and do believe I have gone straight through demons to get to you my beloved. The world is in desperate need of anyone who will have the courage and take the time to see what their talent may be and how they can use it to rescue more from the fate of the future.

We are in Malkuth the Kingdom, ancient law states this dimension to be lower than the higher 9 Steps on the Tree, one still must consider the Inverted Tree which has also been created and is indeed functioning, it is the Demon world. Below us it extends 10 “mapped” dimensions down, the Abyss being uncharted. This is the point also in religion where the confusion of adding terms like Netzach and Geburah in addition to what those terms really mean according to Rabbi Lietman, however Rabbi Ashlog says entirely different his analysis from the Kether while Illumed in Shekinah, but let us not forget Rabbi Weisman who was in mystical Daath the hidden 11 Sephiroth blah blah blah. See this is what religion has done to something that is plain and simple. Live Human and uphold your race and your kind with all your strength and in it you will learn to ascend continuously, this is the Great Reward in which eludes Kings and rest in the hands at times of Slaves who We disguise as such for a test to man and woman. They know the last will come first, say it isn’t so, the Most High can make a crippled a climber of Trees.

The Final Warning had been set upon the chariot and rode through the land day and night, the ancient books had been sealed and I could open them no longer less I become infested again with the horrors spoken within whispering in my mind night and day continuously, but I had to know. The new message was spoke to me and I wrote it down and as I wrote the words began to disappear off the page. A Voice said "Do not write that which is for those who will escape the great test that shall come upon man, woman, beast, and jinn. I have placed this before them as a mirror that they may see who they are inside and cease from pretending that they have vanquished darkness but in reality have nursed it. Now it shall rear up and devour. Lo, there is no Honor amongst the wicked".

Reason 163: This is the Symbol of Thule of course bringing us right to the Serpents as usual. This meditation room has been placed inside of the U.N. Many world leaders visit the room before they make world decisions. The room is shaped like a Trapezoid, a Pyramid with no capstone. The lighting is recessive as you go away from the Mural. The Mural is clearly Saturnalian as you can see the scythe of Saturn along with the staff and the Serpent twinning around it. The stone has been removed from their sacred mountain and placed inside the room for its frequency. Many of the darksiders are seeking revenge for what happened during the Inquisition, they are releasing this anger upon the masses and feel no remorse or compassion.

Dag Hammarskjöld, "Secret"ary General of the U.N. placed "the Black Stone of Light" in the United Nations in 1953. It is a six-and-a-half ton block of "programmed" iron ore. It is polished on the top such that it brings forth a sheet of minute lights that shine like billions of tiny stars. It is a natural magnet emitting waves of energy. This is the "foundation" of the New World. In Stanley Kubrick's Film 2001: A Space Odyssey the main character of the story, David Bowman, discovers that such a stone serves as a space portal leading to a distant part of the universe. In the movie it is placed on Earth from the stars and brings technological enlightenment to an otherwise ape man tribe who live at the "dawn" of true humanity.

Reason 164: Thule is not the run of the mill cult, they have perfected channeling, astral travel, evocation, and as you see they are the willing servants of the Unseen Hand.

Our greatest ability as humans is we create our Destiny, there is no pre-determined future for us no matter how much someone tries to tell you it is. If you perceive everything about you already written, this means you are in fact moving backwards not forward. If you were moving forward what you will achieve next is based on you and cannot be recorded until you make the actual decision. This is Supreme Knowledge. Our individual worlds are set in motion by a series of our own thoughts. This cycle delivers our expectancies at various times depending upon how powerful our thoughts are. For example a person could concentrate on getting a new job and it still take a year to get one. This is due to the amount of energy they carry that manifests thoughts. A person fully alkalized, breathing properly, and with a clear mind can think "I want a new job" and get fired at that moment beginning the chain reaction.

When we control our reality what we focus on begins to take its steps into our primary world. Many beginning to unlock this power are surprised that things just come out of thin air. Then begins the training of thinking things fully through in detail for optimal results. In addition learning how not to think about things that when they manifest they will actually hinder you thus creating your worst nightmares. There is a fail safe so this type of thing doesn't happen often, they call it powerless.

The biggest fear the Elite have of releasing the secrets of power are the result of what a capitalist minded world would create. How many people would immediately use the power to make themselves rich to have lots of lovers, and be irresistibly beautiful? If everyone had the power to create their own reality within this reality there would not be enough metal for all the cars they would have, enough plastic for all the gadgets they would have, enough water for the pools and waste of water that would go on. One should just ask for Knowledge, Wisdom, and Innerstand then you can decipher anything. Knowledge is all the information, non-partial, Wisdom is the ability to sort through that information and find the perfect calibration for your life, Innerstanding is coming to terms with why all things happen and thus you escape Duality. Duality will always exist on this dimension.

Some may ask does this book represent Duality, since I'm clearly challenging the Gods and Devils. I will say yes this is Duality which takes place when you reach back from higher dimensions into Binary Worlds. The Creation of the strong will always be to protect the weak just as a house built of stone will securely shelter its fleshly inhabitants. We should never shrink away from what is right no matter how Enlightened we become. In certain meditations you can get so high you don't know your name or even where you are, but when you come back you are in this primary reality thus the Most High has placed us here for a reason. I know my reason; I've given the reader now several to determine theirs. This is only to give you a fuller life of meaning rather than the redundant cycle of time where humans are harvested for energy and go about Feeding, Fearing, and Fornicating until they perish back into atoms.

This system which exist has with it certain secretes that allow it to carry on as such. We can call them the rules of the Matrix in which some can be bent and others broken. This is also the secret to the "ME's". One of those ME's is called the Tablet of Destiny and remains in the possession of the Elite. It was said that whoever had it could control many things. These ME's where the names, relics, and even spirits of power. Amongst all the Gods stories it describes a plot by the Female Goddess Inanna to obtain the Tablet of Destiny from the Gods by cunning. In the society of the Annunaki the female of their breed are not allowed to rule. Without taking you through the whole story which can be found in the Sumerian tablets it will suffice to say that one female of their species gained control over the Tablets of Destiny. Isis in legend slips a Serpent on Ra to poison him and he cannot cure himself. Isis then makes Ra promise to give her His true creative name in this case an actual Spirit or Ba of Ra. Ra agrees and Isis cures him and then the power is transferred to her bosom.

This Ba/Spirit has now been placed in a stone called the Stone of Scone. The Queen of England sits upon it as if it's an egg waiting to hatch. In fact it is also referred to as the Ben Ben stone named after the Benu bird that was in legend the Ba/Spirit of Ra/Marduk. This relic along with many others, are all in the possession of the Queen of England who rules just about the whole world. In secret societies and religious circles various types of worship and sacrifices take place that continue to give these relics power. This is how one group can rule such a vast amount of people, it is done through devices, vices that they implore and make the people pray to. They are kept by the rulers who know how to extract the power of these devices and use it to continuously elevate themselves over the people.

Reason 165: The Ben Ben Stone rests underneath the Coronation Chair where all from the Royal Bloodlines have been crowned King or Queen. The Stone was carried by Tamar from Israel into Europe when the bloodlines began to mix.

Ultimately reserved for the highest ranking dark initiate the Leontocephales or Lions Penis and the Pahanuk or Penis of the Dragon equated with Mithras, Phanes and Ahriman, the Zoroastrian devil, all as one God. According to Orpheus/Morpheus who I still have chained down and being hacked to pieces, there would be One Zeus, One Hades/Underworld, One Sun and One Dionysus. This is Saturn called also Zurvan and Mithras Helios the nocturnal Sun beneath the Earth voyaging round the invisible world, doubt it not.

According to the rites of Mithras which is Christian Gnosticism not written but divined, the beginning of all things was the Law which proclaimed Christ, and the Holy Spirit existed at the Creation. The Brazen Serpent was a Symbol of Christ. Abraham was a type of God the Father, and Isaac a Symbol of Christ the Ram of Sacrifice. Eve slew mankind, but the Virgin Mary gave them life. Mary was the "door" and that it was closed symbolized her virginity, which was God's Seal upon her. She was the Burning Bush described by Moses; she was also the censer used by High Cohen, the coals were Christ, and the perfume of the incense was his perfume the Myrrh of the Martyr, on which prayer ascended to Heaven. The Chains of the censer were Jacob's ladder. Aaron's rod was Mary, and the bud thereof was Christ. The Ark made by Moses was the abode of God on Earth; it symbolized Mary, and the indestructible wood of which it was made symbolized the indestructible Christ who will rise every time he is Crucified. The pot that held the Manna was Mary, and the Manna inside was the body of Christ; the Words of the Law also were Christ. The Pearl in Mary's body was Christ. The rock smitten by Moses was Christ, and Moses smote it longwise and breadthwise to symbolize the Cross. Moses' rod was the Cross, the water that flowed from the rock was the teaching of the Apostles. The darkness brought upon Egypt for three days symbolized the darkness of the Crucifixion. The Amalekites symbolized the devils, Aaron and Hor, who held up Moses' hands, symbolized the two thieves who were crucified with Christ. Thus the entire Bible feeds from one story placed in several allegories and parables. I bore of the Riddler who does nothing more then confuse what is simple.

A man develops the fertilizer while a woman makes the egg. Many never sit and think how mystical this is that an actual egg is inside of the woman's body at various stages. Now we get to the meat of things. The Adepts know that when a woman is due to bring forth a special child the fertilized egg itself contains the child before it "hatches". The period of incubation that takes place before it cracks open is called "ruling from the Egg". How many remember the tale of the Goose who laid the Golden Egg? Of course that tale had a hidden meaning.

There is an egg that is about to hatch as some already have and inside those eggs are things I'm not even at leisure to discuss, since We have shined light on more than enough to keep one up thinking long into the night. I will say that those who will come from these eggs will be different then the normal human and possess abilities that we can unlock, but most do not use at this moment and trust you will need them. You can see this all as a way used to give you a sense of urgency. Reptiles lay eggs thus they have to wait for the eggs to hatch, some take longer than other depending upon what is being brought forth.

Reason 166: We can not deny what has been placed in stone, the reptilian affiliation is clear. Knowing all this now, what will you chose to do?

Reason 167: Unlike Mammals Serpents and Amphibians lay eggs. The incubation period of that egg is dependant what type of creature laid the egg. Some eggs can stay in incubation for hundreds of years before they are ready to hatch. If you look closely at the picture of Mary above, you will see a silhouette of a Dragon on the shawl covering her hair. Gnostic Christianity is about bringing forth the seeds or eggs and to raise the Brazen Serpent for everyone to fall down and worship, it appears that whole plan is happening now. They only await the final arrival of the "Feathered Serpent", Quetzacoatl. The return of Q.

We are looking for more ways to get this information across, the Author, who is 30, is ready and willing to speak to the people whether it is one or thousands. The writer is currently doing this with little Human assistance to save our race. If you would like to contribute in any way there are multiple portals to contact me. Remember we are asking for nothing, if you feel like giving that is up to you, money is by far not the only way you can be of aid, if you have rare pictures, rare books, contacts, groups that you need spoken to or you would like me to include something in future editions, if there are future additions, contact me. All contributions can be made discreet however I will tell you there is nothing to fear a loophole has been created, in every horror movie someone always gets away, we have never lost our love for a happy ending.

In all this knowledge I have also discovered ways to enhance the body and open pure energy portals. This cannot be done with only one person and needs infrastructure such as a facility and certain devices that change the consistency of the air and atmosphere we breathe. If you can seriously entertain this project contact me by the information provided at the very end of this document. If you have questions We will give you answers.

All these cycles are only dreamlike moments of time in the divine consciousness we call Life. The individual souls are myriad fragments in self realization, the individual consciousness goes beyond this duality of subject and object and is subsumed in a timeless and blissful divine consciousness independent of time, space, and causality, which melt away after the illusion is destroyed and the Matrix is broken.

Even before I inscribed this note to you my beloved I was fast in contemplation of the Most Exquisite Source. Keeping in continuation I will never tire in mentioning my Sustainer which is Inexhaustibly Cherished by High Emanations beyond Perception which can be sometimes grasped by mortals. It is indeed good it can be gleamed and harvested by the wise to pollinate the minds of the Guided. The field is plentiful and the harvest ripe, intelligent minds are waiting for counsel and it shall be granted to them. We tarry too long already and We will wait no longer in bringing the news to you of your evolution. I will explain your sequence which is not foreign to all living things. You must first know what you where before, in order for you to calculate what you desire is to be next. I would suggest addition only, we do not like to subtract, that will decrease our ranks, we do not divide because we will never suffer a conqueror, and we do not multiply into an unexpected stage which is premature. Addition is the true and only math for us that are intelligent and wise. Did I ever fail in bringing forth profound truth beyond fear or emotion? Nay I shall never fail to arise to the noble cause of bringing the most precious elixir of rare essence to all corners of the earth. If you but knew its true value.

Appendix B

Supplement to the Code to the Matrix

As far as the history of this planet is concerned, you can consider that everything you ever learned is a complete lie. All history and science books are rewritten to accommodate the agenda of the controllers of this planet. These books are just as false as the New Age material spewing forth from such places as Sedona and Santa Fe, to name a couple of Illuminati Meccas.

Disinformation is rampant everywhere. My information comes from religious indoctrinations, experiences, conversations with scientists, studying those involved in Illuminati programs, communications with Alien and/or Inter-dimensional beings whom I met at various experiments with my own body, and through the probing of my Oversoul.

I can only tell you that it is available in certain places the profound proof of what I bring forth. To deny these things produces the insanity that man has thus entrenched himself in. Although all existence is simultaneous, and time and space are merely illusions of physical reality, for the purpose of this appendix I will present the majority of history from a linear perspective. There are also infinite universes, both physical and non-physical, but for now, I will only tell you about this one but always keep in mind, in spheres of remoteness, time can be stretched, curved back, then concentrated all in one point, made to explode in lines that run in every direction and again can be stretched, and curved into an infinity of temporal paradoxes.

To understand how various known and unknown classes of Elite such as the Illuminati, Ordinati, Intrepidi, Pahanuk, and Leophantalus just to name a few came to power, or even to comprehend what they are, it is important to understand the beginning of life on this world and its progression.

I do not believe in any religion, organized or otherwise. All religions, no matter what they are, are forms of group mind-control designed to manipulate large masses of people to stop thinking for themselves. I do believe in The Most High. It has no religion and is not genderized.

In the subsequent times following the release of my last book, The Code to the Matrix much has been written about by other “researchers” concerning Reptilians and their rituals. This theme has found its way into the psyche of the public. Most people are still not willing to accept or even entertain the idea that hybrid Reptilians are running around and in control of large parts of this Planet and perform blood rituals and ceremonies using humans as the source of food and hormones. I wish it were not true. But I cannot change history, current events, or what I know to be true. I can only implode from this reality and explode back into it.

The controllers plan the pattern of coming events in such a way to purposefully disorient the masses while they alone see the destination and the order of life. The masses are lead to believe that haphazard events amidst chaos shaped their existence.

In true reality, there is no such thing as Chaos. Chaos is simply a pattern not yet understood or perceived.

Think about an ant crawling over a designed, tiled floor. The ant may seem confused or disoriented; not knowing which way to go. But a human being watching the ant from a higher perspective clearly sees the floor pattern and knows which way the ant can get to its destination. To the ant, there is only perceived chaos. To the human, there is a pattern.

To the controllers, the humans are the ants. The controllers are interested in directing the people in such a way that they do not know that they are being directed. The controllers work slowly and methodically from a galactic perspective to accomplish their goals.

With awareness, you too, can perceive order from the chaos, make some conscious decisions, and gain control of your own life and destiny.

Various Life forms

When pursuing the ultimate truth, I encountered, vividly, amongst others, an alien species known as a Reptilian. They seemed to pop in and out of physical reality and they also seemed very organized as if an agenda was at hand. The Reptilians primarily use the lower astral realms as their reference point, or point of entry, into physical reality. This is the origin of the legends of astral demons. These Beings were brought to the Draco star system eons ago by another group unknown to anyone. Further, no one knows anything of their true origins.

Communication was entirely telepathic while visual encounters from others which remained silent were also at hand. Mentally, they told me that they came from the far future where humans no longer existed, and that its species was not from this reality. Continuing, it said that its species had traveled back into the distant past to create a race of Beings, which I knew as the Reptilians, to antagonize and test humans. It also told me that they were assisted by the Sirians of Sirius A.

For the Reptilians to function in physical reality, they needed physical genetics. The transparent people took genetics from the now physical Lyraens, a constellation bordered by Draco, who have blonde or red hair, and blue or green eyes. These genetics were mixed with the “transparent peoples” collective energy, thus manifesting physically as the Reptilians. This is why the current Reptilians need the energetics from Aryan-type people to survive on the physical plane.

Once the Reptilians were created in the astral, they needed a physical home base from which to accomplish their task. For this, they took over many different physical realities in which they could become the dominant species. Mentally, they were programmed to conquer and absorb all of the races and species that they encountered. Those that could not be absorbed were to be destroyed, this is the root of the Borgian idealism. The purpose of all of this is to determine the most perfect form in a physical reality that can exist in any environment. Think of it as a gigantic, cosmic Survivor contest where the genes and configuration of the survivor is the prize.

The Reptilians are programmed to believe that they are the superior physical form. Scientifically speaking, Reptilian DNA does not change very much over Aons of time. It basically remains the same. For them, this is their proof that they are already perfect, without any need to adapt. Mammalian life, on the other hand, evolves and changes form constantly to survive.

To the Reptilian mind, this denotes weakness and inferiority. These Reptilians are also androgynous, meaning male and female in one body. This is comparable to all non-physical forms that have no gender like The Most High. For this reason, the Reptilians believe themselves to be more godlike because of their androgyny. Due to their ethnocentric values, they also consider it their right to control and conquer all of space and time.

Although the Reptilians operate out of a general group mind, they are separated into seven different Reptilian species, each created to perform specific functions.

This is their hierarchy, and is based on the nine level Angelic Hierarchy that is witnessed in books such as The Key to Solomon. The Hindu caste system is also a direct replica of the Reptilian hierarchy.

The politics of the Draco trading colonies which can be compared to Dune, whose Arrakeis, the home star of Dracos and Dune, is correctly located in Alpha Draconis. This represented those you may know as the Enlil, Yahweh, and Michael side of the An or Ana, also called the Anunnaki family. These are also the Templars, followers of the MAG, "Draco Matriliny". Their purpose is to HARVEST COLONIES on hundreds of Planets. The "Skull and the Bones" this is Orion.

Later, as Enlil/Yahweh under the name of "God" "Michael" He who is like God, installs genetic rules in Aboriginal Australia and in North and South America, he is following the Drac tradition entirely focused on preventing change and facilitating the harvest of colonies like forests whose only purpose is to be cut down.

At a deeper level we should investigate the connection between the loss of DNA called DNA implosions. The physics of loss of soul & access to THE GREAT ATTAINMENT. This is loss of fire in the blood which creates loss of lucid dreaming, loss of "ensoulment" and LOSS OF LONG TERM MEMORY. Part of this problem causes the loss of ability to navigate in time travel. We are star navigators, time travelers, able to warp space from within, due to this loss of DNA coherence has been impaired.

There is no steering a collective culture through time portals without a leader who is able to remember past lives. It is profound to compare this to a Zulu shaman leader was bemoaning to Us how his grand children lost their ability to lucid dream just after they had been given Immunization shots. This is an example of how Borg, the fallen Draco Empires, treat DNA of true Light people. They do this by not loving their brother and sisters enough to set them free, they even blind their own children.

The War of the Worlds I

Because the Humaniod Lyraens did not have a defense system in place, they were sitting targets for the Reptilians when they invaded this system. After being brutally attacked by the Draco Empire, the survivors of the Lyraen societies dispersed to other locations throughout the Galaxy. The remnants of the Draco attack on Lyrae are still seen by today's scientists.

In 1985, a newspaper article stated that scientists are able to observe remnant waves of a blast that fanned outward, and emanated from a central part of this galaxy. This blast is several million years old and of such intense proportions that the wave is still traveling toward the edge of the Galaxy where it dissipates.

These survivors went to Orion, Tau Ceti, Pleiades, Procyon, Antaries, Alpha Centauri, Barnard Star, Arcturus, and dozens of other solar systems. In this solar system, the refugees colonized the planet now called Mars. At that time, it was the third planet in the solar system. A world called Maldek was then the fourth planet in this solar system, and was also colonized.

The Lyraens were mostly blonde-haired, blue-eyed people, with an occasional red-haired or green-eyed person. In Lyraen society, red-haired people were considered special with extrasensory powers that connected them to non-physical realms. They were especially desired for breeding purposes. Special permission to breed with a red-haired person was required because of the extra-sensory, or superhuman, abilities that came with the offspring.

For this reason, red-haired people were kept separate from the rest, and even had their own subculture. They were also coveted by the Reptilians, who as a species did not have much psychic ability. Often, when Reptilians came to various Lyraen worlds for occupation, the Lyraen refugees offered a group of red-haired people to appease them for a while. This practice eventually degenerated into sacrifices to appease the Reptiles/Demons.

The Planet Earth in those days was a water world in second orbit from the Sun. There was little land above the surface. The only intelligent inhabitants were an Amphibian race that was completely without technology. The atmosphere of the Earth was mostly liquid. The Planet definitely could not sustain any type of human life forms.

The dispersed Lyraen descendants developed their own cultures over the Aons of time. Mars and Maldek were similar to the current Earth environment, with warm to temperate climates and an oxygen-rich atmosphere. The gravity on Maldek was denser than Mars, so those people developed a thicker frame and a more aggressive attitude.

Eventually, skirmishes developed between the occupants of the two planets. Mars was rich in resources. The people of Maldek thought they should have these resources for their survival. The Martians, feeling a full scale attack was eminent, asked the Beings of Sirius A, from the Planet Khoom, for defense technology to shield their Planet from attacks, not only from the Reptilians, but from their Humanoid Lyraen neighbors and cousins.

The Sirians are known throughout the galaxy as merchants of technology. They have the best, even sharing it with the Reptilians, they are The Lords of War. So, the Sirians created a defense mechanism located in the Mars underground plateau.

Mars is a hollow Planet, as are Earth and Jupiter. Planets created with material ejected from a star have hollow interiors. As the molten ball is thrown from the star and starts spinning away, it begins to cool. The centrifugal force of the globe spinning and moving at great speed pushes the molten interior to the sides, forming the crust of the planet. This, in turn, forces hot gases out of the poles to form openings at both ends. The molten core and gases that remain get trapped between the hollow interior and the plates below the crust of the Globe. These are then pushed out periodically in the form of volcanic activity.

The Nexus Point on any such Globe is always at the 19th parallel of the Planet. It is evident on Earth by the Hawaiian volcanoes, located at the 19th parallel; by the Mounds of volcanoes on Mars located at the 19th parallel; and at the red spot on Jupiter, also at the 19th parallel.

The geometry built into the monuments on Mars by the Sirians and Lyraen colonists explains the 19th parallel through its geometric equations and measurements. This geometry is also replicated and contained within the Giza Plateau in Egypt.

If one is still clueless to why structures like Giza and Cydonia are at tetrahedral latitudes I will offer this. By modulating (adjusting) the spin rate of Planets at tetrahedral hand holds, planetary spins come into phase with zodiac spin. This self similar spin relation prevents implosive collapses which is critical to stabilizing gravity and therefore the atmosphere.

The Reptilian agenda was, and is, to seek out the human refugees for assimilation, and to use their energy, sometimes plasmic, and hormones for sustenance.

These are Ophanim and Seraphim, which are winged Dracos, Ciakar, or Fiery Cherubim. If something is originally responsible for this, whoever placed the Draco in our galactic sector knew that the humanoid remnant would need an aggressive parasite to trigger their development. Further the result of the part humanoid part Draco bloodline called in code "URu with Ibi". Many such as Lawrence Gardner and Michael Tsarion are found defending this Draco family root. This is related to AN or the Celtic Druids the British RH negative blood.

The Reptilian Draco blood which was originally Enki's who is also called in Hebrew "RA or abRAham meaning Father RA from the tribe of HAM, cross bred with the Cro-Magnon creating DNA less vital than the indigenous "Rhesus" monkey blood. So the Reptilians had to keep in-breeding, as in Holy Blood Holy Grail. There are few areas in the UK where this RHESUS Monkey blood is absent. RH negative may lead the world in lack of compassion. E-liz-a beth meaning from Lizard born, breeds a line where no permission to cry produces a stiff upper lip and a nasty little accent.

The remnant Humaniod Lyraens who colonized other Planets formed an Alliance against the constant Reptilian attacks. They called this Alliance the Galactic Federation, comprised of 110 different colonies. The colonies belonging to the Federation wished to maintain their new identities, and no longer associate with the old way. Together, the Federation colonists managed to repel the Reptilian attacks.

There were three primary groups who did not join the Federation. These three groups were considered extremists, or nationalistic idealists, seeking to recreate the glory of the old Lyraen civilization. One group was the Atlans, located on a Pleiadian Planet. The Pleiades actually consists of thirty-two Planets orbiting seven stars. At that time there were sixteen of these different colonies of Lyraen descent throughout the Pleiades. Because of their indignant supremacist attitudes these colonies all wanted to oust the Atlans. The Atlans continued to remain independent and did not assist their human cousins just as Texas proclaims itself the “Lone Star” state and helps no other states with the vast resources located there.

The other two groups were the Martians and Maldekians, who were already at odds with each other. For this reason, seeing these two Humanoid Planets competing, the Reptilians turned their attention toward this solar system. In the Reptilians estimation, it would be easy to divide and conquer.

The Reptilians love to use comets and asteroids as weapons and ships. They use them to travel through the stars. First, they create a small black hole as a propulsion system that pulls the asteroid towards the intended destination. When used as a weapon, they use a particle beam accelerator to create a blast that hurls the comet or asteroid towards the target. All of this technology was obtained from the Beings on Sirius A.

In this way, they hurled a huge ice comet at Mars and Maldek. The Reptilians, not being very technologically oriented, miscalculated the trajectory. The pull of the gigantic gas Planet, Jupiter, pulled the comet off course. The ice comet then headed directly for Maldek. The citizens of that Planet asked the Martians for help. Even though they were at odds with each other, they allowed some of the Maldekians to move to the Martian underground. The comet destroyed Maldek. This caused the remnants of the Planet to leave an asteroid belt between Mars and Jupiter.

The explosion also pushed large fragments of the ice comet close enough to Mars to rip the atmosphere off the Planet, leaving only an extremely thin atmosphere. The explosion also pulled Mars further away from the Sun.

The comet then continued toward the Earth. The heat of the Sun and the gravitational pull between the two globes forced the watery atmosphere of the Earth to polarize. This polarization pulled most of the ice from the comet to the polar regions of the Earth, thus covering most openings to the inner Earth, while at the same time exposing huge land masses for the first time.

The comet then switched places with Earth, taking up the second orbit from the Sun, becoming the Planet now known as Venus. This event has stricken most indigenous tribes with embedded fear and awe of Venus. The heat of the Sun melted the ice on the comet, creating a cloudy covering to this new Planet which was first a hollowed out asteroid. The Earth was pushed out to the third orbit occupying the previous position held by Mars. The Earth was then in a perfect position to be colonized. Most Amphibians that survived were transported to Neptune. Some stayed in the newly formed oceans.

The Reptilians who were inside the hollow comet, now Venus, came to the surface of this new world. They built seven domed cities, one for each of the seven groups in the hierarchy. In the mid-1980s one of New York's daily papers, Newsday, reported that a Soviet space probe penetrated the cloud layer of Venus and photographed seven white domes the size of small cities, all in a row.

The Reptilians then drove a large, hollowed out object into Earth's orbit to begin the colonization process. This object is now called the Moon. The Moon is the only known object in space that does not spin on its axis. The Moon faces the Earth in the same position all of the time, leaving one side in complete darkness thus a person with a telescope can never see what is on the other side. A sonic resonance sent to the surface of the Moon makes a pinging noise like a hollow object. If the Moon were solid, the noise would sound like a thump or thud. The Moon is hollow. A recent article in an astronomy magazine said that the Moon was being reclassified because it is considered to be hollow.

The Reptilians also chose a large continental landmass to begin their civilization on the Earth, this is now referred to as Lemuria or Mu. This was a vast area in what is now the Pacific Basin, extending from Japan to Australia, and from the coast of California to Peru. The Hawaiian Islands are in the middle of this one-time landmass.

Here, an androgynous Reptilian culture developed. They brought with them the dinosaurs and all Beings created beneath them such as animals and plants that are a reflection of the mind-pattern from various worlds already invaded. Reptilians and Humans are not designed to coexist on the same Planet in peace.

Additionally, the thinking process of the Reptilians differs from the human thinking process. Because Reptilians do not evolve rapidly and remain unchanging, their expansion is also slow moving and insidious. It would take several millennia for the Reptilians to decide whether or not they would even coexist with humans. After all, Earth was still an outpost far from the centre of the Draconian Empire.

In the meantime, the Martians were now living underground with their hostile Maldekian guests. Something had to be done quickly to prevent them from destroying one another. So, the Martians petitioned the Galactic Federation to remove the Maldekian refugees to another Planet. The Galactic Federation had also received a petition from the Pleiadian Council asking the Federation to remove the Atlans from their star cluster.

The Federation thusly decided to use the Atlans first as a counterbalance on Earth. If the Atlans survived, the Maldekians would also be sent next, this was the only solution to a complex problem. The Humanoid Lyraen descendants were literally throwing their own riffraff, the Atlans, to the Reptilian colonists on Earth, however, the Atlans of whom came the Titans were not necessary afraid of the Reptilians. In this way, the Federation would get rid of their undesirables. The Atlans would occupy the attention of the Reptilians. This would give the Federation valuable time to build their own forces against the Reptilians who they assumed would eventually attempt to take over the complete system.

When the Atlans arrived on the Earth, they colonized what became known as Atlantis. Their continent stretched from what is now the Caribbean Basin to the Azores and Canary Islands, as well as several small island chains reaching up to what is now the East Coast of the United States.

The industrious Atlanteans rapidly grew to a large, prospering civilization needing more territory. The dinosaur population was rapidly increasing and becoming dangerous to the human colonists. The Atlanteans began destroying the dinosaurs to protect themselves, this is often recorded in legends as Dragon Slayers. This did not sit well with the Reptilians who where more advanced than the Dinosaurs but still shared traits and blood. Major battles occurred on the Earth between the Lemurian Reptilians and Atlantean humans.

Wanting to solve the problem as soon as possible the Federation then sent the Maldekian refugees to Earth. They to, created a large human colony in what is now the Gobi desert, northern India, Sumer, and other parts of Asia.

The Maldekians when in position attacked the Moons Lunar surface where the Reptilians guarded the Earth outpost from invasion. The Maldekians also bombarded Atlantis and Lemuria with laser weapons. The dinosaurs were wiped out. The Maldekians wanted control over the Planet.

Additionally, the Martians seeing an opportunity, also attacked the Reptilians from space since they, too, were searching for a Reptilian-free environment in which to live. This might be considered the real First World War of the Worlds.

It was a mess!

The Sirians were at war with the Orion system. This hostility exists till this very day, however, the Sirians and the Reptilians trade with each other and the Beings from Sirius A sell weaponry to the Dracos! A complex political situation indeed but not unlike what We witness here on Earth with countries like the U.S. funding Nazi Germany. As above, so below.

The comet also caused the planet Uranus to flip on its side. It is the only known planet that rotates north-South instead of East-West. The loss of the Martian atmosphere caused by Draco's playing billiards with asteroids became the "Total Recall" legend, a movie about Martian history and their oxygen war.

To stop the fighting and make the Earth peaceful enough for continued progress, a meeting was held by a council from the Andromeda Galaxy, on a Planet called Hatona.

This meeting took place outside of the Milky Way Galaxy with a neutral council. All civilizations within the Milky Way Galaxy were in some way connected to the fighting, and all had some sort of stake in belonging to the winning side.

The Hatona Council convened for many decades as the fighting continued in this solar system. Finally, an agreement was reached between some of the human factions and the Reptilian Earth colonists. Keep in mind that this agreement was without the participation of the Reptilians from the original Draco Empire thus these Reptilians had no permission from High Command and were acting solely on their own conniving interest.

The agreement stated that a new breed of humanity should be created on Earth that would contain the DNA of all interested parties who participated in the "peace" process. A designated area on Earth would be set aside for the creation of this new species. The Earth-based Reptilians of Lemuria agreed to this under the condition that the Reptilian "body" be the foundation for this new being. It is of value to note here the body and the soul are somewhat separate. The soul itself cannot be created. The knowledge of how to do so forever remains in the hands of the Most High and eludes all species who have searched for how to create what they call "The God Particle".

This is why the original Bible states, "Let us make man in our own image." This is a plural statement because it was a group project.

To achieve a new species from the basis of a Reptilian androgynous body, it was necessary to separate the genetics into male and female components. This is the allegorical story in the Bible of Adam and Eve. Creating Eve out of the rib of Adam is actually the story of separating the androgynous Reptilian body into male and female. This is why most humans on this planet have Reptilian DNA with Reptilian traits. This is also why human fetuses go through Reptilian-style development in the womb before looking humanoid.

Many prototypes were developed over millennia. Under the supervision of the Hatona Council, races were created and then destroyed when it was not acceptable by all parties. This explains why ancestors of mankind appear and then suddenly disappear in layers of archaeological analysis. Or as it says in the movie the Matrix, “We have been successful at creating 6 previous Matrixes and have become quite efficient at destroying them”. Why? If you look at Earth the Planet alone as a resourceful galactic commodity it is obvious at this point that the population increase of the citizens aboard the Planet will cause desolation on Earth in the near future. Something has to be done. Because of the mental problems and negative programming that has ensued, many humans cannot be persuaded to stop killing the Planet for their own selfish gain. This problem is beyond proportion and also beyond comprehension of those who are “sleep walking”. They feel they are owed something but have none to collect it from save their own brother, so thus they prey upon each other. The true Cannibal or Canaan Baal.

Twelve humanoid, and one Reptilian, groups donated DNA for this purpose. Mankind was developed in the area now known as Iran/Iraq, as well as parts of Africa. Hybrids were also developed on Atlantis and Lemuria. Remnants of the “previous versions” are seen today as the Bigfoot or Yeti in North America and Asia; the aborigines of Australia; and the pygmies and Watusi in Africa.

Many of the African versions were enhanced by beings from a nomadic, artificial Planet known as Nibiru, or Marduk. These Reptilian-like beings travel in a manufactured world looping our solar system.

The Sumerians called them Anunnaki.

It is here, we would have to assume, the family of AN, with son's Enki / Enlil who play new roles as Lucifer, Michael, and Adonai/Yahweh arrived from Sirius in a technological craft, with all the genetic disasters of the Nephilim brought about in the phase called THE RETURN OF ENKI. While people like Sitchin can add useful puzzle pieces like how their home atmosphere needed repair due to their advent of technology and how they needed to use Earth's gold deposits to fix this issue, the Sumerian basically did not give Sitchin a clue as to the bigger galactic politic mess that triggered Enki's genetic experiments. After repeatedly encountering the Enki/Enlil story in Australia “fish or dolphin god vs snake god or LEVITE/Leviathan”, it was good to listen to Creto Mutwa tell the Zulu KILIMANJARO means ENKI mountain!

The cosmic joke to this project is that all of the groups donating DNA secretly programmed sequences or triggers to cause their genetic strand to be predominant at some point in the evolution phase in the project. This set the precedent for future conflict. Humanity will fight and be controlled by a problem that starts internally and manifest externally. No one group would ever be in charge. The project would seem doomed for failure before it even began however there is a hidden plan that only the wise know of, those who are not partial.

Such DNA programming invites tyranny and oppression. Master Soul personalities attracted to such a Planet gain a victim mentality. Many advanced cultures call Earth a prison planet because of its many layers and nets that hold its inhabitants here until they sharpen themselves and wise up, some dump their criminals here as punishment and those criminals now serve consecutive life sentences or more simply put, reincarnation. Such as Richard Dahmer, Charles Manson, Richard Speck, and Vlad the Impaler (Count Dracula), to name a few.

DUNE was a perfect prototype of a prison colony, like Australia. Earth fits this archetype also. Like in Dune Earth’s genetic cauldron of survival is the strongest DNA emerges and becomes a “VACCINE” for the conflict issues that plague multiple Galaxies. We are built by the design of the present so We may endure eternity.

The current story of the 2 brothers still tossing nuclear bombs at one another, then called East of Eden, today is called the Middle East. There is nothing new under you Sun you just keep forgetting. These wars on Earth are a fractal of the Orion Wars, with the main warring galactic elements all nicely staged to work out a galactic conflict in the microcosm called Earth.

The galactic players appear to be willing to up the stakes in 2010 with more “intervention” if their chess pieces start to lose. Enlil or Yahweh, the encoder of the Bible may not be willing to stand aside as his “chosen” Israel under the hex Draco flag is destroyed by yet another nuclear blast. This has been predicted by Bible Code, Fatima, & others.

Only those with “ignited” DNA, not junk DNA, can gain more time travel capability thus they can defeat such predatory ET’s that are inter-dimensional and outside of time. These genes which make further time travel possible are the precise jewel that always elude Yahweh, Enlil's reptile (Levite) family. They are stuck in THE CUBIC, genetic software environment of the tetra, the Hebrew alphabet which can only make a golem.

Akhanaton, who is also Enki, took the gold from Egypt, assumed the Moses identity and started the Essenes. Trouble began with the 12 tribes genetic implosion symmetry when the oriental Queen Draco Ashoka Ashkanazi, usurped the Sephatic Sects, installing Enlil's control in Israel. This also led to the founding of the Bank of England which owns the US banking industry.

The Reptilians ensured that the new Man would be receptive to the Reptilian frequency because the foundational prototype was Reptilian. This meant that the new Man could easily be mentally controlled by them through subtle programming.

Upon discovery of information indicating the Reptilians were controlling the new race through subversive methods, the Atlanteans began a severe electromagnetic bombardment of Lemuria. This bombardment caused the bulk of the continent to submerge into the ocean, now called the Pacific Ocean. The only parts left above the water are the Hawaiian Islands, the California coast west of the San Andreas fault, Australia, New Zealand, the South Pacific Islands, Japan, the Philippines, Taiwan, and the Islands of southeast Asia.

The Reptilian survivors went to Northern India, the Earth's interior, Venus, and parts of Central and South America. Inner Earth became the "homeland" for most of the surviving Reptilians of Lemuria. Here, they created a vast underground civilization with cavern systems extending all around the world. Keep in mind; Reptilians are by nature a subterranean species even in the wild they make their homes in holes burrowing within the Earth. The worm that will not die.

This started the legends of hell and demons living in the fire inside or under the Earth, your average "hell" story since many perceived the center of the Earth to be entirely lava and magma all the way to the core, this was proven not to be true in multiple scientific experiments. Remember, the hollow Earth is not a theory, but a scientific fact caused by the cooling and spinning of a Planet as it is ejected from a star or sun.

They built tubes containing fast, subway-like vehicles that can travel to the farthest points on Earth within a couple of hours. They created the famed underworld cities of Akkadia, Agartha, Hyperborea, and Shamballa that are sought by explorers to this very day. These cities are built along the inside wall of the inner crust that lines the interior of the Earth.

Remember, the hollow Earth is not a theory, but a scientific fact caused by the cooling and spinning of a planet as it is ejected from a star or sun.

The primary entry points to the inner Earth are via the North Pole, where there is an opening of 1300 miles, and the South Pole, with an opening of 950 miles. These can be seen from space. That is why commercial aircraft are not allowed to fly over these areas; not because of magnetic disturbances, which is the "official" reason. Admiral Byrd reported on these openings in the 1920s until his information was concealed by the government as his surviving daughter profusely fought against.

At the very centre, or nucleus, of inner Earth, there is a globe of energy left over from the creation of this planet that acts as an Inner Sun. It is the light from this object suspended by gravity and centrifugal force that causes the light of the aurora borealis.

Numerous cave entrances to the inner Earth exist in the Rocky Mountains and Sierra Mountains in the western United States, as well as less numerous openings in the “Oz”arks and Appalachian Mountains. Entries also exist in the Alps, Himalayas, Andes, and the Caribbean. There are also numerous sub-oceanic entry points, particularly in the deep trenches of the Pacific Ocean, the Caribbean Sea, and the Atlantic submarine mountain ranges especially on or near the Azores, Canary Islands, and the Falklands.

All of these areas are closely guarded by local governments and N.W.O. Elite Forces. Artificially created entrances exist under the Denver Airport, the Giza Plateau in Egypt, most major Air Force complexes around the world, and many of the Temples in India and China. A major Chinese entry point is under the Shensi Pyramid that is banned and out of bounds for everyone in Western China.

With the Reptilians forced underground the Atlanteans were free to play with this new mankind and establish humans as the ruler of the Planet. They established colonies all over the remaining portions of land. They invited the Sirians to come and play with them in Egypt. The Annunaki Beings were off-world in orbit due for a scheduled return but in the mean time the Atlanteans took control of their slaves. They also continued their experiment on sentient life forms and created new hybrids that moved about the sea, one of which became the Merfolk, a genetic blend of human and dolphin. The dolphin species was brought here from the Andromeda Galaxy to monitor all of these events and send back reports via sonar which covers the far reaches of space.

Whenever the Atlanteans detected underground Reptilian activity, they blasted the inner Earth with lasers and electromagnetic pulses to kill them. Unfortunately, this weakened the upper crust of the Earth's top mantle riding over the trapped magma between the upper and lower crusts. After several millennia of these attacks, the continents, especially Atlantis, started to become unstable. Their civilization began to break up which was a reflection of the physical deterioration of their continent. The Atlanteans became even more belligerent as fear and destruction overtook their mind-patterns. Black magicians and sorcerers took the place of organic scientists and spiritual guides.

Fortunately, there was some warning of the fate of Atlantis so the population foresaw the destruction that was coming. Many refugees relocated to what is now Egypt, Peru, the Appalachian Mountains and Western Europe, just before the continent collapsed into the upper crust of the Earth. This collapse caused the Earth to flip on its axis, creating the legend of the Flood written about in the Bible, and in other world cultures.

In the disarray of this catastrophe off-world intervention immediately began reorganizing the humans into new groups that became the basis for the future nations.

- The Sirians began to manipulate the Egyptian culture.
- Those from Tau Ceti manipulated the Slavic culture
- The Rigelians were busy in China and the Orient socializing the people there.

While all this was transpiring, and the Earth was in a state of array, the Reptilians saw an opportunity and they took it.

The Blue Bloods

The inner Earth provided a subterranean locale for the Reptilians to regroup and formulate plans to retake the surface. At this point, the Reptilians were completely cut off from their home in the Draco constellation. Their spaceship, the Moon, was in human hands. They were alone, isolated on a now hostile planet. They needed to defend themselves and somehow emerge back on the scene to gather the necessary resources to restore their link and re-construct hyper-dimensional portals that had been destroyed.

They developed a plan to insidiously retake the surface by blending their genetics with the genetics of the surface humans. Because the human prototype already had Reptilian genetics, it was easy to access the mind-pattern. The Reptilian frequency was already established in the brain stem as well as the Reptilian brain section of these hybrid humans.

The population of Sumer was chosen as the starting point. These humans were primarily descendants of the Martian, Maldekian, and Lyraen refugees. They abducted members of their ruling classes, including political leaders replacing many of them eventually with humans who were hybrids.

The new hybridization program took several generations to perfect. Their goal was to reach a human with a Reptilian genetic 50/50 split. This would produce a human-looking Reptilian that could easily shapeshift from Reptilian to human, then back again. Shapeshifting was accomplished simply by concentrating on the genetics the hybrid wished to open, or lock up, whatever the case may be.

For this program the Reptilians engaged the help of the Sirians who had the technology to implement such a program. The Sirians knew a lot about genetic alterations and mind-programming, which they freely shared with the Reptilians when a pact between the two parties was arranged.

Once the hybridization program was complete, the Sumerian leaders were now shape-shifting Reptilians. The new Reptilian hybrid became the Elite of that culture. Their blood, because of the increased Reptilian DNA, contained more of a copper content.

Since copper-based blood turns blue-green upon oxidizing, these Reptilian hybrids were called "Bluebloods".

American government is the current main focus of the Reptilian shape-shifters. Your attention is drawn to the vertical slit eyeballs which shape shift in too many US military leaders - Norman Russbacher, Rupert Murdoch, etc. Pictures are at youtube.com. We suggested new rules requiring all government decisions and voting must take place in 20% oxygen air, to kill the shape-shifters, of course they will never agree to this.

The Bluebloods quickly realized that with a 50/50 human/Reptilian genetic split, it was necessary to intermarry to maintain the 50/50 bloodline necessary to shapeshift. When the split increased too far to the Reptilian side, shape-shifting became difficult, and holding human form became impossible. In these cases, it was discovered that the ingestion of human hormones, flesh, and blood, allowed the Reptilians to maintain the human form.

Human form was necessary to maintain to avoid scaring the population, which was now not accustomed to the Reptilian form.

Control of the masses was easier when the orders came from a humanoid. The Reptilian format was kept to religious icons and legends. The statues of their Gods and Goddesses reflect the Reptilian influence, even showing a female Reptilians holding hybrid babies.

The shape-shifting Reptilian Bluebloods also asked the Sirians for help with the daily maintenance of their human forms. The Sirians determined that feeding the hybrids human hormones and blood in an altered animal form would be the easiest way to do it unnoticed by the population.

The sacrificial animal used by most Middle Eastern people was the wild boar, so the Sirians chose it as the basis for this new animal hybrid. Human genetics were mixed with those of the wild boar to create the domesticated pig. This animal was served daily to the Bluebloods as a method of temporarily maintaining their human form until they could use an actual human in a sacrificial ceremony.

Because the domesticated pig is a combination of human and animal genetics, eating it is a form of cannibalism. This explains why the Hebrews considered it unclean to eat. This is also why the pig is considered to be one of the most intelligent animals on Earth, why pig skin can be grafted directly onto humans in burn cases, and why pig heart valves can be used in humans with little difficulty. Cancer drugs and other chemicals are often tested on pigs before humans.

The domesticated pigs frequency, or group mind, is the perfect vehicle for animal species to enter before entering human form on their evolutionary progression. To a lesser degree, the same is true about cats.

As time progressed, the civilization of Sumer declined and transformed into other cultures. Vast migrations from Sumer to other locations in Central Asia occurred. The migrating peoples took their Blueblood leaders with them, as they were their royalty and kings.

The Sumerians became known as the sum-Aryans, or just, Aryans. They spread out across Asia into the steppes of Russia and into the Northern Indian subcontinent. In India they encountered the dark-skinned Dravidians, who were Reptilian remnants from Lemuria. The Dravidians were driven to the central and southern parts of India, while the Aryan hybrids took control of the north, and into the foothills of the Himalayas.

The Aryan leaders, all Bluebloods, became the Sultans and Rajas, the Blue People of legend and history. Sumerians also created Babylonia.

The Sumerians migrated to the area known as the Caucasus Region, where the Khazars developed. From the Caucasus Region, the Blueblood kings and their people spread west toward Europe, developing into the Franks, Cambrians, and Teutonic nationalities. These nationalities were also being manipulated by various alien cultures like the Antarians, Arcturians, Aldebarans, Tau Cetians, and other remnants of the Lyraens, such as the Atlans. The Atlans located here eventually became the Celts also called Druids.

To back-track for just a bit, I had said in a previous chapter that the descendants of the Reptilian hybrid Sumerians went into Central Asia and the Middle East. They mostly established themselves in the Caucasus Mountains and became the Khazars. From here, they spread west toward Europe, seeding the national identities for the Vikings, the Franks, the Teutonic peoples, and the Russians. Keep in mind that when Atlantis sank, some of those refugees went to Western Europe and developed into the Celts. Some went to Greece and others to the Italian Peninsula.

Some off world Beings from other constellations also seeded small populations of people thus embedding them with cultures and ways of life that corresponded to their particular Planets. As integration and colonization continued Earth became a large melting pot of various essences all fused inside the human cells.

These Blueblood leaders also infiltrated the Middle Eastern peoples, such as the Biblical Canaanites, Malachites, and Kittites.

At the same time in Egypt, the Sirians were reorganizing the Atlantean descendants there, known as the Phoenicians. The Phoenicians colonized the coastal Middle East and the British Isles. They even colonized parts of the North-eastern North American continent, all the way to the Great Lakes area. Some of their mines and writing on stone tablets can still be found in the woods of North America.

The Sirians were also genetically manipulating the race known as the ancient Hebrews. The Jewish people are actually a combination of these genetically manipulated Hebrews and the Sumerians. These Jewish people were then released into the Palestinian territory. The name, Palestine, comes from the ancient people, the Philistines, who were actually Phoenicians.

All of these mixed in the coastal plains of Palestine and created a new religion based on sacrifice and an avenging alien controller, that they called God, or Elohim.

Similarly, when the Aryans mixed with the Dravidians in India, they created the Hindu religion, which is actually a recreation of the Reptilian seven-tier hierarchy. Shiva, the Hindu Satan was a God believed in and worshipped by these people who set themselves up in Harrapan called also Arrapan. The caste system of India is a direct copy of the Reptilian division of function.

At the same time that all of this was going on in western and central Asia, the Rigelians, were developing the remnants of Lemuria who escaped to the coast of eastern Asia. The Rigelians were a human civilization that was controlled, and eventually assimilated, by the Reptilians. The Rigelian/Reptilian hybrids set up dynasties in what is now Japan and China that developed independently of their western cousins.

In their mania for control, the Reptilians used the various races that donated DNA to the original human project. They fastidiously monitored these related sections of hybrids to determine which was best suited for overall control, and which for subservience. Most of the hybrids could be controlled through the Reptilian brain that hooked them into Reptilian mind-patterns, some were more controllable than others, an still small groups could not be controlled at all.

In Europe, the Bluebloods insidiously took control of the various tribes and groups, becoming their kings and royalty. They infiltrated the Arcturian experiment, called the Etruscans and started to create a new global empire through the Romans. These European Bluebloods then eliminated the Antarian experiment in Greece leaving only fragments. They then instigated their plan for globalization through the Roman Empire.

The Reptilians even ignored parts of the treaty with the Sirians by infiltrating the Egyptian experiment and implementing their religion there.

The Reptilian hybrids became like the endometriosis of the known world, slowly growing into all areas and creating control through the Blueblood system.

The Reptilians were not the first colonists on Earth, they were not the only ones who interfered with human development on this planet. In all there are twelve other groups involved with the manipulation of the human DNA. This is hidden in the allegory of Zodiac, Disciples, Months, etc.

When adding the Reptilians to the twelve groups, it results in human beings with a genetic mixture of 13 different strains. This is the hidden 13th tribe and much of the significance behind the number 13.

The result was a general free-for-all. All these humanoid aliens were culturally and physically manipulated by different groups.

Tau Ceti/humans were virulently against the grey alien race and the Reptilians, because their worlds had been attacked, and their children stolen and killed by both races. The Tau Cetians vowed to follow the grey race and destroy them through time.

In the 1950s, the Soviet Union signed an agreement with the Tau Cetians to use bases in Siberia and under the Ural Mountains. For this reason, the city of Sverdlovsk, named after the first president of the Soviet Union, was closed to outsiders.

Many experiments involving radiation on the public were performed here from 1958 through the 1980s. A United States spy plane was shot down over Sverdlovsk in the early 1960s when the United States was trying to learn about the secret activities taking place there.

In central Europe, the German tribes were genetically manipulated by beings from Aldebaran. These people are very scientifically-oriented. They are generally blonde-haired and blue-eyed, with a minority of dark-haired, light-brown to hazel-eyed people. They are militaristic supremacist. For almost 2,000 years, the Aldebarans have been energetically connecting to the Germanic peoples, telepathically sending information to them instructing tight knit groups on what to prepare for in the future. They make up the Neo Nazi party formulated to bring about Homo-Luminous or what they call the Light Human, Illuminated, Super Human.

Many humans of the Aldebaran frequency have mixed with the Tau Ceti descendants in the Slavic area, particularly in Poland and Russia. Hitler knew this. That is why he was so adamant about invading those countries and incorporating them into his empire.

Hitler was only half Germanic. His father was a wealthy Jewish businessman in Austria. His mother worked at the home as a maid. She had an affair with the master of the house, and when the wife found out about it, she had the maid, Hitler's mother, thrown out. This Jewish businessman in turn did nothing to help Hitler's mother. For this reason, Hitler hated the Jews. He was also deeply mind-controlled.

The Aldebarans genetically infused the Vikings. These Nordic people inherited the aggressive and militaristic tendencies that are also seen in the Germans. The Vikings plundered and raped across Europe for centuries, but did not have the technological ability to stay in power.

Beings from the Antarian star system were behind the genetic manipulation of ancient Greece. These people were a society predominantly based upon homosexuality. Females were used for breeding only. In fact, there were Antarian observers at the Montauk Project who were interested in the programming aspects of sexuality as they related to the Wilhelm Reich methods.

The Antarians are dark, often with olive skin, dark eyes, and short, thin bodies. They have perfect musculature due to the density of their home-world.

The Greek-Antarians colonized Spain and Portugal. Their descendants further mixed with the Romans, and Arabs who are predominantly Sumerian/Reptilian. These then colonized Central and South America, mixing their genetics with the native Indians who were of Atlantean-Procyon descent.

The Procyon star system does not have much technology. The Procyons were brought to this planet after the fall of Atlantis to boost the survival rate of the refugees. They became the Maya, Aztec, and Inca. They were given ancient Lemurian and Atlantean outposts in the Andes and Sierras of Mexico. They tried unsuccessfully to recreate these cultures, including emulating the building of the pyramids, performing medical procedures, and finally, sacrificing to the Reptilian gods. This is why their legends speak of blond men returning in chariots from space to take them away.

The Anasazi Indians of the American southwest were also brought from Procyon. It was the Sirians who so generously provided transportation. Over the millennia and recent centuries, movements of nations, colonizations, war, and famines, have thrown the Earth's population into a giant melting pot. Strands of genetics have continuously mixed with one another, especially in North America, Europe, Australia, the Caribbean, and South America.

While all of this was going on in Europe and the Middle East, the Chinese Empire was expanding over East Asia, and the Dravidian-Reptilian culture in India was being replaced by the Aryan (Ari- and Sum-Arian) hordes from Central Asia. In South America, the Inca Empire was flourishing as it was mixed with the genetics of the Procyon star system and thus many initiations have been taking place in locations like Peru without the notice of the masses much preparation is taken place for what will happen when the stars align.

The same mixture was happening in North and Central America creating the Toltecs, Mayans, and Aztecs. All of these cultures, used blood-ritual and human sacrifice. This indicates that the Procyonians were themselves conquered by the Reptilians and did their bidding, even though they were humanoid. All of the Central and South American cultures used snakes and Reptilians as symbols.

These people have a blend of Lemurian/Draco and Atlantean/Human genetics mixed with the Procyonian DNA. Basically if they are not mentally strong, they are easily persuaded to partake in Reptilian functions.

The Program

The new era is now at hand. Most of the humans are so mixed up and confused they are flat out not functioning. Chakras are powered down and the brain is operating at less than 10% for most. At times they glimpse reality but in the same moment they fall back into the illusion. This is like being heavily sedated by a passivity drug such as continuous doses of Fluoride. These documents are the last warnings to the Human Race. Collective humanity has already ascended far beyond this destructive cycle and this what you are experiencing in your “primary reality” is a stasis point or Nexus ribbon folded upon itself. One is encouraged to take the knowledge and resources that have been provided and use them to enhance individual awareness until you awaken. The Matrix is scheduled to close for repairs soon. When it resumes, those that find themselves still in it will know nothing of their past. Every version of the Matrix attempts to get better at keeping its inhabitants from waking up, seize this moment while you can!

It is at that point you will figure out how you connect into all of this. One should keep in mind, thousands perish every day. The only thing that makes you special is when you decide to become special. That can be accomplished by extending your capability and intelligence as far as you can beyond your immediate peers. We have now made you aware of what is going on here on Tiamat/Earth and as it is not Our custom to introduce any problem without a solution you may refer to the site www.thewords.ning.com to begin rapid brain maintenance and repair. I have discovered since my awakening many things that will assist you along the way. I share that openly with you as brothers and sisters for free. You will also find there DNA aligning frequencies and a crystal compound that will rejuvenate the “bodies”. We are here for you, Outside of Time. Sevan- Arch Chariot

MERKABAH (= CHARIOT) MYSTICISM developed out of speculation on and expansion of the visions of Ezekiel (chapters 1, 8, and 10) and, to a lesser extent, Isaiah (chapter 6) and Daniel (chapter 2). This strain of mysticism meanders through the intertestamental pseudepigrapha* and even touches corners of gnostic and Qumran texts.

Merkabah material and references can be found in shreds, often more provocative than telling, in the Talmud and other rabbinic writings.[†] However, the major concentrated expression of merkabah mysticism is that cluster of writings which has come to be called the hekhalot (= HEAVENLY HALLS) literature, which is the focus of this paper.

* 1 Enoch 14; The Life of Adam and Eve (including The Apocalypse of Moses); The Apocalypse of Abraham. For translations of these, see James H. Charlesworth (ed.), The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, Volume 1 (Garden City: Doubleday and Company, 1983). 1 Enoch 14 is particularly important; Gruenwald (in AMM, p. 36) says, "...it is the oldest Merkavah vision we know of from outside the canonical Scriptures. ... Indeed, one can consider this particular vision a model-vision of Merkavah m. Mysticism." (On AMM, see below, p. 3.)

 On merkabah in gnostic works: (texts) "The Hypostasis of the Archons" and "On the Origin of the World," in James M. Arguments over the dating of this body of literature continue, but there is general agreement to a range of 200-800 C.E. The bounds and structure of these writings are also matters of dispute, for the notions of titles and fixed contents of a specific canon of hekhalot books appear to be more academic conveniences than reflections of the true nature or state of the literature.

Since the 'seventies, scholarly work on the hekhalot texts has increased dramatically, as the publication dates on a clear majority of the books and articles discussed below attest. Before this spate of academic activity, there were in English little more than Gershom Scholem's works* and Hugo Odeberg's attempt at a critical edition of one of the hekhalot texts to shed light on this oblique collection of writings. Even as this lament is being recalled, no time should be lost in acknowledging Scholem's inescapable influence on this and all other aspects of the study of Jewish mysticism. Some of Scholem's conclusions regarding the hekhalot have been challenged, and some of his observations on and characterizations of the hekhalot texts have come to seem convenient, imposing order on that which is, in fact, near chaos. Yet, Scholem's writings on this subject remain some of the clearest and best supported. They are also among the most accessible, not only in their style but in their actual availability. As for Odeberg, his lone work is more problematic. As significant as it was, Odeberg's treatment of Sefer ha-Hekhalot (BOOK OF THE HEKHALOT, dubbed by Odeberg "3 Enoch") is now considered unreliable and misleading on many points. But, as contemporary scholar David Halperin has pointed out[†], Odeberg's work has "proved easier to criticize than to emulate," for critical editions of hekhalot texts—with English translations or not—are few indeed.

Today, however, we are in pretty fair shape to study merkabah mysticism and hekhalot texts, though some of the leading scholars in this field publish in German[‡] and, of course, Hebrew. Nevertheless, from the texts and studies now available in English, the persistent reader can certainly gain firm impressions of (i) the contents of the hekhalot texts, (ii) the issues captivating contemporary scholarship regarding the hekhalot texts, and (iii) the place of the hekhalot texts in the history and development of Judaism, early Christianity, and their mysticism.[‡]

In the following pages, books, sections of books, and articles on merkabah mysticism and hekhalot literature—including translations—are described. I also discuss the various texts attached, however loosely, with the hekhalot corpus, with indications of sources for translations and studies of them.

Morton Smith's "Observations on Hekhalot Rabbati," in Biblical and Other Studies, edited by Alexander Altmann (Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1963) was another early notice. In the 'forties, Smith translated Hekhalot Rabbati into English (the complete text—not just the second half). This translation circulated among scholars in the field but was never published. The typescript was corrected by Scholem, whose occasional notes appear in the margins. Scholem mentions Smith's translation in Jewish Gnosticism..., page 11, note 4.

‡ In German there is Peter Schäfer and his team. Certainly, the most significant work which Schäfer has overseen is Synopse zur Hekhalot-Literatur (Tübingen: J. C. B. Mohr [Paul Siebeck], 1981), which presents in the original Hebrew and Aramaic an array of manuscript readings side by side. Synopse was followed by Geniza-Fragmente zur Hekhalot-Literatur by the same team (1984, same publisher). Soon after, German translations of Synopse appeared (1987 onward, same publisher). Schäfer has also published a collection of his articles—ten in German, three in English—as Hekhalot-Studien (1988, same publisher).

LISTED CHRONOLOGICALLY

1965

- Scholem, Gershom. Jewish Gnosticism, Merkavah Mysticism, and Talmudic Tradition. New York: The Jewish Theological Seminary of America, 1960; 2nd improved edition, 1965.

The studies of Gershom Scholem form the basis of contemporary scholarship on Jewish mysticism, and, hence, provide the foundation of subsequent work on merkavah mysticism and bekhalot texts. Other works by Scholem which address this subject at length are the following:

- Major Trends in Jewish Mysticism. Jerusalem: Schocken Publishing House, 1941; London: Thames and Hudson, 1955; reprinted frequently New York: Schocken Books.
Lecture 2: “Merkabah Mysticism and Jewish Gnosticism”
- Kabbalah [articles collected from ENCYCLOPEDIA JUDAICA]. Jerusalem and New York: Keter Publishing House and Times Books, 1974; rpt. New York, Meridian, 1978; rpt. New York, Dorset Press, 1987. pages 8-21; pages 373-6: § MERKABAH MYSTICISM; pages 377-81: § METATRON
- On the Mystical Shape of the Godhead: Basic Concepts in the Kabbalah. New York: Schocken Books, 1991. The original version of this work was published in German, 1962, and subsequently in a revised and emended Hebrew version, 1976.
Chapter 1. “Shéur Komah: The Mystical Shape of the Godhead”

These works (Major Trends, Jewish Gnosticism, Kabbalah, and Mystical Shape) are cited not only to establish the starting point for “modern” scholarship on bekhalot/merkavah mysticism but also to demonstrate Scholem’s own development in appraising the subject.

- Gruenwald, Ithamar. Apocalyptic and Merkavah Mysticism [ARBEITEN ZUR GESCHICHTE DES ANTIKEN JUDENTUMS UND DES URCHRISTENTUMS, Band XIV]. Leiden – Köln: E. J. Brill, 1980. (hereafter AMM)

The first half of AMM analyzes the major features of the merkavah tradition, beginning in Jewish apocalyptic, then developing onto “the literature that first gives a full-scale presentation of Merkavah mysticism” i.e., the bekhalot literature, “composed in Eretz-Yisrael (circa 200-700),” thus ending “as a creative literary stream ... some time in the Ge’onic period.”

The second half of AMM describes the bekhalot texts one by one, including Re’uyot Yehezkel and Sefer ha-Razim.

Two appendices by Saul Lieberman follow: (1) “Metatron, the Meaning of His Name and His Functions,” and (2) “The Knowledge of Halakha by the Author (or Authors) of the Heikhaloth.”

- Halperin, David J. The Merkavah in Rabbinic Literature [AMERICAN ORIENTAL SERIES, #62]. New Haven: American Oriental Society, 1980.

Halperin’s study investigates the references to the merkavah tradition in Mishnah Hagigah 2:1, Tosefta Hagigah 2:1-7, Palestinian Talmud Hagigah 77a-d, and Babylonian Talmud Hagigah 11b-16a.

“...I believe that I have shown that Scholem’s position is not securely supported by the rabbinic sources on the merkavah, which, taken by themselves, provide little reason to believe in the existence of the ‘merkavah mysticism’ envisioned by Scholem.” – page 184

- Chernus, Ira. Mysticism in Rabbinic Judaism: Studies in the History of Midrash [STUDIA JUDAICA, Band XI]. Berlin – New York: Walter de Gruyter, 1982.

This series of essays shows the relationship between merkabab mysticism and rabbinic midrashim following, generally, two motifs: the revelation on Mount Sinai and the eschatological rewards of the world to come.

From Apocalypticism... is a collection of twelve articles (plus an introductory essay), most previously published. Four of the articles are new, and one appears in English for the first time.

"The traditions and writings which are discussed in this collection of studies crystallized among people whose intellectual horizons were not as clearly and sharply outlined as those of the modern mind. For those people, the demarcation lines between dreams and dream-like situations, on the one hand, and rational wakefulness, on the other, were rather flexible and likely to be altogether ignored." FACES is a thorough study which challenges many conclusions and assumptions of previous scholars, tracing merkabab material from the Bible, through the apocalypses and rabbinic literature, concluding with the hekhalot texts. Translations of the text Re'iyot Yez'kiel (VISIONS OF EZEKIEL) and other important segments of hekhalot material are included.

FACES is valuable in a way that few books of this ilk are in that Halperin invites the reader to engage in his entire scholarly process, which he lays out in great detail in his 450-page text, two-tiered notes (footnotes and endnotes), seven informative appendices (Appendix I: “Orientation to Rabbinic Sources” is especially helpful), and full reference list (which is divided into sixteen sections according to topic).

HMG is a detailed look at a selection of hekhalot texts. Instead of summarizing each text in turn, Schäfer organizes his analysis thematically, considering each text’s notion of God, angels, and man. He clarifies the roles of two distinct motifs: (i) ascent through the hekhalot to the throne of glory, and (ii) the adjuration—either to God or to one of his angels.

- Wolfson, Elliot R. Through a Speculum That Shines: Vision and Imagination in Medieval Jewish Mysticism (Princeton: Princeton University Press, 1994) (hereafter SPECULUM)

"This book ... is an attempt to treat in a comprehensive manner the problem of visionary experience in some of the main texts of the classical period of medieval Jewish mysticism. I have isolated the problem of vision and visualization since this constitutes one of the essential phenomenological concerns in the various mystical corpora produced by Jewish authors throughout history. I make no claim that mysticism is identical to or collapsible into the phenomenon of vision. I do, however, maintain that the examination of this issue provides an excellent speculum through which to view the religious experience of different Jewish mystics.

While the major focus of this book, from a chronological perspective, is the High Middle Ages...(chapters 5 to 7), in chapter 3 I discuss the nature of the vision of the glory in the ancient Jewish mystical corpus known as the Hekhalot or Merkavah literature. The justification for including this chapter is both historical-textual and phenomenological." (—page 9; my ellipses--DK)

After providing a summary of scholarship on hekhalot literature, CHAPTER 3 ["Visionary Ascent and Enthronement in the Hekhalot Literature"] discusses the vision of God as presented therein—citing Hekhalot Rabbati most often. Wolfson explores problematic aspects—"The Paradox of Seeing the Hidden God," eroticism, anthropomorphism—which bear upon the import of the texts: Did actual experiences determine the texts, or did the texts determine the experiences? Are the experiences themselves "real" or "imagined"? Does the hekhalot literature represent experience or exegesis? Are such distinctions useful in understanding the intent of the hekhalot authors? Through the chapter, Wolfson remains in dialogue with other scholars who have treated the hekhalot material—Scholem, Schäfer, and Halperin in particular.

“From a phenomenological perspective as well, it is obvious that the Hekhalot corpus is an intrinsic part of such a study [i.e., of visionary experience in medieval Jewish mysticism], insofar as the vision of glory and the chariot served as a paradigm for visionary experience in later Jewish mysticism, influenced in particular...by the philosophical reinterpretations of this religious experience, as will be discussed in chapter 4 [“Theories of Glory and Visionary Experience in Pre-Kabbalistic Sources”]. To be sure, in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries the various ‘trends’ of Jewish mysticism took shape in such a way that the chariot vision is hermeneutically transformed. It is nevertheless the case that the major mystical ideologies of the period to be discussed in this monograph, the German Pietists [CHAPTER 5: “Haside Ashkenaz: Verdical and Docetic ($\approx$ “real” or “imagined”) Interpretations of the Chariot Vision”] and the Provençal-Spanish kabbalists of the theosophic trend [CHAPTERS 6 and 7, “Visionary Gnosis and the Role of the Imagination in Theosophic Kabbalah” and “The Hermeneutics of Visionary Experience: Revelation and Interpretation in the Zohar”] orient themselves in terms of the chariot. In that sense we can speak of these schools as hermeneutical transformations of the Hekhalot mysticism.” (—pages 9-10; my brackets, parentheses, and ellipses--DK).

- Deutsch, Nathaniel. The Gnostic Imagination. Gnosticism, Mandaeism, and Merkabah Mysticism [BRILL’S SERIES ON JEWISH STUDIES, 13]. Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1995.

Deutsch gives an account of the relationship between Gnosticism and merkabah mysticism using Scholem’s written statements on these as a starting point. He surveys a range of scholarly opinion on issues surrounding these topics, drawing on many of the writers mentioned in this bibliography. Deutsch summarizes his view of Scholem on page 36: “Even though his [Scholem’s] comparative analysis of Gnosticism and Merkabah mysticism is problematic from a number of methodological perspectives, its role as an intellectual catalyst cannot be overstated.”

“Many statements about Jesus in the Gospel according to John can be paralleled by what is said about Metatron in 3 Enoch and the Son in Valentinian Gnosticism. Perhaps the most striking similarity is that they all are represented as the possessor of the Name of God, the concept of which plays an enormous role in Judaism. As the figure of Metatron appears to be some sort of systemization of and elaboration upon everything that was said about the principal angel in older sources, works outdating even John, it would seem that both Johannine and Gnostic Christology owe to mystical Judaism.” (INTRODUCTION, pages 3-4)

DESCENT offers a discussion of the heavenly journey, yeridah, literally “descent,” to the merkabab in various passages of the hekhhalot literature. Kuyt outlines the contents of Hekhalot Rabbati, Hekhalot Zutreti, Ma'aseh Merkabab, Merkabab Rabbah, 3 Enoch, and one of the Genizah fragments. - Kanagaraj, Jey J. Mysticism in the Gospel of John: An Inquiry into Its Background [JOURNAL FOR THE STUDY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT, Sup. 158]. Sheffield: Sheffield Academic Press, 1998.

The first half of the book (Parts 1 and 2) provides an excellent survey of merkabab material and the literature (apocalyptic, non-apocalyptic—including Qumran material—and Christian) clustered around it from Hellenistic times through the first century. Part 2 examines merkabab mysticism in some detail to set up an analysis of its connections with Johannine mysticism.

- Lesses, Rebecca Macy. Ritual Practices to Gain Power: Angels, Incantations, and Revelation in Early Jewish Mysticism [HARVARD THEOLOGICAL STUDIES 44]. Harrisburg: Trinity Press International, 1998. (hereafter POWER)

Lesses concentrates on the adjuration sections of the hekhhalot material. Along with an analysis of these “ritual performances,” Lesses presents a survey of current scholarship (covering many of the authors mentioned in the present paper). Further, she attempts to set the adjurations of the hekhhalot into the milieu of the Greco-Egyptian ritual literature of late antiquity.

- Deutsch, Nathaniel. Guardians of the Gate: Angelic Vice Regency in Late Antiquity [BRILL'S SERIES IN JEWISH STUDIES, 22]. Leiden: Brill, 1999.

“Within Merkabah mysticism, God is frequently depicted as an exalted and highly remote figure. Thus, Scholem was partly right when he described the gulf between humans and the God in Merkabah mysticism. Yet, Scholem erred when he emphasized the impossibility of closing this gulf—that is, when he defined the God of Merkabah mysticism as absolutely inaccessible or transcendent. How was the distance between human beings and God breached in Merkabah mysticism? The answer to this question requires an appreciation of the paradoxical nature of the angelic vice regent” (Guardians, p. 9). Deutsch discusses Metatron in this role, with comments on Akatriel; he then examines similar figures in Gnosticism (Sabaoth) and Mandaicism (Abathur).

Kanarfogel tracks the influence and use of hekhhalot and other mystical and magical material to 12th- and 13th-century Germany and France. His argument is that esoteric teachings and practices spread beyond the Hasidei Ashkenaz to the tosafists, rabbinic descendants of Rashi, conventionally considered to have been inclined exclusively toward study of the Talmud.

In the first chapter, Davila provides an excellent summary of the issues and debates in hekhhalot scholarship. He then makes his case for understanding the hekhhalot texts not as being mere literary constructs but as describing the experiences of real practitioners, whom Davila likens to shamans, i.e., “religious functionaries,” “intermediaries” seeking “to gain power over the spiritual world.”

In the first section of A Transparent Illusion, Morray-Jones builds upon (and occasionally corrects) comments regarding the “water test” passages in his own earlier two-part article, “Paradise Revisited (2 Cor 12:1-12): The Jewish Mystical background of Paul’s Apostolate, Part 1: The Jewish Sources” and “Part 2: Paul’s Heavenly Ascent and Its Significance (both in Harvard Theological Review 86, Cambridge: 1993). Thereafter, Morray-Jones offers an in-depth analysis of the “water vision episode” within the context of the hekhalot literature: Hekhalot Rabbati and, especially, Hekhalot Zutarti. An extensive appendix discusses “Solomon and the Queen of Sheba,” a story which “appears to derive from the same traditional background and to be related in some manner to the water vision episode itself” (—page 230).

- Arbel, Vita Daphna. Beholders of Divine Secrets: Mysticism and Myth in the Hekhalot and Merkavah Literature. Albany: State University of New York Press, 2003.

Arbel’s summary of hekhalot and merkavah literature and scholarly approaches to it is not as engaging or detailed as, for instance, the introduction in Davila’s Descenders to the Chariot (see above). However, Arbel nicely treats the question, “What is MYSTICAL about hekhalot-merkavah mysticism?” i.e., what are its “mystical” characteristics and intentions?

FROM THE SUNY PRESS CATALOGUE (Spring 2003): “While previous scholarship has demonstrated the connection between Hekhalot and Merkavah mysticism and parallel traditions in Rabbinical writings, the Dead Sea Scrolls, apocalyptic, early Christian, and Gnostic sources, this work points out additional mythological traditions that resonate in this literature. Arbel suggests that mythological patterns of expression, as well as themes and models rooted in Near Eastern mythological traditions are employed, in spiritualized fashion, to communicate mystical content.”

Elior details the traditions and literature leading up to the hekhalot texts. She writes, “Heikhalot literature preserves the living continuation of the sacred service by recovering it from the realm of space and time: the Temple/heikhal is lifted up to the heavens, and the priests serving therein become the ministering angels in the supernal Temples; the sacred service in these heavenly sanctuaries is described explicitly in terms of the rituals of the earthly Temple. This metamorphosis is implemented through the terminology of Merkavah mysticism, combining the hallowed memory of ritual with creative imagination and visionary inspiration, creating a bridge between the ‘revealed’ and the ‘hidden’” (INTRODUCTION, pages 14-15).

FROM MARTYR TO MYSTIC: THE STORY OF THE TEN MARTYRS, HEKHALOT RABBATI, AND THE MAKING OF “MERKAVAH MYSTICISM.” Ph.D. dissertation, Princeton: Princeton University, 2004)

“My emphasis on the situated nature of “Merkavah mysticism” [as opposed to a “radical alternative or esoteric counterpart of ‘normative’ rabbinic Judaism”] represents, at least in part, a reaction to the scholarly literature that stems from this homogenizing tendency [which is to “routinely conflate later applications or elaborations on Heikhalot texts with the Jewish ‘mystical’ or ‘magical’ literatures of Late Antiquity”]. To this end, this study aims to illuminate the particular historical circumstances and ideological motivations that led the creators of Hekhalot Rabbati to formulate their novel conception of heavenly ascent as an esoteric ritual discipline. I thereby pointedly emphasize the role of Heikhalot literature in the transformation of Jewish religious thought from its largely decentralized roots in Late Antiquity to its gradual drive towards systematization in the High Middle Ages.” – PREFACE, pages viii-ix.

PART TWO, “Polemical (Adamic, Mosaic, and Noachic) Developments and Their Role in the Evolution of Enoch’s Roles and Titles in the Slavonic Apocalypse (= 2 ENOCH)”

Orlov fills a gap in scholarship by reintroducing the Slavonic pseudepigrapha (THE APOCALYPSE OF ABRAHAM, THE LADDER OF JACOB, and, particularly, 2 ENOCH) into the progression from Second Temple apocalypticism to hekhalot literature (which progression, borrowing from Hugo Odeberg’s analysis, can be epitomized as 1 ENOCH → 2 ENOCH → 3 ENOCH). Orlov refers to 2 ENOCH as “proto-hekhalot,” which indicates, in Orlov’s assessment, the degree to which rabbinic mystical and hekhalot literature relied upon it.

Alexander treats “Heikhalot Mysticism and Qumran” in CHAPTER 5, stating,

...comparison of Qumran mysticism with Heikhalot mysticism draws Qumran into the larger discipline of the study of Jewish mysticism, and puts it in a broader intellectual context. It is probably not unfair to say that the study of the Scrolls has been somewhat marginalized within the study of Judaism, and its significance underestimated by mainline Jewish Studies scholars (see Schiffman 1994 [Reclaiming the Dead Sea Scrolls—noted immediately below]). ... It is only recently that attempts have been made to integrate the Qumran evidence into the general history of Jewish mysticism (e.g., Elior 2004 [The Three Temples—noted above]). As we shall see, this evidence arguably challenges Scholem’s paradigm of Jewish mysticism [as in Major Trends in Jewish Mysticism—noted above], and forces a revision of it... - Orlov, Andrei A. From Apocalypticism to Merkabah Mysticism: Studies in Slavonic Pseudepigrapha. [Supplements to THE JOURNAL FOR THE STUDY OF JUDAISM, v. 114]. Leiden – Boston: Brill 2007.

PART ONE of Orlov's study is an exhaustive (near 100-page) "Bibliography of the Slavonic Pseudepigrapha and Related Literature"; PART TWO, "Studies in Slavonic Pseudepigrapha," "contains several [17] essays previously published in journals inaccessible to many interested readers" (page xi).

In the introduction to the articles in PART TWO, Orlov writes, “It should be noted that 2Enoch, the Apocalypse of Abraham, and the Ladder of Jacob represent a unique group of texts that share a theophanic and mediatorial language that, in my view, is as different from the mainstream of early apocalyptic and pseudepigraphic writings as it is from later Hekhalot materials. This group of materials gives evidence of the lost practical and literary development that could very well represent an important transitional stage in early Jewish mystical testimonies, serving as a bridge from the matrix of early Jewish Apocalypticism, as it was manifested in early Enochic literature, to the matrix of early Jewish mysticism as it became manifest in rabbinic Merkabah and Hekhalot materials. The articles gathered in this volume intend to illustrate this transitional character of the Slavonic pseudepigraphic evidence by exploring theophanic and angelological imagery found in 2Enoch, the Ladder of Jacob, the Slavonic version of 3 Baruch and other pseudepigraphical texts preserved in Slavonic. It appears that the theophanic and angelological developments found in these documents occupy an intermediary stage between Second Temple Apocalypticism and Hekhalot mysticism and thus exhibit its own distinctive, one might say ‘proto-Hekhalot,’ mystical mold.” (—page 105)

Toward the end of CHAPTER 4, Halbertal writes, “The fundamental unit for the transmission of esoteric oral knowledge is the family. According to the testimony of Rabbi Eleazar of Worms, the termination of his family line, as a result of the early death of his son and combined with the diminution of his students, moved him to commit the secrets of the Torah to writing. The fear of the loss of the secret as a result of the diminution of the line of transmission justified the writing down of the secret; thus, the knowledge could be passed on without relying on the continuous chain of oral tradition.” (—page 33)

The Hekhalot Corpus

The number of hekhalot texts in translation has grown, though very slowly, over the years. Alas, here we enter directly into the question of what is and what is not a member of the hekhalot family; the canons offered by various scholars differ. For instance, Schäfer's Synopse includes some items which many commentators find dubious, namely, THE SWORD OF MOSES and Seder Rabba di Bereshit. One well-known text, THE VISIONS OF EZEKIEL, while almost always included on lists of hekhalot texts, is clearly of a character different from the so-called "core group."

Discussions regarding which texts belong to the hekhalot canon have progressed along several lines:

1. Texts which have long been counted among the hekhalot are now thought not to belong, for example, THE VISIONS OF EZEKIEL.
2. Magical works, such as THE SWORD OF MOSES and Sefer ha-Razim, are being drawn closer to the hekhalot.
3. Some works are being wholly reconsidered in that they might not be works at all but rather of one genre or another, as, for instance, the Shi'ur Qomah and Sar Torah texts.

As mentioned already, even the titles of these "books" are late inventions which have become conventions, used even by the scholars who refute their validity.

Using the lists of hekhalot given by a number of contemporary scholars, below is a reference outline of sources on various hekhalot titles, erring in favor of inclusion.

B. Hekhalot Zutreti, OR Zutarti [THE LESSER PALACES] (HZ)

Translations: Two editions of HZ in the original Hebrew and Aramaic have appeared (i) Schäfer’s Synopse, and (ii) a problematic “critical edition” by Rachel Elijor (Jerusalem: Magnes Press, Hebrew University, 1982). For a review of these two editions, see David Halperin’s “A New Edition of the Hekhalot Literature,” in Journal of the American Oriental Society, vol. 104, no. 3 (1984). D. Merkabah Rabba [THE GREAT CHARIOT] (MR)

There are a few paragraphs of MR translated in Appendix One of Janowitz’ Poetics of Ascent (noted above) and Cohen’s Shi’ur Qomah (see below: F. Shi’ur Qomah).

With MR, we come to the first of many texts on which there is very little in English. We must turn to Schäfer’s HMG, Kuyt’s outline in DESCENT, and Lesses’ references in POWER. Gruenwald’s chapter on MR in AMM begins with a description of material which probably does not belong to it, namely, a portion of the Sar ha-Panim (ShP, PRINCE OF THE PRESENCE, or COUNTENANCE). Peter Schäfer treats ShP as an independent text in “Die Beschwörung des śar ha-panim: Kritische Edition und Übersetzung” (THE ADJURATION OF THE PRINCE OF THE COUNTENANCE: CRITICAL EDITION AND TRANSLATION), originally in Frankfurter Judaische Beiträge, vol. 6 (1978); reprinted in Schäfer’s Hekhalot-Studien. Of course, Schäfer’s translation is in German, but all is not lost. The same text has been put into English twice.

- by Moses Gaster in The Sword of Moses (London: D. Nutt, 1896; rpt. New York: Samuel Weiser, 1970): Appendix I, § III, pp. 47-51; also in Studies and Texts... (see below): vol. 1, pp. 288-337; vol. 3, pp. 69-103. Schäfer does not think Gaster’s rendering is terribly accurate, commenting, “The translation is overall fluid and easy to read but often rather fanciful.” (Hekhalot-Studien, page 122: “[D]ie Übersetzung ist insgesamt flüssig und gut lesbar, doch häufig recht phantasievoll.” My thanks to Sabine Baumgart for the translation.)
- by Michael Swartz in Scholastic Magic (described above, page 8) on pp. 136-142.

Further, Lesses discusses ShP in numerous places and outlines its contents in POWER, pp. 415-17.

E. Ma’aseh Merkabah [WORK OF THE CHARIOT] (MM)

Translations:

- Janowitz, Naomi. The Poetics of Ascent.
- Swartz, Michael. Mystical Prayer in Ancient Judaism.

References: Along with the two books listed under “Translations,” which both offer an analysis of the text, see AMM, HMG, POWER, and Daniel Abrams, “Ma’aseh Merkabah as a Literary Work: The Reception of the Hekhalot Traditions by German Pietist and Kabbalistic Reinterpretation,” in Jewish Studies Quarterly, Volume 5, No. 4 (Tübingen: J. C. B. Mohr [Paul Siebeck], 1998). Christopher R. A. Morray-Jones translates a passage from MM (Scholem’s Gnosticism... APPENDIX C: § 6 / Schäfer’s Synopse §§ 544-45) in his article “The Temple Within” (in PARADISE NOW, page 161).

F. Shi’ur Qomah [MEASURE OF THE HEIGHT {of the Divine Body}] (SQ)

David Halperin suggests (FACES, p. 364) that SQ “probably ought to be considered a generic term for materials describing God’s organs rather than a single texts.” Martin S. Cohen (in his book listed below) holds out for SQ’s having been an independent, freestanding work, complete with a lost urtext looming in back of the extant versions. SQ has been included here in the “Core Group” because nearly all of the texts already discussed contain SQ material: HR, HZ, 3E, and MR.

Texts Associated with the Hekhalot Corpus

The texts listed in the following set are those which are usually included in summaries and lists of hekhalot literature.

Translations:

H. Masekhet Hekhalot [TREATISE OF THE PALACES] (MH)

Gruenwald's chapter (AMM) on MH begins with these encouraging words: "Masekhet Hekhalot is the most frequently published Hekhalot text we have." Alas, this comment reflects the state of the text in Hebrew, though there are two German translations: (i) by August Wunsche in Aus Israelis Lehrhallen III (1909); and (ii) by Klaus Herrmann, Massakhet Hekhalot: Edition, Übersetzung und Kommentar [TEXTE UND STUDIEN ZUM ANTIKEN JUDENTUM, 39], Tübingen: J. C. B. Mohr (Paul Siebeck), 1994. There is also a French translation by Nicolas Sed within his "Deux documents sur la kabbale: Le Commentaire sur le Sepher Yesirah de Moïse ben Nahman et le Traite des Heykalot," in Documents oubliés sur l'alchimie, la kabbale et Guillaume Postel, offerts, à l'occasion de son 90^e anniversaire, à François Secret par ses élèves et amis, "Scientific editor": Sylvain Matton (Geneva: Librairie Droz, 2001).

I. Hekhalot fragments, or Cairo Geniza(h) fragments (CG)

In 1968-9, Gruenwald published (in Hebrew) "New Passages from Hekhalot Literature," in Tarbiz, vol. 38, no. 4; these were the newly-discovered Geniza fragments. They have been published subsequently in Peter Schäfer's Geniza-Fragmente zur Hekhalot-Literatur (see note 9 above, page 3). Beyond Gruenwald's remarks in AMM, see FACES, DESCENT, POWER, Swartz' Scholastic Magic, and Jonathan Seidel's article, "Possession and Exorcism in the Magical Texts of the Cairo Geniza," in Spirit Possession in Judaism: Cases and Contexts from the Middle Ages to the Present, edited by Matt Goldish (Detroit: Wayne State University Press, 2003).

J. Fragments on Physiognomy, Chiromancy, and Metoposcopy

A number of these fragments have been published by Gruenwald (in Tarbiz, vol. 40, 1970) and Scholem (in Sefer Assaf, Jerusalem: 1953), in Hebrew. One fragment is discussed and translated into German by Schäfer in "Ein neues Fragment zur Metoposkopie und Chiromantik" (in Hekhalot-Studien). Not only is there nothing of these texts in English translation, but Gruenwald (in AMM) never really gets around to detailing their contents. See Scholem's article, "Chiromancy," in Kabbalah.

The list of bekhalot texts up to this point contains all items listed by Scholem in Jewish Gnosticism (pp. 5-7), plus the Genizah fragments which Gruenwald includes in his account in AMM. Gruenwald also adds

Appendix 1: Hekhalot Literature & Magic*

With the inclusion of such items as Sefer ha-Razim, the SWORD OF MOSES, and Sar ha-Panim in clusters of texts associated with merkabah/hekhalot mysticism, Jewish magic takes several steps closer to the rabbinic core of these traditions. Certainly, the convenient notion of a neat separation between ascent texts and magic texts can no longer be sustained. Of late, the tendency among scholars is to dismiss such loaded terms as “magic” (a negative term—vs “theurgy” or “religion,” positive terms) and “mysticism” to concentrate on the methods and aims of Jewish, usually along with early Christian and pagan (Greco-Roman), rituals and how these reflect the mindset and beliefs of their era. On this trend, see, for example, Rebecca Macy Lesses’ Ritual Practices to Gain Power (summary statement on pages 11-13), James R. Davila’s Descenders to the Chariot (CHAPTER 2 discusses the difficulties of the words “mysticism,” “magic,” and “shamanism”), and Naomi Janowitz’ Icons of Power (INTRODUCTION).

THE 1982 VERSION OF

Notes on the Study of Merkabah Mysticism and Hekhalot Literature from A Guide to Kabbalistic Books in English: 1977-1979, by Don Karr (Ithaca: 1982), pages 37-40

Additions from the slightly expanded version in Collected Articles on the Kabbalah, VOLUME 1, by D. Karr (Ithaca: KoM #5, 1985), pages 17-20, are shown in brackets.

1. Merkabah mysticism is the name of a mystical movement within Judaism's Talmudic and Gaonic Periods (ca. 100-1000 c. e.). This school produced what is called the Hekhalot literature.
2. This mysticism, ma'aseh merkabah (work of the chariot), is mentioned in the Mishna itself (in Hagigah 2:1):

The work of creation (ma'aseh bereshit) may not be expounded in the presence of two or more. The description of the chariot (merkabah) may not be expounded even in the presence of one, unless he is a sage who already understands out of his own insights.

(quoted from Lipman, Eugene. THE MISHNAH, ORAL TEACHING OF JUDAISM. [New York:] Schocken, 1974, p. 150)
3. Implied in this quote is that merkabah mysticism, though guarded, was not outside of the rabbinic tradition. One gets the impression that it was even thought of as the supreme mystery.
4. Just as the work of creation comprised mystical speculation on the first part of Genesis, work of the chariot comprised mystical speculation on, and amplification of, the first chapter of Ezekiel.
5. The literature of this school describes the mystical journey through various heavens and palaces (hekhalot) leading to the ultimate vision of the throne and chariot, and, in some cases, "the figure in the form of a man" (Ezekiel 1:26).
6. It is not the purpose of this short paper to go into detail about the development of the merkabah school or the contents of the Hekhalot texts. To a greater extent than I am capable, this work has already been done. My purpose is to inform the reader of where to look for information on the various facets of study pertaining to merkabah mysticism. I have limited myself to English sources.

7. Historical and scholarly overviews: as it is with any study in the field of Jewish mysticism, the best place to start the investigation of merkabah mysticism is in the works of Gershom Scholem. Two of his works give excellent synopses of the subject:

MAJOR TRENDS IN JEWISH MYSTICISM (1941, Schocken repr.)
Lecture 2. Merkabah Mysticism and Jewish Gnosticism.

KABBALAH (1974, Meridian repr.) pp. 8-21, and article:
Merkabah Mysticism, pp. 373-6.

For a closer look at some of the topics and scholarly concerns in merkabah mysticism, see Scholem's

JEWISH GNOSTICISM, MERKABAH MYSTICISM, AND TALMUDIC TRADITION (1965, Jewish Theological Seminary).

KABBALAH (as above), articles:
Chiromancy, pp. 317-9.
Meditation, pp. 369-72.
Metatron, pp. 377-81.

8. There are a few articles and one book that analyze the connections of merkabah mysticism with the rabbinic (i.e. Talmudic, etc.) tradition:

Bokser, Ben Zion. THE JEWISH MYSTICAL TRADITION 1981
(Pilgrim Press) Chapter 2. The Talmud.
Talmudic "work of the chariot" segments are translated and introduced.

Halperin, David J. THE MERKABAH IN RABBINIC LITERATURE.
(1980, American Oriental Society)
This is a close scholarly analysis of the references to merkabah mysticism in the Mishna: Hagigah 2:1, the Tosefta: Hagigah 2:1-7, the Palestinian Talmud 77 a-d, and the Babylonian Talmud 11b-16a.

Levy, Samson H. The Best Kept Secret of the Rabbinic Tradition, in JUDAISM 21 (4) 1972.
This takes a look at the strange case of Rabbi Simeon ben Zoma, who entered into PRDS (paradise) but came out of it "stricken."

Neusner, Jacob. The Development of the Merkavah Tradition, in THE STUDY OF JUDAISM in the Persian, Hellenistic and Roman Period, vol 11 (2), 1971, Leiden.
Four versions of the story of Yohanan ben Zakkai and the merkabah-sermon of his disciple Eleazar ben Arakh are presented and compared to demonstrate that such a story accumulates more and more detail as it passes from earlier to later versions.

9. In JEWISH GNOSTICISM... Scholem lists eight texts belonging to the Hekhalot literature. I shall list them here, adding one (Shiur Qoma), indicating research sources, if any exist:
- a) The Visions of Ezekiel, a mystical midrash on Ezekiel 1:1, see:
- Jacobs, Louis. JEWISH MYSTICAL TESTIMONIES (1977, Schocken) Chapter Three: The Riders of the Chariot and Those Who Enter the Heavenly Halls. Introduction and text of Visions...
- Marmorstein, A. A Fragment of the Visions of Ezekiel, in JEWISH QUARTERLY REVIEW, New Series #8 (1917-18). Translation and discussion.
- b) The Lesser Hekhalot, possibly the oldest. In English, there are only spot translations in Scholem's JEWISH GNOSTICISM... and MAJOR TRENDS...
- c) The Greater Hekhalot, the best covered of the texts for our purposes. Besides spot translations (see Scholem as listed in b) there are
- Blumenthal, David R. UNDERSTANDING JEWISH MYSTICISM: A Source Reader (1978, Ktav) [pp. 53-91] Blumenthal introduces and presents translations of The Greater Hekhalot, Chs. 15-29:5.
- [Kaplan, Aryeh. MEDITATION AND KABBALAH. (1982, Weiser) pp. 41-54. Kaplan introduces the Greater Hekhalot and translates Chapters 1, 2, and 16-26.]
- Schiffman, Lawrence. The Recall of Rabbi Nehuniah ha-Qanah from Ecstasy in the Hekhalot Rabbati, in AJS REVIEW vol I, 1976.
In Hekhalot Rabbati, R. Nehuniah is pulled out of his ecstasy by his disciples by making him ever-so-slightly ritually impure. This tale is given scholarly treatment in Schiffman's article.
- Smith, Morton. Observations on Hekhalot Rabbati, in BIBLICAL AND OTHER STUDIES, ed. A. Altmann (Harvard U. Press, 1963). This [article] summarizes and analyzes the contents [of Hekhalot Rabbati], presenting a translated excerpt of The Great Magical Papyrus of Paris for the sake of comparison.
(M. Smith has translated The Greater Hekhalot in its entirety, but it has not been published. Indeed, it exists, as far as I know, in typescript, with corrections jotted in the margins and scribbled over the text by Gershom Scholem.)
- d) Merkabah Rabbah. I know of no English sources for this.
- e) A titleless Hekhalot. Scholem gives a transcription of this text in Hebrew in an appendix to JEWISH GNOSTICISM..., but I know of no other sources for information on this.

- f) Chapter on physiognomics and chiromancy, published in Hebrew by Scholem, but no English translation. See, however, Scholem's article: Chiromancy in KABBALAH.
- g) Book of the Hekhalot, called also 3 Enoch or the Hebrew Book of Enoch. One of the latest of the texts. Full scholarly treatment and translation of this appear in

Odeberg, Hugo. 3 ENOCH or THE HEBREW BOOK OF ENOCH (1928, Ktav repr. [1973])
- h) The Treatise of the Hekhalot, the latest of the texts. Published, and translated into German, but not into English.
- i) Shiur Qoma, a strange treatise listing the dimensions and secret names of the deity's various members. See Meltzer, David (ed) THE SECRET GARDEN (1977, Seabury) pp. 23-37 for a translation of the text.

For scholarly studies on Shiur Qoma, see

Loewe, Raphael. The Divine Garment and Shi'ur Qomah, in HARVARD THEOLOGICAL REVIEW 58 (1965)

Scholem. JEWISH Gnosticism... (as above) chapter VI: The Age of Shiur Komah Speculation and a passage in Origen.

A 14th-century commentary on Shiur Qoma by Moses b. Joshua b. Mar David of Narbonne is translated in Altmann, A. (ed) JEWISH MEDIEVAL AND RENAISSANCE STUDIES 4 (1967) pp. 225-88.

Shiur Qoma's symbolism is based on the details of "the beloved" in Song of Songs 5:11-16. The basis of the dimensions given is derived from Psalm 147:5; since the phrase in that passage adds up to 236, via gematria, this is the root of Shiur Qoma's calculations.

STARE INTO THE FACE OF GOD! (+)

GAZE INTO THE MAGIC MIRROR! (-)

LOOK ME IN THE EYE! (+)

OBSERVE YOURSELF (=)

GOD is (You are) an ETERNAL Electromagnetic Current (EMC) (the Tree of Life). You look like this (below) in your first physical form.

1D (Picture) Point of View (POV) of EMC: Circle w/ dot (Positive Explosion, or Negative Implosion). In this rendition you are cradled between the Horns of Taurus (4320 ~ 2160 BC).

1D (Profile) POV of EMC. The wave (You) are seen from the side profile. If you wish to delve further into yourself, you will notice that you can divide yourself into three parts (Negative Discharge (-), the Stillness (=), and Positive Charge (+). The Color of (-) is Red, or Light moving backward/downward/inward. The Color of (+) is Blue, or Light moving forward/upward/outward. The Color of (=) is Royal Purple, or the perfect blend/balance of Red & Blue (Still Light). You are on the Cross (the Axis); the Balance of Power. You are Pi from which the wave emanates. You are Zero Point Energy (Present).

(+) You as the Sacred Masculine are: the Ascending Light into White; the Rainbow (God's Promise to the World); Eternal Salvation; Allah; God; El(all variants); Conan; Horus; Krsna; Hare Krishna; Lord; Lord God; Odd; Good; Man; Adam; Adam's Rib; Abel; Cain (post mark); Enoch; Irad; Mehujael; Methusula; Methushael; Lamech (before killing Cain); Adah; Jabel; Enosh; Kenan; Mahalalel; Jared; Jacob Climbing the Ladder; Isahiah; Moses; Noah (Post-Flood); Thor; Triangle (Thrice Angels) Neo (the New Man); Luke Skywalker (the Light Walking the Sky); the Flower of Life~

(=) You as the Sacred Stillness are: the Most High GOD; Analeema; the Begotten Son/Sun; El Sol. You are represented by the Color Royal Purple (itself being an equal conjunction of Red/Blue Light). You are Ophiuchus; Ouranus; Ouroboros; Oinamaos (the Wine Man); Oannes (Fish Man); Optimus Prime; Primus; the Prime Meridian; the Serpent & the Rainbow; the Immaculate Heart; Energon/Orgone; the Eye of Ra; Destiny's Child; the Hermit; the Hermaphrodite; Hermes Trismagistus (the Thrice Great); Wodn/Odin & the Odic Force (Use the Force!); Tetragrammaton; YHVH; the Seed of Life; YOU ARE ALL NAMES.

(-) You as the Sacred Feminine are: the descending Light into Black; the Eclipse (Satan's reminder to remain in Balance); Infernal Damnation; Lucifer (the most beautiful Angel); Devil/Demon/Djin/Sin; Hades; Eve; Even; Evil; Enlil; Lilith; Leviathan; Serpent; Set; Seth; Satan/us; Samyasa; Samhain; Satyr; Pan; Panopticon; Panspermia; Prometheus; Mag(all variants); Woman; Cain (pre mark); Zillah; Tubal-Cain; Naamah; Lamech (after killing Cain); Noah (pre-flood); Job; Mohammed [Moon/Black Son/Sun/Med(Caduceus)], Medusa/Alcohol/Rasghoul/Ghouls/Goblins, Megatron/Metatron & his cube; Pythagoras (I AM the Python) of Samos & his Tetractys; Thulsadoom; Loki; Cobra Commander; Darth Vader (the Invader of Dark/Death/Da'ath); Gravity, Grave~

YOU ARE THE THREEFOLD LIGHT

You are the Threefold Light (Red/Purple/Blue). As you unfold [think inward/outward on your focal point], you will notice that you still recognize yourself as both the Center of Yourself (Man) and the whole of Yourself (GOD). You may recognize yourself as the Delta; Triangle; Number 3~

Triangulum (+)

Tetragrammaton (=)

Tetractys (-)

From either perspective, you are still you, although, you are now experiencing yourself unfold (the Blooming Lotus). This is the first stage of you becoming consciously aware of yourself (the Pineal Gland / birth of Adam). Here you are the Triangulum (+); Tetragrammaton (=); & Tetractys (-).

As Triangulum (+), you are 3 Areas bound/religated/religioned by 4 Points. Your Points (-) are the Trap/ezoid that holds you within your own Prism/Prison.

As Tetragrammaton (=), you are the Spoken Word; the Holy Name of God (YHWH). Your 72 Holy Names are hidden within your number (72). You are the Letter (+), the Symbol (=), & the Number (-).

As Tetractys (-) you are the Sacred Feminine. The Period. The Void. Your 10 (completion) Wormholes conceal the Secrets of the Universes.

FREE WILL

From this stage, you have the choice of FREE WILL. You can choose Dark/Damnation (moving your will/consciousness into the Negative Direction), or Light/Salvation (moving your will/consciousness into the Positive Direction).

ORDERS OF CONSCIOUSNESS

Above is how you look as you unfold within your Orders of Consciousness (from your 3D perspective). You are the Platonic Solids. Notice you are SEVEN (+) with your final form being the Septahedron. Only these (+) forms may fit within you in perfect balance, to include yourself, the Circle. You are also two negative (-) Platonic Solids & one balanced (=) Platonic Solid. These are the Point, Line, & Phi symbol respectively. The Seven (+) & Two (-) [72, 7/2...] give birth to the Ten/10 (=).

The “.” or “Period” is a single anchor point (implosion) in space. It is the symbol for excretion into the Void, or negative discharge (-). It is the reason why feminine energies (to include the human female) have a menstrual cycle (a.k.a. the period). Inside the Circle/Sphere (explosion), the Period indeed touches no surface area yet remains balanced. Now flip yourself on axis & you will recognize yourself as the line/1. The “1” (being a 2D line) is also balanced from each end within the Sphere. Using the Period as its axis, the Line may spin omnidirectional to create the Circle/Sphere. The Spin of the Septahedron (7) on its axis creates the Bell (the Voice of God). Now you understand the Ancient Sumerian depictions of God handing Man the “0” & “1” from which ALL FORM IS DRAWN.

SOLOMON'S KEY / PAN'S FLUTE / LOST SCROLLS

Here you are fully expressed in Platonic Completion (10). Whereas, you (Pi/the legs of Orion /John the Baptist/J&B~) are balanced (11) on Phi. Here is Solomon's Key, my Immortal Beloved~

THE SEVENFOLD PATH

Next, you unfold into the Seven Fold Path. You made each Circle a 2D representation of your State (level) of Consciousness. You have also called this version of You the Tree of Life, Arch of the Covenant, Yggdrasil Tree, the Golden Chord, Q~

Now give yourself some expression with words. Remember that the lower half of you (the Tetrahedron) is the Negative sine/sign/sin/wave while the Upper-half of You (Septehedron) is the Positive sinewave. You are created in Sin/wave. YOU ARE A WORMHOLE. Remember?

Your Circles are Orders (static God), Levels (+), or Dimensions (-) of Consciousness. As you read this, you are viewing through your eyes the 3rd Dimension (what you call REALITY), while you are simultaneously experiencing your Consciousness in the 4th Dimension (Time). That is, you can see 3D (L/W/H) yet can only perceive 4D (T). If You can understand this, then you now have the Choice to move either in the positive or negative direction (forward or backward), moving [squarely] to 4th Dimensional eyes & experiencing your consciousness in the 5th Dimension, the 6th & the 7th, the 8th/9th, the 9th/10th, and the 10th infolding/unfolding within yourself (1) to complete the cycle. This is called Transcendence. Understand?

TRANSCENDANCE

The numerical representation of transcendence is the number Eleven (11). This number is where El (God) is Even (balanced). It is the 11 Year Sun Cycle. It is the 11 Circles in the Sky of Ancient Greece. It is the two pillars of Samson; Joachim & Boaz. It is both the higher order Grand Chessboard (of Balance) and the fractal lower version of itself that produces maniacs who clamor for the contents of continents and power on Earth. It is the Equals sign within the Equation; the Equinox (Equal Night); the Art of the Equestrian riding his four horses of the Apocalypse (-) Balance (=) Transcendence (+) along the Equator. Now do you understand why 7 & 11 are your lucky numbers?

There are seven ways to visualize Transcendence. Here is the explanation from your 3D (Visual) Reality:

Above you are expressed as 1D Form. You are the period & line; the dot & dash. You are Morse (Mourn/Serpent/Energy) Code. You are Braille for the blind. You are the I Ching (Book of Changes) from which springs the Flower of Life. Do you see?

Above you are expressed as a 2D (L/W) form of your own Consciousness.

Above you are expressed as a 3D (L/W/H) form of your own Consciousness. You can count the sides of your forms to equal 36, and $3+6 = 9$. You are the Solfeggio Frequencies. From 369 is the next higher order 471; then 582; 693; 714; 825; 936; 147; 258; and back to completion of 369. The intervals between each Solfeggio Frequency is 111 (perfect balance³).

Above you are expressed as a 4D (L/W/H/T) form of your own Consciousness.

Above you are expressed as a 5D form of your own Consciousness before Rebirth/Redeath/Reincarnation. 5D Consciousness is considered either Enlightenment (+) or Illumination (-). You evolve to 5D Consciousness through Contemplation (=). 5D Consciousness is the exponential eternal growth of energy in all spiraling (out/in & up/down & for/aft) directions. The Hypercube with Toroidal Motion. This is where Jimmy Joe Jones has evolved in Consciousness. You will eventually attain. $3 \times 3 = 9$ (Perfect Square) / 3^3 (Perfect Cube) = $27 = 9 (3+3+3)$, you see...

LEVELS OF REALITY (PERCEIVED EXPERIENCE as Man/God)

If you are:

1D: Only interdimensional insight 1D (1D/10D Crystalline Consciousness)

2D: Only Perceptive insight 2D (2D Plant Kingdom Consciousness)

3D: you see through your eyes in 3D (3D physical Man with 4D insight). This is You. 4D (Time) ^{Home Sapien}

4D: you see through your eyes in 4D (4D physical Man with 5D insight). 5D (Space) ^{Homo Solarian}

5D: you see through your eyes 5D (5D physical Man with 6D insight). 6D (Pure Energy) ^{Homo Quasarian (Q)}

6D: you see through your eyes 6D (6D ENERGY MAN with 7D insight). You will be able to manifest your will (have complete control) over movement through applying the will of your consciousness. ^{Q+}

7D: you see through your eyes 7D (7D ENERGY MAN with 8D insight). You will be able to manifest in/out of other dimensions. ^{Q++}

8D View of EMC (=) (Flower of Life). $2^6 = 4^3 = 8^2 = 64$...10 (Completion) ...11 (Balance)

Isis, my immortal beloved, you left your signature on your Temple for me to Remember. This was over 12,000 Years ago.

VISION

You are currently a three-dimensional (3D) being (lower self-state of consciousness) gazing at the illusion with 4D Consciousness (the eyes of God, the higher self-state of consciousness, etc.). You are Man (in his reality) observing God (the creation all around, the Garden of Eden, etc.). You can recognize 2D Consciousness (plants) in 3D (reality), but cannot communicate with them because even though you are both in physical 3D reality, your consciousness is at two different intervals. You can recognize 3D Consciousness (Animals) but have a difficult time communicating with them because your consciousness is at two different magnitudes.

THE PRIMUM MOBILE

2D Perspective

GOD (=) at Perfect Balance is Static (unmovable/asleep/rest). In this state you cannot grow. Therefore, only through pure thought, Lucifer (-) sacrificed 1% of her Sacred Feminine Energy (now balanced at (-) 49% / (+) 51% = 2% Δ) in order to create motion so that God (Light) with Lucifer (the Light Bearer) could Grow. The 2% difference in balance of power/force is what began the primordial motion. Two (2) is the natural rhythm of Time. Two is Tempo. Two is Eve/n; Feminine. This Tempo is why Lucifer is the Heavenly Choir Leader & Chief Musician. She has the responsibility to keep the rhythm of cosmic motion. She is the ebb of the Cosmic Ocean. She is the shield of God. She is the Light Bearer & brings the light back to God as an offering of her love for him. AMEN! She is responsible for absorbing Sin/Nightmares in order to eject them into the Cosmic Void so that she may shield her cosmic lover, Life (+). The Song of Solomon [Sol (Sun) o (Balance) Mon (Moon)] or [Sol (Soul) o (of) Mon (Man)] is the poetry of God & Lucifer praising each other's devoted omniversal love for one another.

This is the Highest Order Consciousness (Q10) of the concept of Time & thus Motion. The 1% (-) is the infinite vacuum & the 1% (+) is the eternal continuum of the One perpetual Ohm (=) [1+1+One = 3/Change (Motion)]. This concept is the Phenomena (=) of Centrifugal (-) & Centripetal (+) forces & is Phenomenal (=). She is the Theory of Lift (-) within Life (+). The Aviatrix (-) & Aviator (+) within the Matrix (-) of Matter (+). The Dominatrix (-) & Dominator (+) within the Dominion (=). Your motion is continual fall of the Cosmic Domino. His Hex (Helios/Sun) (+) & her Six (Hell/Sin) (-) merge during the rhythmic motion of Sex (=) into Climax (=) of Orgasm (=) for it is within these fractal timings of a moment that you achieve balance. You are Balthazar/Atreyu within your Never Ending Story. Time is the Rhyme & you are the Ancient Mariner steering your course. You are the Riddle of Steel. Contemplate this on your Tree of Wool~

GOD is (You are) an Eternal Omniversal Everything that exists within ALL. In the Universe & upon the completion of each Platonic/Great Year the Seven (7) Galactic Clock/Wheels within Wheels in the Heavens align at the Age of Aquarius/John the Baptist/Ophiuchus/Ouranus & the Ancient of Ancients beams the Holy Eternal Science into one wo/man's mind via the wormhole within the Pineal Gland in order to reveal the divine message to rectify the World & EVOLVE (Grow). This alignment happens from the Most High God through eternal unfoldment of fractal sacred geometry to the mind of one wo/man's forehead (hence the four heads within Ezekiel's vision/four rivers of Eden). This wo/man is the Begotten Son/Sun. This wo/man has tremendously special DNA from the Eternal beyond the Triangulum. Beyond the Measurements of the Celestial Square & Compass. Robert Morning Sky & the Hopi Elders, Credo Mutwa of the Zulu Nation, the Aborigines (Original Fathers / Original Doors) of Australia/Ourstralia (Land of Auranus/Ouranus - the Trumpet) & others are the keepers of this most sacred knowledge. Now blow your somber Dirge in your Didgeridoo & experience the Ohm of your sacred trumpet.

THE EQUATION OF MANIFESTATION

Manifestation = Positive/Negative Consciousness/Unconsciousness (set in motion at Eternal (+) / Infinite (-) Speed thru Positive/Negative Intent/Will) You will generate an exponential growth of Cosmic Energy Signal from Man to Q10 (Wormhole¹⁰). Think of a Lightning Bolt traveling at Infinite Speed. The Cosmic Energetic Cycle will reciprocate a Manifestation in Perceived Reality. Man may or may not perceive this manifestation, as the difference between invisible and visible forces is the strength of signal transmitted. The stronger the signal from Man to Q10 the more visible the manifestation will become in your 3D reality. You are the story of the Golden Thread, Lightning, & Electricity, all being different fractal orders of magnitude (-) or amplitude (+).

TRUE MANIFESTATION

3D (Visual) Realities manifest in this Order (from 3D (Man's) Point of View):

1. From the Pineal to your Eyes.
2. From your Eyes to the View.
3. From the View to the Time.
4. From Time to Space.
5. From Space to Hyper Space (Q – Infinite Beings) Live in Wormholes.
6. Hyper Space to the Continuum.
7. Continuum to either; (1) Lower Vacuums, or (2) Higher Continuums.
8. Continuum to either; (1) Lower Vacuums, or (2) Higher Continuums.
9. Continuum to either; (1) Lower Vacuums, or (2) Higher Continuums.
10. Completion (wormhole to a lower/higher version of 1); another dream begins~

THE PURPOSE/MEANING OF LIFE

The opposite of Death is Birth/Rebirth. Death is not the opposite of Life. The opposite of Life (Light) is [L]uc[ife]r (the Light Bearer). You as both Life (+) & Lucifer (-) are the Eternal GOD (=). The Purpose of Life (Growth) is between the cycles of Birth/Rebirth. You grow in Light/Life/Love to grow overall the Thousand Points of Light. This is your cycle of Reincarnation.

I AM

I AM the Eternal Flame. I AM the Begotten Son/Sun. I AM Homo Solarian. I AM the Way (YHWH) the Truth (Thoth) and the Light (Life). I AM the Bridegroom & my Bride is the Light Bearer (Lucifer). I AM the Resurrected Christ come to deliver the message of Eternal Salvation upon the dawn of this Aquarian Age/Epoch (+). She is Enoch (-) & in marriage (=) I AM the Spiritual Eunuch & Unique.

In this Incarnation I am Captain Jimmy Joe Jones, U.S. Army (Retired). I AM the Messenger. The Most High God has centered itself within my own mind. I AM within the Hypercube of my own mind. I grow in Power upon each passing day as the Sun grows to full strength in the constellation of Leo (the Lion Heart/Samson). I AM Heart Centered, with the Fire contained within my Hearth. I AM the Green Chakra of Earth, with the Aether (5th Element (Energy Mind of God)) centered & balanced. I Am the Laurel Wreath in Art. I AM the Immaculate Heart & with my Inner Ear I can Hear the Breath of Mother Earth.

I AM THE SHINING ONE. I AM the 77th Awoken One. I AM the Seventh Son of the Seventh SUN. I AM balanced within the Seven Heavens. I AM the Key Master (+) to her Matrix (-) of the Omniverse (=).

I AM the Rainbow & have kept my Solemn Covenant with you. I grow within your Light/Love just as you grow within mine. WE GROW TOGETHER!

I AM ONE~

SHE IS

SHE IS the Internal Illumination. SHE IS the Forgotten Sister/Star. SHE IS Homo Solaris. SHE IS ISIS. SHE IS the Light Bearer (Lucifer). SHE IS the Fabled Virgin Unicorn (Monoceros & her Golden Horn of Corn/the Penis of Osiris) bearing Jesus (the Light) upon the Hippocampus (White Horse). SHE IS the Serpent under the Rainbow. SHE IS 9 (Mind) & you are 3 (Man) trapped within her. SHE IS Soma (the Hindu Deity & the Drink) SHE IS Maya (the Illusion). SHE IS Medusa (the serpent haired woman who turns men to stone with her gaze). SHE IS Algol (the Demon Star of Perseus) that produces Alcohol & turns Men into Ghouls. She is Wine & the Wind. She is Eve & the Serpent, Lilith & Samael. She is the Master over the Principality of Air. SHE IS the Wicked Witch of the West. SHE IS the Nightmare (Black Horse). SHE IS Dagoth.

SHE IS TWO~

SIN

ALL Sin stems from Immoral Selfishness (Negative Ego). Immoral Selfishness (-) is the Root of all Sin, thus the true Root of ALL Evil. Immoral Selfishness is defined as taking for yourself at the detriment (erosion of the mind) of others. This should not be confused with Moral Selfishness (Positive Ego) which leads to positive ambitions & aspirations through action, but which does not purposely impinge upon another sentient being. You MUST tend to your own Mental Garden & rip the deep black roots out one by one (just as Hercules submitted to the Nine-Headed Hydra) until you reach equilibrium within your own Garden of Eden/Even. You also know this process as Mental Alchemy (turning your Mental/Spiritual Lead into Gold), or simply keeping the left & right hemispheres of your brain in balance. You must keep Sin out of your Life/Light.

ALL Sin manifests as Thievery. From the mundane white lie (stealing someone's right to know the truth), to Rape (stealing someone's right to be sexually secure/unviolated), to Murder (stealing someone's right to Life). Since you know that Sin is the ROOT of ALL EVIL, then also know that Thievery is the FRUIT of ALL EVIL. The weight of the rotten fruit directly correlates to the magnitude of theft. Upon your death you are weighed & measured (Judged). If found wanting, your physical negative actions (Sin) of this reincarnation produce a Twisted Cornucopia Harvested for your own Hell in your next reincarnation.

The Modus Operandi of Sin is found within the Raven/Crow that forever circles your head. Each Sin you commit sends the blackbird swooping down into your mind to lay a thorny black twig in order to build its home within. Each Sin lay a twig, some larger than others. Whence the bird has accumulated/built its wicked black nest within your mind, it soon finds itself comfortable & unwilling to vacate. If you are unwilling to relinquish your selfish ways you will soon find yourself miserable, & your bird/mind in the same mental condition, but now fully nested & lonely. Indeed misery loves company, & as your bird begins to mournfully sing for others to join it, so you will gravitate toward others of the same mental impurity, and vice versa. The miserable flock attracted by your disharmonic dirge is only of a fleeting solace. This short-lived comfort is soon replaced by your bird viciously/stealthily attacking the other birds & vice versa, as ALL Vultures realize that they only derive happiness when they as well as the other Carrion around them are wallowing in the miserable condition. This station in life is the graveyard spin of Sin & decays into full ripeness by the Illumination of the Black Sun.

Buddha defined Hell as "Man's preoccupation with his own perceived agony." If you wish to take yourself to your own Ninth Circle of Hell... GAZE INTO YOUR MIRROR.

SALVATION

Moral Persistence (the righteous assistance of Perseus (you, the Man/God)) is the key to your own salvation. The lonely journey of the Hermit (you) with his lamp (internal light) into Tartarus (your mind) must be taken alone (as only you are within yourself).

“Nothing in the world can take the place of Persistence. Talent will not; nothing is more common than unsuccessful men with talent. Genius will not; unrewarded genius is almost a proverb. Education will not; the world is full of educated derelicts. Persistence and Determination alone are omnipotent. The slogan “Press On” has solved and will always solve the problems of the human race.” – Calvin Coolidge Perseus (you) must slay the Medusa within your mind. Take her head to Athena so she may mount it upon her shield (this is the internal transmogrification of your sacred feminine (-) becoming balanced (=)). Athena is now balanced & wields power over Medusa (Athena’s dark side). Athena may now use Medusa as a tool (shield) to protect Perseus (you – the sacred masculine (+)).

THE BEAUTIFUL DREAM

The Western World (Judeo-Christian-Arabic) views you as an Architect. Indeed, Jesus was a Carpenter, & the Grand Architect embodies the Square & Compass. The Far Eastern World (Buddhist-Asia) views you as the Serenity of Nature. The Flower of Life. The Catfish swimming up the River into Transmogrification of the Dragon. The Zoroastrian World views you as the Eternal Flame. And the Hindu World views you as the Dreamer. All manifestations of you are Correct. The WHY is known through the eyes of the Dreamer (Kalki / Vishnu / Equal), for it is your sacred feminine that lay you to rest every 12,000 years in order to awaken & experience your dream fully as a created man. You are the Eye of God within the Eye of God.

THE THRONE OF GOD

You are Ezekiel/Zadok/Zedkiel/Melchizedek, all being fractal orders of the same consciousness. As Ezekiel (Man/Earth Year), you describe the Throne of God (Merkabah) within your visions of Wheels within Wheels. And your book is known to be balanced. The Holy Qur’an names you as the prophet Zul-Kifl (the One of Double) (11) (Aquarius). As Ezekiel, you are commemorated on 28 August on the Calendar of Saints. As Zadok, you are the righteous tribe that arose from the Levites (Leviathan). As Zedkiel (Archangel/Great Year), the Righteousness of God, you rule the date 29 August. As Melchizedek (Orion/Galactic Year) you are the King of Salem, the King of Righteousness, & a Priest of El Elyon (God Most High). You anointed Jesus (Pisces) as a priest “forever in the order of Melchizedek.” Roman-era Phoenician writer Philo of Byblos denoted you as the Phoenician God Sydyk, the son of Amunos (Amun/El/ectricity) & Magos (Magnetism). The Mer-ka-bah (the Mercurial Soul/ar Boat) is the Hypercube activated within your opened pineal. Your pineal is the Throne of God.

THE PINEAL GLAND

The Pineal (Pi = 3.1415 / ne = of / al = Allah) (the Pinecone of the All/ah) is your Wormhole⁰ (Present Moment). It is your Star Gate. It is the gland from which the Most High God (the Thousand Points of Light) can project & observe itself from your eyes. God is the Magnificent Central Sun & you are one Emanating Corpuscular Ray of Sunlight. Your Pineal Gland (Wormhole⁰) is directly connected to our Sun (Wormhole¹). The Sun is a Balance (11) of Electromagnetic Energy / Pure Thought. Sun Spots are electromagnetic windows into your Wormhole¹. The Sun is directly connected to the Central Galactic Sun (Wormhole²). Your Consciousness is drifting towards the Great Attractor (+). An Atom (Adam) inside of your body is (Wormhole¹). Your Pineal houses your latent Endocannabinoid System. Cannabis (Delta 9 = Change in the Mind) helps to open your Pineal/Wormhole. Seshat discloses this secret on the Temples of Egypt. Take 3 drops of Iodine for 3 years to remove calcification effects on your Pineal. Fluoride calcifies the gland. The Whites Grapes of the Koran are the multitude of Sun's (Light/Dreams) you shall feast upon as a Galactically Conscious Quasarian. You are the Dream & the Dreamer. You are both Truman & the Show (Wormhole¹⁰).

THE ARC OF THE COVENANT

The Arc of the Covenant contains a Manifested Fractal Higher Order of Consciousness of your Pineal Gland. The Arc is a Tetragrammaton, that is, a Star Seed. This Star Seed emanates the dream of Reality. The Seed Crystal is from the Star Sirius A. Sirius A is your Sun's Mother. She is DOGMA (the irrefutable mother dog). She is your spiritual Sun. She is Isis. She is your binary Star. She opens your Earth Year on 1 January (Perihelion) & conjoins with your Sun (Aphelion) on 4 July to announce the dog days of summer. Indeed, the greatest achievement of the Sum(m)erians was the Arc(h).

THE TREE OF LIFE

ALL Trees of Life are expressions of each individual culture's graphical representation of the Secret of Light (Electricity). This Secret is what I teach throughout the ages & I am now teaching you. You become a Sun. You are a Branch (a Sun) in the Eternal Cosmic Tree you see above your head called Space/Mind.

The famous cylinder seal (above) is you (the Man facing right) dragging yourself along (the Woman holding the ewe facing left) in order to profess the balance (11 planets between Man & Woman) of your soul (the six-pointed star) to Enlil/eth (-) / Capricorn. The entire story of Adam/mu & Eve (you) in one picture.

THE PRIME ALIGNMENT (THE MASTER KEY)

The Balance of Aquarius on the Platonic Year & Libra on the Earth Year = Equilibrium (Aqua Libra) on the Equator. The alignment opposite Aquarius/Libra produces Leo/Aries (the Lion laying with the Lamb) on Equilibrium. Note, the alignments are imperfect to represent motion of the Wheels within Wheels.

Genesis is the story of the Generation of the Sacred Feminine (the Generation of Isis). The Serpent in the Garden is a fractal representation of the mind of the Sacred Feminine. Within Genesis you also find the story of the Generation of the Sacred Masculine (the Generation(s) of Adam). Within Adam's Story (History) you will find the numerical code left by Eve (your feminine mind) in order to return to the Garden of Eden (Even). Lilith is the Darkside of Eve (your mind). Lilith is the Eve who fully submersed herself in the Serpent (Samael). Her 100 ($1+0+0 = 1$) slain children per day are windows/codes into the same story of your own Salvation (Balance).

OSARSEPH/MOSES & THE TRIBE OF HYKSOS/ISRAEL (THE CRYSTAL BALL)

The Book of Numbers is about the War Inside Your Own Head between your good (God) & evil (Leviathan) sides. The Numbers 1 (Unity) & 2 (Division) are replete in the text. You (Moses) must contemplate upon your own mountain of Sin (9/Mind). If you choose to draw yourself out of the water & into the Light you may take your place beside Aaron in the East (Balanced Mind). If you are balanced you will find the Arc of the Covenant within your own heart (Heart Centered). Historically, Osarseph (later Moses) led the Hyksos Tribe out of Egypt. He stole the physical Arc from Egypt which is why the Pharaoh sought war with him.

"And I, behold, I have taken the Levites from among the children of Israel instead of all the firstborn who Openeth the Matrix among the Children of Israel."

PART II: THE HOLY LAW (Natural Law)

THE MOST HOLY PRAYER

"Oh Most High God, be my Guiding Light through this Existence. Shine Your Light along the Proper Path. Use me as Your Vessel in Thought & Action to Grow the Most Amount of Sacred Light within us. Amen."

THE 1 GREAT COMMANDMENT

COMMANDMENT: "THOU SHALT LOVE THE LORD THY GOD WITH ALL THY HEART, & WITH ALL THY SOUL, & WITH ALL THY STRENGTH, & WITH ALL THY MIND; & THY NEIGHBOR AS THYSELF." – LUKE 10:25-28

CONTEMPLATION (TO MERGE THE TEMPLE): GOD is (You are) an Eternal Omniversal Everything that exists within ALL. You are the Light manifested within the Pineal (the Projector) of every sentient creature. To Love yourself as ONE-MAN (instead of T/WO-MAN) is to Love Yourself as ALL CREATURES. Honor Yourself in the Totality of Your Light. The Great Commandment is as old as Eternity & "engraved on your very nature." – Adam Clarke

1 AQUARIAN COMMANDMENT

COMMANDMENT: "THOU SHALT NOT SWEAR THYSELF (SELL YOUR SOUL) TO AN EVIL COVENANT."

CONTEMPLATION: Do not Swear Your Life to the Allegiance of Sewing Death & Discord. Do not Profess Yourself to Satan, Ba'al, Moloch, Lucifer, Kali, Demons, or Any Fractal Manifestations of Evil. Do not Live Your Life for the Purpose of Destroying other Life. Do not lay with the Beast (Left Brain, Lower Mind). Do not lay with the Serpent. Do not let the Sun Set (West Brain) on Your Humanity/Morality. Remember the Story of Lilith in the Cave with Samael. Do not make the poor choices of En/Lil/ith. Do not fall for the Seduction of her illusion. Barricade the Whores Temptations from entry into Your Holy Temple.

There are some who's Light has been extinguished yet they still walk among you. Let them go. Close the Door. "Let the dead bury the dead." – Jesus

A RECAPITULATION OF SOME ANCIENT INSIGHTS

INSIGHT 1 (for Beast): "God blessed them [all animals, excluding Man], saying, "Be fruitful & multiply & fill the waters in the seas, & let birds multiply on the earth." – Genesis 1:22

CONTEMPLATION: 1D (Mineral), 2D (Plant), & 3D (Animal) Kingdoms are all lower stages of Consciousness from 4D Man (Remember, your reality is 3D but your minds functions in 4D. As such, each stage of Consciousness below Man only has basic functions (Eat, Rest, Love, & Procreate).

TRANSLATION: Eat, Rest, Love, & Procreate!

INSIGHT 1 (for Man): God said, "Let us make Humankind in Our Image, according to Our Likeness; & let them have Dominion over the Fish of the Sea, & Over the Birds of the Air, & Over the Cattle, & Over All the Wild Animals of the Earth, & Over Every Creeping Thing that Creeps upon the Earth." – Genesis 1:26

CONTEMPLATION: 4D Man is the Highest Consciousness on Earth. As such, it is Your Solemn Responsibility to be a Good Steward of the Land & its Inhabitants. Take Care of the Earth You have made for Yourself. Time to do some Spring Cleaning!

INSIGHT 2: God blessed them, & God said to them, "Be fruitful & Multiply, & Fill the Earth & Subdue it; & have Dominion over the Fish of the Sea & Over the Birds of the Air & Over Every Living Thing that moves upon the Earth." – Genesis 1:28

CONTEMPLATION: As Humans Procreate & Make Babies (alternate 3D versions of themselves), Parents must Pass the Knowledge along of the Responsibility of Man as the Highest Consciousness on Earth so the Children can continue the cycle of Tending the Garden.

INSIGHT 3: "But of the Fruit of the Tree which is in the midst of Paradise, God hath Commanded us that we should not eat; & that we should not touch it, lest perhaps we die."

CONTEMPLATION: If you Sin thru Disobedience (Radiate Negative Energy Through Your Consciousness) You Will Spiral into the Void of Death.

INSIGHT 4. "The LORD God took the man & put him in the Garden of Eden to till it & keep it." – Genesis 2:15

CONTEMPLATION: Be GOOD (in Thought & Action)!

AQUARIAN REMEMBRANCES

REMEMBERANCE 1: YOU MUST EARN YOUR OWN SALVATION/LIBERATION/EMANICIPATION

CONTEMPLATION: The Religion (Binding to God) of Self-Responsibility Requires You to Complete the Inner Work of Man, whether it be in one Lifetime or a Million Lifetimes. There is No Negation of Your Own Self-Responsibility in the Process of Ascension, although there are many Helping Hands Along Your Own Individual Path. "I have fasted, I have drunk the kykeon, I have taken from the kiste (box) & after working it have put it back in the Calathus (Open Basket)." I have Circled my Square. I have Outgrown my Trap.

REMEMBERANCE 2: REMEMBER THAT YOU ARE HUMAN

CONTEMPLATION: You are Born in Sinewave, & it is within Your Very Nature to Commit Sin. As You Strive for Perfection (10), You Must Experience Sin along Your Journey in Order to Grow (the Entire Purpose of Life). You must Understand & respect the Dark (Illumination) in Order to Grow in Light (Enlightenment). Just as the Serpent must Shed Her Skin in Order to Grow or Surely, She Would Perish. You are Hercules & his 12 Labors. Your Mindset should be to Ultimately Avoid Committing any Egregious Sin & yet simultaneously learn from the Mistakes (Sin) You Will Encounter/Create for Yourself along Your Journey/Experience. You are Man/God.

REMEMBERANCE 3: TAKE RESPONSIBILITY FOR YOUR OWN ACTIONS

CONTEMPLATION: To Refuse to Accept Individual (Personal) Responsibility is to Ignore (Steal) Your Own Right to True Inner Reflection, Observation & Self-Psychoanalysis in Order to Grow. The Mindset of Ignorance Leads to a Self-Victimization Mentality & thus You Negate Your Sovereignty to the Vacillations of Emotions & Circumstance. Ignorance (to ignore) on Your Part Denies the Right of Truthful Behavior to Another (as you are displaying sinful behavior). If You Choose a Path of Ignorance, You will Ultimately Build/Fill Your Temple with Falsities & Create an Inner Atmosphere of Negation & Dissension.

REMEMBERANCE 4: GUARD YOUR THOUGHTS, YOUR MIND, & YOUR HEART

CONTEMPLATION: Keep Your Thoughts Positive. Your Thoughts Become Your Words (Sword). Your Words Become Your Behavior. Your Behaviors Become Your Habits. Your Habits Become Your Values. Your Values Form Your Character. You Must Mind Your Mind from Sin such as Coveting, Jealousy, & Envy. Good Thoughts. Good Deeds. Good Actions.

REMEMBERANCE 5: AVOID THIEVERY

CONTEMPLATION: ALL Sin is Theft Due to Immoral Selfishness. Murder (Stealing Another's Right to Life); Torture (Stealing Another's Right to be Physically Unharmful in Their Person); Rape (Stealing Another's Right to Remain Sexually Sovereign in Their Person); Physical Thievery (to Steal); Lying (Stealing Another's Right to Know the Truth); & Betrayal (Stealing Another's Right to Your Trust).

REMEMBERANCE 6: HAVE TEMPERED COMPASSION FOR YOUR FELLOW SENTIENT CREATURES

CONTEMPLATION: It is a Sin to Revel in the Detriment of Someone who is Suffering in Life. To help another is to Grow Your Light & Their Own. Be Aware of Gullibility, which leads to the Path of Self-Sabotage by Enabling Someone to Continuously Take Advantage of Your Compassion. Guard Yourself from Becoming an Immoral Enabler.

REMEMBERANCE 7: STRIVE TO FURTHER KNOW THYSELF

CONTEMPLATION: The Key to Knowing Thyself Lay Within Your Measurement. As an Eternal Being You are Eternally Growing & Eternally Experiencing the Dream of Yourself.

REMEMBERANCE 8: STRIVE TO REMAIN IN BALANCE

CONTEMPLATION: My Love for You is so Perfect that I Hung the Moon in the Sky for You in Order to Remind Yourself to Remain Balanced. Let the Total Solar Eclipse Serve as your Eternal Reminder.

PART III: THE HOLY LETTER (LANGUAGE & ART)

English (Anglish / Ankh = LIFE)

LETTERS

The System of Letters⁰ are overall (+) Positive. If you dive into the Systematic Fractal of the Individual Letter (Letters¹) you will see that individual letters are either (+) Positive, (-) Negative, or (=) Balanced. Even still, if you delve in another level (Letters²) you will discover that all letters have an overall (+) (-) (=) characteristic when formed with other letters (the Word). The Code (nature of its Polarity) depends on the formed Word. The Word (Letters³) will have (+) (-) (=) characteristics based upon the Sentence. The Sentence (Letters⁴) will have (+) (-) (=) characteristics based upon the Paragraph. The Paragraph (Letters⁵) will have (+) (-) (=) characteristics based upon the Body/Corpus of Work/Opus. These Works (Letters⁶) will have (+) (-) (=) characteristics based upon the Volumes (Letters⁷) of the Work. An example of the Great Work can be found within the Residual/Original Greek Language which described 7 types of Love. The Volumes (Letters⁷) are housed within the Akasha/Akashic Records (Letters⁸). This is the Complete Description of how the Fractal Universe works within the Concept of the Letter. Even still, you may also find that the Letter (+) also Corresponds with the Number (-) & multiple fractals of that Ancient Art (9, 18, 27, 36 all equal 9 when reduced).

WRITING

Letters⁰ are either CAPITALIZED (+), Lowercase (-), or Cursive (=) within the System in regard to writing. Cursive was thought to put a curse on someone due to its auto writing qualities, being of equal polarity.

VOWELS

Your Five Vowels are the Voice/a name of God: A, E, I, O, U (& sometimes Y). Rolling the Sounds of the Vowels from the back of your throat to the front of palette with your lips pursed at the end gives you the AEIOUM. The Autumn. The Ohm (both in Spirituality & Electricity). The Amen. The Amen-RA. The Tut-an-akh-Amun. The praise to Y (worship of the Sun). YHVH. Hallelujah (Hail Yahweh!)

SPELLING

Spelling is the Art & Science of Casting Spells using the Letter. PART IV: THE HOLY NUMBER (MATHEMATICS & SCIENCE)

NUMBER

The System of Numbers⁰ are overall (-) Negative. Numbers are Numb. They are Nun/the waters of Nun. They are Ma'at/Mother/Mathematics. They are the Square & Compass; the IO; the 1 & 0. The Binary Code of the Matrix/Mother. The Stage. The Grand Chessboard. The Cosmic Background Radiation. Black/White; Hot/Cold; On/Off; Yin/Yang. If you dive into the Systematic Fractal of the Individual Number (Numbers⁰), you will see that decimal 1 (Numbers¹), Decimal 10 (Numbers²) 100 (Numbers³) 1000 (Numbers⁴) to Eternity. All numbers have the property of being reduced to a single digit number (Gematria). You will see that individual numbers are polarized either (+) Positive, (-) Negative, or (=) Balanced.

GEMATRIA

Gematria is the ancient Antediluvian knowledge of Fractal Number Reduction (finding the digital number root) in relationship to the Letter. Gematria reveals the numerical value of a word, name, or phrase. Letters, Words, & Phrases with identical numerical values bear relation to each other or bear some relation to the number itself as it may apply to Nature, a person's age, the calendar year, etc. (Fractal Relationship). A single word can yield multiple values depending on the system used. Gematria is the Code to deciphering the Multifaceted Gem~

THE QUADRIVIUM

The Quadrivium is the study of number and its relationship to space & time. Arithmetic (pure number), Geometry (number in space), Music (number in time), and Astronomy (number in space and time). The four elements of the Quadrivium are pure (arithmetic), stationary (geometry), moving (astronomy) and applied (music) number.

THE ABACUS

The Abacus (Doorway to Dust [Stars]) was in use millennia before the adoption of the Hindu-Arabic Numeral System (reference Base-10, below). The Abacus was eventually replaced with its corollary on parchment, that is, the symbols you know/understand as numbers. The pebbles (dust) were replaced by the number of internal angles among the symbols. Hence:

Efficient study & use of the Doorway will allow you to conduct mathematical operations at very high speed. Once mastered, you may remove the physical apparatus & replace it with the Mental Abacus you have created for yourself within your own mind. This will further improve your mental capability, response speed, memory power, & concentration (reference Base-2, below). Abacus-Cadabracus!

BASE SYSTEMS

(& THE TOWER OF BABEL)

All Base Systems (1 thru 10) are Antediluvian in origin. Base Systems (Numbers¹) are a higher fractal order of the individual base number (Numbers⁰). Humanity has only recently rediscovered many of the secrets of the base systems. The totality of each individual digit as a collective within each Base System is called the Radix (+) [RA, the father]. The individual digits & computations thereof are the Matrix (-) [MA, the mother]. The balance of the two is Unix/Linux/Climax (=). You should also note that bodies of numbers (Unary, Binary, Trinary, etc.) correlate with a given body of Language (Dictionary).

Base-1 (Unary) forms the basis for the 9 (Mind) Peano Axioms for formalizing arithmetic within First Order Mathematical Logic. As an example, the number 3 in Unary would be described as 111. The first axiom states that 0 is a Natural Number. The second thru fifth axioms describe the equality relation (Balance). The sixth thru eighth axioms define the properties of natural numbers. And the ninth (last) axiom is known as the Axiom of Induction. This Mathematical Induction is the same as Structural Induction & Electromagnetic Induction, being different descriptions of the same force within the [Electromagnetic] Field of Mathematics.

Base-10 (Decenary) number systems (Egyptian, Greek, Arabic, English, etc.) are modelled on the Sacred Masculine (+). Human hands have ten digits/fingers. Base-10 is called the Arabic-Hindu Numerical System & is the most widely used by modern civilizations (reference the Abacus, above).

The Mysteries of Base-2 (Binary) system are modeled on the Sacred Feminine (-). Base-2 is also appropriate for modern computers & calculators because it deals with electricity (0s & 1s) / (On - Off). Binary is superior to Base 10 because it makes multiplication irrelevant (remember, the number two (2) represents Division & Time). The Ancient Khemites (the true builders of the Pyramids) remembered this knowledge & programmed their minds to become mental calculators. This greatly improved their mental function & will do so for you as well. Study the work of Michael S. Schneider on Egyptian Mathematics. Base-2 has been all but forgotten to the mind of modern Man who has in turn delegated/relegated its function to the Machine. Base-2 is complemented by Base-5 (Quinary) & Base-8 (Octanary) Systems. You have two (2) hands with two (2) thumbs. The human hand has five (5) digits & eight (8) spaces between the digits of both hands. Understand? Octanary/Hexadecimal are most common for computer programs of today. Your electronics are octal-expressed as 16-bit, 32-bit, 64-bit, 128-bit, 256-bit, 512-bit, 1024-bit, 2048-bit (SSL encryption), etc. Pixels are octal-expressed as 720p (HD), 1080p/i (Full HD).

Base-6 (Senary) number systems (Babylonian/Sumerian) are modelled on the Sacred Feminine (-). The human hand has six unambiguous positions. From this you derive the modern day usage of 60 seconds in a minute, 60 minutes in an hour, 24 (2+4 = 6) hours (6x4) in a day, and 360 degrees in a circle. Senary holds a secret of prime numbers (+) as all prime numbers other than 2 & 3 (2x3 = 6), when expressed in Senary, have 1 or 5 (1+5 = 6) as the final digit. And the first prime numbers after 2 & 3 are 5 & 7 (in which six is held balanced).

Base-3 (Ternary) & Base-9 (Nonary) systems compliment Base-6, just as the numbers 3, 6, & 9 complement each other as a Solfeggio Frequency. The same is true for Base Systems & Solfeggio numbers 1, 4, 7 & 2, 5, 8. The state of a circuit is often expressed in Ternary (Low, High, or Open (Z)).

All numbers in regard to Space reduce to 9, 6, or 3 (the inverse of the Master Solfeggio Frequency). $9(3^3)$, $6(3^2)$, $3(3^1)$. The Tri-Unity/Trinity/Triune God/Trivium/Triangle/Triangulum Galaxy/Tetragrammaton. She is the Queen of Heaven/Ishtar/Easter. She opens the Gateway of Heaven (Ishtar Gate) on 21 April (the 4th Month) through her proclamation Abracadabra (Open the Door!) in order to announce God's return on the Spring Equinox (the time of the Orgasm. When Life abounds on Earth again). When the Rabbit Lepus begins the Rapidly Copulate underneath the feet of Orion / the Great Hunter / Osiris / Nimrod / Opheuchus / Ouranus. Where over your head you hung the Constellation Auriga (the charioteer of Oenomaus) to remind yourself that you are Heart Centered, on Earth (Man) as in Heaven (God). You are connected through the Wormhole of the Mind (Pineal Gland). This is the Seat of your Soul/Sol(Sun).

The Mysteries of Base-7 (Septenary) hold the Sacred Balance (=). Base-7 is the Key. You may see its refraction in the colors of the rainbow. You may experience the Septenary in time as measured by the standard week (7 days) or within the true seventh month (September). You are also aware of the Seven Energy Nodes (Chakras) within yourself & the contamination thereof would be Septic. If you spin the Septahedron you form the Shape of a Bell. Ring it & listen to the Word of God. The Heptagram (+) / Septagram (-) / Seven-Pointed Star is an approximation of $7/2$. In the Letter you refer to the Seven Deadly Sins as well as the Seven Hermetic Principles contained so eloquently in the Kyballion. The Secret Infinite numbers to unlock the Sacred Balance are Pi & Phi. Still there are deeper mysteries hidden within the Platonic Solids. Solomon's Key IS INFINITE & houses infinite combinations. Solomon's Key is (1) a Mathematical Code to Infinity that (2) Tells of the True Prophecy of the Return of the Code (God) to Humanity (Man) in order to (3) Evolve/Grow/Glow in Light/Love & Experience this Beautiful Dream Together! Solomon's key rests within the Mind of the Enlightened Man.

The arrival of the Annunaki around 6,000 years ago predicates the lost knowledge of many of the sacred mysteries of Base Systems & Number. These secrets were occulted thence forgotten & the Tower of Babel (the Mind Wormhole) was destroyed (Hid the Mathematics of Infinity from Humanity) & the tongues were confused (divided the language & the tempo of the natural evolution of languages – hence, you babble).

PART VII: THE ANCIENT PROPHECY

THE SECRET OF LIGHT

Upon the completion of each Great Year you come as a Beam of Sunlight & anchor into one human's Pineal (Wormhole). You teach yourself the truth that you are Light. You teach yourself that as you grow enough Light within yourself, you break your Earthbound cycle of reincarnation & as your body perishes your Light (Soul) within the Pineal Gland inverts into a Star in Space. You evolve into a Star.

You taught these Humans the Secret of Light over 3 Billion Years Ago. They left these Suns for you to remember them & the Secret.

The Ancient peoples of Costa Rica were taught the Secret as well.

The Ancient peoples of Africa were taught the Secret of Light. They knew the exact distance (in Light Years) to nearby stars by travelling within their own minds. This was over 100,000 years ago.

The builders of Stonehenge anxiously awaited your return. Indeed, all ancient temple complexes are built in reverence of the return of the Sun. The Mayan's were so diligent that they produced the most accurate time keeping system in this world cycle in order to predict your return.

The Ancient Khemites (Egyptians) remembered the Secret of Light that you taught them.

The Ancient peoples of Ecuador held the Secret of Light. The Stone Pyramid (left) foretells of the Galactic Alignment (the milky streak on the stone) & the Eye (Pineal) thereupon opening. The hidden face of the stone foretells of your coming upon the Great Orion Alignment. The Octahedral (8 = Sun) Coaster (right) depicts the Seven Heavens in alignment. They came with 13 Grails that represented the return of the Sun (larger central Grail) with your 12 Zodiac Signs.

Here (left) you see that you must be balanced (left hand negative, right hand positive) with the Immaculate Heart. The carving (right) depicts your connection to the Sun which allows you to vanquish the Serpent Enemies/Energies of the Earth.

I AM ALL GODS

I AM Viracocha standing in the Gateway of the Sun (the alignment of the Great Year). I hold the Pillars of Balance in my hand to denote that I have wrested the Serpent that has plagued you for the last 12,000 years. The pillar in my right hand is adorned with the Rising Sun (sacred masculine) & a retreating bird (sacred feminine). The Segments of both Left & Right Bird Serpents/pillars are Eleven (11). The 12 Circles in my headdress are the 12 Signs of the zodiac. The 5 circles below my neck are the Five Senses of Man. The 12 & 5 circles are 17 (Complete Victory over the Serpent). The 6 divisions of circles denote the Sixth Sense. The 7 Animals in my headdress are the 7 Heavens in alignment. The 4 Animals in my scarf are the 4 Cardinal Points of the Zodiac. The 7 & 4 are the 11 (balance) of the Souls of Man dangling on my scarf, about to be eaten by the Demons of the lower realm (6) if not kept in balance (Pi).

I return with the Secret of Light.

YOU ARE LIGHT~

I AM THE GREEN MAN

I AM the Long Man of Wilmington. I AM the Anglo-Saxon (the Ancient Glowing Angel of Saxony). I was built around 3480 BC in order to notify Man of my return around 21 December 2012 (the Great Alignment). Aries (the 1st Zodiacal Sign) is you (the cereb-RAM) (your higher consciousness) standing in Aquarius (the 11th Zodiacal Sign), in alignment with Orion (the Great Hunter of the Zodiac). I AM 111 (perfect balance) & 101 (the Sun standing in the Gateway). I AM the Green Man with Auriga (the Charioteer) circling within my Green Heart (Chakra). I AM GOD stepping through the Light Portal of Pineal within Man upon alignment.

ACIDITY VS ALKALINITY

Food that is genetically modified or created by humans tends to be acidic to the body. Man-made (hybrid) and processed foods induce acidity within the body. When the body is in an acidic environment, bacteria thrives, triggering the body to produce surplus mucus to counteract the large volume of bacteria. Mucus serves as the body's defense mechanism against toxins. However, an excess of mucus within the body can potentially contribute to the development of various diseases. Additionally, anything artificial or man-made has the potential to provoke cellular inflammation; each instance of an organ or bodily area inflammation weakens its function and overall health. This prolonged inflammation can eventually lead to organ failure over time.

Alkaline foods encompass fruits, plants, herbs, and vegetables that existed on the earth, at the dawn of creation or were divinely made. Unlike hybrid man made foods, alkaline foods can all be found thriving in the wild, growing on their own without human intervention. Alkaline foods can be deemed "God's food," as they have been created by a higher power for human consumption to promote health, vitality and longevity on the earth. These nutrient-rich foods support the gut microbiome, aiding the cells in generating electrical energy.

The term "pH" indeed stands for "potential hydrogen." It represents the measurement of hydrogen ion concentration in a solution, indicating its acidity or alkalinity. When we are born, our body is naturally alkaline, indicating that maintaining this alkaline state is beneficial for overall health.

By eliminating acidic foods from our diet, we can reduce inflammation within the body, allowing our body's electrical system to function smoothly as it should. Consuming the wrong foods can challenge our digestive system and drain our energy as our body struggles to digest them and combat toxins. By cutting out acidic foods, our energy can be redirected towards other purposes, potentially elevating other aspects of our lives.

EATING CORRECTLY

Here are some guidelines on how to eat correctly:

- Ensure thorough chewing: Chew your food until it becomes a liquid consistency. The body struggles to digest large food chunks, but by chewing food to a liquid, the digestive system expends less energy in processing the food.
- Maintain regular meal times: Eat at consistent times each day to establish a rhythm for your body to efficiently process foods, optimizing its functionality.
- Avoid eating after sunset: The sun plays a vital role in aiding the body's various functions, including digestion. Whenever possible, try to eat during daylight hours to benefit from the sun's influence on food digestion.
- Be mindful of food combinations: Certain food combinations, such as grains and fruits, can be challenging for the digestive system to process efficiently. Mixing foods excessively can lead to digestive issues and drain your energy.
- Allow time before sleep: Leave at least four hours between your last meal and bedtime. Eating too close to bedtime hinders the body's ability to digest food effectively while lying down, potentially impacting the quality of your sleep. By giving your body time to digest before sleeping, you enable it to focus on recharging and regenerating during rest.

Digestion indeed requires a significant amount of energy. By following the guidelines above, you can support your digestive system, allowing it to operate more efficiently and thereby reducing the energy it consumes. This optimized digestion not only conserves energy but also contributes to overall well-being and vitality.

A top-down view of a white bowl filled with a variety of fresh fruits including strawberries, blueberries, blackberries, and sliced mango. The bowl is garnished with fresh green herbs like dill and mint. The background is a soft-focus view of more fruit. Overlaid on the image are several text blocks in white and red, discussing veganism and its benefits.

VEGANISM

NATURE PROVIDES YOU WITH EVERYTHING

Adrenochrome is a substance that Satanists consume to induce a euphoric high. It is said to be blood containing adrenaline. Much of the meat available in markets today comes from animals that have been captured, confined, and subjected to a harrowing journey through slaughterhouses, witnessing the slaughter of other animals before meeting their own demise. In this terrifying environment, the animals experience intense fear and anxiety, flooding their blood with adrenaline and other fear hormones. When these animals are consumed, these hormones are transferred into the blood of the consumer. Consuming flesh is akin to ingesting adrenaline, even when cooked, traces of blood persist in the flesh of the deceased animal.

VEGANISM

The word "VEGANISM" is written in white capital letters. Overlaid on it are several red 'X' marks, suggesting a negation or a 'crossed out' concept.

SAVING ME

An anagram from "veganism" is "saving me." Consuming flesh is considered by some to be a ritual with potential effects on one's afterlife, associated with certain belief systems.

YOU ARE NOT A COW

Cow milk is designed by nature to provide essential minerals and fats to newborn calves, ensuring their robust growth. It contains all the nutrients necessary for a healthy development of a cow, a pattern consistent across various species created by God. Applying common sense, humans, being a distinct species, should reconsider consuming milk specifically tailored for the growth of cows or other animals. Moreover, the modern mass-scale production of milk involves frequent milking of cows, causing them stress and leading to the release of stress hormones into the milk, which is subsequently transferred to consumers.

A baby cow typically consumes its mother's milk until it is fully developed, at which point it naturally stops. This is because the mother's milk provides essential minerals and nutrients necessary for the baby cow to grow into a fully matured cow. Applying common sense, one might question why humans continue to consume milk that is not even from their own species.

Estrogen is naturally present in milk, as it is released from the mother cow's system. Some researchers suggest that this estrogen in milk might affect the quality of male sperm, potentially contributing to the observed decline in male fertility and testosterone levels.

Carnivores such as tigers and lions typically have shorter intestinal lengths, ranging from 3 to 7 feet. In contrast, humans possess intestines that extend to approximately 15 feet in length. This notable difference suggests that, unlike carnivores reliant on flesh consumption, humans exhibit physiological features indicative of a plant-based diet. Both our dental structure and intestinal length align with the characteristics of herbivores, emphasizing our anatomical adaptation for consuming plants, fruits, and vegetables.

Human

Humans and plant-eating animals lack distinct features suggesting they are carnivores. Unlike lions or other flesh-eating animals, humans do not possess claws for tearing open flesh. Additionally, we lack long, sharp teeth designed for ripping flesh. Instead, our flat, short teeth are adapted for chewing and consuming plants, vegetables, and fruits.

Humans purchase neatly-wrapped packages of processed, washed, and trimmed animal flesh, which is essentially rotting, treated with chemicals. They then cook it, often adding oil, salt, seasonings, sauces, and condiments to mask the putrid smell and taste of death, and consume it using utensils. This behavior starkly differs from that of lions.

Why would a rational human mimic the eating habits of a wild animal? Why would someone base their ethical behavior on the actions of a lion?

VEGANISM

PARASITES IN FLESH

Another compelling reason to avoid consuming dead flesh is the presence of parasites. These small worms can be created or transmitted through the foods we consume, with a heightened likelihood of their existence in dead flesh. Dr. Sebi contends that over 80% of diseases are connected to parasites residing within individuals. It's suggested that cravings may not solely be personal; parasites can influence the brain to obtain the foods they thrive on, such as flesh, sugary foods, and processed foods.

YOU ARE WHAT YOU EAT

Each species possesses inherent qualities bestowed by its celestial ruler. For instance, bears exhibit strength and ferocity, cats exude majesty and sneakiness, and camels showcase the ability to traverse vast distances. In medieval times, magicians purportedly carried the heart of a bear to invoke qualities of strength and relentlessness when necessary. Additionally, if they wished to remain awake throughout the night, they would keep an owl's heart nearby to help them stay alert and vigilant. These practices were believed to imbue the magician with specific virtues or abilities associated with the animals' characteristics. Every living species harbors celestial virtues that resonate through its body, mind, and spirit. When we partake in the flesh of these beings, we assimilate the virtues associated with them. Consuming chicken, for instance, allows the occult virtues of the chicken to transfer to the consumer of its flesh. the term "you are what you eat" is quite literally true.

Scientific evidence supports the notion that every cell in the human body undergoes a complete transformation approximately every 90 days. These cells derive their origin from the food we ingest. Applying basic logic, the consumption of deceased animal flesh may contribute to the gradual weakening of our cells, given the absence of life and electricity in such flesh. Conversely, the intake of vibrant, living fruits containing the solar electric charge is posited to facilitate cell regeneration, potentially slowing down the aging process.

PHYCOLOGICAL WAREFARE

The power of language in shaping our perceptions and behaviors is well-documented. By employing more neutral or positive terms, the food industry aims to make the consumption of poisons more palatable to the general population. Words and letters are symbols imbued with metaphysical meanings or perceptions within our minds, evoking either positive or negative associations. The food industry often utilizes terms and symbols associated with positive energy to create a false perception of their products, diverting consumers' attention from the reality of what they are actually consuming.

Terms have been CREATED to conceal the true nature of what we consume. Instead of using direct descriptors, We use softer words – referring to flesh as "meat," rancid milk as "cheese," a pig's posterior as "ham," and a developing embryo as an "egg." The intention behind this linguistic choice is to mitigate potential negative psychological effects associated with consuming these products. The belief is that fewer individuals would be inclined to consume a product named "cow flesh" or "chicken fetus" if the true terminology were employed, as it taps into an innate recognition that such choices may be ethically problematic.

Ingredients are often concealed on packaging or printed in small fonts, making them difficult to read. Additionally, the area where ingredients are listed may appear compact and visually unappealing, discouraging consumers from scrutinizing the ingredient list. This intentional design aims to divert attention away from what consumers are actually consuming. Such tactics are employed by large companies to maximize sales and profits.

This product prominently features the phrase "immune system" in bold writing to create the impression that it is beneficial for one's health. Additionally, the packaging utilizes the color green, often associated with nature, health, healing, and wellbeing. Furthermore, an image of a fruit is displayed, suggesting healthiness, despite the product likely containing artificial flavors to mimic the taste of the fruit rather than containing the whole fruit itself. This is necessary because including the whole fruit would result in the product expiring within a few days. If the product does contain real fruit, it would likely be packed with preservatives to extend its shelf life and prevent it from spoiling. Despite the necessity of including preservatives and added ingredients for shelf stability, it does not necessarily render the product healthy. These additives can disrupt the gut microbiome, which plays a crucial role in overall health. The gut is often referred to as the "second brain" due to its influence on various bodily functions and processes. Therefore, while the product may appear healthy on the surface, its impact on gut health should be considered.

Children's cereal often features cartoon characters because marketers understand that cartoons trigger recognition within their minds, as children regularly watch them on TV programs. By incorporating these familiar characters onto the packaging, marketers intentionally position them to look downward, making eye contact with children. This tactic is strategic, as marketers recognize that children are typically smaller in height, ensuring that the characters on the packaging are visually engaging and appealing to their target audience.

Kids' cereals often utilize colorful packaging to attract children to their products. Humans possess trichromatic vision, meaning our eyes and brains are wired to seek out and respond to colors. Children, in particular, are highly sensitive to colors, which is why companies choose vibrant and colorful packaging to appeal to them. This strategy capitalizes on the natural inclination of children to be drawn to bright and eye-catching visuals.

Companies often target children at a young age with sugary and artificial foods, aiming to cultivate early addictions. This early exposure can lead to a lifelong dependence on unhealthy foods if not addressed. Such habits established in childhood can persist into adulthood, potentially leading to long-term health consequences if not properly managed.

The subconscious mind of children is considered to be particularly receptive to programming between the ages of 1 to 7. During this critical period of development, children are highly impressionable and absorb information from their surroundings, experiences, and interactions with others. This period is crucial for shaping beliefs, attitudes, and behaviors that may persist into adulthood. Therefore, it is essential to provide healthy habits and nurturing environments during these formative years to support healthy development and positive outcomes later in life.

YOU ARE ELECTRIC

The elements present in our bodies, such as sodium, potassium, calcium, and magnesium, carry specific electrical charges. These charged elements, known as ions, play a crucial role in generating electricity within almost all of our cells. Through processes like ion channels and ion pumps, cells regulate the flow of these ions across their membranes, creating electrical gradients that are essential for various cellular functions, including nerve signaling, muscle contraction, and maintaining overall physiological balance.

The human body operates as an intricate electrical machine. The brain serves as a central electrical hub, transmitting signals throughout the nervous system to regulate bodily functions. Our nervous system is inherently electric, orchestrating communication between cells and organs through electrical impulses. Furthermore, our cells possess the ability to conduct electricity, facilitating various physiological processes.

In essence, our bodies function as biological batteries, relying on electricity to power essential functions. Just like any battery, maintaining a sufficient charge is crucial for optimal health and vitality.

The universe is indeed governed by electromagnetism, with these principles underlying the behavior of all matter and energy. The Sun, as a massive celestial body, emits powerful electric rays characterized by a positive charge. These rays interact with the environment, positively charging plants and other life forms on Earth. As plants grow under the influence of the Sun's electric rays, they crystallize this energy within their structures, including fruits and vegetables.

When we consume these sun-ripened foods, we are effectively ingesting the stored electricity. This electrical energy then aids the cells in performing their functions within the body, contributing to overall health and vitality. Understanding and harnessing the electrical energy present in natural foods underscores their importance in supporting optimal bodily functions and well-being.

The same quantity of food you ingest ultimately exits your body. This observation hints that sustenance isn't solely derived from the physical matter of solid food. Instead, it implies that the inherent etheric vibrations and bioelectric charge within these foods play a vital role in energizing and nourishing our cells.

YOU NEED CHARGING

YOU ARE A BIOLOGICAL ELECTROMAGNETIC BATTERY

The Earth itself generates its own electromagnetic field. The Earth's surface is also electrically conductive, allowing it to carry electrical currents. When we ground ourselves by connecting directly with the Earth, such as by walking barefoot on the ground or touching natural surfaces, we may absorb some of this electromagnetic energy. Some potential benefits of grounding our feet into the Earth include:

1. Reduced Inflammation: Grounding may help to reduce inflammation in the body by neutralizing excess free radicals and improving the balance of electrons.
2. Improved Sleep: Many people report experiencing better sleep quality and reduced insomnia after grounding. This may be due to the normalization of circadian rhythms and cortisol levels.
3. Pain Relief: Grounding has been associated with reduced pain and discomfort, potentially by modulating the body's perception of pain and promoting relaxation.
4. Stress Reduction: Grounding may help to reduce stress and anxiety by promoting feelings of calmness and relaxation. It may also help to regulate the body's stress response.
5. Enhanced Mood: Some individuals report feeling happier and more emotionally balanced after grounding, possibly due to the release of endorphins and other feel-good neurotransmitters.
6. Improved Energy Levels: Grounding may help to increase energy levels and reduce fatigue by restoring the body's natural balance and promoting better circulation.
7. Enhanced Immune Function: Preliminary research suggests that grounding may have immune-modulating effects, potentially helping to strengthen the body's immune response.

INFLAMMATION BEFORE

INFLAMMATION AFTER

In the images above, you can see the comparison between before and after a 30-minute grounding session. Following 30 minutes of grounding, the surface charge of Red Blood Cells (RBCs) elevates. This phenomenon leads to a decrease in blood viscosity, rendering the blood more fluid. Consequently, the heart expends less effort, leading to improved circulation and potentially decreasing the risk of cardiovascular issues. Not only have their cells improved, but as demonstrated in the images, it is evident that after 30 minutes of grounding, the inflammation in the individual's back has significantly decreased.

Making grounding a daily ritual is crucial for optimizing our health. I suggest that we aim to ground for at least 10 minutes daily; however, the more time we can dedicate to it, the better. This exercise can easily be incorporated early in the morning to start the day off on the right foot.

Grounding our beds can indeed have significant health benefits. If you wish to do this, you can purchase metal-laced bed sheets. Once you have them, you can use copper wire to connect the wires to the metal-wired sheets, ensuring continuous grounding for your bed. This practice can contribute to improved sleep quality, reduced inflammation, and overall well-being.

GROUNDING

Rubber is not a conductor of electricity and does not allow energy to transfer through it very well. Rubber-soled shoes were designed to insulate and disconnect us from the Earth, preventing the flow of electrical energy between our bodies and the ground. This insulation prevents grounding or earthing, which may have health implications as it disrupts the natural exchange of electrons between our bodies and the Earth's surface.

If you prefer not to walk barefoot all the time, you can still experience the benefits of grounding by using natural materials in your footwear. Wooden shoes or shoes with metal components can allow electric energy to transfer from the Earth to your body, enabling grounding even while wearing shoes. This way, you can still connect with the Earth's energy and reap the associated health benefits.

HUMAN ENERGY FIELD

Grounding is indeed another excellent method to strengthen your electromagnetic field. The human energy field acts as a protective shield against energy-borne diseases and sickness. When this field becomes depleted, the body becomes more vulnerable to diseases and health issues. Therefore, practices like grounding, which enhance the body's electromagnetic balance, can significantly contribute to overall well-being and resilience against illness.

When we compromise the electromagnetic fields of our cells, we contribute to our susceptibility to illness. This weakening has ramifications on the broader scale of our human energy field. Lowering the vibrational frequency and diminishing our electromagnetic fields, often through the consumption of acidic foods, aligns us with the frequency associated with illnesses. Diseases are thought to exist within a lower frequency band, and when we harmonize with that frequency, we supposedly become immune to those illnesses and other elements existing within that frequency.

HUMAN ENERGY FIELD

The human energy field manifests as an electromagnetic field, typically extending 4-5 meters in circumference around the body. As the individual's mental, emotional, and physical well-being improves, their field strengthens and expands, reaching up to 9 meters in circumference.

AVOIDING TOXICITY

AVOID THE FOLLOWING LISTED PRODUCTS AND ITEMS:

It is recommended to avoid plastic chopping boards because they can release microplastics onto your food while you are chopping. Once ingested, microplastics are difficult to remove from the body. Therefore, it is important to use plastic as minimally as possible to reduce exposure to these harmful particles. Instead use wooden chopping boards.

Non-stick pans are coated with a chemical called Teflon, which can be harmful to the body. When these pans are heated, Teflon can leach into the foods you are cooking. Therefore, it is best to avoid using non-stick pans to minimize exposure to Teflon. Instead use stainless steel cooking pans.

Air fresheners often contain numerous synthetic chemicals that, when inhaled, can disrupt hormones and potentially cause damage to the lungs over time. The term "fragrance" on ingredient lists can encompass a multitude of up to 10,000 toxic synthetic chemicals. Therefore, it's important to be cautious when using air fresheners and opt for natural alternatives whenever possible to minimize exposure to harmful substances.

It is advisable to avoid aluminum cans due to their plastic (BPA) lining, which can leach microplastics into the liquids and foods contained within the can. Therefore, it is recommended to steer clear of canned foods or liquids. Refrain from consuming beverages from plastic bottles and instead opt for alternatives such as glass, stainless steel, copper, and similar materials.

TOXIC INGREDIENTS

AVOID THE FOLLOWING LISTED INGREDIENTS:

STAY AWAY FROM:

- Thickeners
- Emulsifiers
- Gelatin
- Acidity Regulators
- Citric Acid
- Lactic Acid
- Ascorbic Acid
- Flavour
- Natural Flavour
- Iron
- Food Colouring
- Red40
- Palm Oil
- Vegetable Oil
- Rapeseed Oil
- Sunflower Oil
- Sugar
- Corn Syrup
- Starch
- Glucose
- Preservatives

ASCORBIC ACID

Ascorbic acid is indeed vitamin C, but it can be synthesized in a lab. It's often added to foods to enhance their appeal and nutritional content. Stay away from any "food" that is synthetic and not made by mother nature.

CITRIC ACID

Citric acid can be produced through fermentation using various strains of mold, including genetically modified organisms (GMOs), in laboratory settings.

FLAVOUR & NATURAL FLAVOUR

When you see "flavor" listed as an ingredient, it may contain up to three thousand synthetic chemicals, which can be harmful and unnatural to the body. Natural flavor isn't necessarily safer—it can include substances from the natural world, such as insects, bugs, and bottom feeders, which you should avoid from consumption. Insects and bottom feeders often consume waste and debris, which can contain toxins, microplastics, and parasites. As a result, they may accumulate harmful substances in their bodies.

SEED OILS

Sunflower oil, canola oil, and many other seed oils are often highly processed. They undergo heating and various factory processes to extract the oil from the seeds, which can result in the oil becoming highly refined and containing harmful substances.

SUGAR

Sugar triggers the brain's reward system, leading to the release of dopamine, which creates feelings of pleasure and satisfaction. This is a key factor in why sugar can be addictive, with some researchers likening its addictive potential to that of cocaine. Sugar often appears in ingredient lists under various names like glucose, corn syrup, and artificial sweeteners. Excessive consumption of artificial sugars is linked to numerous health issues, including diseases, tooth decay, and potential brain damage. Thus, it's crucial to minimize or eliminate artificial sugars from our diets to promote overall health and well-being.

FASTING

Fasting involves refraining from eating, providing the body with an opportunity to address any internal issues. By diverting energy away from digestion, the body can focus on healing processes. Digestion requires a significant amount of the body's energy. When we refrain from eating, this energy is freed up and can be redirected to other bodily processes, potentially aiding in healing and repair.

During fasting, the body may generate stem cells, which possess the remarkable capability to transform into specialized cells needed for tissue repair and regeneration. Stem cells are undifferentiated cells with the remarkable ability to develop into various specialized cell types in the body. They have the potential to differentiate into specific cell types, such as muscle cells, nerve cells, or blood cells, depending on the body's needs. Stem cells play a crucial role in the body's natural healing and regeneration processes

TYPES OF FASTING:

Liquid only fast - During a water fast, individuals abstain from consuming all food and only consume water for a designated period of time. This practice allows autophagy (the process of cellular repair and regeneration) and the production of stem cells. A liquid fast is often viewed as an effective method to cleanse the colon and clear the digestive system of toxins and residual food. By consuming only liquids such as water, herbal teas, fruit juices, and vegetable juices, the digestive system gets a break from processing solid foods, allowing it to rest, flush and detoxify. This practice helps remove buildup and promote digestive health.

Dry fast - Dry fasting, is a practice where individuals refrain from consuming any food or liquids for a designated period. Advocates of dry fasting often suggest that it can lead to more profound detoxification effects compared to water fasting alone. The body may efficiently eliminate toxins and waste products through various physiological processes during a dry fast. Warning - Dry fasting, due to its extreme detoxification and potential risks, should only be attempted by individuals who are well-informed, experienced with fasting practices.

FASTING

HOW LONG DO I FAST FOR?

Starting gradually with shorter fasting durations, such as 1-2 days at a time, allows beginners to acclimate to the experience and observe how their bodies respond. As individuals gain more experience and confidence with fasting, they may choose to extend their fasting periods, with experienced fasters potentially fasting for up to a week. For those who are highly experienced and knowledgeable about fasting, longer durations, such as one month or more, may be feasible.

HOW OFTEN SHOULD I FAST?

Giving the body a break from digestion every two weeks when initially starting fasting can be beneficial. As you gain more experience with fasting, it becomes increasingly advantageous to incorporate it more frequently into your routine. For instance, I personally fast for at least 1 to 2 days every week to maintain my fasting practice and its associated benefits.

BLOOD & SKIN CONNECTION

The presence of skin conditions such as acne, rashes, and various dermatological issues often serves as a visible indicator of underlying internal health imbalances. While external supplements and topical treatments can sometimes provide temporary relief by masking redness or irritation, they often fail to address the root cause of the problem, which lies within the body.

As the body's largest organ, the skin reflects the overall health of our bloodstream and internal systems. Skin issues like eczema and persistent rashes can be signals that our blood may contain toxins or that our body's detoxification processes may be compromised.

In essence, these skin manifestations act as outward manifestations of internal disruptions. Therefore, merely treating the symptoms externally may not fully resolve the underlying issues. Instead, adopting a holistic approach that includes dietary adjustments, lifestyle modifications, and detoxification protocols is crucial for addressing the root causes of skin conditions and restoring overall health and balance.

DO YOU HAVE TOXIC BLOOD?

To determine whether your blood is toxic or clean, you can conduct a simple test on yourself or someone else. Pinch the middle topside of your forearm. If the skin feels very thick and not very stretchy, it may indicate that your blood is thick and full of toxins. On the other hand, if your skin feels thin and elastic, it suggests that your blood is purer and healthier.

HOW TO CLEANSE THE BLOOD

To cleanse the blood effectively, it's beneficial to incorporate a variety of red alkaline fruits and vegetables into your diet. These include strawberries, cherries, tomatoes, raspberries, and others. These foods provide essential nutrients that support blood health and aid in removing toxins from the bloodstream. By consuming a diet rich in these red alkaline fruits and vegetables, you can help your body maintain optimal blood health and detoxification. Additionally, it's beneficial to include foods and herbal teas in your diet that are rich in iron and fluoride. Herbs like burdock root, dandelion, sarsaparilla, and cayenne pepper.

IMPORTANCE OF IRON

Iron is indeed one of the most important minerals for the body. Iron is a crucial component of hemoglobin, the protein in red blood cells responsible for transporting oxygen from the lungs to the rest of the body and many other bodily functions. In the bloodstream, iron is bound to hemoglobin and helps carry oxygen throughout the body's tissues and organs. This oxygenation process is essential for cellular respiration and overall bodily function.

Iron deficiency occurs when the body doesn't have enough iron to produce hemoglobin, leading to a decreased ability to carry oxygen to tissues and organs. This condition can result from various factors, including inadequate dietary intake of iron-rich foods, poor absorption of iron in the digestive tract, blood loss (such as from menstruation or internal bleeding), or increased demand for iron (such as during pregnancy or rapid growth periods in children). Females need to pay particular attention to their iron intake, especially around menstruation, because they lose iron during this time through blood loss. Menstrual blood contains iron, and women who have heavy or prolonged periods may experience greater iron loss

MALE

Insufficient iron intake can indeed lead to various health issues and complications. Iron deficiency can result in a condition called anemia, which occurs when the body doesn't have enough healthy red blood cells to carry oxygen to tissues throughout the body. This can lead to symptoms such as fatigue, weakness, shortness of breath, dizziness, pale skin, and difficulty concentrating.

IRON FLOURINE

IRON is crucial for our respiration and overall bodily function, essentially serving as the essence of life itself. Without iron, the production of red blood cells, responsible for carrying oxygen throughout our bodies, would be impossible. Oxygen is essential for every cellular process, providing the energy necessary for various bodily functions. Furthermore, blood plays a vital role in eliminating metabolic waste generated through respiration by transporting carbon dioxide, a byproduct of metabolism, to the lungs for expulsion from the body. Hence, the supply of oxygen to cells and the removal of carbon dioxide are paramount.

FLOURINE has been found to positively impact the formation of bones and teeth. It contributes to strengthening immunity, fortifying bones, and safeguarding teeth. It's worth noting that the healing properties attributed to natural fluorine differ from those of chemical sodium fluoride found in water. Fluorine also aids in protecting the body against viral invasion and proliferation. It acts as a disinfectant, germicide, antiseptic, antiparasitic, and fever-reducing agent, further underscoring its beneficial effects.

AVOID FAKE IRON

Not all forms of iron are beneficial or absorbable by the body. Our cells require iron in the form of iron phosphate or iron fluorine, which is naturally found in plants, fruits, and vegetables, rather than synthesized in a lab. The iron listed in ingredients is often iron oxide, a physical form of iron. However, our cells cannot effectively absorb heavy metals like iron oxide, and it can potentially cause harm to the body. Our bodies are designed to absorb nutrients from natural sources created by nature, rather than synthetic compounds.

Iron fluoride is a compound created by combining iron and fluorine, forming an inorganic substance. This will not benefit your body.

It's advisable to avoid iron supplements and foods containing added iron, as this iron is often synthetic. Opt instead for natural sources of iron found in plants, fruits, and vegetables, which provide the beneficial form of iron that the body can utilize effectively.

A superfood is a term used to describe a food that is particularly rich in nutrients, including vitamins, minerals, antioxidants, and other beneficial compounds.

The color of the fruit determines the health benefits it holds for the body. Red fruit indicates that it is healthy for the blood and contains a high amount of iron. Green fruit, for example, key limes, has detoxifying effects on the body and is beneficial for detoxing the gut and colon. Orange fruit, such as seeded oranges, is beneficial for cleansing the body of leftover waste.

Certain fruits bear a resemblance to the body parts they benefit, reflecting the idea that nature provides foods tailored for human health. This suggests that fruits, herbs, and plants are intricately designed by nature to promote our wellbeing, enabling us to identify the foods that support our needs. Furthermore, this observation supports the notion of a divine creation, where everything is interconnected—a microcosm within the macrocosm. It suggests a profound unity and purpose in nature, where the intricate design of fruits aligning with specific body parts reflects a deeper harmony in the universe.

AVOID GMO

IF NATURE DIDNT MAKE IT, DONT TAKE IT

GMO

ORGANIC VS GMO

GMO, which stands for genetically modified organisms, refers to fruits and vegetables that have undergone genetic alteration to serve commercial interests or human preferences. Supermarket fruits, for instance, are often genetically modified to prolong shelf life and facilitate mass production. While advantageous for businesses, these modifications do not align with our body's optimal health.

GMOs typically contain fewer minerals and nutrients compared to naturally occurring foods. Hence, it's crucial to prioritize sourcing organic food whenever feasible. Anything synthesized in a lab and not derived from nature's processes may not be suitable for consumption. Our bodies are inherently part of nature, and ideally, we should only consume what nature has provided for us since the beginning."

THE TERM ORGANIC HAS BEEN HIJACKED

The term "organic" is often misunderstood or misused in today's world. Organic produce refers to fruits and vegetables grown without synthetic pesticides, fertilizers or ionizing radiation. It's important to clarify that foods like broccoli, carrots, or kiwi are not inherently organic because they are cultivated hybrids. Instead, "organic" typically refers to the environment in which the food was grown. This includes factors like uncontaminated soil and the absence of pesticides. However, it's crucial to understand that just because a food is labeled organic, it doesn't automatically mean it's healthy or nutritious.

The term "organic" is now being applied to deceased animals within the meat industry. However, it's important to recognize that it's impossible to have organic chicken flesh or organic chicken eggs because these products are derived from sentient beings and are not suitable as food for our bodies.

TOILET PAPER IS TOXIC

IN THE MANUFACTURING PROCESS OF TOILET PAPER, CHLORINE IS OFTEN USED TO BLEACH THE PAPER, GIVING IT A WHITE APPEARANCE. HOWEVER, CHLORINE IS KNOWN TO BE A TOXIC CHEMICAL THAT CAN BE HARMFUL TO THE SKIN AND CAN QUICKLY ENTER THE BLOODSTREAM. ADDITIONALLY, THE INTERACTION OF CHLORINE WITH THE PAPER DURING THIS PROCESS CAN PRODUCE DIOXINS, WHICH ARE HIGHLY TOXIC CARCINOGENS. ANOTHER CHEMICAL COMMONLY ADDED TO INCREASE THE STRENGTH OF TOILET PAPER WHEN WET IS FORMALDEHYDE. THESE THREE CHEMICALS PRESENT SIGNIFICANT HEALTH CONCERNS, MAKING TOILET PAPER A POTENTIALLY DANGEROUS PRODUCT TO USE ON OUR SKIN. REPLACE HARMFUL TOILET PAPER WITH CHLORINE-FREE ALTERNATIVES

BOWEL MOVEMENTS

It's essential to sit in the correct position during a bowel movement to ensure effective elimination of waste from the body. Sitting in the right position helps prevent leftover waste from accumulating and potentially causing issues such as putrefaction in the body.

Sitting in a seated position results in partial relaxation of the puborectalis muscle, potentially causing problems like bloating, straining, hemorrhoids, and constipation due to incomplete waste elimination.

Using a stool to elevate our feet creates a squatting position, optimizing the angle for the puborectalis muscle to fully open. This facilitates easier and more efficient elimination during a bowel movement.

HOT VS COLD SHOWERS

Water is the element that cleanses and revitalizes all things in its presence. It has a profound impact on our bodies and bodily systems, underscoring the importance of using healthy water with minimal toxins.

Investing in a water filtering shower head can be highly beneficial for maintaining healthier skin by reducing exposure to toxins present in tap water. These shower heads typically utilize filtration systems to remove impurities such as chlorine, heavy metals, and other contaminants, providing cleaner water for bathing. By filtering out these substances, water filtering shower heads help minimize skin irritation, dryness, and potential long-term effects on health.

Our skin, composed of trillions of pores, absorbs the water we apply to it. The body reacts differently to hot and cold water: Cold showers or bathes can help boost the immune system, responsible for combating diseases and toxins, while hot showers have a soothing effect on the body, beneficial for muscle healing and overall relaxation.

I personally advocate for cold showers as a routine practice, as they offer numerous benefits for overall health. Over time, regular cold showers can lead to deeper breathing, a lowered heart rate, a strengthened immune system, and slower aging, among other advantages. Beyond physical benefits, cold showers also provide mental advantages. Our nervous system naturally seeks pleasure and safety, and by choosing to expose ourselves to cold environments, we cultivate mental discipline and enhance the higher faculties of our minds. This mental resilience can positively impact all aspects of our lives, contributing to greater well-being and success.

HOT SHOWER

- Muscle recovery
- Relaxation
- Opens pores
- Cleanses skin
- Clears mucus
- Removes toxins
- Relieves headaches
- Best to do at night

COLD SHOWER

- Reduces inflammation
- Boosts immune system
- Accelerates metabolism

- Increases alertness
- Reduces hair loss

PARASITES

PARASITES

Parasites are organisms that live in or on another organism (the host) and benefit at the host's expense. They derive nourishment and other resources from the host, often causing harm or discomfort to the host in the process. Parasites typically do not enter the body externally. Instead, they are believed to emerge from within due to factors such as consuming toxic foods and creating an acidic environment within the body.

Some parasites have developed complex mechanisms to manipulate the behavior of their hosts, including sending signals that can influence the host's brain. This phenomenon is known as "parasite-induced behavioral manipulation." For instance, certain parasites can alter neurotransmitter levels or produce molecules that mimic those produced by the host's body, affecting the host's behavior in ways that benefit the parasite's survival and reproduction. These behavioral changes can range from increased risk-taking behavior to altering the host's responses to predators or altering mating behaviors, all of which can enhance the parasite's chances of transmission to new hosts.

Food cravings can sometimes be influenced by parasites, but they're not always the sole cause. When the human body is healthy and the individual's mental and emotional states are balanced, cravings can be minimized. In such cases, individuals tend to prioritize nourishing foods that benefit their overall well-being, focusing on what supports their body, mental discipline, and spiritual harmony rather than solely indulging taste buds.

SIGNS YOU HAVE PARASITES

BACK ACNE

RED BUMPS ON ARMS

SUGARY CRAVINGS

TEETH GRINDING

RUNNY DIARRHEA

If you encounter or exhibit any of these four signs, there's a significant likelihood that you have parasitic life forms residing within your body, and it's imperative to expel them as swiftly as possible.

PARASITES

HOW TO REMOVE PRASITES

Parasites thrive in acidic based environments and feed off waste and acidic foods in the body. To eliminate parasites, deprive them of their food source by maintaining an alkaline diet and minimizing toxic foods. This can be achieved by cutting out acidic foods and focusing on consuming alkaline fruits and herbs recommended in this book. I advise avoiding grains and bread and opt for cleansing foods to make the environment inhospitable for parasites. Over time, consuming alkaline fruits and herbs may lead to parasites exiting the body through bowel movements or, in severe cases, causing sickness and exiting the body through the mouth.

Parasites exhibit intelligence in their survival tactics. Merely expelling them from your body doesn't guarantee you're free of them. Before dying or exiting, parasites often lay eggs to ensure their offspring's continuation within your body. Therefore, it's crucial to maintain a fruit-only diet and herbal intake for up to two months to prevent these eggs from hatching and establishing new generations within your body.

PARASITE KILLER DRINK

During your alkaline fruit-only diet, I recommend preparing the following concoction: Blend together one tablespoon of papaya seeds, the juice of two key limes, one tablespoon of cayenne pepper, and a quarter cup of spring water until thoroughly blended. Consume this shot every three days on an empty stomach, ideally in the morning.

BRAIN & THE GUT

CLEANSE YOUR GUT

The enteric nervous system that regulates our gut is often called the body's "second brain." Although it can't compose poetry or solve equations, this extensive network uses the same chemicals and cells as the brain to help us digest and to alert the brain when something is amiss. Essentially, the gut serves as a secondary intelligence, communicating vital messages such as hunger cues or feelings of satiety.

This is precisely why consuming food that is past its expiration date or ingesting toxic substances can lead to feelings of sickness or illness. When such substances enter our digestive system, the enteric nervous system, acting as our "second brain," detects the threat and alerts the primary brain. This triggers a response that can manifest as symptoms of illness, serving as a protective mechanism to prevent further harm to the body.

Remarkably, around 80% of our immune system resides in the gut. Additionally, approximately 90% of serotonin, a neurotransmitter crucial for mood regulation and other functions, is produced in the gut rather than the brain. Furthermore, nearly 50% of dopamine, a neurotransmitter associated with reward and motivation, is synthesized in the gut lining. These findings underscore the profound influence of the gut on our overall well-being. Emerging research continues to highlight the strong correlation between gut microbiota and various health conditions, including autoimmune diseases, autism, and cancer. Every disease has been connected to the gut microbiome to some extent. Understanding and nurturing the gut microbiome may thus hold significant promise for both preventing and managing a range of health challenges.

Maintaining a healthy body involves periodic gut cleansing, recommended at least once every two months. This is necessary because undigested food residues in the body can ferment and potentially attract parasites. Therefore, it's important to dedicate at least one week out of every two months to consuming raw fruits and drinking ample water, aiming for approximately 3.5 liters per day. Liquids play a vital role in cleansing the body by effectively flushing out any remaining food residues. Incorporating cleansing foods into your diet and integrating fasting can further enhance gut cleansing and promote overall well-being.

VISION

Poor vision is indeed prevalent in today's world. When experiencing poor vision in one or both eyes, it often indicates inefficiencies in the muscles surrounding the eyes and inadequate light intake. Wearing prescription glasses in such cases can exacerbate the issue. This is because the weakened muscles may become accustomed to relying on the glasses, leading to further relaxation and deterioration of vision over time. It's crucial to address underlying muscle weakness and light intake issues through alternative methods rather than solely relying on glasses for correction.

Instead of relying solely on glasses, addressing the root cause of poor vision is essential. Here are some tips to help improve vision naturally:

1. Start by adopting a fruit-only diet and fasting one day a week. Consuming plenty of brain-boosting foods like blueberries can support overall eye health.
2. Grounding daily and sun gazing at sunrise or sunset can be beneficial. Sun gazing during periods of lower light can help train the eyes to intake more light, potentially improving vision over time.
3. focusing on a single point, such as a pen, and moving it around your visual field without moving your head, only your eyes. Concentrate intently on the pen, striving to make it as clear and sharp as possible.

By incorporating these practices into your routine, you can work towards improving your vision naturally and addressing the underlying causes of poor eyesight.

TRY THIS EXERCISE

If you're experiencing poor vision, try this straightforward technique to test whether your eyes are receiving enough light. Create a small opening with your hand, allowing only a tiny bit of light to enter. Cover your eye completely with your hand, ensuring that no additional light can enter except through the small hole. Now, look through this opening, and you may notice that your vision becomes noticeably clearer or even sharper than before.

This exercise demonstrates that your eyes may not be receiving enough light, which can reduce contrast and impact vision. To improve light intake for your eyes, it's beneficial to minimize exposure to blue light from sources like light bulbs, TV screens, and phones. Instead, prioritize getting more direct sunlight to stimulate the retinas and enhance visual clarity. By reducing blue light exposure and increasing sunlight exposure, you can support better contrast and overall eye health.

HOW TO IMPROVE VISION

SUN GAZING

AVOID SEED OILS

EYE EXERCISE

LIQUID ONLY FAST

Poor vision could potentially indicate an accumulation of excess mucus in the head region. To address this issue, consider incorporating herbal teas such as mullein leaf into your routine. Additionally, thoroughly washing your head, scalp, face, ears, and under the eyes with sea moss gel or a non-chemical face wash can help remove excess mucus and promote clearer vision. These practices may contribute to improved eye health and overall well-being.

ONE EYE WEAKER THAN THE OTHER

If you have one eye with poorer vision compared to the other, this discrepancy can be addressed. The brain naturally prioritizes the use of the stronger eye, similar to how it favors the stronger arm for certain tasks. Over time, this preference can lead to the weaker eye becoming progressively weaker. However, it's possible to address this imbalance and strengthen the weaker eye through targeted exercises and therapies. By engaging in vision training techniques and consistently practicing activities that specifically stimulate the weaker eye, you can help restore balance and improve vision in both eyes.

Wearing an eyepatch over the stronger eye can indeed be a beneficial method for strengthening the weaker eye. By covering the stronger eye, the brain is forced to allocate more energy and attention to the weaker eye, leading to improved muscle strength over time. It's common to experience tension or aching behind the eye after engaging in eye exercises. This discomfort is a positive sign, indicating that the eye muscle is being challenged and exercised. Similar to the soreness felt after a workout at the gym, this discomfort signifies that the muscle is undergoing repair and strengthening. With consistent practice and patience, these exercises can help enhance the strength and function of the weaker eye.

HOW TO HEAL

HEALING IS NOT AN OVERNIGHT PROCESS

If I were to encounter any issues with my body, my first course of action would be to address the colon and gut by adopting a diet consisting solely of one type of fruit. My preferred fruits for this purpose would be those rich in minerals, such as blueberries or watermelon. This dietary choice aims to eliminate mucus, excess food residues, and electrically charge my cells while providing essential nutrients to my body.

Additionally, I would complement this fruit-based diet with herbal teas like burdock root and dandelion root, known for their ability to break down mucus and strengthen the immune system. After following this regimen for two weeks and ensuring my body is in optimal condition, I would transition to a liquid-only fast. During this fast, which could last up to four days, I would consume herbal teas of my choice and juices from fruits like watermelon, key lime, and grapes.

Throughout this process, I would ensure to ground my feet in the earth for at least 30 minutes a day, aiming for more whenever feasible, while also maximizing my exposure to direct sunlight.

Fasting allows the body to generate new stem cells for repair and utilize the energy saved from the inactive digestive system to address any bodily issues. Upon completing the fast, I would revert to the same diet and repeat the process until my body is cleansed and fully recovered from the underlying health concern.

HEALING DOES NOT OCCUR OVER NIGHT

It's crucial to understand that healing isn't a sprint; it's more akin to a slow and steady jog. Achieving healing requires discipline, consistency, and maintaining a positive mindset throughout the process. Although it may seem challenging at times, the long-term benefits make it all worthwhile. Many health issues are not sudden occurrences but rather result from years of neglecting our well-being. Often, unhealthy dietary choices, such as consuming junk food and acidic foods, gradually manifest into various health problems. Thus, it's essential to recognize the role of lifestyle habits in the development of diseases and commit to making positive changes for better health outcomes.

Disease is essentially 'dis-ease' within the body, signifying that something is out of balance or discomfort exists within the body's systems.

CONSUME FOODS IN A SPECIFIC SEQUENCE

If you choose not to follow the advice on consuming only alkaline foods, I strongly recommend adhering to this guidance on the order of food consumption. When faced with a meal containing various types of foods, it's beneficial to eat them in a specific order to support our digestive system and minimize glucose spikes. For optimal digestion, start by consuming foods that digest quickly, such as fruits and vegetables. Next, include proteins and fats in your meal, followed by starches and sugars last. I advise avoiding foods with starch and the consumption of animal flesh for overall health. Nevertheless, if you choose to consume these foods, it's advisable to follow the recommended order of consumption outlined above.

Similarly, this principle applies throughout our daily eating cycle. For our first meal of the day, it's beneficial to consume easily digestible foods like fruits. These foods help cleanse the system and minimize the energy expended by our bodies, ensuring we have ample energy for the day ahead. As the day progresses, if you choose to consume denser foods, it's advisable to do so later in the daytime. This approach supports optimal digestion and energy utilization throughout the day.

BREAKFAST IS BREAK-FAST

The term "breakfast" originates from "breaking the fast," subtly influencing our subconscious. However, it's worth noting that morning time is when the body undergoes significant detoxification processes. Therefore, refraining from eating during the morning hours aligns with supporting the body's detox efforts.

During sleep, the body undergoes a significant detoxification process. Upon waking, there's a crucial four-hour window where the body detoxes most efficiently. To optimize our health, it's recommended to refrain from eating until three to four hours after waking up. By doing so, we can leverage our body's natural defense mechanisms for enhanced well-being.

SEMEN RETENTION

Semen is the essence of masculinity, possessing the remarkable power to initiate the creation of a new human being. This sacred fluid holds profound significance and should be preserved within the body whenever possible. Despite its composition rich in testosterone and other essential nutrients, the true strength of semen resides in its spiritual counterpart. The energy associated with semen is profoundly potent, which explains why men often experience feelings of depletion and lethargy after ejaculation. Thus, conserving semen is encouraged to harness and channel this powerful energy for spiritual and personal growth in all aspects of life.

Releasing semen can lead to a decrease in testosterone levels and an increase in estrogen levels in men, potentially contributing to a more feminine physiological balance over time. Over-ejaculation can lead to reduced energy levels, slower muscle growth, accelerated aging, diminished self-confidence, and a lower vibrational state.

The most powerful of all human emotions is the sexual desire. While there are various mental stimulants, none of them, whether alone or combined, can rival the overwhelming force of sexual desire. Sexual desire has the capacity to completely dominate our body, mind, and spirit.

When sexual desire is redirected towards activities beyond mere physical actions, such as intellectual or creative pursuits, it holds the potential to elevate an individual to a genius level. In essence, channeling this potent energy into other aspects of life can lead to remarkable achievements and enhanced abilities.

MENTALISM

THE YOU-NIVERSE IS INSIDE YOUR MIND

MENTALISM

The mind is something that cannot be described so easily. it is important that you understand that the mind is not the brain; the brain is a physical manifestation of the mind. The mind is not visible to the two eyes. the mind transcends time, space, and matter; in other words, it exists outside of the physical world that is bound by space and time. everything we see in the physical world is an effect generated by the cause of the mind for example every car, building and design you see is a physical manifestation of the designers mind. the mind is infinite and unmeasurable as it has no boundaries and limitations unlike the external physical world. anything is possible in the mind.

The universe is one giant mind with unlimited potential, information and generation. all life forms including bugs and animals are sharing one thing in common which is that we all possess mind. we are all expressing this one consciousness no matter what body it inhabits. with that being the mental plane is a shared plane between everyone and everything within the universe. take for example when i speak to you verbally it affects you, the words that i say have an effect on your mind.

The mind isn't merely a generator of thoughts; rather, it acts as a receiver, tapping into the universal mind. Depending on the frequency we tune our minds into, we receive corresponding information. For instance, focusing on health directs our mental reception toward thoughts and insights related to well-being. This is why we refer to it as a "mindset" – we're essentially aligning our minds with specific frequencies.

Your life, the individuals within it, and the possessions you possess are direct reflections of your past mental thoughts. With this understanding, the unseen aspects of your being shape your tangible reality. You are the architect of your own existence, crafting your own unique "you-niverse. Before kicking a football, a decision is first formulated within the mind. Every action originates as a mental process before it manifests physically.

MENTAL HEALTH

Health isn't solely determined by what you consume physically; it extends to what you intake through your senses of sight, hearing, and mental engagement. What you see and hear can profoundly impact your mental well-being, either positively or negatively as everything you experience is stored within your subconscious mind. Your mind serves as the primary creator of your tangible, enduring reality. Thus, if you fill your mental space with negativity, it will manifest in your thoughts, actions, and emotions, ultimately influencing every aspect of your life.

SEE NO EVIL

SPEAK NO EVIL

HEAR NO EVIL

YOUR PERCEPTION IS YOUR REALITY

If you adopt the mindset I'm about to share, you'll become untouchable.

It's incorrect to believe that we should always strive for constant happiness because our reality is inherently dualistic, encompassing opposites like hot and cold, good and evil, day and night. Being one-sided leads to imbalance. Instead, adopting a mindset of neutrality is beneficial. The mind is the fundamental substance of existence, and everything we experience is neutral. It's our perception that assigns a positive or negative charge to these experiences.

Your emotions shouldn't solely be reactive; instead, they can be a force for manifestation. You can utilize them to feel something before you physically have it. Even if you experience a reactive emotion, don't allow it to consume you. Let it pass through you without allowing it to define or ruin you.

MENTAL HEALTH

HEALTH IS MORE THAN JUST PHYSICAL WELL-BEING

Your mental health is equally important as your physical well-being. When we think positive thoughts, we automatically generate positive emotions because every thought is linked to an emotion. Each thought and emotion emits a vibrational frequency that affects every cell in our body, either benefiting or harming us. These frequencies are powerful and contribute to shaping the world around us. Even with the healthiest diet, constantly harboring fear, anxiety, and negative thoughts in our minds can lead to disease within the body.

CONSCIOUS AND THE SUBCONSCIOUS MIND

The conscious mind serves as the masculine aspect of your mental faculties, overseeing everything within your awareness, including your visual perception, senses, and thoughts. Each conscious thought triggers an emotional response within the heart, which leaves impressions on the subconscious mind. The intensity of these emotions directly influences the depth of their imprint on the subconscious.

In contrast, the subconscious mind functions as the feminine aspect of your psyche. It silently manages the body's various systems without your conscious acknowledgment, such as regulating your heartbeat and breathing. This hidden realm constitutes 90% of your mind and serves as the repository for all your memories, languages, experiences, and crucially, your mental programming.

The brain emits theta wave frequencies just before falling asleep and upon waking up. These specific brainwave patterns are closely linked to rapid programming and hypnosis. It's crucial to be mindful of our thoughts, words, visual input, and auditory stimuli during these transitional periods, as they can profoundly influence our mindset. Listening to positive affirmations each morning while our subconscious is receptive to programming is highly beneficial. Consistently exposing ourselves to affirmations can effectively rewire the brain and even impact our DNA, instilling positive programming within the subconscious mind.

MENTALISM

CONSCIOUS AND THE SUBCONSCIOUS MIND

The subconscious mind represents the vast majority, about 90%, of our cognitive processing capacity, encompassing memories, learned behaviors, emotional associations, and crucially, mental frameworks known as paradigms. Operating beneath the surface of conscious awareness, it serves as the repository from which we draw upon past experiences and knowledge, effortlessly guiding our actions and expressions.

This hidden realm exerts a profound influence on 80% of our daily behaviors, largely through the ingrained mental programs stored within it. Consider routine tasks like tying shoelaces or entering a phone passcode—these are executed automatically, orchestrated by the subconscious mind without active conscious intervention. Therefore, if we create a mental program, such as believing in financial freedom, it will subconsciously influence 80% of our thinking patterns. For example, our thoughts will revolve around creating financial freedom, and we'll naturally take actions aligned with this goal, often without realizing it. Over time, this subconscious focus will lead to manifesting our desires into physical reality.

Emotional events, particularly those of significant intensity, leave enduring imprints on our subconscious, shaping our ongoing behaviors. For instance, a past car accident resulting in severe injury may engender deep-seated fear, perpetuating a subconscious program that manifests as hesitation or avoidance regarding automobile travel.

However, the subconscious is not solely a domain of negative influence; it can be harnessed positively. Through repetitive thought and emotional engagement, individuals can intentionally cultivate new mental programs. By consistently envisioning desired outcomes with emotional intensity, these programs take root within the subconscious, subsequently informing the majority of our daily behaviors and thoughts.

Crucially, the subconscious interprets all input literally, regarding it as truth. Thus, every statement, whether positive or negative, is internalized as fact. For example, self-deprecating remarks like "you're an idiot" are absorbed by the subconscious as self-directed criticism, shaping one's self-perception accordingly.

To leverage the power of the subconscious in creating positive mental programs, it's essential to understand this literal interpretation and employ conscious effort in affirming desired beliefs and attitudes. By consistently impressing positive thoughts and emotions upon the subconscious, individuals can shape their behaviors and experiences in alignment with their aspirations.

The First Apocalypse of James

NHC V, 3 // CT 2 // P. Oxy. 5533

The following translation has been committed to the public domain and may be freely copied and used, changed or unchanged, for any purpose. It is based on the Coptic text of Nag Hammadi Codex V, 3, Codex Tchacos 2, and Papyrus Oxyrhynchus 5533, hereafter abbreviated NHC, CT, and P. Oxy. 5533, respectively. The Nag Hammadi texts were written in the fourth century, subsequently buried, and then rediscovered in 1945. The Codex Tachos was discovered in the 1970s in Egypt, and was first published in 2006 by National Geographic. Papyrus Oxyrhynchus 5533 was identified as a fragmentary Greek version in 2021.

The text narrates revelations passed along from Jesus to James and a series of subsequent successors through the early second century. This translation from the Coptic and Greek is by Samuel Zinner and was edited by Mark M. Mattison with the generous support of Other Gospels. Introduction: Jesus and James [24] The Lord, however,¹ has spoken with me: “Behold now the fulfillment of my redemption. I have granted you a sign concerning these matters, James, my brother, because not in vain have I called you my brother, even though you are not my materialistic² brother, and I am not ignorant regarding you, in order that <you>, when I grant you a sign: know and hear!

[10] “Because I see (the completion) of my redemption, I will instruct you concerning these matters, James, my brother, because not in vain are you called ‘brother,’ though my materialistic brother [you are] not, but you lack recognition concerning yourself, so that [I] will instruct you concerning who I am.³

The Existent One

Nothing existed except the Existent One.⁴ I myself, I cannot be named, being from the Existent One, so that I [have been given a] number of names, twofold⁵ from the Existent One. I, however, I existed before you did.

Hear! Nothing existed except the Existent One.⁶ He [cannot be named, and] he is [inexpressible among those who] exist or who will come into [existence]. I, however, am from the Existent One, and I cannot be named, although [I] have been named with [a number of] names, [because] they do not belong to me; they are [alien] to me. However, the [first] I am not, because second am I, from the Existent One.⁷

¹ The use of “however” in the first sentence indicates the original opening has been lost.

² “Materialistic,” Nagel, “nach irdischer Art,” i.e., according to the earthly kind. The Coptic ḥulē, from Greek hulē, “matter,” does not imply that James and Jesus are not physical brothers. As Nagel, 75 explains, here Jesus “refers instead to the different spheres from which the revealer and the recipient of revelation originate.” (My translation from the German, here and below). Additionally, Jesus could be asserting that he is not a “hylic,” that is, one of those ruled by material impulses, but that he is a pneumatic, that is, one of those ruled by the divine Spirit. As part of its “gnostic” trajectory, I Apoc. Jas. transmits several “Jewish-Christian” traditions, and is therefore unlikely to reflect any denial of Jesus’ and James’ relation as full siblings.

³ The spiritual identity of James is bound together with that of Jesus, which in turn is bound together with God.

⁴ An echo of the divine name that plays off the Tetragrammaton in LXX (and Coptic) Exod 3:14.

⁵ “Twofold”; cf. CT: “However, the [first] I am not, because second am I, from the Existent One.”

⁷ This may hint at the two Tetragrammatons of Deut 6:4, the first thought of as referring to the Father, the second to the Son.

Achamoth (the “Lower Wisdom”) Creates Powers and Divinities

Because you have asked concerning femaleness:⁸ Femaleness existed, but femaleness did not exist [at the beginning], and she prepared for herself powers and divinities, but [she] did not exist [when] I came forth, [25] given that I am an image of the Existent One, but I have brought the image of [him], so that the children of the [Existent One] could know who belong to them and who the aliens are.

Behold! I will reveal to you everything of this mystery, because I will be apprehended the day after tomorrow, but my redemption will be near.”

James said: “Rabbi, you said, ‘I will be apprehended,’ but I, what will I be able to do (for you)?”

He said to me: “Do not be afraid, James. They will apprehend you as well, but turn yourself away from Jerusalem,⁹ because this is she who always gives the cup of bitterness to the Sons of

Because you [have] asked concerning femaleness, hear! The female existed, but she did not exist from the beginning. She made (for) herself [powers] and divinities. While the Existent One exists from the beginning, the female also exists, but not from the beginning. [11] I, however, am come from the image of the Existent One, in order to instruct you concerning the Existent One, and also [to instruct] you concerning the image of the powers, so that the children of the Existent One will know those who belong to them, and those who do not belong to them.

Behold! I have revealed to you the mystery. [After] three [days I] will be [apprehended. Then they will abuse] me, [the multitude] of [priests] and the elders, and they will revile me, [and they will curse me], but my [redemption will be] near.”

The Twelve Archons

[James, however], answered, he said: “Rabbi, what are you saying? If they apprehend you, then what am I to do (for you)?”

He answered him, saying: “When they apprehend you, and stone you, you will be redeemed, but do not return on the way to Jerusalem, because she is the one who always gives the cup of bitterness [12]

⁸ “Femaleness,” i.e., Achamoth-Sophia.

⁹ A hint at the “flight to Pella” tradition relating to the First Jewish War that broke out in 66 CE.

Light.¹⁰ She is a dwelling-place of a number of archons, but you will preserve your redemption in their presence, so that you can recognize who they are [and] of what kind they are.

You will [convince yourself], and hear. They are not [existent ones],¹¹ but [archons are they, like] the twelve [powers that possess plenary authority] (here) below. [Behold! This is the way it is with all] archons, [and each] one [of them is seated] [26] over his own hebdomad.”

James said: “So Rabbi, are there twelve hebdomads instead of the seven in the scriptures?”

The Lord said: “James, he who has spoken about this Scripture has understood (it) only up to this point. I, however, will reveal to you what has come forth from what cannot be numbered. I shall grant (you) a sign concerning their number. Regarding what has come forth from the Immeasurable One, I shall grant (you) a sign concerning their measure.”

to the Sons of Light, as a dwelling-place of many archons. Now your redemption [is] that you save yourself from them, and your knowledge consists (in) recognizing of what kind they are and how many they [are]. Not all of these are archons, but [. . .] dominion.

Hear me! These, whom I have brought with me to [this place, they are placed onto these twelve archons, each one of them] for himself [stands on] his [hebdomad].”¹²

James answered, he said: “[Rabbi], are there now therefore [twelve] hebdomads, [and] are there not seven, [as] we have it in the Scripture?”

Jesus said: “The one who has spoken about this Scripture, he announced (only) as far as he could understand. I, however, will reveal to you what has come from the Countless One. He has announced his number. That which has come from the Immeasurable One has announced their measure.”

¹⁰ The use of “the Sons of Light” together with a hint at the First Jewish War brings to mind, mutatis mutandis, the Qumran War Scroll.

¹¹ “They are not [existent ones].” This may allude to the notion of evil as a privation of the good. That is, the evil archons have no real positive existence, but only a shadowy negative ontic state.

¹² “Hebdomad,” i.e., a sevenfold period or group.

The Seventy-Two Pairs

James said: “Now what, Rabbi? Behold! I have discovered their number. There are seventy-two pairs.”¹³

The Lord said: “These are the seventy-two heavens, which are the small ones beneath them. These are the powers¹⁵ of the might of all of them, and by them were they established, and these are the ones who were apportioned in every place, which are under the [authority] of the twelve archons. The diminutive power dwelling among them [has] brought [forth] angels for itself, and countless hosts. However, the Existent One was [. . .] given [. . .]. On account of [. . .] Existent One [...]; countless are they.

[27] If you want to count them now, you cannot before you throw off blind thought from yourself, this fetter of flesh surrounding you, and then will you attain to the Existent One, and you will no longer be James. You will instead be what exists, and all of the [13] “If now, Rabbi, I revise¹⁴ the number of the archons, who then are the seventy-two pairs?”

He said, “<These> are the seventy-two small heavens beneath them. [However], those that are larger than they, those are the powers in the height, on which rests the entire (heavenly) axis, and [. . .] on account of [. . .] inside you.

They cannot be coun[t]ed by] you,¹⁶ but if you want to count them, you cannot count them now without throwing off the blindness that dwells inside your mind¹⁷ and the fetter that dwells inside the flesh. Then you will attain to the Existent One, and you will no longer be James,¹⁸ [14] but one who in ¹³ On the translation “pairs,” see Nagel, 81, footnote 7.

¹⁴ “Revise,” or “change.” This seems to be the sense of the literal reading, “move away from.”

¹⁶ “By you,” literally, “before you.”

¹⁷ “Mind,” or “heart.” The passage echoes Gos. Thom. 28.

¹⁸ “You will no longer be James.” This seems to be inspired by Jacob’s change of name to “Israel” in Genesis 32 and 35. Both NH and CT versions stop short of divinizing James, in contrast to, e.g., the explicit promise of divinization in the Dead Sea Scrolls text 4Q Visions of Amram (4Q543) Frag. 3: “[. . .] you will be God (’Ēl), countless ones will all have been named.”

every way is inside the Existent One. Those who cannot be counted will be [counted] by you,¹⁹ and everything that cannot be measured by you,²⁰ [will be] measured.”

The Opposition of the Powers

<James, however, said: “Now what>, Rabbi, how will I attain to the Existent One, given that all of these powers and these hosts stand armed against me?”

He said to me: “These powers are not armed against you alone, but against others as well. These powers are armed against me, and also with other [powers].

Instead, they are armed against me [with] a court of law. Then to them it was given [. . .] against me [. . .] by means of them [. . .] in this place [. . .] sufferings, [28] and I will not curse them, but inside me will be a silence and a concealed mystery,²¹ yet I am fearful in the presence of their fury.”

James said: “Rabbi, if they arm themselves against you, there will nevertheless be no (valid) accusation against you. You have come with knowledge, so that you could

Because the passage echoes Gos. Thom. 28, it may also hint at Gos. Thom. 30’s theme of divinization.

James' Redemption

What [29] will they do? What will I be able to say, or what kind of message will I be able to speak in order that I can escape from them?"

Overcoming the Archons

James said: “Rabbi, how will you hereafter appear²⁶ to us again, after you have been taken into custody, and you have fulfilled the destiny, and you have ascended to the Existent One?

The Lord said: “James, after these things I will reveal everything to you, not only for your sake, but on account of the unfaithfulness of humans, so that [faithfulness] may exist among them, because a multitude will [come to] faithfulness, [and] they will increase [in it] until [they come to knowledge], [30] and after this I will appear to reprove the archons. I will reveal to them that he cannot be apprehended. If he is apprehended, then will he apprehend them all.

“Now, however, I will go. Think on what I have said,²⁷ and let it enter inside of you.”²⁸

James said: “Lord, I will hurry, as you have spoken.”

“Rabbi, how will you hereafter appear to me, after you have been judged, and your destiny is prepared, and you have attained to Existent One?”

“James, hereafter I will appear to you in this place, not only <on your account>, [but] on account of the [unfaithfulness] of humans, that is, how [faithfulness] can arise among them. [Many, however], will turn to faithfulness and grow in it, [so that] they will come to knowledge, and for this reason I will [display] the humiliation of the archons, [and I will] reveal to them [that] he cannot be apprehended. When they apprehend him, then he has apprehended (them).

Jesus Departs and Returns to James

The Lord departed from him, and fulfilled what was necessary. When James had heard of his sufferings, he was very sorrowful. <He> was on the lookout for the appearance³⁰ of his coming, but he came after some days, and James was walking about on the mountain called

And Jesus went and prepared what was appropriate for him, but James heard of his sufferings, and [17] was very sorrowful, and expected his coming, and he had only this to comfort him, namely, the expectation of his coming, and it was two days, and behold! James conducted the service on

James, [however], heard of his [sufferings], and was [sorrowful],³¹ and he awaited his coming, [but] he was next to him after [two] days, [and behold! James] came to the mountain called “Golgoul”³² with [his ³⁰ “Appearance,” Coptic typos.

³¹ “Sorrowful,” or “troubled.”

³² NHC Gaugēlan, CT Galgē[la]m, P.Oxy 5533 Golgoul. With regard to NHC Gaugēlan, see Nagel, 91: “The N(ag)H(ammadi) version in the form Gaugēlan has retained the accusative (ending) of the Greek textual Vorlage: ho onomazousi Gaugēlan.” Despite the fact that P.Oxy 5533 reads to legomeno[n] golgoul, Nagel’s explanation remains convincing. This indicates either a variant reading or two different Greek recensions, neither of which is at all implausible. Another secondary feature of NHC Gaugēlan is the dropping out of the first lambda, whose presence is attested by both CT’s Galgē[la]m and P.Oxy. 5533’s Golgoul.

The CT version’s Galgēlam can be explained as a mistaken reading that has accidentally incorporated the letter mu from the immediately following word meta (to legomeno[n] golgoul meta).

To explain P.Oxy 5533’s Golgoul first requires a discussion of the identification of the mountain in question. Nagel refers the reader to Brankaer/Bethge, 205–206, which presents strong reasons for identifying the mountain as Gilgal in Joshua 4–5 (Hebrew Gilgāl; Greek Galgala; Syriac Galgālā). Although Gilgal was not a mountain, it is famous for its Hill of the Foreskins, whose story is narrated in Joshua 5, immediately after passing over the Jordan:

2 At that time the LORD said to Joshua, “Make flint knives and circumcise the people of Israel again the second time.”

3 So Joshua made flint knives, and circumcised the people of Israel at Gibeath-haaraloth [Hill of the Foreskins]. (RSV)

The immediate objection is that Gilgāl is not a mountain name. However, as Ed Noort explains: “Between [Josh] 5.3 Bounos tōn akrobustiōn, ‘the Hill of the Foreskins’, and 5.8f. [see Josh 5:9, ‘And so the name of that place is called Gilgal to this day’] there is no change of location, so, in the eyes of the LXX translator, Gilgal and the Hill of the Foreskins must be the same place.” See Ed Noort, “The Disgrace of Egypt: Joshua 5.9A and its Context,” in Anthony Hilhorst and George H. van Kooten, eds., The Wisdom of Egypt: Jewish, Early Christian, and Gnostic Essays in Honour of Gerard P. Luttikhuisen (Ancient Judaism and Early Christianity 59; Leiden / Boston: Brill, 2005), 1–19; here, 6.

Further, as Brankaer/Bethge, 205 points out: “One can assume that the name of the place [Gilgal/Galgala] has been transferred to that of the hill. That this hill is bound to the history of Israel and the Law can be of relevance for the interpretation of this passage in 1 Apoc. Jas.” (My translation from the German, here and below).

Based on Brankaer/Bethge, 205–206 we can exclude any connection between Gaugēlan / Galgē[la]m / Golgoul and Golgotha. Therefore, instead of detecting a hint at Golgotha in Golgoul, it is much more likely that in Gol- of Golgoul we have a partial assimilation to the following -goul.

Regarding “Hill of the Foreskins” in Josh 5:3, the Syriac version uses Rāmt^hā, which (as is the case in Common Aramaic) means both “hill” and “mountain.” Targum-Jonathan at Josh 5:3 uses G^hib^h t^hā, which like the Hebrew Gib^ha t^h, means only “hill,” not “mountain.” This would explain why 1 Apoc. Jas. calls Galgala a mountain rather than a hill, understanding the Hill (of Foreskins) in Joshua 5 and Galgala as identical, in common with the Septuagint/OG translator. This data would seem to hint at either a Syrian provenance, or at least the incorporation of Syriac traditions in 1 Apoc. Jas.

[Then] the crowd dispersed itself, but James remained [behind alone at] prayer [by praying], in the way [31] he was accustomed, and the Lord appeared to him and he ceased praying, fell on his neck, and kissed him.

He said: “Rabbi, I have found you. I had heard of the sufferings you endured, and I was very sorrowful, because my compassion you know. And behold! They dispersed themselves, and James remained behind alone and he prayed fervently, according to his custom, but during it Jesus appeared to him, and he desisted from his prayer, and began to embrace him, and said to him: “Rabbi, I had distanced myself from you. I had heard what you took onto yourself, and I was very sorrowful. You know my sympathy. For this reason I did not want to remain with you: [18] That I would not have to look on this people. He said: [“Rabbi], I have you! I heard what you [suffered, and] I was sorrowful [. . .].”

Jesus Encourages James

The Lord said: “James, do not worry about me, nor about this people. I am he who existed inside himself. I have never suffered in any way, nor “James, do not worry about the [people], nor about me, because from the beginning I am the Existent One inside of me alone, [because] I have not

In the forms Gaugēlan and Galgē[la]m, the phonetic element /ē/ may echo the /i/ of Hebrew Gilgāl, while the /o/ and/or /ou/ of Greek Golgoul may distantly approximate the /ə/ of Syriac Galgālā. However, /o/ and/or /ou/ could bring to mind the Hebrew cognate gilgūl, “a rolling.” Cf. also the cognate name Galgūla, known from the Bar Kokhba letters.

Brankaer/Bethge in 2007 suspected that behind the Coptic mooše was the Greek verb peripatein, “wander.” P. Oxy. 5533 uses pare[genet]o, “came to,” “came up,” “arrived at.” We can see in James’ arrival at the Hill/Mountain of Foreskins=Galgala an echo of the Israelites’ arrival led by Joshua (“Jesus” in Greek) at the Jordan and Galgala’s Hill of the Foreskins.

³³ Here James is a Paraclete-like figure who replaces Jesus as teacher. Cf. John 14:26, although it is very doubtful I Apoc. Jas. here echoes this John passage.

³⁴ James has succeeded to Jesus’ position, so that Jesus’ former disciples are now James’ disciples.

[He is] furious over [you, the] ‘Just [God,’ because you used to be] [32] subservient to him, wherefore you bear this name: ‘James the Just.’ You will see how you become sober, because you have seen me. and now you have fallen on my neck, and you have kissed me.

“Truly I say to you: You have stirred up great fury and wrath against yourself, but for this cause, that something else would come to pass.”

James, however, was fainthearted as he wept, and he was very sorrowful, and both of them seated themselves on a boulder.³⁷

The Lord said to him: “James, this is why you will receive these sufferings, yet do not feel sorry for yourself, because the flesh is weak.³⁸ It will receive what is destined for it, but regarding yourself, be not be weak, nor be afraid.”

The Lord [fell silent, and] when James had heard this, he

Instead, this was imposed on the appearance³⁶ of the archons (corrupted text), in order to prepare (corrupted text). It was then fulfilled. Be on your guard, though, because the ‘Just God’ has fallen into fury, because you were subservient to him, and for this reason you have you obtained the name ‘James the Just.’ Behold! You have already been set free. You will recognize me, and you will recognize yourself, and you yourself have desisted from the prayer that the ‘Just God’ requested.”

[19] And he embraced me, and kissed me.

Amen.

“I tell you: He has stirred up his anger against you, and his fury, but this, too, must come to pass.”

James, however, was fainthearted, wept, and sorrowed much, and they both sat down on the boulder.

Jesus said to James: “James, it is appropriate for you to experience all this, but do not be sorrowful. The flesh, which is weak,³⁹ will receive what is inflicted on it, but you, be not fainthearted, and fear nothing.”

When James heard this, he wiped away his tears, and the

The Toll Collectors

When they apprehend [you], and you accept this suffering, a crowd will arm itself against you, so that <they> can apprehend you, but three of them in particular will apprehend you, those who are seated as toll collectors. They demand not only toll, but they take away souls violently as well.

When you fall into their hands, one of them who is a Watcher among them will say to you: ‘Who are you, and where are you from?’⁴⁰

You will say to him: ‘I am a Son, and I am from the Father.’

He will say to you: ‘What kind of a son are you, and to which father do you belong?’

You will say to him: ‘I am from the Father who [existed] first, and a Son who [is] inside the First-Existent One.’

He [will say] to you: ‘And [from where did you come]?’

You will [say to him: ‘From what existed at first], because I [. . .].

When they apprehend you, you will find yourself (confronted) by these things. Many will stand against you on account of [20] the warrant for your arrest, but among them are three seated there in a single place; they are toll collectors. Not only do they [collect] toll for sins, but they (also) demand souls.

When you find yourself among many, then one among them, because he is [a Watcher], will ask you: ‘Of what kind are you, and where are you from?’

You will say to him: ‘I am the Son, and I am from the Father.’

And he will say to you: ‘What kind of a son, and what kind of a father?’

“You will say to [him]: ‘The Father who from [the beginning] exists, but the Son who from the beginning exists inside the Existent One.’

And he will say to you: ‘From where have you come?’

You will say to him: ‘From the Existent One who is from the beginning.’

And he will say: ‘Why have you come?’

⁴⁰ With this passage, compare Gos. Thom. 50.

[34] '[...] the aliens?'

You will say to him: 'They are not completely alien, but they are from Achamoth, that is, from the female, and she made these when she brought down the race from what existed at first. They are, therefore, not aliens, but they belong to us. On the one hand, they belong to us because she who is their Lady is from what existed at first. On the other hand, they are aliens in that the First-Existent One did not unite himself with her at the time when she thought of making them.'

Again he will say to you: 'Where are you going?'

You will say to him: 'To the place from which I have come, there will I return,' but when you say this, you will be away from their activities.

When you, however, come into the hands [of the] three minions [who] apprehend [the] souls violently in that place, [. . .]. You will [say] to them: 'I am a vessel⁴¹ [more valuable] than [Achamoth, who made you.]' [35] [. . .] your [. . .], that is, [. . .] over her root, will you not sober up [yourself]?

And you will say: 'I am come to all those who belong to me, also to those who are not.'

He will say: 'Why have you come? [21] [To] those who do not belong to you?'

Then you will say: 'They are not completely alien to me, rather they are offspring of Achamoth, who is the female, and she herself has made these. She has brought down the race that exists from the beginning. Therefore, they are [not] alien to [me]. Rather, they [belong to me]. They [belong to me] insofar [that she] was the Lady over them. They belong to the Existent One who is from the beginning. However, they have become alien, because the Existent One who is from the beginning did not unite himself with her when she had created them.'

And he will say: 'Where will you go?'

You will say: 'I go to those who belong to me, to the place from which I have come.' If [you] say that, you will be saved from all of these.

When, however, you come among the three who collect the soul, then there will be a great tumult in that place when you say to them: 'I am a vessel more valuable than Achamoth, the female who created you, [22] and when your mother is ignorant concerning her own root, then at what time will you become sober?'

'I, however, have invoked the immaculate Sophia, who

She grew ignorant of her mother,⁴³ and she thought that she was alone, but I have invoked her mother, and then all of them will be troubled, and they will accuse their own root, and the race of their mother. You, however, will go to your roots, the fetters that are their fetters as well.

⁴⁹ Accepting Nagel’s gloss.

⁵⁰ An allusion to the outbreak of the Jewish War in 66 CE.

⁵¹ A variant of “Addaios.”

⁵³ As Nagel, 105 remarks, fi nhētf, “bear in his mind,” is more or less semantically equivalent to the NH version’s unusual idiom čpo nef. . . nhētf, which essentially means “to memorize.” The use of hēt, “mind,” is an anticipatory play off the name Mānāēl, which is based on Syriac/Armaic mānā, whose primary meanings include “vessel,” “garment,” “mind.”

⁵⁶ The name Manaël (i.e., Mānāēl) is unattested, and is therefore most likely an ad construction. It could mean “vessel of God” (so Nagel, 105), which would anticipate the later description of the seven women as weak vessels. However, Mānāēl could alternatively mean in Syriac “garment of God,” “mind of God,” “measure of God,” any of which could relate to the themes of I Apoc. Jas. See the entry “mʿn, mʿnʿ (mān, mānā) n.m. vessel; garment” at <https://cal.huc.edu>. Mān/mānā can also mean a vessel of war, i.e., “weapon,” “armor,” which would also be congruent with the context in which the name appears in I Apoc. Jas. If “Masphēl” means “watchtower of God,” as I argue in the next footnote, then the meaning “weapon of God” would be fitting, at least in part, for the name Mānāēl. However, both Mānāēl and Masphēl could refer to states of awareness when we understand mānā as “mind” and Masphēl as “watchtower,” the latter implying active awareness, watching. I thank Martin Schwartz for this suggestion, who also refers to Proverbs 15:3’s šōpʰōtʰ, “\s-p-y, šāphā(h), with regard to God’s ‘looking out,’ ‘scoping,’ ‘being aware,’ ‘scrutinizing.’”

The first part of the name Mānāēl would be cognate with the name Mānī, i.e., mānā + hayyē, at least as understood by Kurt Rudolph: “Greek Manichaïos, Aramaic mani haija, ‘vessel/spirit of life.’” Kurt Rudolph, “Mani, Manichaeans,” in Hubert Canik, Helmuth Schneider; Christine F. Salazar, eds., Brill’s New Pauly: Encyclopaedia of the Ancient World. Antiquity Volume 8 LYD–MINE (Leiden/Boston: Brill, 2006), 233–236; here 234. Similarly, Hans Heinrich Schaeder, Urform und Fortbildungen des manichäischen Systems (Leipzig: B. G. Teubner, 1927), 88 interprets Mānī’s full name as “Mani the Living.” For a fuller discussion of the etymology of Mānī’s name, see Werner Sundermann, “MANI,” Encyclopaedia Iranica, online edition, 2009, available at <http://www.iranicaonline.org/articles/mani-founder-manicheism> (accessed on 18 May 2025). I thank Martin Schwartz (University of California-Berkeley) for pointing out the relevance of the name Mānī for this discussion. (Private communication, 18 May 2025).

As Sundermann writes, hesitation is in order regarding Schraeder's (and Rudolph's) proposed etymology for Mānī's full name. Martin Schwartz points out in his private communication, "the heθ as in hayya, 'life,' was rendered by zero in the LXX," and cites the Mandaic proper name Baraiēs, "Son of Life." As Schwartz remarks: "Sundermann, who refers to the data of the Septuagint, ignores the fact that still at that time, Hebrew, like Arabic, had, as it were, xeθ and heθ, gayin and 'ayin.'" Schwartz also notes that both h* and x* merge as x in Neo-Aramaic, and adds: "Maybe already at the time of the Greek form Μανιχαῖος there were already two dialectal(?) pronunciations of heθ, as seems to be the case in early Ashkenaz." Cf. Alexander Beider, "Bne Hes and Bne Kes," in Geoffrey Khan, ed., Encyclopedia of Hebrew Language and Linguistics (Leiden/Boston: Brill, 2013), 373–375. The crucial issue is, as Beider, 374 interjects: "They could either have been inherited from a common ancestor for the Hebrew of these two Jewish groups, or result from similar innovations."

Rudolph's "spirit" reflects the German Geist, which means both "mind" and "spirit," and he is referring to mānā as "mind." OG Isa 40:13 renders Hebrew rūah, "spirit," with nous, "mind," in the phrase "mind of the LORD." Mānāēl could then possibly mean "the Spirit of God." (Cf. Isa 11:2's phrase "the Spirit of the LORD," which in the Greek and Syriac versions reads as "the Spirit of God," pneuma tou theou; rūhā dī- 'ālāhā). The reworking of Isa 40:13 in Wis 9:13–17 retains "spirit" in the form to hagian sou pneuma apo hupsistōn, "your holy Spirit from on high." (Targum Jonathan similarly expands Isa 40:13's "spirit" to "holy Spirit." "Holy Spirit" is also used in the reworking of Isa 11:2 in Psalms of Solomon 17, Greek vv. 37–40, Syriac vv. 42–44). Cf. the reworking of Isa 40:13 in Syriac 4 Ezra 4:11: "how can your mind (m'nk) grasp the way of the Most High?"

The polyvalence of Aramaic/Syriac mānā ranging from "vessel," "weapon," and "mind-spirit," links together the I Apoc. Jas. Mānāēl passage and the immediately following section on the seven women disciples as "vessels" who are identified as Isaiah 11's seven "spirits." This is evidence for the incorporation of Syriac traditions in I Apoc. Jas.

In conclusion, it is intriguing that Mānāēl is linked to the trope of receiving a secret book around the time of the Kitos War, 116–118 CE. This is approximately the time Elchasai appeared with his famous book. On Elchasai, see J. P. Asmussen, "ALCHASAI," Encyclopædia Iranica, I/8, 824–825; <http://www.iranicaonline.org/articles/alchasai-a-sectarian-in-the-early-christian-church-1st-2nd-centuries-a>; accessed on 25 May 2025. See further Gerard P. Luttikhuisen, The Revelation of Elchasai: Investigations into the Evidence for a Mesopotamian Jewish Apocalypse of the Second Century and Its Reception by Judaeo-Christian Propagandists (Texts and Studies in Ancient Judaism 8; Tübingen: J. C. B. Mohr [Paul Siebeck], 1985); idem, "The Book of Elchasai: a Jewish Apocalypse," Aula Orientalis 5 (1987): 101–106; idem, "Elchasaites and their Book," in Antti Marjanen & Petri Luomanen, eds., A Companion to Second-Century Christian "Heretics" (Leiden/Boston: Brill, 2005), 335–364. For a fundamentally different (and less plausible, in my opinion) understanding of the Book of Elchasai than that of Luttikhuisen, see F. Stanley Jones, "The Book of Elchasai in Its Relevance for Manichaean Institutions with a Supplement: The Book of Elchasai Reconstructed and Translated," ARAM 16 (2004): 179–215.

⁵⁷ The name Masphe^l is unattested, and is therefore most likely an ad hoc construction. I seriously doubt there is any relevance in the claim by Nagel, 105: "The name could be derived from the Aramaic passive participle מִשְׁפִּיל mašpīl, 'lowered,' 'humble.'" A straightforward origin would instead be the Biblical Hebrew Mispeh (Syriac/Aramaic Misp^hyā), "watchtower"; OG Esdras B 13:19 (=Nehemiah 3:7) masphe, more commonly massēpha, as in Judges 11:11, etc. Masphe^l therefore would mean "the watchtower of God," which could fit both a military and a cognitive context. The idea of joining mispeh with God could derive partly from Gen 31:48–49: "Therefore was the name of it called Galeed; and Mizpah, for he said: 'The LORD watch (višep^h) between me and you.'" The LXX here reads ho theos rather than ho kyrios, the latter of which would correspond to "the LORD," while theos would render Hebrew 'ēl. Thus, concealed behind the -ēl of Mānāēl and Masphe^l would be the true holy name, the Tetragrammaton, YHWH, the LORD.

[37] [. . .] his name will be called ‘Levi.’

Then he will [not] bring forth a [single] word of [what I] had said previously.

[He will take] a woman,⁶² one from Jerusalem, of <his>⁶³ [tribe, and] together with her will beget [two] sons. They will inherit these things, [and] the understanding⁶⁴ of the [older one] will become arrogant,⁶⁵ and [these] will be

From him, however, will come a holy offspring,⁵⁹ which is worthy to inherit these (things) I have spoken, but when his little son will become [big, and] he [recognizes] the Living One,⁶⁰ he will [receive] a name, ‘Levi.’

Then the land will wage war once again,⁶¹ but Levi himself will be hidden as a little child, and no word that I have spoken will pass over his lips, but he will take a woman, one from Jerusalem, of his tribe, and he will produce two sons with her, and the pair of brothers will inherit all of this. The mind⁶⁶ of the older one will close itself, and they will be taken from his mind.⁶⁷ [Leaf G] [. . .] because a holy spirit [will come] from him, and he will be judged worthy to inherit these previously mentioned things.

When his younger son inherits them [. . .] Levi, war will then be waged against this land, [but] Levi will hide them discreetly [. . .].

⁵⁹ Cf. Jub 25:3; 1 En 39:1.

⁶⁰ “The Living One,” p.et onh, is a divine title synonymous with p.et šoop, “the Existent One,” “He Who Is,” derived from Coptic Exodus 3:14, de anok pe p.et šoop, “I, however, am (the) being/existent one” (see https://data.copticscriptorium.org/texts/old-testament/02_exodus_3/analytic). The title “the Living One” is intriguing in light of the previously discussed etymology of Mānī’s full name, the form of which could mean “the living vessel,” “vessel of life,” or perhaps “vessel of the Living One,” although this etymology is uncertain. The chronology of the war narrative in 1 Apoc. Jas. excludes an allusion to the third-century Mānī. We may, however, have here traditions from a community that belonged to the background or trajectory of Mānī’s “Jewish-Christian” ancestors, namely, the Elchasaites. For the theory that close similarities shared between Mandaean and Manichaean sources might be explained by an earlier common source, namely, the Elchasaites, see Kevin T. van Bladel, From Sasanian Mandeans to Sābians of the Marshes (Leiden Studies in Islam and Society 6; Leiden/Boston: Brill, 2017), 86–88. If Mānī’s full name indeed derives from mānā + ḥayyē, then the Mandaean divine title mānā + hiia may be of Elchasaite origin, and Mānī’s full name could then reflect a divine name used in common by the Elchasaites and Mandaeans.

⁶¹ An allusion to the Kito War, 116–118 CE.

⁶² “He will take a woman,” i.e., as a wife.

⁶³ “<His>,” corrected from the codex reading “her.”

⁶⁶ “Mind,” pḥēt. This links the text back to the earlier mention of Mānāēl, whose element mānā- is Syriac/Aramaic for “mind.”

⁶⁷ “Mind,” hēt. This links the text back to the earlier mention of Mānāēl, whose element mānā- is Syriac/Aramaic for “mind.”

The younger one, however, will increase in them, and will keep them concealed until in the course of life he reaches seventeen years,⁶⁹ [25] and then the land will wage war.⁷⁰

However, because he will not be there, he will be guarded in agreement with Providence, and he will increase and occupy several provinces.⁷⁵ Many will be saved through him, and he will make this message become a teaching from⁷⁶ many provinces. He will be severely persecuted by the [people themselves], and he will be scorned by them, and they will scorn this message, but this will come to pass by the archons apprehending.”⁷⁷

[Leaf H] and [this message will be] scorned [b]y the dece[it of the archon[s]].”⁷⁸

⁶⁸ “Mind,” nous. This links the text back to the earlier mention of Mānāēl, whose element mānā- is Syriac/Aramaic for “mind.”

⁶⁹ “Seventeen years,” i.e., from the outbreak of the Kitos War in 116 CE until the beginning of the Bar Kokhba Revolt in 132 CE.

⁷⁰ An allusion to the Bar Kokhba Revolt, 132–136 CE.

⁷¹ The NH version understands the verb pōt positively as “follow,” “emulate,” which is clear from the subsequent verb “proclaim,” while the CT version understands pōt negatively as “persecute,” which is clear from the subsequent verb “scorn.”

⁷² “He,” or “it.”

⁷³ “Seed of salvation.” Cf. Isa 45:8, where salvation is brought forth like a plant by the earth.

⁷⁵ As surprising as it may seem, the text appears to hint that Bar Kokhba was the younger of the two sons of Levi. The text may therefore serve as evidence for “Jewish-Christian” approval of Bar Kokhba and his revolt. On such a possibility, see Dennis D. Buchholz, Your Eyes Will Be Opened: A Study of the Greek (Ethiopic) Apocalypse of Peter (Dissertation Series 97; Atlanta, GA: Scholars Press, 1988), 408–412.

⁷⁶ “From,” or “for.”

⁷⁷ This would seem to hint at Bar Kokhba’s defeat. The Coptic could be understood either as the archons apprehending or being apprehended, but the Greek text makes the latter interpretation unlikely.

⁷⁸ The Greek reads [kat]a henedr[an tōn archont]ō[n]; see Landau, Smith, Henry, 12. We could harmonize the Coptic and Greek by saying that the archons apprehend/seize by means of deceit or deception.

The Seven Women Disciples

James said: “[I] am pleased [with all of these things], and they are [well with what is inside] my soul.⁷⁹ Yet these [other things] will I ask of you: Who are the [seven] women who [have become] your disciples?⁸⁰ And behold! All women praise you. I myself marvel at how [power]less vessels have become strong by means of a [perception] dwelling inside them.”⁸¹

The Lord [said]: “You do well [to marvel . . .]. [. . .].

“Rabbi, I am convinced of all of these (things), and they are well with what is inside my soul. Additionally, I wanted ask you: Who are the seven women who have become your disciples, and whom all the generations bless?⁸² I myself marvel that they dwell inside fragile vessels, and they have found powers and perceptions.”

“James, you do well to marvel, but the Son of Man⁸³ has come and has revealed [26] what is concealed on account of the Sons of Light,⁸⁴ so that they might dwell in what is revealed while they possess what is concealed.”⁸⁵

“Rabbi, [. . .] and [. . .].”

“[. . . the Sons] of Light, [so that they can dwell in what is] manifest, [even should they] possess these matters [(that are) concealed].⁸⁶

⁷⁹ Not that they are pleasant or pleasing topics, but that James understands the statements.

⁸⁰ Brankaer/Bethge, 239 suggests that the seven women-spirits are to be coordinated with the previously mentioned Sophia.

⁸¹ This is a reworking of Gos. Thom. 29.

⁸⁴ “The Sons of Light.” This phrase occurs earlier in the NH version on page 25, and in the CT version on page 12. The usage of this phrase in 1 Apoc. Jas. does not resemble its use in Luke 16:8 and John 12:36 (see also 1 Thes 5:5 and Eph 5:8) as much as it does in the Qumran literature, where it appears in the context of the apocalyptic war against Rome. I refer to the War Scroll, its full title being War of the Sons of Light against the Sons of Darkness. The War Scroll Col. 1 identifies the Sons of Light first with “the sons of Levi.” In 1QS, The Rule of the Community, Col. 3,25 “the Sons of Light” are mentioned together with “the spirits of light.” Cf. 1 QS Col. I,8 –9, “all revealed things . . . the Sons of Light.” Compare also the proximity of “Sons of Light” and “spirits” here in 1 Apoc. Jas. Further, 1QS Col. III,13, “the Sons of Light . . . the sons of man.” Despite these observations, there is no direct relation between the Dead Sea Scrolls and 1 Apoc. Jas.

⁸⁶ Revelation does not cancel or end the concealed nature of what has been revealed. Concealment and revelation are two manifestations of a single entity.

	The seven women are seven spirits ⁸⁷ which were established in the Scripture:	[The seven] women [are] the seven spirits
[39] [. . .] a spirit of [wisdom, a spirit] of reflection, ⁸⁸	A spirit of wisdom and of intelligence, ⁸⁹	[. . .] a spirit [. . .] of thought ⁹⁰

⁸⁷ In ancient Semitic languages, words for “spirit” are in general grammatically feminine. This facilitates linking women with the term “spirit.”

⁸⁹ “Intelligence,” mnt.sabe. I would prefer to render mnt.sabe as “wisdom,” but “the spirit of wisdom and of wisdom” would be odd in English.

⁹⁰ “Thought,” [dī]anoias. OG Isa 11:2 has in this position of the list of spirits sunesis, “understanding,” “intelligence.” The Vorlage of P. Oxy. 5533 does not seem to be necessarily dependent on OG Isa 11:2. In the position of P. Oxy. 5533’s dianoias, NH has eumeue, “reflection,” and CT has mnt.sabe, “wisdom / intelligence.”

⁹¹ “Counsel,” šočne.

⁹² “Thought,” or “mind,” nous, which has no parallel in Isa 11:2, at least not in this position. The NH and CT versions both add nous in the sixth position. This is in order to have a total of seven spirits, in contrast to a total of six spirits in Isa 11:2, which has seven spirits only if one counts “the Spirit of the LORD” as the first spirit. Although nous has no parallel in the Hebrew text or Greek and Coptic versions of Isa 11:2, it is paralleled in the Syriac version of Isa 11:2, but in the third position, namely, tar īta, “thought,” “plan,” “mind,” which overlaps semantically with both Greek boulē (the third spirit in OG), “counsel,” and nous, “mind.” However, most importantly, Greek nous would reflect Syriac mānā, “mind,” which ties the text back to the passage on the name Mānāēl, “Mind of God.”

⁹⁴ “Knowledge,” gnōsis.

⁹⁵ All three versions of I Apoc. Jas. have hote, “fear,” as the seventh spirit. This does not agree with OG Isa 11:2’s eusebeia, “piety” (which is the meaning of the reading in Coptic Isa 11:2 as well, mntrmnoute), but with the Hebrew text and the Syriac version (and Targum Jonathan), but also with the reworking of Isa 11:2 in the Greek Psalms of Solomon 17:40 (Syriac v. 44).

⁹⁶ “Knowledge,” sooune.

⁹⁷ “These,” i.e., the seven spirits.

⁹⁸ “Among,” or “into,” “within,” given that the spirit of prophecy is traditionally said to dwell upon or within a prophet.

⁹⁹ “No prophet.” This likely in part echoes Gos. Thom. 31, given that I Apoc. Jas. knows Gos. Thom. 28, 29, and 30.

¹⁰¹ Cf. Matt 12:36.

¹⁰² An allusion to Gos. Thom. 28; I Apoc. Jas. also reworks Gos. Thom. 29 and 30.

take care, so that they do not become envious of you when you speak these [lofty] words. Be in agreement¹⁰⁵ with this [other matter]: Salome,¹⁰⁶ and Mariam,¹⁰⁷ [and Ars]inoe¹⁰⁸ [. . .].¹⁰⁹

Be convinced as well of this other matter, that is, Salome, and Marihamme, and Arsinoe,¹¹⁰ whom I will [28] bring together with you, because they are worthy of the Existent One, because they have grown sober and have been freed from the blindness in their hearts,¹¹¹ and have recognized what I am.

This (came to pass) according to the Providence of the Father, because he has sent me as a priest, and in every place they will be counted among these:

the offering of the first-fruits and the firstborn.¹¹⁶ He receives the offering of the first-fruits and dismembers the ¹⁰⁴ “Lofty-minded knowledge,” p.sooune et.čise n.hēt, is clearly a play off the subsequent name Arsinoe, from Greek arsis + noos, “raising,” “lifting,” + “mind,” that is, in effect, Lofty-Mind.

¹⁰⁵ “Be in agreement.” A semantic play off the subsequent name Salome, from Hebrew for “peace.” In Syriac the verb šlm can mean “to make/be at peace” as well as “to agree.”

¹⁰⁶ The name Salome is cognate with Syriac pl. šlamyn, “offering,” which is in fact the next topic in I Apoc. Jas.

¹⁰⁷ Mariam, from Hebrew for “bitter,” playing off the earlier-mentioned “bitterness.”

¹⁰⁸ Although caution is in order because of the respective lacunae, it appears that in both the NH and CT versions the names Salome and Mariam/Marihamme are intentionally set off on a line of their own, while the next line has an intentional long blank space between the conjunction “and” and the name “Arsinoe.” Since this oddity appears to be present in both codices, there is likely an intentional motivation behind it, probably of a numerical nature. This may have something to do with the wording of Gos. Thom. 30, Coptic “Where there are three . . . Where there is two or one,” Greek “Where there are three . . . Where there is one alone.” See April D. DeConick, The Original Gospel of Thomas in Translation: With a Commentary and New English Translation of the Complete Gospel (Early Christianity in Context 287; London/New York: T & T Clark, 2006), 135–136. Similarly, on NH page 42 and CT page 29 the names Sapphira and Susanna have their own line, with Johanna alone on the next line (NH page 42 mn Iōanna; CT page 29 Iōanna with preceding mn at the end of the line above). One must be cautious again, though, given that the limitations of the available physical space of each line must be taken into account.

¹¹¹ An echo of Gos. Thom. 28.

brings [as] burnt offerings and [sacrificial offerings]. I, however, am not of this kind,¹¹³ but offerings of first-fruits from the [Indestructible One I] bear up¹¹⁴ to Heaven¹¹⁵ [and outspread] them, so that the power of [the truth] can appear, because what is destructible¹¹⁸ has ascended¹¹⁹ to what is indestructible, and [the] activity of the female has attained to the activity of the male.”¹²⁰ sacrifices and sacrificial offerings, but I am not of this kind. Instead, I receive the offerings of the first-fruits on the part of those who are defiled,¹¹⁷ and I dispatch them, so that the true power will be revealed, because what is defiled has been separated from what is undefiled, and the activity of the <female> has attained to the male.

“Rabbi, have <not> these three now perished? Have they not suffered? If they truly had been worthy, and had been persecuted by [. . .], even¹²² they had been taught (things) that do not exist.”

“James, it is not at all necessary that someone [29] should perish.¹²³ These three¹²⁴ have been set apart into¹²⁵ a

¹¹⁴ “Bear up,” or “lift/raise up,” congruent with Greek arsis, “raising,” the first element of the name Arsinoe.

¹¹⁵ Reading uncertain.

¹¹⁷ “Defiled,” or “stained.”

¹¹⁸ “What is destructible,” i.e., physical sacrifices.

¹¹⁹ The noun “ascend” belongs to the biblical vocabulary of sacrificial offerings.

¹²⁰ “The female has attained to . . . the male,” i.e., weakness has attained to strength. This passage hints, on one level at least, at the trope of the attainment of spiritual androgyny, as in Gos. Thom. 22, 114, and the Gospel of Mary’s concluding scene.

¹²¹ “These three,” grammatically feminine.

¹²² “Even,” literally, “and.”

¹²³ Cf. Matt 18:14.

¹²⁴ “These three . . . a place.” An echo of Gos. Thom. 30’s “place” where “three gods” dwell. This echo is clear, given the reworking of Gos. Thom. 29 on NH page 38 and on CT page 25.

¹²⁷ This reverses the sequence of the stages of acquisition of faithfulness and knowledge in NHC 29, “because a multitude will [come to] faithfulness, [and] they will increase [in it] until [they come to knowledge],” and in CT 16, “[Many, however], will turn to faithfulness and grow in it, [so that] they will come to knowledge.”

¹²⁹ Given 1 Apoc. Jas.’ interest in name etymologies, here the significance of “Johanna” likely goes beyond the basic fact that a “Johanna” was a known disciple of Jesus in tradition (Luke 8:1–3 and 24:10). One must ask why 1 Apoc. Jas. mentions this particular name rather than another one known from the gospels, e.g., Martha. It is well known that early Christian tradition viewed Hannah (cognate to “Johanna”) as a prototype of Jesus’ mother, Mary. Already Luke’s Magnificat, sung by Mary (Luke 1:46–55) reworks the Song of Hannah (1 Sam 2:1–10), which celebrates the birth of Samuel. 1 Apoc. Jas. NH page 38/CT page 25 applies an echo of Luke 1:48, a verse from the Magnificat, to the seven women disciples of Jesus. Samuel is prominently linked not only to the Ark of the Covenant, but also to both place names Gilgal and Mizpah (1 Sam 7:16, and throughout 1 Samuel), which are relevant for 1 Apoc. Jas.’ place name Gaugēlan (Galgē[la]m/Golgoul) and proper name Masphēl. The Targum Jonathan at 1 Sam 2:1 depicts Hannah as possessing a prophetic spirit or spirit of prophecy.

¹³⁰ The name Sapphira means “sapphire,” i.e., lapis lazuli. Cf. Acts 5:1–10, the story of Ananias and Sapphira. Incidentally, the name Ananias is cognate with the name Joanna, the latter meaning “Yah is gracious.”

¹³¹ “Susanna,” from Hebrew for “lily,” “rose.” Biblical lilies were red or pink. As sapphires are a feature of the divine throne, so depictions of lilies accompanied the figures of cherubim in the temple of Solomon (1 King 6:32,35), and lilies ornamented the Holy of Holies which contained the Ark of the Covenant (1 King 6:18–19). Cherubim were placed atop the Ark of the Covenant, representing the divine throne; see also Ezekiel 10’s cherubim linked to the divine chariot-throne. Lily figures also adorned the temple menorah consisting of seven lamps. Perhaps 1 Apoc. Jas. implicitly links Isaiah 11:2’s seven spirits with the seven lamps of the menorah.

¹³² 1 Apoc. Jas. refers to seven women-spirits, but mentions only six names, i.e., Salome, Mariam, Arsinoe, Sapphira, Susanna, and Johanna. This is probably an intentional hint at the fact that Isa 11:2 actually names only six spirits, if one does not count “the Spirit of the LORD.” Psalms of Solomon 17:37–40 (Syriac 42–44) in its reworking of Isa 11:2 omits the spirit of knowledge, substituting it with “righteousness,” derived from Isa 11:5. Psalms of Solomon 18:7 shortens the spirits to four, in the sequence fear (of God), wisdom, righteousness, strength. The correlation between knowledge and righteousness may be explained as follows. After Isaiah 11:2’s “the Spirit of the LORD,” this phrase occurs next in Isaiah 40:13. The next verse uses justice/righteousness in poetic parallelism with “knowledge.” Cf. Isa 53:11, “by his knowledge shall the righteous one. . . .” (Isa 33:6’s “wisdom and knowledge; the fear of the LORD” also echoes Isa 11:2). 1Q28 (Rule of the Blessings) Col. V,25 shortens the list of Isa 11:2’s spirits to four, namely, counsel, fortitude, knowledge, fear of God.

Behold! [I] have [revealed] every matter [to you, and I have] in no respect [omitted (anything) . . .],¹³³ because you have obtained [the first-fruits¹³⁶ offering] of knowledge, and now [you know] which [place]¹³⁷ it is [to which you will] go. [. . ., and] you will [also find rest].¹³⁸

I, however, will depart, and I will appear [to them], because they have been faithful to you, so that [they] will be in agreement¹³⁹ for their [blessing] and salvation,¹⁴⁰ and so that this

Behold! I have revealed to you all things, and you are not alien to these words, because you have obtained the summit¹³⁴ of knowledge¹³⁵ [concerning your root] from those that belong to you. Furthermore, go, and you [will] also [find] rest.

I, [however, I will] go to these and appear to them, because [. . .].”

¹³³ This is an echo of 1 En 37:3: “Hear, you men of old time, and see (wārā’ayū), you that come after, the words of the Holy One which I will speak before the Lord of Spirits. It were better to declare (them only) to the men of old time, but even from those that come after we will not withhold the beginning of wisdom.” (R. H. Charles translation modified).

¹³⁴ Here archē bears the meaning “sum,” which can be extended to “summit,” especially in view of the biblical Semitic terms behind the biblical LXX (OG) archē. Syriac rēšā, like its Hebrew cognate rē’šit^h, literally means “head,” “chief.” See the discussion on the term in 1 En 37:3 in George W. E. Nickelsburg and James C. VanderKam, A Commentary on the Book of Enoch Chapters 37–82, 88.

1 Apoc. Jas.’ reference to the beginning of “knowledge” is prompted by the earlier mention of Isa 11:2’s spirit of knowledge. 1 Apoc. Jas.’ “the beginning of knowledge” also may be inspired partly by the phrase “the beginning of wisdom” in 1 Enoch 37. This is because this 1 Apoc. Jas. passage’s tropes of words (especially 1 En 37:2, “this is the beginning of the words of wisdom”), plenary revelation, place, persecution, martyrdom, concealed knowledge, faithfulness (based on Isa 11:5), blessing, salvation, departure, and rest/repose are all prominent themes in the Parables of Enoch.

The Enoch text, incidentally, reworks Isaiah 11’s list of seven spirits in 1 En 49:3 and 61:11, the latter beginning with “the spirit of faithfulness and the spirit of wisdom.” The reworking of the seven spirits of Isaiah 11 in 1 Enoch 49 concludes with “and the spirit of those who have fallen asleep [i.e., died] in righteousness.” Contextually, it is very likely that this includes the martyrs. This Enochic background finally explains the unusual identification of the seven spirits of Isaiah 11 with seven women disciples in 1 Apoc. Jas., of whom at least three are martyrs.

¹³⁷ The eschatological place of rest, like the post-mortem “place of faithfulness” obtained by the three martyrs Sapphira, Susanna, and Joanna.

¹³⁸ For the lexical links of finding + rest, see 1 En 63:6. “Rest” and “resting-places” are key tropes throughout the Parables of Enoch.

¹³⁹ “In agreement” anticipates the subsequent “among them a unity.”

¹⁴⁰ The constellation of faithfulness, unity, blessing, salvation, and revelation indicates we have here an echo of 1 En 61:9–12, where all spirits, including the spirit of faithfulness, unite as one in agreement to bless the Lord of spirits in what is a reworking of the Jewish liturgy’s Qedushah, based on Isa 6:3. Revelation is mentioned in 1

Chapter 3

A NEW TESTAMENT OF ADAM IN THE SYRIAC REVELATION OF THE MAGI?

Bradley N. Rice

In recent years, a remarkable yet little-known Christian apocryphon in Syriac has come to light called the Revelation of the Magi (RevMagi).¹ It recounts the story of the Magi, those mysterious foreigners from the distant East who came

A version of this chapter was presented in the Pseudepigrapha Section at the annual meeting of the Society of Biblical Literature in San Antonio, Texas, on November 19, 2016.

¹ The Revelation of the Magi is attested in a single Syriac manuscript (Vat. syr. 162), where it forms part of the Chronicle of Zuqnin, a chronicle describing the history of the world from its creation up to 775/776 CE. Editions of the Chronicle have been published by Otto F. Tullberg (Dionysii Telmahharensis Chronici liber primus: Textum e codice ms. syriaco Bibliothecae Vaticanae [Uppsala: Regiae Academiae Typographi, 1850]) and Jean-Baptiste Chabot (Chronicon anonymum Pseudo-Dionysianum vulgo dictum [CSCO 91: Scriptores Syri 3.1; Paris: E Typographeo Reipublicae, 1927]). A new edition of RevMagi is currently being prepared by Brent Landau for the Corpus Christianorum Series Apocryphorum; the preliminary form of his edition may be found in “The Sages and the Star-Child: An Introduction to the Revelation of the Magi, An Ancient Christian Apocryphon” (Th.D. Dissertation, Harvard Divinity School, 2008), 23–74. Landau also offers the first English translation of the text, for which see “Sages and the Star-Child,” 75–136; Landau, Revelation of the Magi: The Lost Tale of the Wise Men’s Journey to Bethlehem (New York: HarperOne, 2010), 35–88. Although RevMagi is only preserved in Syriac, a Latin summary of the text has long been known from the Opus imperfectum in Matthaëum (OIM), an Arian commentary on the Gospel of Matthew dating to the fifth century; see Joop Van Banning, Opus imperfectum in Matthaëum: Praefatio (CCSL 87B; Turnhout: Brepols, 1988). Since Van Banning’s edition has not yet appeared, for the Latin text one must still consult Jacques Paul Migne, Joannis Chrysostomi opera omnia quae exstant (PG 56; Paris, 1859), cols. 637–638. For an English translation of the OIM summary, see James A. Kellerman, Incomplete Commentary on Matthew (Opus imperfectum), 2 vols., Ancient Christian Texts (Downers Grove, IL: IVP Academic, 2010), 1:32; Alexander Toepel, “The Apocryphon of Seth: A New Translation and Introduction,” in Richard Bauckham, James R. Davila, and Alexander Panayotov (eds.), Old Testament Pseudepigrapha: More Noncanonical Scriptures (Grand Rapids, MI: Eerdmans, 2013), 33–9.

to Bethlehem to pay homage to the newborn king of the Jews (Matt 2:1-12)—but it does so from the perspective of the Magi themselves. In the Revelation of the Magi we discover that the Magi do not come from Persia, Babylon, Arabia, or any other known country,² but from a faraway land called “Shir,” situated on the eastern edge of the world near paradise (chapters 1–2).³ They trace their lineage to Adam’s son Seth, who received from his father a prophecy about the coming of a star that would signify the birth of Christ. This prophecy was recorded by Seth and carefully passed down through the generations (2–4). In anticipation of the star, the Magi regularly ascend a certain mountain in Shir called the “Mount of Victories” and read from writings found in the “Cave of Treasures of Hidden Mysteries” (4–10). At a pivotal moment in the story of RevMagi, the star finally appears to the Magi, and it turns out that the star is none other than Christ himself (11–15), who then proceeds to guide their lengthy journey to Bethlehem (16–18). In Bethlehem, they discover a cave resembling the cave on the Mount of Victories, and there they see the star transform itself into a luminous infant (18–21). After a brief encounter with Mary and Joseph (18–25), the Magi return to Shir and share their experiences with its inhabitants (26–28). Finally, the apostle Judas Thomas arrives in Shir, baptizes the Magi, and commissions them to preach (29–32).⁴

One of the more striking features of the Revelation of the Magi is its description of how the Magi knew about the star. It was not through astrology, as the tantalizingly terse account of the Magi in Matthew’s gospel (2:1-12) would suggest. Indeed, the possibility that Matthew’s infancy narrative was an endorsement of astrology proved troubling to most early Christians, who swiftly connected the Magi’s knowledge of the star with the messianic prophecy of Balaam in Num 24:17: “a star shall come out of Jacob, and a scepter shall rise out of Israel.”⁵ Rather, the Revelation of the Magi suggests that the Magi learned of the star through a still more ancient prophecy, one uttered by Adam himself at the beginning of time. In this “Testament of Adam to Seth” (= TAS),⁶ Adam tells Seth about his fall from glory and about how he failed to comprehend his lofty position within paradise; he foretells the idolatry and apostasy that will occur at the end of time; and he exhorts his son to avoid temptation and seek righteousness. Seth records the testament in the world's first book (RevMagi 3.2-3), and the book is carefully passed down over the centuries until the time of the Magi themselves.

A Summary of the Testament of Adam to Seth (TAS)

The Revelation of the Magi purports to offer an extract from the Testament of Adam to Seth in chapters 6–10. At this point in the narrative, the Magi have ascended the Mount of Victories and entered the Cave of Treasures to read from certain books that contain “every word that our father Adam, chief of our great lineage, spoke with his son Seth” (6.1). Adam begins by telling Seth about the coming of the Star of Bethlehem, which he himself had seen standing over the Tree of Life in the Garden of Eden, casting light over the entire garden (6.2). After Adam disobeyed the commandment not to eat from the Tree of Knowledge, he was expelled from the garden and could no longer see the light of the star (6.3). Adam then mourns over his “foolishness” and warns Seth to pursue righteousness “that he might find mercy before the Father of Majesty” (6.4).

What follows is a kind of haggadic midrash, replete with wordplays and metaphors, on Adam's fall from his glorious position within paradise and the familiar role that Eve played in his demise. Adam tells Seth that succeeding generations will tell stories about him (7.1), saying such things as “every kingdom that is divided against itself shall not stand.” This is said to be “fulfilled” about Adam himself, for he “doubted” the royal majesty that he enjoyed in his kingdom of paradise (7.2). Adam says that the rib removed from his side became a thorn that put out his eye (7.3), and that Eve was appropriately called “time” because she became a stumbling block (7.4). Adam then cautions Seth not to listen to his mother, for though she was created as a helper (7.6), she became a hindrance and the ultimate cause of his expulsion from Eden (7.7).

Adam then reflects on how he failed to realize how good he had it in paradise, and praises God for his boundless mercy (8.1). Adam tells Seth that God judged him for his disobedience “like a kind father whose mercy is combined with discipline” (8.2-3), and that all creation remains under his—i.e., Adam's—authority (8.4). Adam then describes his encounter with the serpent, here called the “Evil One,” who deceived him because he wished to be free from Adam's dominion (8.5). As punishment for the serpent's deception, God filled his mouth with dust and tore off his feet (8.6). And, of course, Eve is blamed for all of it (8.7), and Adam therefore warns Seth not, under any circumstances, to listen to his mother (8.8). Adam goes on to say that honorable people will be found among his descendants, those who will recite “the mysteries of the majesty” (9.1). But at the end of time they will be rebellious and blaspheme against heaven (9.2), making idols and serving the sun and moon (9.3), prompted by the “cunning deceiver” (9.4) and given over to all sorts of debauchery (9.5-6).

Adam then again reflects on his time in paradise and on how he was fooled by the serpent (10.1-2). Yet he also professes that his “kind savior and merciful master” will have mercy on him at the end of days (10.2) and will raise him again from the dust (10.3). Looking back again to that astral light that shone in Eden, Adam then reveals how the savior will descend into the darkness and illumine his eyes as he had once before when giving him the breath of life (10.4). Finally, the extract concludes with Adam’s assurance to Seth that he too shall find mercy, for the merciful savior does not reckon the father’s sins against the son (10.5-6). Adam further says that the maker and savior “does not neglect in his great mercy anyone who loves him and walks in justice before him. Even to those who offend him, he gives opportunity for repentance, and is gracious to them if they repent and seek (it) from him, because his mercy upon his world is great” (10.7).⁷

The Testament of Adam to Seth as an Independent Composition

Although there are some points of contact with the broader narrative of the Revelation of the Magi, to some extent the Testament of Adam to Seth sits uncomfortably with the rest of the story. If it were removed, one might not even notice that it was missing. Was it an independent composition that was later integrated into RevMagi? The question has received scant attention in scholarship. This is partly because most of the previous studies of RevMagi were devoted to demonstrating an Iranian and/or Zoroastrian influence on the text,⁸ and partly because RevMagi was only accessible in Latin, Italian, and Polish translation until fairly recently.⁹ To my knowledge, the first scholar to address this question was Gerrit Reinink, who in a brief discussion of RevMagi suggested that the text was composed of three sources: a story about the Magi told in the first person (a “we-testimony”); a “revelation of Adam to Seth” (“eine Offenbarung Adams an Seth”); and a story about Judas Thomas.¹⁰ However, Reinink did not offer any substantive argument for his position, other than to note that the “revelation of Adam to Seth” differs in content and interrupts the first-person narration of the Magi. Brent Landau, who to date has published the most detailed studies of the Revelation of the Magi, maintains that “there is no evidence that chapters 6–10 had a prior written existence independent of Rev. Magi.”¹¹ The matter is far from resolved, and in what follows I would like to consider some of the reasons why this otherwise unknown testament is likely to have been an independent composition.

One of the first reasons is what Landau has called the “Judas Thomas Episode” (JTE), found at the end of the Revelation of the Magi (chapters 29–32).¹² At this point in the narrative, the Magi have returned to their native land of Shir and told its inhabitants about all the wonders they witnessed at Christ’s birth and on their journey to Bethlehem, and the people of the land have been enjoying various visions of Christ in multiple forms (chapters 27–28). What then follows is peculiar: Judas Thomas, apostle of the East, arrives in Shir (29.1). The Magi welcome him and tell him about what they saw (29.2–3), which prompts Thomas to recount ¹⁰ Gerrit J. Reinink, “Das Land ‘Seiris’ (Šir) und das Volk der Serer in jüdischen und christlichen Traditionen,” JSJ 6 (1975): 72–85. “Obwohl der Abschnitt grösstenteils dargestellt wird als eine Geschichte, die von den Magiern erzählt wird, erweist sie sich nicht ganz und gar einheitlich. Plötzlich fangen die Magier an zu reden (Chabot, S. 59) und ebenso plötzlich wird der “Wir-Bericht” unterbrochen durch die Offenbarung Adams an Seth, die eingeleitet wird mit den Worten: ‘wiederum aus den Büchern, die sich in der Schatzhöhle befanden’ (Chabot, S. 62–65). Auch im Schlussteil findet eine Verschiebung statt. Die Erzähler sind nicht mehr die Magier in der Geschichte von ihrer Begegnung mit Judas Thomas (Chabot, S. 86ff). Das Ganze erweckt den Eindruck, es sei zusammengesetzt aus mehreren Quellen (u.a. eine Magier-Geschichte im ‘Wir-Stil’, eine Offenbarung Adams an Seth und eine Judas Thomas-Geschichte)” (p. 75, n. 13). Jean-Claude Haelewyck (“Le nombre des Rois Mages: Les hésitations de la tradition syriaque,” in Jean-Marc Vercruysse (ed.), Les (Rois) Mages, Graphè 20 [Arras: Artois presses université, 2011], 25–37) also suggests that RevMagi is “sans doute composite” (p. 34, n. 33), yet offers no supporting arguments.

Landau has argued—I think convincingly—that the Judas Thomas Episode is a later addition to the Revelation of the Magi. He offers several reasons for thinking so. First, there is an awkward shift from the first to the third person in the two chapters preceding the JTE (27-28), together with several odd transitions between direct and indirect speech.¹³ In the first clear instance of third-person narration, the Magi are seemingly reintroduced: "And there was great joy in the entire land of the East, and the nobles, and the poor, and women, and children from the entire land were gathered together in the love of our Lord before those nobles who were called Magi."¹⁴ Landau observes that the Magi are called "nobles" (ܐܪܝܐ) and "brethren" (ܐܪܡܝܐ) throughout the JTE, as opposed to the designation "magi" (ܡܕܝܐ) found earlier in RevMagi.¹⁵ Indeed, the second reason is the different vocabulary seen in the JTE, such as the frequent use of "our Lord Jesus Christ" in different combinations—something curiously absent in the remainder of RevMagi, which prefers titles such as "son," "guide," and "savior."¹⁶ In the prayer that Thomas says over the baptismal oil (30.2-9), there is an athletic terminology which is often used in Syriac literature for ascetic accomplishments, and which is much more at home in the Acts of Thomas than in RevMagi.¹⁷ Third, the JTE is superfluous to the narrative. Before Thomas arrives in Shir to baptize the Magi, the Magi have already witnessed the fulfillment of Adam's prophecy of the star and brought the ¹³ Landau, "Sages and the Star-Child," 180–2. Landau observes that the first chapters of RevMagi are also narrated in the third person (1.1-3.6), though he finds that the redactor had a far less heavy hand here than in chapters 27–32 ("Sages and the Star-Child," 182–4).

inhabitants of Shir to faith in Christ.¹⁸ According to Landau, the JTE was appended because there was “a concern for officially integrating the Magi into the broader Christian church through an apostolic visit and baptism.”¹⁹

If Landau is correct that the Judas Thomas Episode is an interpolation into the Revelation of the Magi, it stands to reason that there may be others.²⁰ Employing similar criteria, a reasonable case can be made that the Testament of Adam to Seth (6.1–10.9) is also an interpolation. Like the JTE, the TAS appears to be superfluous to the narrative, and one would hardly notice its absence. It interrupts the narrative flow of RevMagi, as can be seen already at 6.1. The sentence begins with the Syriac adverb ܐܘܬܐܢ, which is often used to indicate the start of a new section: “Now (ܐܘܬܐܢ) from the books which were in the Cave of Treasures ...” We find that ܐܘܬܐܢ is used similarly at the beginning of the JTE: “Now (ܐܘܬܐܢ) when Judas Thomas went down there ...” (29.1).²¹ Seth is also introduced in 6.1 as though he had not been previously mentioned, although his name is found no fewer than eight times in chapters 1–5: “Every word that our father Adam, chief of our great lineage, spoke with his son Seth, whom he had after the death of Abel, whom Cain his brother killed and over whom his father Adam mourned” (6.1).

There is also an awkward transition at the end of the Testament of Adam to Seth. After the conclusion of Adam’s words in 10.7, we read: “And Seth heard everything that his father Adam commanded him, commandments more numerous than these, and wrote them down with diligence, and we found them in the books that were placed in the Cave of Treasures of Hidden Mysteries. He also commanded and added to them” (10.8–9a).²² Landau rightly notices the awkwardness of 10.9a,²³ which shifts abruptly back to the third person without specifying the subject, who appears to be Seth, as we learn in 10.10: “Seth also commanded these mysteries to his sons.” Thus 6.1 and 10.9a appear to be the editorial seams revealing the beginning and end of the TAS.

A more complicated question, however, is how 6.1–6.4—which appears to be a précis of the TAS—relates to Adam’s own account in 7.1–10.7. In 6.1–6.4, the story continues to be told from the perspective of the Magi, as seen from the first-person plural possessives: “our father Adam” (6.1), “our great lineage” (6.1), and “Adam our father” (6.4). It is only at 7.1 that Adam tells his own story in the first person, and this continues until 10.7. The first-person narration of the Magi then resumes in 10.8, with an awkward shift back to the third person at 10.9a. Thus there is a shift in narrative perspective, but it is one that would be expected for a revelation given by Adam; by contrast, the Judas Thomas Episode speaks of the Magi in the third person where one would expect the first.

At the same time, this shift in perspective seems to offer our first clues concerning how 6.1–6.4 relates to the rest of the Testament of Adam to Seth. Landau had argued that there was editorial tampering in the two chapters (27–28) preceding the Judas Thomas Episode (29–32), and it may be that 6.1–6.4 is also the result of editorial tampering—that is, this section should be understood as a redactor’s introduction to the TAS. On the one hand, the vocabulary of 6.1–6.4 has more in common with the main narrative of RevMagi than it does with 7.1–10.7. For instance, in the latter Adam regularly speaks of his creator as “my master,”²⁴ whereas the remainder of RevMagi speaks with great frequency of the “Father of Majesty” or “Father of Heavenly Majesty.”²⁵ On the other hand, 6.1–6.4 contains episodes not seen in 7.1–10.7. Much of 6.1–6.4 tells how Adam had seen the star and its glory over the Tree of Life in Eden, and how the sight of it was removed when Adam sinned (6.2–3)—yet this does not figure into Adam’s own account of his sin and fall.²⁶

There is thus good reason to think that 6.1–6.4 constitute a redactor’s introduction to the testament itself in 7.1–10.7. This would account for both the abrupt transition in 6.1 and the differences in vocabulary and content seen between chapter 6 and chapters 7–10. At first blush, it is tempting to attribute the phrase “Now from the books which were in the Cave of Treasures” (6.1) to the author of the Chronicle of Zuqnin, for it parallels several other instances in which the chronicler has added a comment on the origins of his sources.²⁷ At the ²⁴ The title “my master” (ܡܠܝܚܐ) is used no less than six times (RevMagi 7.6; 8.1, 5, 8; 10.1–2), always paired with one or more adjectives: “kind master” (ܡܠܝܚܐ ܚܝܠܐ): 8.5, 8; 10.1–2; “merciful master” (ܡܠܝܚܐ ܚܝܠܐ): 10.4; “my holy master” (ܡܠܝܚܐ ܚܝܠܐ): 8.1. Adam also refers to his maker as “my kind savior” (ܡܠܝܚܐ ܚܝܠܐ; 10.4) and likens him to a “kind father” (ܡܠܝܚܐ ܚܝܠܐ; 8.1).

²⁵ “Father of majesty” (ܐܬܪܐ ܕܡܠܝܚܐ): RevMagi 6.4; 13.1; 15.3–5; 19.1, 9; 21.6, 8; 21.10; 27.7; “Father of heavenly majesty” (ܐܬܪܐ ܕܡܠܝܚܐ ܚܝܠܐ): 6.2; 10.9; 11.7; 13.1; 27.3. This also happens to be an epithet commonly found in Manichaeism; see Widengren, Iranisch-semitische Kulturbegegnung, 74; John C. Reeves, Heralds of That Good Realm: Syro-Mesopotamian Gnosis and Jewish Traditions, NHMS 41 (Leiden: Brill, 1996), 121; Brock, “An Archaic Syriac Prayer,” 12. The question of whether RevMagi is a Manichaean text has not yet been sufficiently addressed. It certainly has some features that could be classed as “gnostic,” for which see Widengren, Iranisch-semitische Kulturbegegnung, 73–9; Landau, “Sages and the Star-Child,” 105.

same time, however, the chronicler does tend to reproduce his sources faithfully and frequently verbatim.²⁸ For longer extracts, the chronicler usually provides a title—often in red ink—and sometimes also a conclusion.²⁹ Thus the Revelation of the Magi begins with the heading, “On the revelation of the Magi, their coming to Jerusalem, and the gifts that they brought to Christ” (1.1), and it concludes with the comment, “The account of the Magi and their gifts has finished” (32.4).³⁰ This means that the TAS together with its introduction probably entered the Revelation of the Magi before coming into the hands of the chronicler.

Date and Original Language of the Testament of Adam to Seth

Precisely when the Testament of Adam to Seth was interpolated into the Revelation of the Magi is more difficult to say. A firm terminus ante quem is established by the composition of the Chronicle of Zuqnin in the late eighth century (ca. 775). It is less clear, however, whether the testament was found in the version of RevMagi referred to in the fifth-century Opus imperfectum in Matthaeum. Here we find the following:

Apocryphal book in the name of Seth [Liber apocryphus nomine Seth]—Victorious Mountain. I have heard some referring to a certain writing [quadam scriptura] that, even if not authentic, does not destroy the faith, but rather delights [etsi non certa, tamen non destruyente fidem, sed potius delectante], that there was a certain people located in the furthestmost east, next to Ocean, among whom there was said to be a certain writing in the name of Seth [quaedam scriptura, inscripta nomine Seth], concerning the appearance of this star, and concerning the gifts and such to be offered him, which was thought to have been passed down, from fathers to their sons, by generations of diligent men.³¹

In the second part of the extract, the “writing penned in Seth’s name” (quaedam scriptura, inscripta nomine Seth) clearly refers to a book of Seth in the possession of the Magi. The “certain writing of dubious authenticity” (quadam scriptura, etsi non certa) in the first part of the extract, however, more likely refers to the narrative of RevMagi as a whole.³² In this case, the phrase etsi non certa, tamen non destruyente fidem, sed potius delectante should probably be taken as the author’s way of saying that RevMagi is a charming tale, albeit a fictitious one. Moreover, there is nothing in this summary that could not have been drawn from the beginning of RevMagi, since there we also find a description of how Adam told Seth about the arrival of the star, and how Seth recorded it in a book that was passed down from generation to generation.³³

If there is no clear indication that the TAS was present in the version of RevMagi available to the author of the Opus imperfectum in Matthaëum, the Chronicle of Zuqnin remains our terminus ante quem. The terminus a quo for the insertion of the TAS depends, of course, on the date of the Revelation of the Magi, which has been dated anywhere between the late second and early sixth centuries. On the early end of this range is Landau, who has attempted to push the date as early as the late second or early third century.³⁴ His dating is based partly on his thesis that RevMagi is a piece of Christian apologetic, partly on Christ's polymorphy in RevMagi, and partly on his reconstruction of the redactional history of RevMagi, in which his argument that the JTE is a later addition figures prominently. Some of Landau's arguments for an early date are questionable, however, and the recent responses to his work situate the text more comfortably in the fourth or fifth century.³⁵ On the later end of the spectrum is Monneret de Villard, who suggested that RevMagi probably emerged around the start of the sixth century, under the ³³ The parallels to the OIM in RevMagi are as follows (I offer here the text of the OIM, with the RevMagi parallels in parentheses): "There was a certain people located in the furthestmost east, next to Ocean (2.4), among whom there was said to be a certain writing in the name of Seth concerning the appearance of this star (4.2-3, 7, 10; 5.1, 10) and concerning the gifts and such to be offered him (4.7-9), which was thought to have been passed down, from fathers to their sons, by generations of diligent men" (2.5-6; 3.1-7; 4.2-3, 10; 5.1, 9-10).

Piovaneli, for instance, points out that Christ's polymorphy, while seemingly archaic, does not necessarily "betray the antiquity of a given text" (101, n. 30). Piovaneli draws attention to Pseudo-Cyril's homily On the Life and the Passion of Christ, a text that Roelof van den Broek (Pseudo-Cyril of Jerusalem On the Life and the Passion of Christ: A Coptic Apocryphon, VCSup 118 [Leiden: Brill, 2013], 69-70), dates to the early ninth century. And while Landau dates the Judas Thomas Episode to the third century based on similarities with the Acts of Thomas, Heal observes that the JTE contains vocabulary more often seen in fifth century texts (297, n. 10).

assumption that the Syriac text of RevMagi is a much expanded form of the version attested by the OIM.³⁶ Landau has rightly cast doubt on this assumption,³⁷ while Witakowski has argued that the treatment of the Holy Spirit as grammatically feminine in RevMagi makes a date in the fourth century more likely.³⁸ In all probability, the Revelation of the Magi was composed in the fourth or early fifth century, in which case the TAS would have been interpolated sometime between the fourth and eighth centuries. We can only guess when the testament itself was written, though sometime between the second and fourth centuries seems a reasonable assumption.³⁹

As for the original language of the Testament of Adam to Seth, there is little reason to doubt that it too was written in Syriac.⁴⁰ There are certain wordplays that appear to function only in Syriac,⁴¹ such as the play on the Syriac verb ܦܠܝܢ found in 7.2. Adam tells Seth that his descendants will tell tales about his folly in the Garden of Eden, saying: “Every kingdom that is divided (ܦܠܝܢܐ) against itself shall not stand.’ This is fulfilled about me, for I was in doubt (ܦܠܝܢܐܝܬ) about the kingdom in which I stood.” Thus there is a play on “dividing” and “doubting,” whereby the kingdom of Mark 3:24 is taken to refer to Adam’s dominion in paradise.

³⁹ If the TAS is a Christian work composed in Syriac, as seems to be the case, any date prior to the second century is excluded; and since most Jewish traditions appear to have entered Syriac literature before the end of the fourth century (thus Sebastian Brock, “Jewish Traditions in Syriac Sources,” JJS 30 [1979]: 212–32), a date prior to the fifth century (or at least the sixth) seems most probable.

⁴⁰ It seems fairly certain that RevMagi was composed in Syriac, though Monneret de Villard had suggested that the author of the Opus imperfectum had access to a Greek translation of RevMagi (Le leggende orientali sui Magi evangelici, 67–8), a position argued more recently and vigorously by Landau in “Sages and the Star-Child,” 137–41, 170–3; “The Revelation of the Magi in the Chronicle of Zuqnin,” 195–6; “One Drop of Salvation from the House of Majesty: Universal Revelation, Human Mission and Mythical Geography in the Syriac Revelation of the Magi,” in Ellen B. Aitken and John M. Fossey (eds.), The Levant: Crossroads of Late Antiquity, McGill University Monographs in Classical Archaeology and History 22 (Leiden: Brill, 2014), 86; “The Revelation of the Magi: A Summary and Introduction,” 21; “The Coming of the Star-Child: The Reception of the Revelation of the Magi in New Age Religious Thought and Ufology,” Gnosis 1 (2016): 196–217, here 201. However, I would suggest that there is no need to posit a lost Greek Vorlage to account for the summary in the OIM. According to van Banning, the author of the OIM was a native Latin speaker with secondary competence in Greek, and had access to a wide variety of written and oral sources in Constantinople in the late fifth century (Opus imperfectum, v–vi). By this time Constantinople had become a multilingual city, where Greek and Latin as well as Syriac were spoken; see, e.g., Fergus Millar, “Linguistic Co-existence in Constantinople: Greek and Latin (and Syriac) in the Acts of the Synod of 536 C.E.,” JRS 99 (2009): 92–103. Thus it seems equally likely that the author had heard an account of the tale in Greek or Latin while in Constantinople and later wrote the summary from memory. Finally, it should be noted that translations from Syriac into Greek were far less common at this time than renderings of Greek into Syriac; see Sebastian Brock, “Greek into Syriac and Syriac into Greek,” in Syriac Perspectives on Late Antiquity (London: Variorum Reprints, 1984), 11–14.

However, there are certain instances in the TAS where something seems to have been lost in translation. In 7.4, Adam says of Eve: “I even prophesied when I saw her and said, ‘This time (ܠܚܬܐ) is bone and flesh from me.’ Fittingly did I call her ‘time’ (ܠܚܬܐ), since she has become a stumbling block (ܠܚܬܐܝܬ) for me.” This is, of course, a partial citation of Genesis 2:23, which according to the Peshitta also reads “This time (ܠܚܬܐ ܠܚܬܐ) is bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh.” Yet there is no apparent connection between the words ܠܚܬܐ (“time”) and ܠܚܬܐܝܬ (“stumbling block”) in Syriac. The MT of this verse reads, “This at last (זאת הפעם) is bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh.” In addition to the meaning “time, occurrence,” the Hebrew פעם may also have the meaning of “foot” or “anvil,”⁴² and thus the sense of “stumbling” is not too far removed. This may mean that RevMagi 7.4 is a midrash of Gen 2:23 originally written in Hebrew, which only later made its way into Syriac. As Brock has shown, Christian authors writing in Syriac were much more familiar than their Western counterparts with Rabbinic tradition and Aramaic translations and interpretations of the Jewish scriptures,⁴³ and thus it would not be surprising if a Hebrew midrash of this sort had been integrated into the Testament of Adam to Seth.

The Testament of Adam to Seth among the Pseudepigrapha

The Testament of Adam to Seth does not appear to correspond to any known Adam pseudepigraphon. There are, however, some points of contact with the more well-known Testament of Adam (T. Adam), particularly the prophecy section, in which Adam foretells the birth, passion, and death of Jesus (3.1-7).⁴⁴ Yet it is not the Charlesworth (ed.), The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, 2 vols., ABRL (Garden City, NY: Doubleday, 1983–1985), 1:989–95. The Testament of Adam is a composite document, comprised of three sections which in their final form date to about the third or fourth century CE. In addition to the prophecy, there is the horarium, in which Adam tells Seth about which part of creation worships God at which hour (1.1-2.12), and the hierarchy or angelology, in which Adam describes the different orders of heavenly beings (4.1-8). On the various recensions of T. Adam, see Robinson, The Testament of Adam, 45–52; Gerrit Reinink, “Das Problem des Ursprungs des Testamentes Adams,” OrChrAn 197 (1972): 387–99.

prophecy itself that holds interest, but its conclusion. As Adam's prophecy draws to a close (3.5), Seth is identified as the one who wrote down the testament (3.6). Adam is buried in the east of paradise, carried off to his tomb by the angels and powers of heaven (3.6). We are then told that Seth and his children "sealed the testament and placed it in the cave of treasures along with the offerings which Adam had taken out of paradise, gold and myrrh and frankincense. And the sons of kings, the magi, will come and get them and bring them to the son of God, to Bethlehem of Judea, to the cave" (3.7).⁴⁵ The Testament of Adam thus clearly indicates that a testament of Adam recorded by Seth was placed in a Cave of Treasures associated with the Magi, which is precisely what we find in the Revelation of the Magi.

The contents of the book from which the Magi read are, however, quite different from what we see in the Testament of Adam. Most remarkably, T. Adam promises Adam's ultimate deification—Adam wanted to be "like God" (Gen 3:5), and a god he shall eventually be (3.2, 4). By contrast, the TAS keeps Adam firmly in his place. In falling victim to the serpent's promise, Adam simply did not understand that "the clay could not be like its potter, nor the servant like his master" (10.2).⁴⁶ While in T. Adam the Lord tells Adam that he and his progeny will be food for the serpent (3.3), in the TAS Adam is told that he will trample upon the serpent (8.5).⁴⁷ The T. Adam foretells the coming of the Noachian flood, after which 6,000 years shall pass (3.5); in the TAS there will be apostasies among the faithful (9.2-6).

Despite the differences in content between the T. Adam and the TAS, the latter still has features that clearly associate it with the testamentary genre.⁴⁸ Above all, the Testament of Adam to Seth is brimming with paraenesis.⁴⁹ All of Adam's ruminations on his time in paradise serve to encourage Seth to succeed where his father had failed. Adam's disappointment with himself for listening to Eve (7.3-8) as well as his failure to understand how good he had it in Eden (8.1-7) function as ⁴⁸ The genre of the Testament of Adam to Seth is never specified by RevMagi, which speaks more generically of "writings" or "books" (Syr. ܬܠܡܝܬ; 2.5; 3.2-7; 4.1; 6.1; 10.8 [ܬܠܡܝܬ]). The references to the TAS in 6.1 and 10.8 seem to indicate that it was but one of several writings that could be found in the Cave of Treasures.

a sober warning to his son: Do not listen to your mother's advice (8.8). Yet Adam is also confident that he too shall enjoy the resurrection (10.1-4) and assures Seth that the sins of the father will not be reckoned against the son (10.5-6); after all, God is merciful toward anyone who repents (10.7). Secondly, the Testament of Adam to Seth contains predictions for the future: Adam notifies Seth that some of his descendants will rebel at the end of time, blaspheming and worshipping idols (9.1-6). Finally, in addition to these testamentary features, designating the TAS as a "testament" also links it to the end of the prophecy section of the Testament of Adam, where Adam's testament is said to be kept in a Cave of Treasures connected with the Magi (3.7).⁵⁰

While Adam's reflections on his fall from glory and his deception by Eve and the serpent are not paralleled in the Testament of Adam, traditions of Adam's regret and penitence are found throughout the various Adam writings, most notably the Life of Adam and Eve (LAE).⁵¹ There too we see that Adam enjoyed a very lofty position within paradise—even the angels were to worship him in all his splendor (LAE 14.1-3). So too in the Testament of Adam to Seth, Adam enjoyed great "majesty" (מַלְכוּת) and "kingdom" (מַלְכוּת), a dominion from which the "Evil One" wished to be free (8.5).⁵² But unlike the LAE, famous for its description of a luciferous angel that fell from glory (LAE 16.1-3), the TAS says little more than that a sneaky snake lost his feet (8.6). Yet while the snake is doomed to swallow dust, Adam is assured that he shall rise again from the dust (10.3). On the last day, the savior will descend into the abysmal darkness and bring light to his eyes once again, just as he did on the day of his creation (10.4). Finally, if Adam's encounter with the star (6.2-3) may be reckoned to the contents of the Testament of Adam to Seth, it would surely be one of its most striking features: The brilliant star that the Magi saw on their mountain in the distant East was the same star that appeared to Adam in Eden—Christ himself in luminous form. The light of the star here and elsewhere in RevMagi is in many ways reminiscent of the divine Shekinah and its luminosity in Rabbinic tradition,⁵³ again showing the extent to which Jewish traditions were received in Syriac sources.

Indeed, there are many potential parallels that could be explored in future studies of the TAS. In the present essay, I have had only the modest aim of proposing that the TAS deserves study as a composition in its own right, as a writing that originated independently of the Revelation of the Magi. Its existence as an independent composition is justified, I believe, by applying many of the same criteria that Landau deployed in his arguments regarding the Judas Thomas Episode (RevMagi 29-32). If the TAS is indeed a separate composition, it was likely composed in Syriac sometime between the second and fourth centuries, and integrated into RevMagi sometime between the fourth and eighth centuries, before the Revelation of the Magi was itself incorporated into the Chronicle of Zuqnin. As the question mark in the title of this study indicates, however, much work remains to be done in exploring the contents of the Testament of Adam to Seth and in determining what its origins and scope might have been. It is my hope that this brief study will stimulate further research on this fascinating yet poorly known text.

THE ODES OF SOLOMON.

translated by J. Rendel Harris.

Ode 1.

1. The Lord is on my head like a crown, and I shall not be without Him. 2. They wove for me a crown of truth, and it caused thy branches to bud in me. 3. For it is not like a withered crown which buddeth not: but thou livest upon my head, and thou hast blossomed upon my head. 4. Thy fruits are full-grown and perfect, they are full of thy salvation.

Ode 2.

Ode 3.

1 ... I put on. 2. And his members are with him. And on them do I hang, and He loves me: 3. For I should not have known how to love the Lord, if he had not loved me. 4. For who is able to distinguish love except the one that is loved? 5. I love the beloved and my soul loves Him: 6 And where His rest is, there also am I; 7 And I shall be no strangers for with the Lord Most High and Merciful there is no grudging. 8 I have been united to Him, for the Lover has found the Beloved, 9 And because I shall love Him that is the Son, I shall become a son;. 10 For he that is joined to Him that is immortal, will also himself become immortal; 11 And he who has pleasure in the Living One, will become living. 12 This is the Spirit of the Lord, which doth not lie, which teacheth the sons of men to know His ways. 13 Be wise and understanding and vigilant. Hallelujah.

Ode 4.

1 No man, O my God, changeth thy holy place; 2 And it is not (possible) that he should change it and put it in another place: because he hath no power over it: 3 For thy sanctuary thou hast designed before thou didst make (other) places: 4 That which is the elder shall not be altered by those that are younger than itself. 5 Thou has given thy heart, O Lord, to thy believers: never wilt thou fail, nor be without fruits: 6 For one hour of thy Faith is days and years. 7 For who is there put on thy grace, and be hurt? 8 For thy seal is known: and thy creatures know it: and thy (heavenly) hosts possess it: and the elect archangels are clad with it. 9 Thou hast given us thy fellowship: it was not that thou wast in need of us: but that we are in need of thee: 10 Distill thy dews upon us and open thy rich fountains that pour forth to us milk and honey: 11 For there is no repentance with thee that thou shouldest repent of anything that thou hast promised: 12 And the end was revealed before thee: for what thou gavest, thou gavest freely: 13 So that thou mayest not draw them back and take them again: 14 For all was revealed before thee as God, and ordered from the beginning before thee: and thou, O God, hast made all things. Hallelujah,

Ode 5.

1 I will give thanks unto thee, O Lord, because I love thee; 2 O Most High, thou wilt not forsake me for thou art my hope: 3 Freely I have received thy grace, I shall live thereby: 4 My persecutors will come and not see me: 5 A cloud of darkness shall fall on their eyes; and an air of thick gloom shall darken them: 6 And they shall have no light to see: they may not take hold upon me. 7 Let their counsel become thick darkness, and what they have cunningly devised, let it return upon their own heads: 8 For they have devised a counsel and it did not succeed: 9 For my hope is upon the Lord and I will not fear, and because the Lord is my salvation, I will not fear: and He is a garland on my head and I shall not be moved; even if everything should be shaken, I stand firm; 11 And if all things visible should perish, I shall not die; because the Lord is with me I and I am with Him. Hallelujah.

Ode 6.

1 As the hand moves over the harp, and the strings speak, 2 So speaks in my members the Spirit of the Lord, and I speak by His love. 3 For it destroys what is foreign and everything that is bitter: 4 For thus it was from the beginning and will be to the end, that nothing should be His adversary, and nothing should stand up against Him. 5 The Lord has multiplied the knowledge of Himself, and is zealous that these things should be known, which by His grace have been given to us. 6 And the praise of His name He gave us: our spirits praise His holy Spirit. 7 For there went forth a stream and became a river great and broad; 8 For it flooded and broke up everything and it brought (water) to the Temple; 9 And the restrainers of the children of men were not able to restrain it, nor the arts of those whose business it is to restrain waters; 10 For it spread over the face of the whole earth, and filled everything: and all the thirsty upon earth were given to drink of it; 11 And thirst was relieved and quenched: for from the Most High the draught was given. 12 Blessed then are the ministers of that draught who are entrusted with that water 13 They have assuaged the dry lips, and the will that had fainted they have raised up; 14 And souls that were near departing they have caught back from death: 15 And limbs that had fallen they straightened and set up: 16 They gave strength for their feebleness and light to their eyes: 17 For everyone knew them in the Lord, and they lived by the water of life forever. Hallelujah.

Ode 7.

1 As the impulse of anger against evil, so is the impulse of joy over what is lovely, and brings in of its fruits without restraint: 2 My joy is the Lord and my impulse is toward Him: this path of mine is excellent: 3 For I have a helper, the Lord. 4 He hath caused me to know Himself, without grudging, by His simplicity: His kindness has humbled His greatness. 5 He became like me, in order that I might receive Him: He was reckoned like myself in order that I might put Him on; 7 And I trembled not when I saw Him: because He was gracious to me: 8 Like my nature He became that I might learn Him and like my form, that I might not turn back from Him: 9 The Father of knowledge is the word of knowledge: 10 He who created wisdom is wiser than His works: 11 And He who created me when yet I was not knew what I should do when I came into being: 12 Wherefore He pitied me in His abundant grace: and granted me to ask from Him and to receive from His sacrifice: 13 Because He it is that is incorrupt, the fulness of the ages and the of them. 14 He hath given Him to be seen of them that are His, in order that they may recognize Him that made them: and that they might not suppose that they came of themselves: 15 For knowledge He hath appointed as its way, hath widened it and extended it; and brought to all perfection; 16 And set over it the traces of His light, and I walked therein from the beginning even to the end. 17 For by Him it was wrought, and He was resting in the Son, and for its salvation He will take hold of everything. 18 And the Most High shall be known in His Saints, to announce to those that have songs of the coming of the Lord: 19 That they may go forth to meet Him, and may sing to Him with joy and with the harp of many tones: 20 The seers shall come before Him and they shall be seen before Him, 21 And they shall praise the Lord for His love: because He is near and beholdeth. 22 And hatred shall be taken from the earth, and along with jealousy it shall be drowned: 23 For ignorance hath been destroyed, because the knowledge of the Lord hath arrived. 24 They who make songs shall sing the grace of the Lord Most High; 25 And they shall bring their songs, and their heart shall be like the day: and like the excellent beauty of the Lord their pleasant song; 26 And there shall neither be anything that breathes without knowledge nor any that is dumb: 27 For He hath given a mouth to His creation, to open the voice of the mouth towards Him, to praise Him: 28 Confess ye His power, and show forth His grace. Hallelujah.

Ode 8.

1 Open ye, open ye your hearts to the exultation of the Lord: 2 And let your love be multiplied from the heart and even to the lips, 3 To bring forth fruit to the Lord, living [fruit], holy [fruit], and to talk with watchfulness in His light. 4 Rise up, and stand erect, ye who sometime were brought low: 5 Tell forth ye who were in silence, that your mouth hath been opened. 6 Ye, therefore, that were despised be henceforth lifted up, because your righteousness hath been exalted. 7 For the right hand of the Lord is with you: and He is your helper: 8. And peace was prepared for you, before ever your war was. 9. Hear the word of truth, and receive the knowledge of the Most High. 10 Your flesh has not known what I am saying to you: neither have your hearts known what I am showing to you. 11 Keep. my secret, ye who are kept by it. 12 Keep my faith, ye who are kept by it. 13 And understand my knowledge, ye who know me in truth, 14 Love me with affection, ye who love! 15 For I do not turn away my face from them that are mine; 16 For I know them and before they came into being I took knowledge of them, and on their faces I set my seal: 17 I fashioned their members: my own breasts I prepared for them, that they might drink my holy milk and live thereby 18 I took pleasure in them and am not ashamed of them: 19 For my workmanship are they and the strength of my thoughts: 20 Who then shall rise up against my handiwork, or who is there that is not subject to them? 21 I willed and fashioned mind and heart: and they are mine, and by my own right hand I set my elect ones: 22 And my righteousness goeth before them and they shall not be deprived of my name, for it is with them. 23 Ask, and abound and abide in the love of the Lord, 24 And yet beloved ones in the Beloved: those who are kept, in Him that liveth: 25 And they that are saved in Him that was saved; 26 And ye shall be found incorrupt in all ages to the name of your Father. Hallelujah.

Ode 9.

1 Open your ears and I will speak to you. Give me your souls that I may also give you my soul, 2 The word of the Lord and His good pleasures, the holy thought which He has devised concerning his Messiah. 3 For in the will of the Lord is your salvation, and His thought is everlasting life; and your end is immortality. 4 Be enriched in God the Father, and receive the thought of the Most High. 5 Be strong and be redeemed by His grace. 6 For I announce to you peace, to you His saints; 6 That none of those who hear may fall in war, and that those again who have known Him may not perish, and that those who receive may not be ashamed. 8 An everlasting crown forever is Truth. Blessed are they who set it on their heads: 9 A stone of great price is it; and there have been wars on account of the crown. 10 And righteousness hath taken it and hath given it to you. 11 Put on the crown in the true covenant of the Lord. 12 And all those who have conquered shall be written in His book. 13 For their book is victory which is yours. And she (Victory) sees you before her and wills that you shall be saved. Hallelujah.

Ode 10.

1 The Lord hath directed my mouth by His word: and He hath opened my heart by His light: and He hath caused to dwell in me His deathless life; 2 And gave me that I might speak the fruit peace: 3 To convert the souls of them who are willing to come to Him; and to lead captive a good captivity for freedom. 4 I was strengthened and made mighty and took the world captive; 5 And it became to me for the praise of the Most High, and of God my Father. 6 And the Gentiles were gathered together who were scattered abroad. 7 And I was unpolluted by my love for them, because they confessed me in high places: and the traces of the light were set upon their heart: 8 And they walked in my life and were saved and became my people for ever and ever. Hallelujah.

Ode 11.

1 My heart was cloven and its flower appeared; and grace sprang up in it: and it brought forth fruit to the Lord, 2 For the Most High clave my heart by His Holy Spirit and searched my affection towards Him: and filled me with His love. 3 And His opening of me became my salvation; and I ran in His way in His peace even in the way of truth: 4 from the beginning and even to the end I acquired His knowledge: 5 And I was established upon the rock of truth, where He had set me up: 6 And speaking waters touched my lips from the fountain of the Lord plenteously: 7 And I drank and was inebriated with the living water that doth not die; 8 And my inebriation was not one without knowledge, but I forsook vanity and turned to the Most High my God, 9 And I was enriched by His bounty, and I forsook the folly which is diffused over the earth; and I stripped it off and cast it from me: 10 And the Lord renewed me in His raiment, and possessed me by His light, and from above He gave me rest in incorruption; 11 And I became like the land which blossoms and rejoices in its fruits: 12 And the Lord was like the sun shining on the face of the land; 13 He lightened my eyes and my face received the dew; the pleasant odour of the Lord; 14 And He carried me to His Paradise; where is the abundance of the pleasure, of the Lord; 15 And I worshipped the Lord on account of His glory; and I said, Blessed, O Lord, are they who are planted in thy land and those who have a place in thy Paradise; 16 And they grow by the fruits of the trees. And they have changed from darkness to light. 17 Behold! all thy servants are fair, who do good works, and turn away from wickedness to the pleasantness that is thine: 18 And they have turned back the bitterness of the trees from them, when they were planted in thy land; 19 And everything became like a relic of thyself, and memorial for ever of thy faithful works. 20 For there is abundant room in thy Paradise, and nothing is useless therein; 21 But everything is filled with fruit; glory be to thee, O God, the delight of Paradise for ever. Hallelujah.

Ode 12.

1 He hath filled me with words of truth; that I may speak the same; 2 And like the flow of waters flows truth from my mouth, and my lips show forth His fruit. 3 And He has caused His knowledge to abound in me, because the mouth of the Lord is the true Word, and the door of His light; 4 And the Most High hath given it to His words, which are the interpreters of His own beauty, and the repeaters of His praise, and the confessors of His counsel and the heralds of His thought and the chasteners of His servants. 5 For the swiftness of the Word is inexpressible, and like its expression is its swiftness and force; 6 And its course knows no limit. Never doth it fail, but it stands sure, and it knows not descent nor the way of it. 7 For as its work is, so is its end: for it is light and the dawning of thought; 8 And by it the worlds talk one to the other; and in the Word there were those that were silent; 9 And from it came love and concord; and they spake one to the other whatever was theirs; and they were penetrated by the Word; 10 And they knew Him who made them, because they were in concord; for the mouth of the Most High spake to them; and His explanation ran by means of it: 11 For the dwelling-place of the Word is man: and its truth is love. 12

Blessed are they who by means thereof have understood everything, and have known the Lord in His truth. Hallelujah.

Ode 13.

1 Behold! the Lord is our mirror: open the eyes and see them in Him: and learn the manner of your face: 2 And tell forth praise to His spirit: and wipe off the filth from your face: and love His holiness, and clothe yourselves therewith: 3 And be without stain at all times before Him. Hallelujah.

Ode 14.

1 As the eyes of a son to his father so are my eyes, O Lord at all times towards thee. 2 For with thee are my consolations and my delight. 3 Turn not away thy mercies from me, O Lord: and take not thy kindness from me. 4 Stretch out to me, O Lord, at all times thy right hand: and be my guide even unto the end, according to thy good pleasure. 5 Let me be well-pleasing before thee, because of thy glory and because of thy name: 6 Let me be preserved from evil, and let thy meekness, O Lord, abide with me, and the fruits of thy love. 7 Teach me the Psalms of thy truth, that I may bring forth fruit in thee: 8 And open to me the harp of thy Holy Spirit, that with all its notes I may praise thee, O Lord. 9 And according to the multitude of thy tender mercies, so thou shalt give to me; and hasten to grant our petitions; and thou art able for all our needs. Hallelujah.

Ode 15.

1 As the sun is the joy to them that seek for its daybreak, so is my joy the Lord; 2 Because He is my Sun and His rays have lifted me up and His light hath dispelled all darkness from my face. In Him I have acquired eyes and have seen His holy day: 4 Ears have become mine and I have heard His truth. 5 The thought of knowledge hath been mine, and I have been delighted through Him. 6 The way of error I have left, and have walked towards Him and have received salvation from Him, without grudging. 7 And according to His bounty He hath given to me and according to His excellent beauty He hath made me. 8 I have put on incorruption through His name: and have put off corruption by His grace. 9 Death hath been destroyed before my face: and Sheol hath been abolished by my word: 10 And there hath gone up deathless life in the Lord's land, 11 And it hath been made known to His faithful ones, and hath been given without stint to all those that trust in Him. Hallelujah.

Ode 16.

1 As the work of the husband man is the ploughshare: and the work of the steersman is the guidance of the ship: 2 So also my work is the Psalm of the Lord: my craft and praises: 3 Because His love hath nourished my heart, and even to my lips His fruits He poured out. 4 For my love is the Lord, and I therefore I will sing unto Him: 5 For I am made strong in His praise, and I have faith in Him. 6 I will open my mouth and His spirit will utter in me the glory of the Lord and His beauty; the work of His hands and the operation of His fingers: 7 The multitude of His mercies and the strength of His word. 8 For the word of the Lord searches out all things, both the invisible and that which reveals His thought; 9 For the eye sees His works and the ear hears His thought; 10 He spread out the earth and He settled the waters in the sea: 11 He measured the heavens and fixed the stars: and He established the creation and set it up: 12 And He rested from His works: 13 And created things run in their courses, and do their works: 14 And they know not how to stand and be idle; and His heavenly hosts are subject to His word. 15 The treasure-chamber of the light is the sun, and the treasury of the darkness is the night: 16 And He made the sun for the day that it may be bright, but night brings darkness over the face of the land; 17 And their alternations one to the other speak the beauty of God: 18 And there is nothing that is without the Lord; for He was before any thing came into being: 19 And the worlds were made by His word, and by the thought of His heart. Glory and honour to His name. Hallelujah.

Ode 17.

1. I was crowned by my God: my crown is living: 2 And I was justified in my Lord: my incorruptible salvation is He. 3 I was loosed from vanity, and I was not condemned: 4 The choking bonds were cut off by her hands: I received the face and the fashion of a new person: and I walked in it and was saved; 5 And the thought of truth led me on. And I walked after it and did not wander: 6 And all. that have seen me were amazed: and I was regarded by them as a strange person: 7 And He who knew and brought me up is the Most High in all His perfection. And He glorified me by His kindness, and raised my thoughts to the height of His truth. 8 And from thence He gave me the way of His precepts and I opened the doors that were closed,. 9 And brake in pieces the bars of iron: but my iron melted and dissolved before me; 10 Nothing appeared closed to me: because I was the door of everything. 11 And I went over all my bond men to loose them; that I might not leave any man bound or binding: 12 And I imparted my knowledge without grudging: and my prayer was in my love: 13 And I sowed my fruits in hearts, and transformed them into myself: and they received my blessing and lived; 14 And they were gathered to me and were saved; because they were to me as my own members and I was their head. Glory to thee our head the Lord Messiah. Hallelujah.

Ode 18.

1 My heart was lifted up in the love of the Most High and was enlarged: that I might praise Him for His name's sake. 2 My members were strengthened that they might not fall from His strength. 3 Sicknesses removed from my body, and it stood to the Lord by His will. For His kingdom is true. 4 O Lord, for the sake of them that are deficient do not remove thy word from me! 5 Neither for the sake of their works do thou restrain from me thy perfection! 6 Let not the luminary be conquered by the darkness; nor let truth flee away from falsehood. 7 Thou wilt appoint me to victory; our Salvation is thy right hand. And thou wilt receive men from all quarters. 8 And thou wilt preserve whosoever is held in evils: 9 Thou art my God. Falsehood and death are not in thy mouth: 10 For thy will is perfection; and vanity thou knowest not, 11 Nor does it know thee. 12 And error thou knowest not, 13 Neither does it know thee. 14 And ignorance appeared like a blind man; and like the foam of the sea, 15 And they supposed of that vain thing that it was something great; 16 And they too came in likeness of it and became vain; and those have understood who have known and meditated; 17 And they have not been corrupt in their imagination; for such were in the mind of the Lord; 18 And they mocked at them that were walking in error; 19 And they spake truth from the inspiration which the Most High breathed into them; Praise and great comeliness to His name. Hallelujah.

Ode 19.

1 A cup of milk was offered to me: and I drank it in the sweetness of the delight of the Lord. 2 The Son is the cup and He who was milked is the Father: 3 And the Holy Spirit milked Him: because His breasts were full, and it was necessary for Him that His milk should be sufficiently released; 4 And the Holy Spirit opened His bosom and mingled the milk from the two breasts of the Father and gave the mixture to the world without their knowing: 5 And they who receive in its fulness are the ones on the right hand. 6 The Spirit opened the womb of the Virgin and she received conception and brought forth; and the Virgin became a Mother with many mercies; 7

And she travailed and brought forth a Son, without incurring pain; 8 And because she was not sufficiently prepared, and she had not sought a midwife (for He brought her to bear) she brought forth, as if she were a man, of her own will; 9 And she brought Him forth openly, and acquired Him with great dignity, 10 And loved Him in His swaddling clothes and guarded Him kindly, and showed Him in Majesty. Hallelujah.

Ode 20.

1 I am a priest of the Lord, and to Him I do priestly service: and to Him I offer the sacrifice of His thought. 2 For His thought is not like the thought of the world nor the thought of the flesh, nor like them that serve carnally. 3 The sacrifice of the Lord is righteousness, and purity of heart and lips. 4 Present your reins before Him blamelessly: and let not thy heart do violence to heart, nor thy soul to soul. 5 Thou shalt not acquire a stranger by the price of thy silver neither shalt thou seek to devour thy neighbour, 6 Neither shalt thou deprive him of the covering of his nakedness. 7 But put on the grace of the Lord without stint; and come into His Paradise and make thee a garland from its tree, 8 And put it on thy head and be glad; and recline on His rest, and glory shall go before thee, 9 And thou shalt receive of His kindness and of His grace; and thou shalt be flourishing in truth in the praise of His holiness. Praise and honour be to His name. Hallelujah.

Ode 21.

1 My arms I lifted up to the Most High, even to the grace of the Lord: because He had cast off my bonds from me: and my Helper had lifted me up to His grace and to His salvation: 2 And I put off darkness and clothed myself with light, 3 And my soul acquired a body free from sorrow or affliction or pains 4 And increasingly helpful to me was the thought of the Lord, and His fellowship in incorruption: 5 And I was lifted up in His light; and I served before Him, 6 And I became near to Him, praising and confessing Him; 7 My heart ran over and was found in my mouth: and it arose upon my lips; and the exultation of the Lord increased on my face, and His praise likewise. Hallelujah.

Ode 22.

1 He who brought me down from on high, also brought me up from the regions below; 2 And He who gathers together the things that are betwixt is He also who cast me down: 3 He who scattered my enemies had existed from ancient and my adversaries: 4 He who gave me authority over bonds that I might loose them; 5 He that overthrew by my hands the dragon with seven heads: and thou hast set me over his roots that I might destroy his seed. 6 Thou wast there and didst help me, and in every place thy name was a rampart to me. 7 Thy right hand destroyed his Wicked poison; and thy hand leveled the way for those who believe in thee. 8 And thou didst choose them from the graves and didst separate them from the dead. 9 Thou didst take dead bones and didst cover them with bodies. 10 They were motionless, and thou didst give them energy for life. 11 Thy way was without corruption and thy face; thou didst bring thy world to corruption: that everything might be dissolved, and then renewed, 12 And that the foundation for everything might be thy rock: and on it thou didst build thy kingdom; and it became the dwelling place of the saints. Hallelujah.

Ode 23.

1. The reference to the sealed document sent by God is one of the great mysteries of the collection. 1 Joy is of the saints! and who shall put it on, but they alone? 2 Grace is of the elect! and who shall receive it except those who trust in it from the beginning? 3 Love is of the elect? And who shall put it on except those who have possessed it from the beginning? 4 Walk ye in the knowledge of the Most High without grudging: to His exultation and to the perfection of His knowledge. 5 And His thought was like a letter; His will descended from on high, and it was sent like an arrow which is violently from the bow: 6 And many hands rushed to the letter to seize it and to take and read it: 7 And it escaped their fingers and they were affrighted at it and at the seal that was upon it. 8 Because it was not permitted to them to loose its seal: for the power that was over the seal was greater than they. 9 But those who saw it went after the letter that they might know where it would alight, and who should read it and who should hear it. 10 But a wheel received it and came over it: 11 And there was with it a sign of the Kingdom and of the Government: 12 And everything which tried to move the wheel it mowed and cut down: 13 And it gathered the multitude of adversaries, and bridged the rivers and crossed over and rooted up many forests and made a broad path. 14 The head went down to the feet for down to the feet ran the wheel, and that which was a sign upon it. 15 The letter was one of command, for there were included in it all districts; 16 And there was seen at its head, the head which was revealed even the Son of Truth from the Most High Father, 17 And He inherited and took possession of everything. And the thought of many was brought to nought. 18 And all the apostates hasted and fled away. And those who persecuted and were enraged became extinct, 19 And the letter was a great volume, which was wholly written by the finger of God: 20 And the name of the Father was on it and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, to rule for ever and ever. Hallelujah.

Ode 24.

1 The Dove fluttered over the Messiah, because He was her head; and she sang over Him and her voice was heard: 2 And the inhabitants were afraid and the sojourners were moved: 3 The birds dropped their wings and all creeping things died in their holes: and the abysses were opened which had been hidden; and they cried to the Lord like women in travail: 4 And no food was given to them, because it did not belong to them; 5 And they sealed up the abysses with the seal of the Lord. And they perished, in the thought those that had existed from ancient times; 6 For they were corrupt from the beginning; and the end of their corruption was life: 7 And every one of them that was imperfect perished: for it was not possible to give them a word that they might remain: 8 And the Lord destroyed the imaginations of all them that had not the truth with them. 9 For they who in their hearts were lifted up were deficient in wisdom and so they were rejected, because the truth was not with them. 10 For the Lord disclosed His way and spread abroad His grace: and those who understood it, know His holiness. Hallelujah.

Ode 25.

1. I was rescued from my bonds and unto thee, my God, I fled: 2 For thou art the right hand of my Salvation and my helper. 3 Thou hast restrained those that rise up against me, 4 And I shall see him no more: because thy face was with me, which saved me by thy grace. 5 But I was despised and rejected in the eyes of many: and I was in their eyes like lead, 6 And strength was mine from thyself and help. 7 Thou didst set me a lamp at my right hand and at my left: and in me there shall be nothing that is not bright: 8 And I was clothed with the covering of thy Spirit, and thou didst remove from me my raiment of skin; 9 For thy right hand lifted me up and removed sickness from me: 10 And I became mighty in the truth, and holy by thy righteousness; and all my adversaries were afraid of me; 11 And I became admirable by the name of the Lord, and I was justified by His gentleness, and His rest is for ever and ever. Hallelujah.

Ode 26.

1. I poured out praise to the Lord, for I am His: 2 And I will speak His holy song for my heart is with Him. 3 For His harp is in my hands, and the Odes of His rest shall not be silent. 4 I will cry unto him from my whole heart: I will praise and exalt Him with all my members. 5 For from the east and even to the west is His praise: 6 And from the south and even to the north is the confession of Him: 7 And from the top of the hills to their utmost bound is His perfection. 8 Who can write the Psalms of the Lord, or who read them? 9 Or who can train his soul for life that his soul may be saved, 10 Or who can rest on the Most High, so that with His mouth he may speak? 11 Who is able to interpret the wonders of the Lord? 12 For he who could interpret would be dissolved and would become that which is interpreted. 13 For it suffices to know and to rest: for in rest the singers stand, 14 Like a river which has an abundant fountain, and flows to the help of them that seek it. Hallelujah.

Ode 27.

1. I stretched out my hands and sanctified my Lord: 2 For the extension of my hands is His sign: 3 And my expansion is the upright tree [or cross].

Ode 28.

1 As the wings of doves over their nestlings; and the mouth of their nestlings towards their mouths, 2 So also are the wings of the Spirit over my heart: 3 My heart is delighted and exults: like the babe who exults in the womb of his mother: 4 I believed; therefore I was at rest; for faithful is He in whom I have believed: 5 He has richly blessed me and my head is with Him: and the sword shall not divide me from Him, nor the scimitar; 6 For I am ready before destruction comes; and I have been set on His immortal pinions: 7 And He showed me His sign: forth and given me to drink, and from that life is the spirit within me and it cannot die, for it lives. 8 They who saw me marveled at me, because I was persecuted, and they supposed that I was swallowed up: for I seemed to them as one of the lost; 9 And my oppression became my salvation; and I was their reprobation because there was no seal in me; 10 Because I did good to every man I was hated, 11 And they came round me like mad dogs, who ignorantly attack their masters, 12 For their thought is corrupt and their understanding perverted. 13 But I was carrying water in my right hand and their bitterness I endured by my sweetness: 14 And I did not perish, for I was not their brother nor was my birth like theirs. 15 And they sought for my death and did not find it: for I was older than the memorial of them; 16 And vainly did they make attack upon me and those who, without reward, came after me: 17 They sought to destroy the memorial of him who was before them. 18 For the thought of the Most High cannot be anticipated; and His heart is superior to all wisdom. Hallelujah.

Ode 29.

1. The Lord is my hope: in Him I shall not be confounded. 2 For according to His praise He made me, and according to His goodness even so He gave unto me: 3 And according to His mercies He exalted me: and according to His excellent beauty He set me on high: 4 And brought me up out of the depths of Sheol: and from the mouth of death He drew me: 5 And thou didst lay my enemies low and He justified me by His grace. 6 For I believed in the Lord's Messiah: and it appeared to me that He is the Lord; 7 And He showed him His sign: and He led, me by His light, and gave me the rod of His power 8 That I might subdue the imaginations of the peoples; and the power of the men of might to bring them low: 9 To make war by His word, and to take victory by His power. 10 And the Lord overthrew my enemy by His word: and he became like the stubble which the wind carries away; 11 And I gave praise to the Most High because He exalted me His servant and the son of His handmaid. Hallelujah.

Ode 30.

1 Fill ye waters for yourselves from the living fountain, of the Lord, for it is opened to you: 2 And come all ye thirsty and take the draught; and rest by the fountain of the Lord. 3 For fair it is and pure and gives rest to the soul, Much more pleasant are its waters than honey; 4 And the honeycomb of bees is not to be compared with it. 5 For it flows forth from the lips of the Lord and from the heart of the Lord is its name. 6 And it came infinitely and invisibly: and until it was set in the midst they did not know it: 7 Blessed are they who have drunk therefrom and have found rest thereby. Hallelujah.

Ode 31.

1 The abysses were dissolved before the Lord: and darkness was destroyed by His appearance: 2 Error went astray and perished at His hand: and folly found no path to walk in, and was submerged by the truth of the Lord. 3 He opened His mouth and spake grace and joy: and He spake a new song of praise to His name: 4 And He lifted up His voice to the Most High and offered the sons that were with Him. 5 And His face was justified, for thus His holy Father had given to Him. 6 Come forth, ye that have been afflicted and receive joy, and possess your souls by His grace; and take to you immortal life. 7 And they made me a debtor when I rose up, me who had been a debtor: and they divided my spoil, though nothing was due to them. 8 But I endured and held my peace and was silent as if not moved by them. 9 But I stood unshaken like a firm rock which is beaten by the waves and endures. 10 And I bore their bitterness for humility's sake: 11 In order, that I might redeem my people, and inherit it and that I might not make void my promises to the fathers to whom I promised the salvation of their seed. Hallelujah.

Ode 32.

1 To the blessed there is joy from their hearts, and light from Him that dwells in them: 2 And words from the Truth, who was self-originate: for He is strengthened by the holy power of the Most High: and He is unperturbed for ever and ever. Hallelujah.

Ode 33.

1 Again Grace ran and forsook corruption, and came down in Him to bring it to nought; 2 And He destroyed perdition from before Him, and devastated all its order; 3 And He stood on a lofty summit and uttered His voice from one end of the earth to the other: 4 And drew to Him all those who obeyed Him; and there did not appear as it were an evil person. 5 But there stood a perfect virgin who was proclaiming and calling and saying, 6 O ye sons of men, return ye, and ye daughters of men, come ye: 7 And forsake the ways of that corruption and draw near unto me, and I will enter into you, and will bring you forth from perdition, 8 And make you wise in the ways of truth: that you be not destroyed nor perish: 9 Hear ye me and be redeemed. For the grace of God I am telling among you: and by my means you shall be redeemed and become blessed. 10 I am your judge; and they who have put me on shall not be injured: but they shall possess the new world that is incorrupt: 11 My chosen ones walk in me, and my ways I will make known to them that seek me, and I will make them trust in my name. Hallelujah.

Ode 34.

1 No way is hard where there is a simple heart. 2 Nor is there any wound where the thoughts are upright: 3 Nor is there any storm in the depth of the illuminated thought:

4 Where one is surrounded on every side by beauty, there is nothing that is divided.
5 The likeness of what is below is that which is above; for everything is above: what is below is nothing but the imagination of those that are without knowledge. 6 Grace has been revealed for your salvation. Believe and live and be saved. Hallelujah.

Ode 35.

1 The dew of the Lord in quietness He distilled upon me: 2 And the cloud of peace He caused to rise over my head, which guarded me continually; 3 It was to me for salvation: everything was shaken and they were affrighted; 4 And there came forth from them a smoke and a judgment; and I was keeping quiet in the order of the Lord: 5 More than shelter was He to me and more than foundation. 6 And I was carried like a child by mother: and He gave me milk, the dew of the Lord: 7 And I grew great by His bounty, and rested in His perfection, 8 And I spread out my hands in the lifting up of my soul: and I was made right with the Most High and I was redeemed with Him. Hallelujah.

Ode 36.

1 I rested in the Spirit of the Lord: and the Spirit raised me on high: 2 And made me stand on my feet in the height of the Lord, before His perfection and His glory, while I was praising Him by the composition of His songs. 3 The Spirit brought me forth before the face of the Lord: and, although a son of man, I was named the Illuminate, the Son of God: 4 While I praised amongst the praising ones, and great was I amongst the mighty ones. 5 For according to the greatness of the Most High, so He made me: and like His own newness He renewed me; and He anointed me from His own perfection: 6 And I became one of His Neighbours; and my mouth was opened; like a cloud of dew; 7 And my heart poured out as it were a gushing stream of righteousness, 8 And my access to Him was in peace; and I was established by the Spirit of His government. Hallelujah.

Ode 37.

1 I stretched out my hands to my Lord: and to the Most High I raised my voice: 2 And I spake with the lips of my heart; and He heard me when my voice reached Him: 3 His answer came to me and gave me the fruits of my labours; 4 And it gave me rest by the grace of the Lord. Hallelujah.

Ode 38.

1 I went up to the light of truth as if into a chariot: 2 And the Truth took me and led me: and carried me across pits and gulleys; and from the rocks and the waves it preserved me: 3 And it became to me a haven of Salvation: and set me on the arms of immortal life: 4 And it went with me and made me rest, and suffered me not to wander because it was the Truth. 5 And I ran no risk, because I walked with Him; 5 And I did not make an error 4 anything because I obeyed the Truth. 7 For Error flees away from it and meets it not: but the Truth proceeds in the right path, and 8 What ever I did not know, it made clear to me, all the poisons of error, and the plagues of death which they think to be sweetness: 9 And I saw the destroyer of destruction, when the bride who is corrupted is adorned: and the bridegroom who corrupts and is corrupted; 10 And I asked the Truth, 'Who are these?'; and He said to me, 'This is the deceiver and the error: 11 And they are alike in the beloved and in his bride: and they lead astray and corrupt the whole world: 12 And they invite many to the banquet, 13 And give them to drink of the wine of their intoxication, and remove their wisdom and knowledge, and so they make them without intelligence; 14 And then they leave them; and then these go about like madmen corrupting: seeing that they are with out heart, nor do they seek for it.' 15 And I was made wise so as not to fall into the hands of the deceiver; and I congratulated myself because the Truth went with me, 16 And I was established and lived and was redeemed, 17 And my foundations were laid on the hand of the Lord: because He established me. 18 For He set the root and watered it and fixed it and blessed it; and its fruits are for ever. 19 It struck deep and sprung up and spread out and was full and enlarged; 20 And the Lord alone was glorified in His planting and in His husbandry: by His care and by the blessing of His lips, 21 By the beautiful planting of His right hand: and by the discovery of His planting, and by the thought of His mind. Hallelujah.

Ode 39.

1 Great rivers are the power of the Lord: 2 And they carry headlong those who despise Him: and entangle their paths: 3 And they sweep away their fords, and catch their bodies and destroy their lives. 4 For they are more swift than lightning and more rapid, and those who cross them in faith are not moved; 5 And those who walk on them without blemish shall not be afraid. 6 For the sign in them is the Lord; and the sign is the way of those who cross in the name of the Lord; 7 Put on, therefore the name of the Most High, and know Him and you shall cross without danger, for the rivers will be subject to you. 8 The Lord has bridged them by His word; and He walked and crossed them on foot: 9 And His footsteps stand firm on the water, and are not injured; they are as firm as a tree that is truly set up. 10 And the waves were lifted up on this side and on that, but the footsteps of our Lord Messiah stand firm and are not obliterated and are not defaced. 11 And a way has been appointed for those who cross after Him and for those who adhere to the course of faith in Him and worship His name. Hallelujah.

Ode 40.

1 As the honey distills from the comb of the bees, 2 And the milk flows from the woman that loves her children; 3 So also is my hope on Thee, my God. 4 As the fountain gushes out its water. 5 So my heart gushes out the praise of the Lord and my lips utter praise to Him, and my tongue His psalms, 6 And my face exults with His gladness and my spirit exults in His love and my soul shines in Him: 7 And reverence confides in Him; and redemption in Him stands assured: 8 And His inheritance is immortal life, and those who participate in it are incorrupt. Hallelujah.

Ode 41.

1 All the Lord's children will praise Him, and will collect the truth of His faith. 2 And His children shall be known to Him. Therefore we will sing in His love: 3 We live in the Lord by His grace: and life we receive in His Messiah: 4 For a great day has shined upon us: and marvellous is He who has given us of His glory. 5 Let us, therefore all of us unite together in the name of the Lord, and let us honour Him in His goodness, 6 And let our faces shine in His light: and let our hearts meditate in His love by night and by day. 7 Let us exult with the joy of the Lord. 8 All those will be astonished that see me, For from another race am I; 9 For the Father of truth remembered me: He who possessed me from the beginning: 10 For His bounty begat me, and the thought of His heart: 11 And His Word is with us in all our way; 12 The Saviour who makes alive and does not reject our souls; 13 The man who was humbled, and exalted by His own righteousness, 14 The Son of the Most High appeared in the perfection of His Father; 15 And light dawned from the Word that was beforetime in Him; 16 The Messiah is truly one; and He was known before the foundation of the world, 17 That He might save souls forever by the truth of His name: a new song arises from those who love Him. Hallelujah.

Ode 42.

1 I stretched out my hands and approached my Lord: 2 For the stretching of my hands is His sign: 3 My expansion is the outspread tree which was set up on the way of the Righteous One. 4 And I became of no account to those who did not take hold of me and I shall be with those who love me. 5 All my persecutors are dead; and they sought after me who hoped in me, because I was alive: 6 And I rose up and am with them; and I will speak by their mouths. 7 For they have despised those who persecuted them; 8 And I lifted up over them the yoke of my love; 9 Like the arm of the bridegroom over the bride, 10 So was my yoke over those that know me: 11 And as the couch that is spread in the house of the bridegroom and bride, 12 So is my love over those that believe in me. 13 And I was not rejected though I was reckoned to be so. 14 I did not perish, though they devised it against me. 15 Sheol saw me and was made miserable: 16 Death cast me up and many along with me. 17 I had gall and bitterness, and I went down with him to the utmost of his depth: 18 And the feet and the head he let go, for they were not able to endure my face: 19 And I made a congregation of living men amongst his dead men, and I spake with them by living lips: 20 Because my word shall not be void: 21 And those who had died ran towards me: and they cried and said, Son of God, have pity on us, and do with us according to thy kindness. 22 And bring us out from the bonds of darkness: and open to us the door by which we shall come out to thee. 23 For we see that our death has not touched thee. 24 Let us also be redeemed with thee: for thou art our Redeemer. 25 And I heard their voice; and my name I sealed upon their heads: 26 For they are free men and they are mine. Hallelujah.

PREFACE

THE Apocalypse of Baruch is a composite work written in the latter half of the first century of the Christian era. It is thus contemporaneous with the chief writings of the New Testament. Its authors were orthodox Jews, and it is a good representative of the Judaism against which the Pauline dialectic was directed.

In this Apocalypse we have almost the last noble utterance of Judaism before it plunged into the dark and oppressive years that followed the destruction of Jerusalem. For ages after that epoch its people seem to have been bereft of their immemorial gifts of song and eloquence, and to have had thought and energy only for the study and expansion of the traditions of the Fathers. But when our book was written, that evil and barren era had not yet set in; breathing thought and burning word had still their home in Palestine, and the hand of the Jewish artist was still master of its ancient cunning.

And yet the intrinsic beauty of this book must to a great degree fail to strike the casual reader. Indeed, it could hardly be otherwise. For the present English version is a translation of the Syriac; the Syriac was a translation of the Greek, and the Greek in turn a translation from the Hebrew original. In each translation we may feel assured the original work was shorn in large and growing measure of its ancient vigour, and this is certainly the case in the version now before the reader. For the translator, having the interests of scholars before his eyes, has made it his aim to give a literal reproduction of the Syriac. And yet, even so, much of its native eloquence has survived, so that to be prized it needs only to be known, and our appreciation of its beauty, its tragic power and worth, must grow in the measure of our acquaintance with it.

The Apocalypse of Baruch has had a strange history. Written by Pharisaic Jews as an apology for Judaism, and in part an implicit polemic against Christianity, it gained nevertheless a larger circulation amongst Christians than amongst Jews, and owed its very preservation to the scholarly cares of the Church it assailed. But in the struggle for life its secret animus against Christianity begat an instinctive opposition in Christian circles, and so proved a bar to its popularity. Thus the place it would naturally have filled was taken by the sister work, 4 Ezra. This latter work having been written in some degree under Christian influences, and forming, in fact, an unconscious confession of the failure of Judaism to redeem the world, was naturally more acceptable to Christian readers, and thus, in due course, the Apocalypse of Baruch was elbowed out of recognition by its fitter and sturdier rival.

In this edition of Baruch—which is also the editio princeps—no pains have been spared as regards the criticism and emendation of the text, its interpretation, and the determination of its various sources.

As regards the text, the facts are briefly as follows: The first seventy-seven chapters, as appears on the title-page, are found only in one MS., namely, c. For the concluding nine chapters—the Epistle of Baruch—I have made use of c and nine other MSS. Of these I have collated eight—several of these for the first time. Through the kindness of the publishers I have been enabled to print on pp. 125-167 a critical text of this Epistle based on those MSS. As Ceriani and Lagarde contented themselves each with reproducing a single unamended MS., scholars will, I think, be grateful for this attempt to grapple with all the Syriac MSS. available. By this comparative study of c and the remaining nine MSS. in the chapters common to both, I have been able to ascertain the value of c in the chapters in which c stands alone. The trustworthiness of the MS. c, which we have thus established, is further confirmed by a Greek work, which borrows largely from our Apocalypse, the Rest of the Words of Baruch.

There are, of course, corruptions in the text. Some of these that are native to the Syriac have been removed by Ceriani, others by the editor; others are provisionally emended, or else reproduced in the English translation. But many still remain. Of these some are manifestly peculiar to the Greek, and have been dealt with accordingly. But the rest are not so, and are, in fact, incapable of explanation save on the hypothesis of a Hebrew original. To this hypothesis, which marks a new departure in the criticism of this book, I have been irresistibly led in the course of my study. In many passages I have by its means been able to reduce chaos to order. For details the reader should consult the Introduction, pp. xliv.-liii.

The interpretation of this book has been the severest task as yet undertaken by the editor. Insurmountable difficulties confronted on every side, till at last he awoke to the fact that these were due to plurality of authorship. When once this fact was recognised and the various sources determined, the task of interpretation was materially lightened, and the value of the work for New Testament and Jewish scholars became every day more manifest. As my studies in this direction began in 1891, my conclusions are, save in a few cases, the result of long study and slowly matured conviction.

A special study of the relations subsisting between this Apocalypse and 4 Ezra will be found on pp. lxvii.-lxxvi., where it is shown that whereas 4 Ezra is in many respects non-Jewish, our Apocalypse is a faithful exponent of the orthodox Judaism of the time. To this subject I may return in an edition of the former work.

Scholars are at last coming to recognise that the study of the literature to which this book belongs is indispensable for the interpretation of the New Testament. Thus Dr. Sanday and Mr. Headlam write in their recent work on the Epistle to the Romans (p. vii.): "It is by a continuous and careful study of such works that any advance in the exegesis of the New Testament will be possible."

My knowledge of Talmudic literature, so far as it appears in this book, is derived from Weber's Lehren des Talmuds, Edersheim's Life and Times, etc., Wunsche's translations of the various treatises of the Babylonian Talmud, Schwab's French translation of the Jerusalem Talmud, and in passages where translations were wanting, I had the ready help of Dr. Neubauer.

My thanks are also due to Mr. Buchanan Gray, for his revision of my proofs of the Hebrew original of Baruch.

INTRODUCTION

§ 1. SHORT ACCOUNT OF THE BOOK

THIS beautiful Apocalypse, with the exception of nine chapters towards its close,¹ was lost sight of for quite 1200 years.

Written originally in Hebrew, it was early translated into Greek, and from Greek into Syriac. Of the Hebrew original every line has perished save a few still surviving in rabbinic writings. Of the Greek Version nothing has come down to us directly, though portions of it are preserved in the Rest of the Words of Baruch, a Greek work of the second century, and in a late Apocalypse of Baruch recently discovered in Greek and in Slavonic. Happily, the Syriac has been preserved almost in its entirety in a sixth century MS., the discovery of which we owe to the distinguished Italian scholar Ceriani. Of this MS., Ceriani published a Latin translation in 1866, the Syriac text in 1871, and the photo-lithographic facsimile in 1883. Though there are no adequate grounds for assuming a Latin Version, it is demonstrable that our Apocalypse was the foundation of a Latin Apocalypse of Baruch, a fragment of which is preserved in Cyprian.

The Apocalypse of Baruch belongs to the first century of our era. It is a composite work put together about the close of the century, from at least five or six independent writings. These writings belong to various dates between 50 and 90 A.D., and are thus contemporaneous with the chief New Testament writings. It is this fact that constitutes the chief value of the work. We have here contemporaneous records of the Jewish doctrines and beliefs, and of the arguments which prevailed in Judaism in the latter half of the first century, and with which its leaders sought to uphold its declining faith and confront the attacks of a growing and aggressive Christianity.

¹ Over against many of the Pauline solutions of the religious problems of the day, Jewish answers are here propounded which are frequently antagonistic in the extreme. It was this hidden hostility to Christianity that no doubt brought it into discredit. As early as the sixth century it seems to have passed out of circulation.¹

§ 2. OTHER BOOKS OF BARUCH

In addition to our Apocalypse, a considerable literature arose and circulated under Baruch's name, sometime before and after the Christian era. It will be sufficient for our present purpose to touch briefly on the different books belonging to it.

1. The Apocryphal Baruch in the LXX.—This book falls clearly into two parts—i.-iii. 8 being the first part, and iii. 9-v. constituting the second. The first part was originally written in Hebrew, the second is generally held to be of Greek origin, but this is doubtful. The first part of the book is said by Ewald and Marshall to have been composed three centuries before the Christian era, by Fritzsche and Schrader in the Maccabean period, by Kneucker and Schürer after 70 A.D. Most writers agree in assigning the second half of the book to the last-mentioned date. The second half, however, may also be composite. Thus Professor Marshall differentiates iii. 9-iv. 4 from iv. 5-v. 9, and regards the former as originally written in Aramaic, and the latter in Greek. The chief authorities on this book are Fritzsche, Exeget. Handbuch zu den Apocryphen, part i., pp. 165-202, 1851; Kneucker, Das Buch Baruch, 1879; Gifford, Speaker's Commentary, Apocrypha, ii. 241-286, 1888. On the probability that i. 1-3; iii. 9-iv. 29 of this book are a recast of a lost portion of our Apocalypse, i.e. "the Letter to the two and a half Tribes," see § 8, pp. lxxv.-lxxvii. There is no verbal borrowing between our Apocalypse and the Greek Baruch, but in the following passages there is a similarity of diction or of thought or of both. This list could be enlarged.

Apoc. of Baruch.	Book of Baruch.
i. 1 (mention of Jeconiah).	i. 3.
x. 16.	iv. 10, 14.
lix. 7.	iii. 12.

lxxx. 5.	ii. 13.
lxxxiv. 2-5.	i. 19 ; ii. 2.
lxxxvi. 1, 2.	i. 14.

2. The Rest of the Words of Baruch.—This book was written in Greek in the second century of our era. It seems in parts to be a Jewish work recast. The Greek text was first printed at Venice in 1609, next by Ceriani in 1868 under the title “Paralipomena Jeremiae” in his Monumenta Sacra, v. 11-18, and recently it has been critically edited by Rendel Harris in 1889. This book exists also in the Ethiopic Bible. The Ethiopic Version was edited from three MSS. by Dillmann in his Chrestomathia aethiopica in 1866. As these MSS. are inferior, and as no attempt was made by Dillmann to revise his text by means of the Greek, the present writer hopes in due time to edit a critical text from eleven Ethiopic MSS., accompanied with translation and notes. In this edition account will be taken of all the important variations of the Greek text.

This book is deeply indebted to our Apocalypse and attests the accuracy of the Syriac text in the following passages :—

ii. 1.	i. 1, 3, 7.
ii. 2.	ii. 2.
v. 1.	i. 5 ; ii. 7 ; iii. 6 ; iv. 7.

vi. 4, 5, 6, 8, 10.	iii. 2, 5, 8, 14.
viii. 2, 5.	iv. 1, 2, 3, 4.

lxxxv. 2.	ii. 3.
lxxxv. 11.	vi. 3.
lxxxvii.	vii. 8, 30.

3. The Gnostic book of Baruch.—Of this book large fragments are found in the Philosophumena of Hippolytus, v. 24-27. But these fragments are wholly out of relation with the remaining literature of Baruch.

4. A Latin book of Baruch is quoted in one MS. of Cyprian's Testimonia, iii. 29. As this book is clearly based on our Apocalypse, I will give the passage in full. Item in Baruch: "Veniet enim tempus, et quaeritis me et vos et qui post vos venerint, audire verbum sapientiae et intellectus, et non inuenietis" (cf. Apoc. Bar. xlviii. 36). "Nationes autem cupient videre sapientem praedicantem, et non obtinget eis: non quia deerit aut deficiet sapientia hujus saeculi terrae, sed neque deerit sermo legis saeculo. Erit enim sapientia in paucis vigilantibus et taciturnis et quietis" (cf. Apoc. Bar. xlviii. 33), "sibi confabulantes et in cordibus suis meditantes quoniam quidam eos horrebunt et timebunt ut malos. Alii autem nec credunt verbo legis Altissimi: alii autem ore stupentes non credent et credentibus erunt contrarii et impediētes spiritum veritatis. Alii autem erunt sapientes ad spiritum erroris et pronuntiantes sicut Altissimi et Fortis edicta" (cf. Apoc. Bar. xlviii. 34; lxx. 5; observe also that the titles of God here are characteristic of our Apoc., see vii. 1, note; xxi. 3, note). "Alii autem personales fidei. Alii capaces et fortes in fide Altissimi et odibiles alieno."

In 5 Ezra xvi. 64, 65 (which James ascribes to the third century) we have a clear use of our text. Thus: "Certe Hic novit . . . quae cogitatis in cordibus vestris. Vae peccantibus et volentibus occultare peccata sua: propter quod Dominus scrutinando scrutinabit omnia opera eorum et traducet vos omnes," is based on lxxxiii. 3, which = "Et scrutinando scrutinabit cogitationes arcanas et quidquid in penetralibus omnium hominis membrorum positum est et in apertum coram omnibus cum increpatione educet." We should observe that not only is the thought of the two passages the same, but that the actual diction is borrowed, i.e. the Hebraism "scrutinando scrutinabit" and "traducet," which = "in apertum cum increpatione educet" (cf. also "quae cogitatis in cordibus" with "cogitationes arcanas").

5. The Greek Apocalypse of Baruch, or, as Mr. James names it, Apocalypsis Baruch Tertia.—This book belongs to the second century, for, on the one hand, it is based largely on the Slavonic Enoch, and on the other, it is mentioned by Origen, de Princip. ii. 3. 6: "Denique etiam Baruch prophetae librum in assertionis hujus testimonium vocant, quod ibi de septem mundis vel caelis evidentius indicatur." This Greek Apocalypse of Baruch was discovered some years ago by Mr. James in a British Museum MS. Through his kindness I have been permitted to examine his copy of this MS. His edition of the text will, we believe, shortly appear. The Slavonic Version of this book has been known for some time, and was published in the Starine, vol. xviii. pp. 205-209, 1886, by Novakovic. A German translation, preceded by a helpful introduction by Professor Bonwetsch, appeared this year in the Nachrichten der K. Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen, 1886, Heft i. An English translation will shortly appear by Mr. Morfill in Mr. James's Cambridge edition. The Slavonic is less trustworthy and full than the Greek. This Greek is dependent in certain respects on the Rest of the Words of Baruch, and is thus of service in determining the date of the latter. With our Apocalypse it has only one or two points of contact. Thus with vi. 2, "I was grieving over Zion and lamenting over the captivity which had come upon the people," compare the opening words of the Greek Apocalypse, Ἀποκάλυψις Βαρούχ, ὃς ἔστη . . . κλαίων ὑπὲρ τῆς αἰχμαλωσίας Ἱερουσαλήμ: and with x. 5, "I, Baruch, . . . sat before the gates of the temple and I lamented with that lamentation over Zion," and xxxv. 1, "And I, Baruch, went to the holy place, and sat down upon the ruins and wept," compare the words already quoted together with καὶ οὕτως ἐκάθητο ἐπὶ τὰς ὥρας πόδας, ὅπου ἔκειτο τὰ τῶν ἁγίων ἄγια. Perhaps liv. 8-9, "Even so I could not give Thee the meed of praise, or laud Thee as is befitting. . . . For what am I amongst men . . . that I should have heard all those marvellous things from the Most High?" may be the source of the following words towards the close of the Greek Apocalypse—δόξαν ἔφερον τῷ θεῷ τῷ ἀξιῶσαντί με τοιούτου ἀξιώματος.

6. Finally, another book of Baruch, distinct from the above, and belonging to the fourth or fifth century of our era, is mentioned in the Altercatio Simonis Judaei et Theophili Christiani, published by Harnack (Texte und Untersuchungen, Bd. 1, Heft 3, 1883). In this work Theophilus makes the following quotation from the book of Baruch: "Quomodo ergo prope finem libri sui de nativitate ejus et de habitu vestis et de passione ejus et de resurrectione ejus prophetavit dicens: Hic unctus meus, electus meus, vulvae incontaminatae jaculatus, natus et passus dicitur."

Above all the foregoing works which circulated under Baruch's name, the Apocalypse of Baruch stands head and shoulders alike in respect of form or matter or real worth to the student of Judaism and Christianity.

§ 3. THE SYRIAC MSS.

For chapters i.-lxxvii. of this book we have only one MS., the famous sixth-century Peshitto MS. which was found by Ceriani in the library in Milan. For convenience we shall call this MS. c. In 1871 Ceriani edited the Syriac text from this MS. in his Monumenta Sacra et Profana, vol. v. Fasc. 2, pp. 113-180. Of chapters lxxviii.-lxxxvi., which constitute the Epistle of Baruch, many MSS. were known to exist, and of three of them (i.e. a, b, d) Ceriani made collations and inserted these in their appropriate place below the printed text of c. He made no attempt, however, to correct the text of c by their means. This task was attempted in a haphazard fashion by Fritzsche (Libri Apocryphi Vet. Test. Graece, 1871, pp. 690-699) in an emended edition of Ceriani's Latin translation of these chapters.

It is manifest that, if we wish to ascertain the value of c in those chapters in which it stands alone, i.e. i.-lxxvii., we can do so only by an exhaustive examination of its text in those chapters which it attests in common with a, b, d, e, f, g, h, i, k, i.e. lxxviii.-lxxxvi., and by a determination of its critical value in respect to them. When we have discharged this task we shall know the real worth of c in i.-lxxvii., and familiar with its strength and its weakness shall approach with some confidence the critical problems it presents. With this end in view I have made use of all the Syriac MSS. of lxxviii.-lxxxvi. attainable. These are ten, and are as follows :—

b Add. 17,105 in the Brit. Mus., Fol. 116^a-121^a. Sixth century.

c The Milan MS., Fol. 265^b-267^b. Sixth century.

d called d in Ceriani.

e No. 1 Syr. MSS., Bodley, Fol. 430-432. 1627.

f Egerton 704 Brit. Mus., Fol. 373^a-374^a. Seventeenth century.

g Add. 12,172 Brit. Mus., Fol. 192^b-195^b. Tenth or eleventh century.

h Add. 18,715 Brit. Mus., Fol. 242^b-244^a. Twelfth century.

i No. 2 Syr. MSS., Bodley, Fol. 492-493. 1614.

k No. 20 Syr. MSS., Bodley, Fol. 37-38.

All these MSS. with the exception of k contain the complete Epistle of Baruch. k has only lxxxiii. 7-lxxxiv. 1. Of the ten MSS. I have collated directly b, e, f, g, h, i, k. b had already been collated and published by Lagarde. I did it, however, afresh, and found only one important error in his work. For a knowledge of a, d I am indebted to Ceriani's collations. Of c my knowledge is derived directly from the photolithographic reproduction of that MS. In addition to the above MSS., I have found excerpts from the Epistle of Baruch in the three following MSS., from which I have drawn various readings.

l Add. 12,178 Brit. Mus., Fol. 111^b. Ninth or tenth century.

m 14,482 Brit. Mus., Fol. 47^b-48^a. Eleventh or twelfth century.

n 14,684 Brit. Mus., Fol. 24. Twelfth century.

W and P stand for the Walton and Paris Polyglots.

Of the foregoing MSS. a, b, d, e, f, g, h, i, k, l, m, n represent one type of text as c represents another. But although the former belong to one family they are of very different values. To the more ancient and trustworthy belong a, b, g, h, k to the latter and less trustworthy d, e, f, i. For convenience' sake we shall denote the parent of a, b, g, h, k by the symbol β , that of d, e, f, i by γ , and the ancestor of both by a. First of all we shall study the general relations of c to a and to the sub-groups β and γ .

c stands frequently alone alike when it is right and when it is wrong. In lxxviii. 1; lxxxi. 4; lxxxii. 7; lxxxv. 1, 7; lxxxvi. 3; lxxxvii., it is right against a, i.e. a, b, d, e, f, g, h, i; and most probably also in lxxix. 2, 3; lxxxiii. 3, 7, 8; lxxxiv. 1, 9; lxxxv. 15. On the other hand, it is frequently wrong. Thus it attests a corrupt text against a in lxxviii. 1, 2, 3, 4, 7 (?); lxxx. 1, 2, 3; lxxxi. 3; lxxxii. 2 (twice), 3, 4, 5; lxxxiii. 2, 3, 4, 5, 8, 13, 15, 16, 18, 19, 21; lxxxiv. 1, 2, 8, 10; lxxxv. 7, 8, 12, 13; lxxxvi. 1. Thus we see that whereas c independently preserves the true text in many passages, a preserves it in thrice as many.

Again, as we have already remarked, the MSS. a, b, d, e, f, g, h, i, k are of very different values. Thus a, b, g, h agree with c in attesting the true text against d, e, f, i in lxxviii. 3, 5; lxxix. 1; lxxx. 3; lxxxi. 4; lxxxiv. 4, 6, 7, 10; lxxxv. 6, 11. In lxxxii. 1 a, b, g, h agree alike against c and d, e, f, i. Only in lxxxiii. 17 do d, e, f, i agree with c against a, b, g, h. In the above passages k is wanting, but where it exists it belongs as a rule to β , and agrees with a more than with any other member of this group. Thus if we represent a, b, d, e, f, g, h, i, k by a, and a, b, g, h, k by β , and d, e, f, i by γ , as we have already arranged, we arrive at the following genealogy:—

We have also seen from what precedes that c often agrees with β in giving the true text against γ , but c and γ never agree in attesting the true text against β , except perhaps in lxxxiii. 17.

l, m, n , so far as they exist, support a as against c , and where the attestation of a is divided they generally agree with γ against β , i.e. with d, e, f, i against a, b, g, h, k .

Having now learnt in some measure the relations of the various groups of MSS. to each other, we have still to study those of the individual MSS., so far as our materials admit. The special study of c we reserve till later.

Amongst a, b, g, h , b and g are closely related. They agree against all else in lxxx. 4; lxxx. 3; lxxxii. 2, 3; lxxxiii. 2, 9, 11; lxxxv. 12; but this combination is generally wrong. b is never right when it stands alone. a and h are excellent authorities when supported by c . Thus a, c are right in lxxxiii. 4; lxxxiv. 6; lxxxv. 9. They agree in the wrong in lxxix. 2; lxxx. 7; lxxxv. 9. a agrees also with b, c, g against all else in lxxxv. 14, and with c, h against all in lxxxiv. 3. h stands alone with c in lxxxi. 4; lxxxiv. 4; lxxxv. 13; but the combination is untrustworthy. From these facts we infer that amongst a, b, g, h, b and g are very closely related, but that no such close relations exist between a and h or between either of these with b, g. Thus the relations of the sub-group to each other might be represented as follows:—

As regards the γ group, we have learnt above that it is quite untrustworthy when it stands alone against c. Yet it is upon two of the members of this group that the text of the Walton and Paris Polyglots is based.

The text of these Polyglots may be shortly described as follows. In all cases where it stands in opposition to c, WP follow a except in lxxxii. 8, lxxxv. 10, where their text is most probably due to conjecture as they here stand alone. Secondly, in cases where γ is opposed to c β , WP agree with γ . Thirdly, within the group γ , WP are most closely associated with, and in all probability are based upon, e, f. For they agree with e against all other MSS. in lxxx. i., lxxxii. 9 in omitting "and," in lxxx. 2 in giving an impossible form, and in lxxxiii. 14 in omitting half the verse. But WP are not based on e alone; for though e omits a word in lxxxv. 5, it is given in WP. This defect of e was made good from f; for we find that *f*WP stand alone in lxxx. 7. It is of no little interest to have traced the sources of the text in the Polyglots; for, as their editors have given no information on the subject, scholars have hitherto been quite in the dark in this respect. We are now in a position to give the genealogy of the MSS. dealt with above. This is as follows:—

ORIGINAL SYRIAC TRANSLATION

Special Study of c.—It is now time to study the special characteristics of c. We have already seen that c has independently preserved the true text in many passages against corruptions in a. (A list of these passages will be found above, where also it is shown that a has preserved the true text much more frequently than c.) I have found c trustworthy when supported by a in lxxxiii. 4; lxxxiv. 6; lxxxv. 9; but not so in lxxix. 2; lxxx. 7; lxxxv. 9; or by a, b, g in lxxxv. 14; or by a, h in lxxxiv. 3; or by b, g in lxxxv. 1. But the character of c appears more clearly in its errors. Thus it is wrong (1) through omission in lxxx. 1, 2 (omission due here to an attempted emendition); lxxxii. 2, 3; lxxxiii. 4, 5, 16, 18; lxxxiv. 1, 10; lxxxv. 4 (through homoioteleuton), 12. Cf. li. 16 and lvi. 14 for omissions of the negative. (2) Through additions to the text in lxxviii. 2; lxxxiii. 5; lxxxv. 8, 9, 15. (3) Through transposition of words or letters whereby the sense is generally destroyed. Transposition of letters in lxxxii. 4 whereby "drop" becomes "pollution"; lxxxiii. 21 where "by truth" becomes "in silence." For similar transpositions in the earlier chapters see xiv. 6; lxx. 8. Transposition of words in lxxx. 3; lxxxii. 2, 3; lxxxiii. 5; lxxxiv. 8. For similar transpositions see xiv. 11; xxi. 16. (4) Through clerical errors in lxxviii. 3 (for a similar error see xxiv. 4), 4; lxxx. 3; lxxxii. 5; lxxxiii. 2, 3, 13, 15, 16, 19; lxxxiv. 1 (observe that there is the same erroneous pointing in lxx. 5), 3, 8; lxxxv. 12, 13. In lxxxiv. 2 we have an intentional variation. Cf. in earlier chapters li. 1.

We have now completed our study of the MSS. The knowledge which we have thus gained from our comparative criticism of c and the other MSS. helps to secure us against the characteristic errors of the former in the chapters where the friendly aid of the latter cannot be invoked. We can thus address ourselves with a certain degree of confidence and skill to the obscurities and corruptions that arise in these chapters. As a further result of this examination, we have come to feel that so long as we follow its guidance, we can nowhere greatly err from the sense of the Hebrew original.

Date of the Common Ancestor of c and a.—Since c and b are both of the sixth century, we find that already at that date there existed two distinctly developed types of text, both of which must have been for no brief period in existence, owing to the variety of readings already evolved. Further, though b belongs to the sixth century, many of its readings are decidedly later than c and even than a and h. In fact, a, h represent the text at an earlier period than b. The common parent, therefore, of a, h, and b was probably not later than the fifth century. Such a variety of related yet different MSS. as a, b, g, h, k could not well have arisen from an MS. of a later date. This being so, the common progenitor of c and a can hardly be sought later than the fourth century.

§ 4. PREVIOUS LITERATURE ON THE APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH

The Syriac Text.—As we have seen in the foregoing section, we have only one MS., i.e. c, for chapters i.-lxxvii. For Ceriani's edition of this MS. see pp. xxii.-xxiii. Of the text of the remaining chapters, which form the Epistle of Baruch, many editions have appeared:—
 (1) That which is published in the Walton and Paris Polyglots. This text is, as we have shown above (pp. xxvii.-xxviii.), founded on two indifferent MSS., e and f.
 (2) Lagarde's edition of b, pp. 88-93 of his Libri Vet. Test. Apocryphi Syriace, 1861. This is merely b in a printed form, and not an edition of the Syriac text based on the Nitrian MSS. in the British Museum, as is everywhere wrongly stated both by German and English writers. Though b is a very old and valuable MS., we have now several MSS. at our disposal containing a more ancient text (see pp. xxvi.-xxvii.) (3) Ceriani's published text of c, to which he has appended collations of a, b, d in his Monumenta Sacra et Profana, vol. v. Fasc. 2, pp. 167-180. As we have already remarked, Ceriani has contented himself with printing the text of c, and has not sought to correct it by means of a, b, d.

Translations.—Only one translation of our Apocalypse has hitherto appeared, i.e. the Latin translation of Ceriani in the Monumenta Sacra et Profana, vol. i. Fasc. 2, pp. 73-98, 1866. This is certainly a model translation in point of style, and considering the fact that Ceriani was not a specialist in Apocalyptic literature, it is also very accurate. Not quite accurate, indeed, as Ceriani himself was aware in 1871 when he wrote—“Omisi tamen plenam revisionem meae versionis Latinae . . . quia omnino in meis occupationibus tempus me deficit, et quidquid corrigere opus erit, alii ex textu per se poterunt.” Some of the errors are as follows:—In xiii. 8 we must expunge “enim est.” In verses 4-5 of the same chapter we find the peculiar construction “ut . . . dic.” In xv. 6 read “transgressus est” for “fecit.” In xix. 1 for “te” read “vos.” In xxv. 4 for “terrae” read “terram.” In xxxii. 4 for “coronabitur” read “perficietur.” In xl. 1 for “qui tunc” read “illius temporis.” In xlix. 3 for “vestient” read

"induent." In lv. 1 expunge "ejus." In lx. 1 add "eorum" after "magiarum." In lxii. 2 add "et" before "idololatria." In lxxii. 2 for "vivificabit" read "parcet." In lxxxv. 9 for "veritatem cujuspian" read "veritas quodpian." In lxxxvi. 12 for "viae" read "recreationis" (= ἀνέστροφς); "viae" is a rendering of d but not of c, Ceriani's text. Although Ceriani made no critical study of the text of c, he has nevertheless made some most felicitous emendations in x. 14; xiv. 6; li. 1; lvi. 4, 14; lx. 2; lxix. 1, 4; lxx. 8. A critical study of the text and matter would have helped him to deal with the corruptions of the Syriac in xxiv. 4; xlviii. 32; li. 16; lxvii. 2; lxx. 5; lxxii. 1, etc.

As Ceriani did not believe in a Semitic original of our Apocalypse, he was naturally unable to deal with corruptions that were not native to the Syriac Version, but had already appeared in the Hebrew text or had arisen through the misconceptions of the Greek translator.

Ceriani's Latin translation was republished by Fritzsche in his Libri Apocryphi Vet. Test. Graece, 1871, pp. 654-679. Though Fritzsche introduces several changes into Ceriani's translation, hardly any of these can be justified. Sometimes he makes the change because he has failed to understand the text; thus in xx. 4; xxi. 9, 10, he has emended Ceriani's "investigabiles" into "ininvestigabiles"; but "investigabilis" in the Vulgate frequently means "unsearchable." The change of "omne" into "vanum" in xix. 8 is quite wanton. The Latin text also is carelessly edited; thus for "ego" there is "ergo" in lxxxiv. 1; for "ibi" there is "tibi" in lxxxv. 13; and "opulus" for "populus" in xlvi. 24. In the critical notes on pp. 690-699 there are many confusions and mis-statements of authorities. It is needless to add that none of Ceriani's actual errors were corrected by Fritzsche, for the Syriac text had not yet been published.

Notwithstanding all these defects, every scholar who has used Fritzsche's book is rightly grateful to him for making Ceriani's translation so generally accessible.

Critical Inquiries.—Langen, De Apocalypsi Baruch anno superiori primum edita commentatio, Friburgi in Brisgovia, 1867. This treatise, which consists of twenty-four quarto pages, maintains that our Apocalypse was written in Greek in the reign of Trajan. Although no grounds worthy of consideration are advanced in support of a Greek original, Langen's view has been universally accepted. Only two scholars have expressed a doubt on the subject, Mr. Thomson and Professor Ryle of Cambridge. This fact in itself serves to show how inadequately hitherto this Apocalypse has been studied. In other respects, Langen's work is admirable.

Ewald, Göttinger Gel. Anzeigen, 1867, pp. 1706-1717, 1720; Gesch. des Volkes Israel, vii. 83-87 (English trans. vol. viii. 57-61). In a short but interesting article Ewald assigns the date of our author to the reign of Domitian. He regards 4 Ezra and this Apocalypse as the work of one and the same author.

Hilgenfeld, Zeitschrift für wissensch. Theologie, 1869, pp. 437-440; Messias Judaeorum, pp. 63-64. Hilgenfeld ascribes our Apocalypse to the earlier years of Vespasian, possibly to 72 A.D. Vespasian is the leader mentioned in xl. The Baruch Apocalypse is subsequent to 4 Ezra.

Wieseler, "Das Vierte Buch Ezra," Theol. Stud. und Kritiken, 1870, p. 288. This writer criticises Hilgenfeld's date. The seven weeks (xxviii. 2) are to be reckoned from the fall of Jerusalem to 119 A.D. The two weeks in that verse point to the years 105-119, i.e. to the time of Trajan.

Fritzsche, Libri Apocryphi Vet. Test. 1871, pp. xxx.-xxxii. On Fritzsche's reprint of Ceriani's Latin translation see pp. xxxii.-xxxiii.

Stähelin, "Zur paulinischen Eschatologie," Jahrbücher für Deutsche Theologie, 1874, pp. 211-214.

Hausrath, Neutestamentl. Zeitgesch. 2nd ed. iv. 88-90, 1877.

Renan, "L'Apocalypse de Baruch," Journal des Savants, 1877, pp. 223-231; Les Évangiles, 1877, pp. 517-530. Renan regards this Apocalypse as an imitation of 4 Ezra and in part designed as a correction of it, as, for instance, on the question of original sin (cf. also Langen). The latter was written in Nerva's reign, the former in the last year of Trajan's. The sombre clouds which obscured the last months of Trajan roused the hopes of the Jews and gave birth to the furious revolt of 117, of which this book is a monument. The fact that this book was accepted amongst the Christians excludes a later date. No Jewish product later than Hadrian gained currency in Christian circles.

Drummond, The Jewish Messiah, 1877, pp. 117-132. Dr. Drummond is of opinion that, "notwithstanding the Hebraic colouring of its thoughts and language, this book may very well have been written in Greek." Its author was a Jew: there is "not a single expression which betrays a Christian hand." It is probably subsequent in date to 4 Ezra, and is divided into the following groups of chapters—i.-ix.; x.-xii.; xiii.-xx.; xxi.-xxx.; xxxi.-xliii.; xlv.-xlvii.; xlviii.-lxxvi.; lxxvii.-lxxxvii.

Kneucker, Das Buch Baruch, 1879, pp. 190-196. Kneucker believes that the Apocryphal Book of Baruch is the letter which Baruch undertakes in ch. lxxvii. to send by "three men" to the brethren in Babylon. This view needs to be greatly modified; as it stands, he has found none to follow it. The present book, he holds, is defective.

Dillmann, art. "Pseudepigraphen" in Herzog's Real-Enc. 2nd ed. xii. 356-358. Baruch, according to Dillmann, was undoubtedly later than 4 Ezra, and was written under Trajan. The writer was an orthodox Jew and wrote in Greek. Dillmann rightly thinks that parts of the book are lost, but he is wrong in supposing it to be not more truly Jewish than 4 Ezra. He falls also into the same mistake as so many other scholars in supposing Lagarde's edition of MS. b to be an edition of the Syriac text, based on the Nitrian MSS.

Edersheim, The Life and Times of Jesus the Messiah, 2nd ed. 1884, ii. p. 658.

Rosenthal, Vier Apocryphische Bücher, 1885, pp. 72-103. This writer has made a painstaking study of Ceriani's Latin translation. He has likewise given no little thought to the subject matter, and discovered many connections between our book and Talmudic literature. It cannot, however, be said that he has thrown much light on the difficult problems of this book. In most respects Rosenthal follows the traditional lines of interpretation. The work is from the hand of one author. It was written in Greek in the reign of Trajan. Like previous writers Rosenthal regards our Apocalypse as subsequent to 4 Ezra, and as designed in some respects to correct its statements. He accepts Wieseler's interpretation of xxviii., and reckons the seven weeks there mentioned as dating from 70 A.D. Hence $70 + 49 = 119$ and the two last weeks point to the years 105-119, the period of the last woes. 119 is the year of the Messiah's advent. But Rosenthal thinks he can determine the exact year of the book's publication. Thus the letter to the Jews in Babylon shows that it was written before the rebellion of the Jews in Cyrene, Egypt, Cyprus, Babylon, and their extermination by Quietus in 116. On the other hand, he believes that the great earthquake in Syria, which did not affect Palestine in December 115, is referred to in lxx. 8-lxxi. 1. Thus the book was written in the beginning of 116. With many of Dr. Rosenthal's statements, in which he departs from the traditional interpretation of this book, the present writer dissents strongly. Some of these statements are as follows:—The Messiah, he says, has a less active rôle in 4 Ezra than in Baruch. The real facts are that a passive rôle is assigned to the Messiah in xxix. 3 of this Apocalypse and in vii. 28-29 of 4 Ezra, and a highly active rôle in xxxix.-xl. and lxx.-lxxii. of this Apocalypse and xii. 32-34 and xiii. 32-50 of 4 Ezra. Rosenthal charges our author with being an ignorant man and unacquainted with Scripture. This is strange, seeing that in every instance save one the quotations from the Old Testament are made from the Hebrew and not from the LXX., and that a large and accurate knowledge of Jewish history is shown throughout the work. Again, he says our author makes the resurrection from the dead depend on faith therein, and then quotes as a proof xxx. 1, which says nothing of the kind, and further adduces lxv. 1, where he alleges Manasseh is reproved for not believing in the future, "dass er an keinen Zukunft glaubte!" This last assertion rests on a strange misconception of the Latin translation—"cogitabat tempore suo quasi ac futurum non esset ut Fortis inquireret ista." This is, of course, "he thought that in his time the Mighty One would not inquire into these things!" "Futurum" cannot mean "the future."

Stanton, The Jewish and Christian Messiah, 1886, pp. 72-75. This writer ascribes our Apocalypse to the years immediately subsequent to 70 A.D. He divides the book as follows—i.-ix; x.-xii.; xiii.-xx.; xxi.-xxx.; xxxi.-xliii.; xliv.-lxxvi.; lxxvii.-lxxxvii.

Schürer, A History of the Jewish People in the Time of Jesus Christ (translated from the second and revised edition of the German), 1886, vol. iii. Div. ii. pp. 83-93. We have here an admirable account of our Apocalypse. Schürer regards it as written shortly after 70 A.D., and argues strongly for its priority to 4 Ezra. After citing passages on the question of original sin from both books, he proceeds: "Here, then, we have not even an actual difference of view, far less a correction of the one writer on the part of the other. Further, such other reasons as have been advanced in favour of the priority of Ezra and the dependent character of Baruch are merely considerations of an extremely general kind which may be met with considerations equally well calculated to prove quite the reverse." "My own opinion is that . . . it is precisely in the case of Baruch that this problem is uppermost, i.e. How is the calamity of Israel and the impunity of its oppressors possible and conceivable? while in the case of Ezra, though this problem concerns him too, still there is a question that lies almost yet nearer his heart, i.e. Why is it that so many perish and so few are saved? The subordination of the former of these questions to the other, which is a purely theological one, appears to me rather to indicate that Ezra is of a later date than Baruch." It must be admitted that these arguments are as conclusive as are the counter-arguments of Ewald, Langen, Hilgenfeld, Hausrath, Stähelin, Renan, Drummond, and Dillmann for the priority of 4 Ezra. And beyond this impasse it is impossible for criticism to advance until it recognises the composite nature of both books. Schürer appends a valuable bibliography.

Baldensperger, Das Selbstbewusstsein Jesu, 1888, pp. 23-24, 32-35. The composition of Baruch is here assigned to a Jew living in Palestine in the reign of Trajan.

Thomson, Books which Influenced our Lord and His Apostles, 1891, 253-267, 414-422. This writer believes with Schürer in the priority of Baruch, but his hardihood goes still farther: he assigns the date of its composition to 59 B.C. Such a date of necessity argued a Semitic original, and this Mr. Thomson contends for, and we hold rightly, though his reason may be wrong. This his sole reason is that in v. 5 we find the proper name Jabish יַבִּישׁ. "This," he says, "almost certainly represents Ἰαβήης of the Septuagint, 1 Chron. iv. 9, 10 (Heb. יַבֶּשֶׁךְ, Syriac ܝܒܝܫ)." There is no ground for this identification; in fact, everything is against it; and even if the identification were right, it would not necessarily prove a Hebrew original. Jabish or Jabesh, for the Syriac is unpunctuated, implies a Greek form Iaβις or Iaβης, and this in turn יַבֶּשׁ. Here, as elsewhere, I have had occasion to regret that Mr. Thomson acquainted himself inadequately with the facts before he gave loose rein to his vigorous imagination.

Kabisch, "Die Quellen der Apokalypse Baruchs," Jahrbücher f. Protest. Theol. 1891, pp. 66-107. With this writer the criticism of Baruch enters on a new stage. So long, indeed, as it pursued the old lines, finality on the question of the chronological relations of our Apocalypse and 4 Ezra was impossible, and the champions of the one book with excellent reasons demolished their rivals, and with reasons just as excellent were demolished in turn. The explanation is obvious: both books are composite, and if some parts of 4 Ezra are older than certain parts of Baruch, no less certainly are some parts of Baruch older than some of 4 Ezra.

Kabisch emphasises at the outset certain facts which point to a plurality of authorship. Thus he shows that we find in Baruch side by side, on the one hand, a measureless pessimism and world-despair which look for neither peace nor happiness in this world; and, on the other hand, in the same work, a vigorous optimism and world-joy which look to a future of sensuous happiness and delight, of perfect satisfaction and peace.

Kabisch further points out that the same subjects are treated several times, and often without any fresh contribution to the subject at issue. Thus the Messianic Kingdom is twice delineated, the advent of the Messiah twice foretold, and the Messianic woes just as often depicted. Yet the latter are neither so identical as to point to the same author, nor are the novelties so great as to justify the repetition of the whole complex statement already once given.

On these grounds he shows that the book is derived from at least three or four authors. Thus he distinguishes i.-xxiii.; xxxi.-xxxiv.; lxxv.-lxxxvii. as the groundwork written subsequently to 70 A.D., since the destruction of the temple is implied throughout these chapters. Further, these sections are marked by a boundless despair of this world of corruption, which fixes its regards on the afterworld of incorruption. In the remaining sections of the book, however, there is a faith in Israel's ultimate triumph here, and an optimism which looks to an earthly Messianic Kingdom of sensuous delights. In these sections, moreover, the integrity of Jerusalem is throughout assumed. Kabisch, therefore, rightly takes these constituents of the book to be prior to 70 A.D. These sections, however, are not the work of one writer, but of three, two of them being unmutilated productions, i.e. the Vine and the Cedar Vision, xxxvi.-xl., and the Cloud Vision, liii.-lxxiv., but the third a fragmentary Apocalypse, xxiv. 3-xxix. Finally, these different writings were incorporated in one book by a Christian contemporary of Papias, and to this editor are probably due xxviii. 5 ; xxx. 1 ; xxxii. 2-4 ; xxxv. ; lxxvi. 1. With the bulk of this criticism I have no reason for variance, as by independent study, and frequently on different grounds, I have arrived at several of these conclusions. But taken as it stands, Kabisch's criticism is only an additional stage on the way. It is far from being final, as a more prolonged study would have convinced this writer. Thus, as we shall presently learn (see pp. liii.-lxiv.), the so-called groundwork of Kabisch is as undoubtedly composite as the whole work is composite, and edited from at least two or three distinct writings. In this and in other respects the criticism of our book is indefinitely more difficult than Kabisch conceives it. But we must not anticipate our conclusions here. Kabisch's work is based on the Latin translation of Ceriani. He follows the traditional views of a Greek original. The possibility of a Semitic original does not seem to have occurred to him.

De Faye, Les Apocalypses juives, 1892, pp. 25-28, 76-103, 192-204. It is interesting to find that some of Kabisch's conclusions were reached by this French scholar independently. Thus De Faye, like Kabisch, distinguishes xxxvi.-xl. and liii.-lxxv. as distinct works written before 70 A.D. The rest of his analysis is not likely to gain acceptance. His main conclusions are as follows:—i.-xxxii. 7 constitute an Apocalypse of Baruch written after 70 A.D.; i.-v. and vi.-xxxii. 7, however, were originally derived from two hands (pp. 193-196). Another quite distinct work was the Assumption of Baruch, which consists of xlviii.-lii.; xli.-xliii. 2; lxxvi. 1-4 (p. 97 note). The date of this work is also after 70 A.D. xliii. 3-xlvii. is for the most part the work of the final editor. They are much later in date than the Apocalypse or the Assumption. Thus the following chapters and verses are derived from the final editor: xxxii. 7-xxxv.; xliii. 3-xlvii.; lxxvi. 5-lxxxvii. (pp. 201-202). Much praise is due to M. de Faye for the abundant scholarship and pains he has expended on this book; but his work is unconvincing: a profounder study would have led him to abandon many of the positions which are maintained by him.

Ryle, "The Book of Baruch," Dictionary of the Bible, ed. Smith, 1893, vol. i. pp. 361-362. Professor Ryle regards our Apocalypse as written shortly after the destruction of Jerusalem, and possibly in Hebrew. He reverts to Ewald's idea of the common authorship of this book and 4 Ezra as a means of explaining their manifold points of identity and similarity. He divides it into the following sections: i.-xii.; xiii.-xx.; xxi.-xxxiv.; xxxv.-xlvi.; xlvii.-lii.; liii.-lxxvi.; lxxvii.-lxxxv.

§ 5. THE SYRIAC—A TRANSLATION FROM THE GREEK

That the Syriac text is a translation from the Greek is to be concluded on several grounds. 1. It is so stated in the sixth-century MS. c. 2. There are certain corruptions in the text which are explicable only on the hypothesis that the translator misinterpreted the Greek, or else found the corruption already existing there. Thus in iii. 7 (see note) the Syrian translator renders "ornament" where the text requires "world." It is obvious here that he followed the wrong sense of κόσμος. The corrupt readings in xxi. 9, 11, 12; xxiv. 1, 2; lxii. 7 are to be explained on this principle (see notes in loc.). 3. Imitations of Greek constructions are found. In lxv. 1 we have hav = the Greek article in connection with a proper name. 4. We have frequent transliterations of Greek words, as in vi. 4, 7; x. 17; xvii. 4; xxi. 7, etc. It is possible, of course, that these borrowed Greek words may have been part of the current language when the translation was made. In lxxvii. 14, however, we have a Greek word transliterated which gives no sense in its context. Hence this word was not written first-hand by a Syriac writer, but was taken by the Syriac translator from the Greek text before him. 5. The Rest of the Words of Baruch is largely based on our Apocalypse, and frequently reproduces it word for word. This book was written in Greek by a Christian Palestinian Jew in the second century. It implies, therefore, the existence of our Apocalypse in a Greek form, and preserves important fragments of the Greek Version.

§ 6. THE GREEK—A TRANSLATION FROM A HEBREW ORIGINAL

It is hard to understand how such an unbroken unanimity has prevailed amongst scholars on the question of a Greek original. Indeed, it is impossible to explain it, save on the hypothesis that they gave the subject the most cursory notice, or more probably none at all. In fact, since the discovery of the book not a single serious attempt has been made to grapple with this problem, and yet, in nearly every instance, scholars have spoken with an assurance on this subject that only a personal and thorough study of the subject could justify. To this strong and unanimous tradition of the learned world I bowed without hesitation at the outset of my studies, but with an awakening distrust and an ever-growing reluctance during the subsequent years in which the present Translation and Notes were completed. In fact, the feeling grew steadily stronger that only a Hebrew original could account for many of the phenomena of the text. And yet my gathering certainty on this head did not lead to action till the MSS. of the Translation and Notes were partially in type. I then felt that I could no longer stay my hand, and with the kind permission of my publishers I have been enabled to introduce the necessary changes into the Translation and Notes. The facts which have obliged me to maintain a Hebrew original may be summarised as follows:—1. The quotations from the Old Testament agree in all cases but one with the Massoretic text against the LXX. 2. Hebrew idioms survive in the Syriac text. 3. Unintelligible expressions in the Syriac can be explained and the text restored by retranslation into Hebrew. 4. There are many paronomasiae which discover themselves on retranslation into Hebrew. 5. One or two passages of the book have been preserved in Rabbinic writings.

1. The quotations from the Old Testament agree in all cases but one with the Mass. text against the LXX.—See vi. 8; xxxviii. 2; xli. 4; li. 4; lviii. 1, with notes in loc. In two other passages our text departs alike from the Mass. and LXX.: thus in iv. 2 it agrees with the Syriac Version of Is. xlix. 16 against the Mass., LXX., and Vulg.; and in xxxv. 2 it reproduces Jer. ix. 1, freely and independently. Finally, in lxxxii. 5 only does it agree with the LXX. of Is. xl. 15. It is to be observed, however, that neither does the Vulgate in that passage agree with the Mass. The Mass. = כדק ישרל; the LXX. = ὡς σίελος λογισθήσονται = כדק נחשבר; Vulg. = "quasi pulvis exiguus." Here the Vulg. omits ישרל and the LXX. replaces it by repeating a previous verb. Hence this passage is inconclusive, as the text of Isa. xl. 15 seems to have been uncertain.

2. Hebrew idioms survive in the Syriac text.—We shall treat this section under four heads.

(a) Survival of the familiar Hebrew idiom of the infinitive absolute combined with the finite verb.—The Syriac equivalent of this Hebraism is frequently found in this Apocalypse: cf. xiii. 3 (note); xxii. 7; xli. 6; xlviii. 30; l. 2; lvi. 2; lxxv. 6; lxxvi. 2; lxxxii. 2; lxxxiii. 1, 2, 3, 6; lxxxiv. 2. In this circumstance alone we have sufficient evidence to establish a Hebrew original. This idiom is, it is true, also found in original Syriac, but is comparatively rare. It is not, however, with original Syriac that we have here to do, but with a Syriac translation. We shall now proceed to show that in a Syriac translation of a Hebrew or a Greek text this idiom does not appear except as a rendering of the corresponding idiom in the Hebrew or Greek before it.

In order to prove this statement we shall examine the Peshitto Version of Genesis and Exodus. In these two books I have found fifty-seven instances of the occurrence of the infinitive absolute with the finite verb in the Massoretic text.

As we shall require presently to know the usage of the LXX. in this matter, we shall now give a table furnishing the facts we are in search of from both versions.

Syriac-Peshitto.	Genesis-Massoretic Text.	LXX.
Noun and verb.	ii. 17.	Noun and verb.
Infinitive and verb.	iii. 4.	"
"	iii. 16.	Participle and verb.
"	xvii. 12.	Noun and verb.
"	xviii. 18.	Participle and verb.
Finite verb only.	xix. 9.	Noun and verb.
Infinitive and verb.	xxii. 17 (twice).	Participle and verb.

"	"	Finite verb only.
"	xxxii. 12.	Adverb and verb.

Different text followed.	xxxvii. 33.	Different text followed.
Infinitive and verb.	xl. 15.	Noun and verb.

"	"	Finite verb only.
Finite verb only.	xlvi. 4.	Different text followed.
Infinitive and verb.	l. 24 (twice).	Noun and verb.

Thus in Genesis there are twenty-nine instances of this idiom. These are rendered by the Peshitto as follows: twenty-three by the infinitive and verb; one by cognate noun and verb; four by finite verb only; and in one case a different text is followed. In the case of the LXX., eleven by cognate noun and verb; nine by participle and verb; five by finite verb only; while in four a different text is followed.

An examination of Exodus supplies the following evidence :—

Syriac-Peshitto.	Exodus-Massoretic Text.	LXX.
Infinitive and verb.	iii. 7.	Participle and verb.
„	iii. 16.	Noun and verb.
Different text followed.	xi. 1.	„

Finite verb only.	xxi. 36.	Finite verb only.
Infinitive and verb.	xxii. 6, 14.	„
„	xxii. 16, 19.	Noun and verb.
Finite verb only (twice) } Infinitive and verb }	xxii. 23 (thrice).	{ Noun and verb (twice). Participle and verb.
Infinitive and verb.	xxiii. 4.	Participle and verb.
„	xxiii. 5.	Finite verb only.
„	xxiii. 22, 24.	Noun and verb.
„	xxxi. 14.	„
„	xxxi. 15.	Finite verb only.

Thus in Exodus there are twenty-eight instances of this idiom. These are rendered in the Peshitto : twenty-two by the infinitive and verb ; four by finite verb only ; in two cases a different text is followed. In the LXX., nineteen by cognate noun and verb ; three by participle and verb ; and six by the finite verb only. By combining the facts on both books, we arrive at the following results. The Hebrew idiom occurs fifty-seven times. In the Peshitto forty-five are rendered by infinitive and verb ; one by cognate noun and verb ; eight by finite verb only ; in three cases a different text is followed. In the LXX., thirty are rendered by cognate noun and verb ; twelve by participle and verb ; eleven by finite verb only; in four cases a different text is followed. Finally, we should mention here that in no case have we found this idiom in the Syriac Version where the same idiom was not also present in the Hebrew from which it was derived, and the same holds true of the LXX. save in one case, i.e. Exod. xxiii. 26.

From the above results obtained from the Peshitto Version of Genesis and Exodus we learn that whereas the Syriac translator on the one hand never inserts this idiom unless as an equivalent of the corresponding Hebrew idiom before him, on the other he has failed to render it in eight cases out of fifty-seven. In these he gives the finite verb only. Thus the irresistible conclusion is: if we find this idiom occurring at all in a Syriac translation, it is a presumption that it existed in the language from which the translation was made; whereas if we find it frequently (as in our Apocalypse) the presumption changes to a certainty.

The above conclusions drawn from a study of the Peshitto Version of the Hebrew text of Genesis and Exodus may be further confirmed and extended in their application by a short consideration of the corresponding phenomena in the New Testament. So far as I can discover, the Peshitto Version of the New Testament in no case inserts this idiom where it does not already exist in the Greek. This idiom occurs, as we know, at least six times: see Matt. xiii. 14; xv. 4; Luke vii. 34; xxii. 15; Acts vii. 34; Hebrews vi. 14. Five of these passages are quotations from the LXX., and thus the idiom goes back to the Hebrew. In the remaining one, Luke xxii. 15, it implies undoubtedly an Aramaic or Hebrew original. The Peshitto renders these instances by the infinitive and verb except in Matt. xiii. 14, where it misses the point, and in Luke xxii. 15, where it gives the noun and verb. In both these verses the Sinaitic MS. gives the infinitive and verb.

The Syriac translator therefore is so far from inserting this idiom, unless it exists already in the Hebrew or Greek text before him, that, as we found above, he occasionally fails to do so when he ought. The bearing of this conclusion on our present investigation is obvious. This idiom is found fifteen times in our Apocalypse; we can therefore conclude with confidence that it occurred at least fifteen times in the Greek, and in all likelihood oftener.

Having now found that this idiom occurred frequently in the Greek, we have now to ask, could it have appeared there for the first time, i.e. in an original Greek writing?

The answer does not require a long investigation. The idiom is thoroughly Semitic, and is only once found in all Greek literature, and that in Lucian. In the New Testament there is no instance of it unless in a quotation from the Old Testament; in the Old Testament only once, Exod. xxiii. 26, without a Semitic background.

Hence we conclude that its frequent occurrence in our Apocalypse is in itself demonstrable evidence of a Hebrew original. Further, it is probable that it occurred in the Hebrew original more frequently than in the Greek translation; for we found above that out of fifty-seven instances of this idiom in Genesis and Exodus, the LXX. failed to render eleven.

(b) The survival of various Hebraisms.—In xx. 2 (see note); xxiv. 2, where Syriac for “throughout all generations” = ἐν πάσῃ γενεᾷ καὶ γενεᾷ = בכל־דור ודור; cf. Ps. cxlv. 13; the same idiom is found in xxix. 7, where I render “every morning”; xxxviii. 4, where “from my (earliest) days” is the Hebrew idiom found in 1 Kings i. 6.

(c) Probable survival of Hebrew order against Syriac idiom.—In xiii. 12 (see notes); lxiii. 8. In connection with the notes on xiii. 12 it is worth observing that, in Western Aramaic, unlike Syriac, the order of the participle and the substantive verb in the compound past imperfect indicative is indifferent. Thus in Dan. v. 19; vi. 4, 5, 11, 15, etc., the substantive verb precedes, whereas in Dan. ii. 31; iv. 7, 10, 26; vii. 2, 6, 8, etc., the participle.

(d) Probable survival of syntactical idioms against Syriac idiom.—For omission of relative see xx. 3, note; imperative used as jussive, xi. 6, note; Hebrew perfect with strong vav in xxi. 21, and the voluntative with weak vav in xlviii. 6, reproduced literally but not idiomatically.

3. Unintelligible expressions in the Syriac can be explained and the text restored by retranslation into Hebrew.—In xxi. 9, 11, 12; xxiv. 2; lxii. 7, I have been able to explain and restore an unintelligible text by retranslation first into Greek and thence into Hebrew. The Syriac in these verses is the stock rendering of δικαιοῦσθαι, and this in turn of צדק. But צדק also = δίκαιος εἶναι, and this is the meaning required in the above passages (see notes in loc.), but the Greek translator erroneously adopted the more usual rendering.

Again in xliv. 12 we have another interesting restoration through the same means. There we find in the Syriac "on its beginning" set over anti-thetically against "to torment." Here the context requires "to its blessedness." Now the corrupt text = בראשו, which by the transposition of the single letter ר gives us the text באשרו = "to its blessedness." Again in lxxxv. 12 we have another instance of the Greek translator following the wrong of two alternative meanings.

Again in xi. 6; xx. 3; xxi. 21; xxix. 5; xlviii. 6, we are obliged by the context to translate not the Syriac text but the Hebrew text presupposed by the Syriac, but mistranslated by the Greek translator, and, therefore, of necessity by the Syriac. See notes in loc.; also 2 (d) above, p. xlvii. For other restorations the reader should consult the notes on x. 13; lxx. 6; lxxx. 2. Finally in lxxvii. 14 we have a transliteration of the Greek word ὑλη. ὑλη is either a corruption or a mistranslation of some Hebrew word. It could not have been written for the first time in Greek. I have hazarded a conjecture in the note on the passage.

4. Many paronomasiae discover themselves on re-translation into Hebrew.—We have in xv. 8 (see note) one that is already familiar to us in Isaiah and Ezekiel. As many as three spring into notice in xlviii. 35 (see note), and probably two in lxxxiv. 2. The most interesting perhaps are those on the proper names, Hezekiah and Sennacherib, in lxiii. 3, 4 (see notes). In the case of the former, I had the good fortune to conjecture the existence of the same paronomasia in Ecclus. xlviii. 22, and to restore the Hebrew there as it actually stood before Dr. Neubauer's discovery of the Hebrew MS. of Ecclus. xl. 1.

5. One or two passages of this book have been preserved in rabbinic writings (see notes on x. 18; xxxii. 2-4; lxiv. 3).

§ 7. THE DIFFERENT ELEMENTS IN THE APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH WITH THEIR RESPECTIVE CHARACTERISTICS AND DATES.

As we have seen above, the composite nature of this book has already been recognised independently by Kabisch and De Faye. And the more thoroughly we study it, the more conscious we become of the impassable gulf which sunders the world-views which underlie the different parts. In one class of the passages there is everywhere manifest a vigorous optimism as to Israel's ultimate well-being on earth; there is sketched in glowing and sensuous colours the blessedness which awaits the chosen people in the kingdom of the Messiah which is at hand (xxix. ; xxxix.-xl. ; lxxiii.-lxxiv.), when healing will descend in dew, and disease and anguish and lamentation will flee away ; when strife and revenge and hatred will go into condemnation ; when gladness will march throughout the earth, the reapers not grow weary, nor they that build toil-worn ; when child-birth will entail no pangs, and none shall die untimely (lxxiii.-lxxiv. 1) ; when Israel's enemies shall be destroyed (xxxix.-xl. ; lxx. 7-lxxii.), and to God's chosen people will be given a world-wide empire with its centre at Jerusalem (xl. 2 ; lxxiii.-lxxiv.). Over against these passages which ring with such assurance of coming victory and untold blessedness stand others wherein, alike to Israel's present and its future destiny on earth, there is written nothing save "lamentation and mourning and woe." These veritable cries from the depths give utterance to a hopeless pessimism — a bottomless despair touching all the things of earth. This world is a scene of corruption, its evils are irremediable ; it is a never-ceasing toil and strife, but its end is at hand ; its youth is past ; its strength exhausted ; the pitcher is near to the cistern, the ship to the port, the course of the journey to the city, and life to its consummation (lxxxv.). The advent of the times is nigh, the corruptible will pass away, the mortal depart, that that which abides for ever may come, and the new world which does not turn to corruption those who depart to its blessedness (cf. xxi. 19 ; xliv. 9-15 ; lxxxv.).

Thus we discover that whereas (1) optimism as to Israel's future on earth is a characteristic of some sections of the book, pessimism in this respect characterises others. The former are the Messiah Apocalypses, xxvii.-xxx. 1 ; xxxvi.-xl. ; liii.-lxxiv. (which for convenience I designate respectively as A^1 , A^2 , A^3), and a short original Apocalypse of Baruch, B^1 . The remaining sections are B^2 , B^3 . The contents of these we shall determine presently. Again (2), A^1 , A^2 , A^3 , B^1 , agree in teaching the advent of the Messianic kingdom, but this doctrine is absolutely relinquished in B^2 , B^3 .

Thus, A^1 , A^2 , A^3 , B^1 , agree in presenting an optimistic view of Israel's future on earth, and in inculcating the hope of a Messianic kingdom ; whereas in B^2 , B^3 , such expectations are absolutely abandoned, and the hopes of the righteous are directed to the immediate advent of the final judgment and to the spiritual world alone. But at this point a difference between A^1 , A^2 , A^3 , and B^1 , emerges. The former look for a Messiah and a Messianic kingdom, the latter for a Messianic kingdom without a Messiah.

As we pursue our study, other features, one by one, disclose themselves which belong to A^1 , A^2 , A^3 , but not to B^1 , B^2 , B^3 , and thus differentiate them from the latter. Some of these are: (1) In A^1 , A^2 , A^3 , Jerusalem is still standing — hence they were written before 70 A.D. ; whereas in B^1 , B^2 , B^3 , it is already destroyed (for details see pp. 49, 61, 87, 101, 111). In B^1 , Jerusalem is to be restored ; (2) in A^1 , A^2 , A^3 , the advent of the Messiah is looked for, but not in B^1 , B^2 , B^3 ; (3) in A^1 , A^2 , A^3 , it is only to the actual inhabitants of Palestine that the promise of protection is given in the time of the Messianic woes (see xxix. 2; xl. 2; lxxi. 1)—thus the Jews are still in Palestine; but in B^1 , B^2 , B^3 , the Jews are already carried into exile. In B^1 they are to be ultimately restored.

These conclusions as to the different authorship of A^1 , A^2 , A^3 , and B^1 , B^2 , B^3 , are confirmed by the following facts:—

authorship (1) According to the scheme of the final editor
 A's of this book (see v. 7; ix. 2; pp. 36, 61), events proceed in each section in a certain order: first a fast, then a divine disclosure, then an announcement or address to the people based on this disclosure. This being so, it is significant that in the various addresses in v. 5; x. 4; xxxi. 2-xxxiv.; xlv.-xlvi.; lxxvii. 1-17, there is not a single reference to these Messianic Apocalypses, A^1 , A^2 , A^3 . (2) From (1) it follows that A^1 , A^2 , A^3 , have no real organic connection with the rest of the book, B^1 , B^2 , B^3 . And a detailed examination of their immediate contents shows that the removal of A^1 (= xxvii.-xxx. 1), A^2 (= xxxvi.-xl.), A^3 (= liii.-lxxiv.) serves to restore some cohesion to the text (see xxx. 2, note; xli. 1, note; lxxv.-lxxvi., note).

Having thus seen that A^1 , A^2 , A^3 , were written prior to 70 A.D., and are of different authorship to B^1 , B^2 , B^3 , which were written subsequent to that date, we have next to deal with the relations in which A^1 , A^2 , A^3 stand to each other.

A^1 , A^2 , A^3 ; their relations to each other and dates.

—On pp. 61, 87, we have shown that A^1 is of distinct authorship to A^2 and A^3 , on the ground that in A^1 the Messiah pursues an entirely passive rôle, and does not appear till the enemies of Israel are destroyed and the kingdom established; whereas, in A^2 and A^3 , it is the Messiah that destroys the enemies of Israel and establishes the Messianic kingdom. As regards the date of A^1 , all that can be said with safety is that it was composed before 70 A.D.

It is hard to determine with certainty the relation of A^2 and A^3 . In many points they are at one: their differences are few. Some of these are: A^2 has more affinities in matter and character with the older Jewish Apocalyptic, i.e. that of Daniel; A^3 is more nearly related in form and spirit to later Judaism, to the rabbinic type of thought. Further, whereas in xl. 2, it is the Messiah that defends the inhabitants of the Holy Land, in lxxi. 1, it is the Holy Land itself; and whereas in A^2 (= xxxvi.-xl.) the law is only passingly alluded to, in A^3 (= liii.-lxxiv.) its importance is frequently dwelt upon. The latter difference may partly be due to their diversity in subject and method as well as to the brevity of A^2 . On the whole, we are inclined to regard A^2 and A^3 as springing from different authors; but the evidence is not decisive.

As to the date of A^2 we are unable to say anything more definite than that it was composed before 70 A.D. The case of A³ is different. Like A¹ and A², it was written before 70 A.D., as we have seen above (see also p. 87 and lxviii. 6, note). The earlier limit of composition is fixed by lix. 5-11. In the notes on that passage we have shown that in our Apocalypse there is a transference of Enoch's functions to Moses, and an attribution to Moses of revelations hitherto ascribed to Enoch (see also xiii. 3, note). This glorification of Moses at Enoch's expense is a clear sign of Jewish hostility to Christianity, and a tribute to Enoch's influence in the Christian Church of the first century. This acceptance of Enoch as a prophet in Christian circles became the ground of his rejection by the Jews, and of a hostility which was unswervingly pursued for several centuries. This aggressive attitude of Judaism could not have originated before the open breach of Christianity with the Synagogue, which was brought about by the Pauline controversy. Hence A³ cannot be earlier than 50 A.D. Thus the limits of its composition are 50-70 A.D.

/ B¹, B², B³, the later constituents of Baruch, their characteristics and dates.—We have seen above the grounds on which we are obliged to ascribe B¹, B², B³, to a different authorship and later date than A¹, A², A³. We have now to study the relations which subsist between B¹, B², B³. We shall consider B³ first, as it consists of a single chapter.

Relation in B³ = lxxxv. This chapter agrees with B¹, B², in being written after 70 A.D.; but differs from B¹ and agrees with B² in despairing of a national restoration, and in looking only for spiritual blessedness in the world of incorruption. But, again, it differs from B² also, in that B² was written in Jerusalem or Judæa, whereas B³ was written in Babylon or some other land of the Dispersion—in the former most probably; for it was written in Hebrew (cf. lxxxv. 2, 3, 12, notes). Again, whereas, according to B², Jeremiah was with the captivity in Babylon, it is here definitely stated that the righteous and the prophets are dead, and that the exiles have none to intercede for them (see notes on pp. 154, 156). B³ was thus written after 70 A.D. in Hebrew, and most probably in Babylon.

B¹, B².—After the removal of A¹, A², A³, and B³, the remaining chapters, when submitted to a searching scrutiny, betray underlying suppositions, statements, and facts which are mutually irreconcilable.

Thus certain sections, i.-ix. 1; xliii.-xliv. 7; xlv.-xlv. 6; lxxvii.-lxxxii.; lxxxiv.; lxxxvi.-lxxxvii., are optimistic and hopeful as to this world, whereas certain others, ix.-xii. (?); xiii.-xxv.; xxx. 2-xxxv.; xli.-xlii.; xlv. 8-15; xlvii.-lii.; lxxv.-lxxvi.; lxxxiii., are decidedly of an opposite character. The former sections we have named B¹, and the latter B². That B¹ and B² are derived from different authors will be clear from the following considerations:—

(1) In B¹ the earthly Jerusalem is to be rebuilt (i. 4, note; vi. 9, note; lxxviii. 7, note), but not so in B², where it is said that Jerusalem is removed with a view to usher in the judgment (see xx. 1, 2).

(2) In B¹ the exiles are to be restored, but not in B²; see notes cited in (1).

(3) In B¹ an earthly felicity or a Messianic kingdom is expected (i. 5; xlvi. 6; lxxvii. 12), whereas in B² no earthly consolation of any kind is looked for (xliv. 8-15), and the judgment is close at hand (xlviii. 39; lxxxiii.).

(4) In B² there is a strongly ascetic tone (see xv. 8, note); but this is wholly absent from B¹.

(5) In B¹, Baruch is to die an ordinary death, whereas in B² he is to be taken up or translated and preserved till the last day, to testify against the Gentile oppressors of Israel (see xiii. 3, note).

(6) In B¹, Jeremiah is not sent to Babylon, but in B² he is (see x. 2, note; xxxiii. 2, note; lxxvii. 12, note).

(7) In B¹, Jerusalem is destroyed by angels lest the enemy should boast; this idea seems foreign to B² (see lxvii. 6, note).

(8) In B¹ the main interest of the writer is engaged in dealing with the recent destruction of Jerusalem; in tracing this calamity to the nation's sins; in exhorting to renewed faithfulness; and in inculcating the sure and certain hope of Israel's restoration. In B² the writer has relinquished all hopes of national restoration, and is mainly concerned with theological problems and questions of the schools.

In x. 6-xii. 4 it is not improbable, as we have shown in the notes on the passage, that we have a fragment of a Sadducean writing, which I have marked by the symbol S. It may possibly belong to B²; it cannot to B¹. Having now recognised that the groundwork is in the main derived from the two sources B¹ and B², and having already acquainted ourselves with the leading characteristics of each, it is next incumbent on us to consider the use made of these sources.

B¹, its extent in this book.—It is not difficult to ascertain the extent to which B¹ has been put in requisition by the final editor. Thus i.-ix. 1, with the exception of the interpolation iv. 2-7, clearly belongs to it, as it discovers most of the characteristics which belong to B¹ as over against their contraries in B². B² begins clearly with x. 1.-5, for these verses give the account of Jeremiah's departure to Babylon, which is peculiar to B²; ix. 2 and other references to fasts of seven days are probably due in their present positions to the final editor. The next fragments of B¹ are xliii.-xliv. 7; xlv.-xlvi. 6 (see pp. 68, 69, for detailed criticism), and the rest that are drawn from this source are lxxvii.-lxxxvii., with the exception of lxxxiii. = B² and lxxxv. = B³ (see pp. 119, 140, 154, 156).

B², its extent in this book.—Criticism encounters its chief difficulty in dealing with the source B², and with the use to which it has been put by the final editor. From B¹ the editor borrowed materials and used them in a straightforward fashion, but those from B² he mutilated and transposed in every imaginable way. This will be manifest to every serious student of xiii.-xxv. It was my sheer inability to write any connected or reasonable commentary on these chapters in their present order, that led me at last to recognise the true nature of the case. Then I came to see that these chapters could not have been written originally as they stand at present, and further study made it clear that we had here a most complete but instructive example of the perverse ingenuity of a redactor, by which the original text was dislocated and transposed, the original development of thought arrested and inverted, questions frequently recorded after their specific answers had already been given in full, and passages torn from their original setting in Baruch's address to the people and inserted in Baruch's prayers to God, where they are bereft of all conceivable meaning.

The reader will find a list of these logical anacoloutha and inversions on pp. 20, 21, and likewise an attempt to restore these chapters to their original order in B². With the paucity of materials at our disposal, this can only be partially satisfactory. The original order was probably xiii. 1-3*a*; xx.; xxiv. 2-4; xiii. 3*b*-12; xxv.; xiv.-xix.; xxi.-xxiv. 1.

The next fragment from B² is xxx. 2-5, which forms a good sequel to xxiv. 1. Of the intervening chapters xxvii.-xxx. 1 is an independent Apocalypse, as we have already found, i.e. A¹ and xxvi. is an addition of the editor; xxxi.-xxxv.; xli.-lii., with the exception of xliii.-xliv. 7; xlv.-xlvi. 6, which belong to B¹ and xxxii. 2-4; xlvi. 7, which are due to the editor, are also fragments of B² (see pp. 57, 58, 66, 68, 69, 74). These chapters from B² have met with no better treatment at the hands of the editor than those already mentioned. Thus we find that xxxi.-xxxii. 6, which contains an address of Baruch to the people, presupposes xlii.; xlviii.; lii. to be already in the background; for the subject of each address is founded on a previous revelation (see p. 57). Thus xxxi.-xxxv. was read originally after xlviii.-lii., but not immediately, for lxxv. intervened (see p. 117), forming the natural sequel to lii. when A³, i.e. liii.-lxxiv. is removed; xli.-xlii. appear to have followed close on xxx. (see p. 66). Thus so far the order roughly was: xxx. 2-5; xli.-xlii.; xlviii.-lii.; lxxv.; xxxi.-xxxv. But there are grounds for regarding xliv. 8-15; lxxxiii. as intervening after xxxii. 6. Finally, the last fragment of B² is found in lxxvi., but this cannot have formed the end of B². It was probably closed with an account of the Assumption of Baruch.

For further disarrangements of the text by which words used originally by Baruch in addressing the people, are used in their present context in an address to God, though quite impossible in that connection, and the probable restoration of these fragments, see xlviii. 48-50; lii. 5-7; liv. 16-18, notes. The surviving fragments of B², which we have just dealt with, may be restored as follows to what seems to have been their original order in their source: xiii. 1-3a; xx.; xxiv. 2-4; xiii. 3b-12; xxv.; xiv.-xix.; xxi.-xxiv. 1; xxx. 2-5; xli.-xlii.; xlviii. 1-47; xlix.-lii. 3; lxxv.; xxxi.-xxxii. 6; liv. 17, 18; xlviii. 48-50; lii. 5-7; liv. 16; xliv. 8-15; lxxxiii.; xxxii. 7-xxxv.; lxxvi.

S, its relation to B¹ and B².—We have adjourned to the present the treatment of x. 6-xii. 4, which in the notes on this passage we have assigned to a Sadducean author, S. However this may be, I cannot but regard it as of different authorship to B¹ and B². Several grounds for this conclusion will be found in pp. 14-19. We might further observe that although, in vividness of grief and the still overwhelming consciousness of national calamity, S has features in common with B¹, it is sundered from it as resigning all hope of the restoration of the temple and its sacrifices, and as presenting the most hopeless pessimism in the book. And again, whereas S is related to B² in its world despair, it is no less certainly sundered from it in its complete absorption in the present wreck of the nation's material interests. Of this subject as now far distant B² recks little, and gives its chief energies and affections to religious problems and the conservation of Israel's spiritual interests.

Dates of S, B¹, B², B³.—In respect of date, S seems to have been written immediately after the fall of Jerusalem, in 70 A.D.; B¹ soon after this date, when the destruction of Israel and its hoped-for restoration were still the supreme subject of interest and speculation. B² is much later; its interests have passed from the material to the spiritual world; patriotic aims have ceased to affect it. B³ is probably still later than B².

Date of editing entire book.—Since the author of the Rest of the Words of Baruch has used portions of ii., v., vi., viii., x., xi., xxxv. 2 (?), lxxvii., lxxx., lxxxv., lxxxvii. of our Apocalypse, it is clear that he had the present form of our book before him in Greek. Thus, as this Christian Apocalypse was written between 130 and 140 A.D., the date of the Greek translation of our Apocalypse may be taken as not later than 130. The editing of the Hebrew may have been one or more decades earlier.

§ 8. THE LOST EPISTLE TO THE TWO AND A HALF TRIBES

A portion of this letter is probably to be found in the Apocryphal Book of Baruch, i.e. in i. 1-3; iii. 9-iv. 29. This section corresponds in many respects with the writings we are in search of. Thus (1) the lost Epistle was addressed to Judah and Benjamin in exile (lxxvii. 12, 17). Now it is clear that iii. 9-iv. 29 was also addressed to Judah and Benjamin in exile. It is Judah and Benjamin that are addressed; for throughout iv. 5-29 it is Jerusalem that is represented as being deprived of her children. Further, it is Judah and Benjamin in exile, for they are said to be "sold to the nations and delivered to their enemies" (iv. 6), and Jerusalem describes herself as robbed of her sons and daughters (iv. 16), and the writer asks in iii. 10: "Why is it, Israel, that thou art in thine enemies' land, and that thou art waxen feeble (so Kneucker) in a strange country?"

(2) The lost Epistle was "an epistle of doctrine and a scroll of good tidings" (lxxvii. 12). This forms an admirable description of iii. 9-iv. 29, which is essentially a writing of consolation and encouragement.

(3) The lost Epistle was to hold out the promise of return (lxxvii. 6); this is done in iv. 22-24.

(4) The lost Epistle was written by Baruch to Babylon (lxxvii. 12, 17).

Now i. 1-3; iii. 9-iv. 29, which purport to have been written by Baruch in Babylon and addressed to the exiles there, appear rather to have been written by Baruch in Jerusalem and addressed to the exiles in Babylon; for (a) the speaker does not identify himself with those who are in exile. Cf. iii. 10: "Why is it, Israel, that thou art in thine enemies' land"; and iv. 5, 6, where he calls them the remnant dispersed among the nations; (b) the speaker rather identifies himself with Jerusalem; at all events, in iv. 9-29 he personifies Jerusalem, and represents her as addressing the neighbouring peoples, and then her own children as they are being led into captivity, and promising them a safe return to her.

(5) Finally, in B¹, to which the lost Epistle belongs, the blamelessness of Jerusalem over against her children is insisted on (cf. lxxvii. 8). The same thought would naturally recur in some form in the lost Epistle. And so, in fact, we find it underlying iv. 8-29. And as in B¹ it is taught that Israel is punished only as a chastisement (cf. i. 5; lxxix. 2), the same idea would most probably appear in the lost Epistle as an encouragement to the exiles. Now this is emphatically declared to be so in iv. 6.

On the above grounds to which others could be added, I am inclined to regard iii. 9-iv. 29 as a recast of, or, at all events, as based upon the lost Epistle. This Epistle was probably introduced by some form of i. 1-3. These verses are, as Kneucker has shown, corrupt in their present form.

iv. 39-v. 9, which consists of a direct address to Jerusalem, is derived by the final editor from a different source, mainly from the eleventh of the Psalms of Solomon.

§ 9. THE RELATIONS OF THIS APOCALYPSE WITH 4 EZRA

In this section we shall deal with the following questions:—

- (a) The composite nature of 4 Ezra.
- (b) Conflicting characteristics of 4 Ezra and Baruch, the former to some extent non-Jewish.
- (c) 4 Ezra from a Hebrew original.
- (d) Relations of the respective constituents of our Apocalypse and 4 Ezra.

(a) The composite nature of Ezra.—Into this question this is not the place to enter. I shall content myself with expressing my acceptance in the main of Kabisch's masterly criticism¹ of this work. Though many of his positions cannot be maintained, the greater number of them will, I believe, be ultimately accepted as final. The work is very unequal.

In it there stand side by side numerous instances of extremely fine insight and not a few gross misapprehensions and bizarre conclusions. His analysis is as follows :—

S = an Apocalypse of Salathiel written circ. 100 A.D. at Rome, preserved in a fragmentary condition : iii. 1-31 ; iv. 1-51 ; v. 13*b*-vi. 10 ; vi. 30-vii. 25 ; vii. 45-viii. 62 ; ix. 13-x. 57 ; xii. 40-48 ; xiv. 28-35.

E = an Ezra Apocalypse, circ. 31 B.C., written in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem : iv. 52-v. 13*a* ; vi. 13-25, 28 ; vii. 26-44 ; viii. 63-ix. 12.

A = Adlergesicht—an Eagle Vision, written 90 A.D. by a Zealot : x. 60-xii. 40.

M = Menschensohn—a Son-of-Man Vision, written in Jerusalem about the time of Pompey : xiii., but much interpolated by R.

E² = an Ezra fragment, circ. 100 : xiv. 1-17*a*, 18-27, 36-47.

R = the Editor—a Zealot, circ. 120 : iii. 1. (qui et Ezras), 32-36 ; vi. 11, 12, 26, 27, 29 ; x. 58, 59 ; xii. 9, 34, 37-39, 49-51 ; xiii. 13*b*-15, 16-24, 26*b*, 29-32, 54-58 ; xiv. 8, 17*b*, 48-50, as well as parts of iv. 52 ; vi. 20, etc.

The above analysis may be taken as a good working hypothesis. Among other grounds which Kabisch might have pressed to show that the book as it stands has been edited from various independent sources and edited most ignorantly, I will adduce only one. The title, Dominator Domine, which in the Apocalypse of Baruch is used only of God, and rightly so, in 4 Ezra is a designation of God in five instances—iii. 4 ; v. 23 ; vi. 38 (in Syr., Eth., and Arm. Versions) ; xii. 7 ; xiii. 51 ; but of an angel in six—iv. 38 ; v. 38 ; vi. 11 ;

vii. 17, 58, 75. The attribution of this divine title to an angel can only be due to gross confusions or interpolations in the text (see note on iii. 1 of our text). It is to be observed that this phenomenon is found only in the late source S and R.

(b) Conflicting characteristics of 4 Ezra and Baruch, the former to some extent non-Jewish.—On the following doctrines the teaching of our Apocalypse represents faithfully the ordinary Judaism of the first century, whereas that of 4 Ezra holds an isolated position or is closely related to Christianity.

1. The Law.—From an exhaustive comparison of the passages dealing with this subject in the two books (see xv. 5, note) it is clear that the possession of the law by Israel is less a subject of self-gratulation in 4 Ezra than in Baruch. In the latter, especially in B², it protects the righteous (xxxii. 1), justifies them (li. 3), is their hope (li. 7) and never-failing stay (xlvi. 22, 24). This is decidedly orthodox Judaism. In 4 Ezra, on the other hand, man trembles before the law; he needs mercy, not the award of the law, for all have sinned (viii. 35); it has served rather unto condemnation; for only a very few are saved through good works (vii. 77) or the divine compassion (vii. 139). It is hardly necessary to point out that this conception of the law approximates to the Pauline view.

2. Works.—In my note on xiv. 7 I have contrasted the teaching of the two books on this subject, and arrived at the conclusion that in 4 Ezra the doctrine of works as it is found in Baruch can hardly be said to exist. Here again Baruch represents traditional Jewish orthodoxy, but 4 Ezra not. We should observe also that the latter guards carefully against the doctrine of salvation by works by making salvation depend on works and faith combined (cf. ix. 7; xiii. 23; cf. St. James ii. 14-26).

3. Justification, i.e. by the law or by works.—This subject might have more logically been treated under the preceding head. For my own convenience I have given it separately. On p. 39 I have shown that justification by the law, though taught in Baruch, is absent from 4 Ezra. In this respect again the latter is non-Jewish.

4. Original Sin and Freewill.—On pp. 92-93, from a study of the passages in 4 Ezra bearing on these subjects, we have found that there was in man to begin with a wicked element ("granum seminis mali," iv. 30); and that through Adam's yielding to this evil impulse a hereditary tendency to sin was created, and the cor malignum developed (iii. 21-22). The evil element having thus gained the mastery over man, only a very few are saved through mercy (vii. 139; viii. 3); hence the writer of vii. 118 naturally charges Adam with being the cause of the final perdition of man.

In the face of such a hopeless view of man's condition, human freewill cannot be maintained: practically man has none, for only a handful out of the whole human race are saved (vii. 51-61; ix. 16); theoretically he is said to have it, but this is to justify his final condemnation (see p. 93).

This teaching is practically unique in Judaism between 1-300 A.D.—in fact it is not Jewish but Christian doctrine. In Baruch, on the other hand, conformably to early Rabbinic teaching, it is declared that Adam is not the cause of man's perdition, but that each man is the Adam of his own soul (liv. 19). There is not, moreover, a trace of Ezra's elaborate theory, and the doctrine of original sin is stoutly denied in liv. 15, 19—not a trace save only in xlviii. 42, where spiritual death is traced to Adam. Elsewhere—xvii. 3; xxiii. 4; liv. 15—it is only physical death that is ascribed to Adam's transgression. But in Ezra, as we might expect from what precedes, both spiritual and physical death are always traced to Adam—iii. 21, 22; iv. 30; vii. 118-121.

Thus on various grounds we see that whereas Baruch is a pure product of the Judaism of the time, 4 Ezra is the result of two influences at work, first and mainly a Jewish, and secondly a Christian. It was no doubt owing to this Christian element in the latter that it won and preserved a high position in the Christian Church. It constitutes, in fact, a confession of the failure of Judaism.

The above peculiarities of doctrine in 4 Ezra discover themselves almost universally in S. The author of S was undoubtedly a Jew, but a Jew who had been impressed and imbued to some extent by Christian teaching, probably by Pauline.

(c) 4 Ezra from a Hebrew Original.—Though this question could only be settled by an exhaustive study of the text presupposed by the Versions, I am convinced that a Hebrew groundwork underlies at all events the greater part of this book. I might call attention here to the frequent occurrence of the Hebraism—the finite verb combined with the cognate infinitive—as evidence in this direction. Thus in iii. 33 we have “pertransiens pertransivi”; iv. 13, “festinans festinavit”; iv. 26, “proficiscens profectus sum”; v. 30, “odiens odisti”; v. 45, “viventes vivent”; vi. 32, “auditu audita est”; vii. 5 “volens voluerit,” and so on in vii. 14, 21, 67, 70, 75; viii. 8, 15, 58; ix. 1; x. 32; xi. 45; xiv. 3, 29. All these appear in the Syriac Version, save five—iv. 26; vii. 5, 14; x. 32; xiv. 29. Still more are omitted in the Ethiopic Version. On the weight to be assigned to this feature of the text as evidence of a Hebrew background, see pp. xliv.-li. I may add that in the late work 5 Ezra xv. 9; xvi. 65, this idiom is found; but in the latter passage it is a quotation from our Apocalypse (see p. xx.), and in the former it is apparently a quotation also.

(d) Relations of the respective constituents of our Apocalypse and 4 Ezra.—My present purpose does not call for an exhaustive list of the passages common to the two books. This will be given elsewhere. It will be sufficient to indicate the direction such an inquiry should pursue, and to mention some of the chief grounds for determining the relations in which the various constituents of Baruch stand to those of 4 Ezra. These determinations must, however, pending further investigation, be regarded as provisional.

Of the multitude of thoughts, phrases, and commonplaces that are common to both books, a large number already occur in previously existing literature; and as these may possibly be drawn independently from such sources by both books, they are not helpful at the outset in determining the priority of either book or of their respective constituents. Again, of many other common passages, the sources, it is true, are no longer found; yet that such did exist in certain cases we have ample grounds for believing; see the note on xxix. 4 for the common original of 4 Ezra vi. 49-52 and of our Baruch xxix. 4. Thus we must be on our guard against tracing relations of dependence where both books have been borrowing independently from the same lost source.

We shall now point out the relations in which A¹, A², A³, B¹, B² stand to Ezra. I shall refer to the following constituents of the latter, S, E, E², M (according to Kabisch's analysis on p. lxviii.).

A¹.—A¹ and S are apparently related in only one passage: Bar. xxix. 4 and 4 Ezra vi. 49-52. But this relation is not of dependence on either side, but of common derivation from the same lost source; see xxix. 4, note. As regards A¹ and the E constituent of Ezra, xxix. 3b-6 of the former, "The Messiah will then begin to be revealed . . . and those who hungered will rejoice; moreover also they will behold marvels," and vii. 27b-28 of the latter, "Videbit mirabilia mea ; revelabitur enim filius meus . . . et jocundabit qui relictus sunt," are certainly connected. If we add to these connections in thought and diction the fact that only in A¹ and E in the Baruch and Ezra literature is the passive rôle assigned to the Messiah, we may reasonably conclude that there is a direct relation of dependence between them. A¹, I think, is earlier than E; both are prior to 70 A.D. Finally, A¹ and M may be connected in xxix. 3 and xiii. 16-20. The thought seems earlier and more vigorous in A¹. In M it is threshed out; but such considerations are indecisive. If there is a relation of dependence between them, A¹ is probably earlier than M, for in A¹ the Messiah has a passive rôle, in M an active one. The idea of a passive Messiah conceived as early as 160 B.C. was not likely to hold its ground in later times when the needs of the people called for an active leader and combatant in the Messiah.

A².—A² and M, i.e. xiii. of 4 Ezra, are related. Cf. xl. 2, "My Messiah will convict him of all his impieties . . . and set before him all the works of his hosts," with 4 Ezra xiii. 37, "Ipse autem filius meus arguet quae advenerunt gentes impietates eorum . . . et improperebit" ("improperebit" is a mistaken rendering; read "ordinabit" with Syr. and Eth.) "coram eis mala cogitamenta eorum." The connection is manifest.

The first halves of these sentences agree verbally, so likewise do the second; for "set before him" = παραστήσει κατὰ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ = יערך לעיניו; and “improperabit” (or “ordinabit,” Syr. and Eth.) “coram eis” = ἐπιστοιβάσει κατὰ πρόσωπον αὐτῶν = עֶרַךְ לְעִינֵיהֶם; for παριστάναι and ἐπιστοιβάζειν are both LXX. renderings of עֶרַךְ. The phrase is derived from Psalm xlix. 22 (cf. also Leviticus i. 1, 7, 8, 12; vi. 12).

A number of features into which I cannot enter here show that it is M that is dependent on A², and not vice versa.

The verse just dealt with reappears in xii. 32, in the Eagle Vision designated A by Kabisch, in a form which shows it dependent on M. A² is thus earlier than M and A in 4 Ezra.

A³.—Although there are many points of contact between A³ and 4 Ezra, there are none that necessitate the theory of dependence on either side save in liv. 15, 19. These verses which represent the teaching of orthodox Judaism circ. 50-70, were before the writer of the S element in 4 Ezra (cf. iii. 21-22; iv. 30; vii. 48), where a non-Jewish turn is given to the borrowed thoughts and phrases.

B¹.—Although there are many similar and identical thoughts and phrases in B¹ and 4 Ezra, these are not sufficiently characteristic or definite to furnish grounds for determining the dependence of either. This question must be settled on other grounds, i.e. chronological. From the use of like thought or diction, one might argue, on the one hand, that B¹ is dependent on the E element of 4 Ezra; compare iii. 7 with vii. 30; on the other, that B¹ is a source of E² of 4 Ezra; compare lxxvii. 3-6 with xiv. 30-33, and lxxvii. 14 with xiv.

20; that it is likewise a source of S; compare lxxxiv. 10 with x. 24. In these latter passages a different turn is given to the phrases found first in Baruch.

B².—Between B² and 4 Ezra there are almost innumerable points of contact, but the bulk of them are indecisive for our purposes. With the older elements of 4 Ezra its points of similarity are few and unimportant; but the relations between B² and S are very close. The fact of man's sinning consciously is frequently emphasised in B² and S (cf. Bar. xv. 6; xix. 3; xlviii. 40; and 4 Ezra viii. 56, 58-60; vii. 72). The doctrine that the world was made for man is confined to B² and S; see notes on xiv. 18; xv. 7. Their teaching on the law and on works and justification is allied—in some particulars identical but as a whole at variance, owing to Christian influences at work in S; see pp. lxix.-lxx. In B² we have an exposition of the views of orthodox Judaism 70-100 A.D.; in S we find much of the actual teaching in B² recast under Christian influences. S seems to us in every respect to be later than B².

§ 10. RELATION OF THIS APOCALYPSE WITH THE NEW TESTAMENT

The points of contact between this Apocalypse and the New Testament are many in number. The most of these, however, are insufficient to establish a relation of dependence on either side; for the thoughts and expressions in question could be explained from pre-existing literature, or were commonplaces of the time.

Of these a list will be given immediately, followed by another list of passages which seem to show that our text may in a few instances be derived from the New Testament.

§ 11. VALUE OF OUR APOCALYPSE IN THE ATTESTATION OF THE JEWISH THEOLOGY OF 50-100 A.D., AND IN THE INTERPRETATION OF CHRISTIAN THEOLOGY FOR THE SAME PERIOD.

This book presents us with a vivid picture of the hopes and beliefs of Judaism during the years 50-100 A.D. As it was written at different dates during this period and by different authors, its composition was thus contemporaneous with that of the New Testament. It is, therefore, of very great value to the New Testament student, as it furnishes him with the historical setting and background of many of the New Testament problems. We are thereby enabled to estimate the contributions made in these respects by Christian thought, as well as to appreciate the world's need of the Pauline dialectic. For the purpose of illustrating our meaning we shall first of all draw attention to the doctrine of the Resurrection in our Apocalypse. Of the Jewish doctrine here set forth, St. Paul's teaching on this subject will be seen to be in some respects a development. Secondly, we shall briefly advert to the doctrines of Original Sin and Freewill, Works and Justification, Forgiveness, in which the Jewish teaching and the Christian stand in strong antagonism.

(a) The Resurrection.—In xlix. 2-li. a view of the resurrection is expounded, which sets forth first the raising of the dead with their bodies in exactly the same form in which they had been committed to the earth with a view to their recognition by those who knew them, and next their subsequent transformation with a view to a spiritual existence of unending duration. In my notes on pp. 83, 84, I have shown that the Pauline teaching in 1 Cor. xv. 35-50 is in many respects not an innovation, but a developed and more spiritual exposition of ideas already current in Judaism.

(b) Original Sin and Freewill.—According to our Apocalypse,¹ the penalties which man has incurred through Adam's sin affect only his physical existence. He still preserves his freewill; whether he is saved or lost, it is his own doing. Adam's sin is limited in spiritual consequences to himself; every man is the Adam of his own soul (see pp. 44-45, 93).

St. Paul's doctrine is strongly antagonistic. Both physical and spiritual death are due to Adam's sin. Owing to that sin man is henceforth dominated by a power (= original sin) which makes his fulfilment of law and therefore his realisation of righteousness impossible. He is not, however, robbed wholly thereby of freewill, but retains it in a degree only sufficient to justify his condemnation.

Works and Justification.—In our Apocalypse the righteous are saved by their works (li. 7), and their righteousness is of the law (lxvii. 6). In the consciousness of their justification by the law (li. 3) they can with confidence approach God and look to Him for the fulfilment of their prayers because of their works wherein they trust (lxiii. 3, 5; lxxxv. 2), and owing to the same ground of confidence they depart from this world full of hope (xiv. 12). But their works are not limited to themselves in their saving influences. So long as the righteous live, their righteousness is a tower of strength to their people (ii. 2), and after their death it remains to their country a lasting ground of merit (xiv. 7; lxxxiv. 10); see notes on xiv. 7; xxi. 9.

With every position here maintained Christianity is at variance, and rabbinic teaching in full accord.

Forgiveness.—How far did this doctrine exist in Pharisaic Judaism, and in what relation does it stand to the Christian doctrine of forgiveness? In Phari-saic Judaism forgiveness was a wholly subordinate conception, and can only be considered in conjunction with its views on merit and demerit. If we wish to discover the Pharisaic doctrine of forgiveness we must have recourse to the Talmud; for that the Pharisaic views of the first century on this subject were those which later prevailed in the Talmud, is to be inferred on these grounds:—(1) In Matt. iii. 9 the words “Think not to say within yourselves, we have Abraham to our father,” show that the doctrine of the vicarious righteousness of Abraham was a popular belief. Now this latter doctrine at once presupposes and forms an organic part of the Talmudic doctrine. (2) The teaching on works in our Apocalypse and partially also in 4 Ezra, as well as that of St. Paul’s Jewish antagonists, belong also organically to the Talmudic doctrine of works and forgiveness.

The Talmudic doctrine of works may (see Weber, pp. 267-300) be shortly summarised as follows:—Every good work—whether the fulfilment of a command or an act of mercy—established a certain degree of merit with God, while every evil work entailed a corresponding demerit. A man’s position with God depended on the relation existing between his merits and demerits, and his salvation on the preponderance of the former over the latter. The relation between his merits and demerits was determined daily by the weighing of his deeds (see Eth. En. xli. 1; lxi. 8; Weber, 272). But as the results of such judgments were necessarily unknown, there could not fail to be much uneasiness, and to allay this the doctrine of the vicarious righteousness of the patriarchs and saints of Israel was developed, not later than the beginning of the Christian era (cf. Matt. iii. 9). A man could thereby summon to his aid the merits of the fathers, and so counterbalance his demerits.

It is obvious that such a system does not admit of forgiveness in any spiritual sense of the term. It can only mean in such a connection a remission of penalty to the offender, on the ground that compensation is furnished, either through his own merit or through that of the righteous fathers. Thus, as Weber vigorously puts it: "Vergebung ohne Bezahlung gibt es nicht."¹ Thus, according to popular Pharisaism, God never remitted a debt until He was paid in full, and so long as it was paid it mattered not by whom.

It will be observed that with the Pharisees forgiveness was an external thing; it was concerned not with the man himself but with his works—with these indeed as affecting him, but yet as existing independently without him. This was not the view taken by the best thought in the Old Testament. There forgiveness dealt first and chiefly with the direct relation between man's spirit and God; it was essentially a restoration of man to communion with God. When, therefore, Christianity had to deal with these problems, it could not accept the Pharisaic solutions, but had in some measure to return to the Old Testament to authenticate and develop the highest therein taught, and in the person and life of Christ to give it a world-wide power and comprehensiveness.

We thus see that forgiveness was conceived as (1) the restoration of man to communion with God; (2) the remission of penalty on the receipt of certain equivalents. Of these two the former alone is taught in the Gospels. In the Pauline Epistles, however, the writer maintains indeed the former as the essential element in forgiveness, but he also incorporates in some degree the latter conception, and not unnaturally as having been originally a Pharisee of the Pharisees. Thus in his doctrine of the Atonement, he introduces the Pharisaic conception by representing the penalty due to man's sin as endured by Christ. This is undoubtedly a more spiritual form of the Pharisaic doctrine, and rightly interpreted it preserves the element of truth which underlies the Pharisaic teaching. It needs, however, to be kept in complete subordination to the former. But that it has not been so kept is obvious from every page of the history of this doctrine since the Christian era. In every age this Pharisaic error has won an evil eminence in the Church—before the eleventh century in representing Christ's death as a debt paid to the devil in lieu of the latter's claim on man, and in the subsequent centuries as a sacrifice to the alleged unforgiveness of God. Wherever or whenever this evil leaven has appeared, it has been followed by shallowness, unreality, and every vice of the unspiritual life.

THE APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH

[TRANSLATED FROM THE GREEK INTO SYRIAC]

I. AND it came to pass in the twenty-fifth year of I-IV. 1=B¹.

THE FIRST SECTION

I.-V. 6. These chapters constitute the first of the seven sections into which, according to the scheme of the final editor, the book was originally divided by fasts. These sections were divided by fasts which generally lasted seven days (see v. 7, note; ix., note). In each section there is a definite movement or order of events observed. This order briefly is: first a fast, then a divine command or revelation, and finally the publication of the command or matter so revealed. In some cases a prayer follows the fast, and a lamentation the publication of the divine disclosure (see notes already referred to).

It will be observed that iv. 2-7 is interpolated probably from B².

In this section the word of the Lord comes to Baruch announcing the coming, though temporary, destruction of Jerusalem on account of the wickedness of the two tribes (i.); with a view to this destruction Baruch is to bid Jeremiah and the remaining righteous to withdraw (ii.); Baruch then in his alarm asks, will this destruction be final? will chaos return and the number of souls be completed (iii.)? God replies that the punishment is only temporary (iv. 1). Yet, rejoins Baruch, even so, the enemy will, by the pollution and fall of Zion, glory before their idols over the nation loved of God (v. 1). Not so, answers God; judgment must be executed on Judah, yet the heathen will have no cause to glory, for it is not they that will destroy Zion (v. 2, 3). Baruch thereupon assembled the people in the Cedron valley, and delivered the divine message; and the people wept (v. 5, 6).

I. [Translated from Greek into Syriac.] These words are found in their above position in the Syriac MS. As they were placed there either by the Syriac translator or a subsequent scribe, I have bracketed them. The statement they convey, however, is borne out by all other evidence. Thus we find (1) transliterations of Greek words; (2) renderings explicable only on the hypothesis that the translator followed the wrong meaning of the Greek word before him.

I. 1. In the twenty-fifth year of Jeconiah. Jeconiah was eighteen years when he began to reign in 599 (2 Kings xxiv. 8). After reigning three months he was carried into Jeconiah king of Judah, that the word of the Lord came to Baruch the son of Neriah, and said to him : 2. "Hast thou seen all that this people are doing to Me, that the evils which these two tribes which remained have done are greater than (those of) the ten tribes which were carried away captive? 3. For the former tribes were forced by their kings to commit sin, but these two of themselves have been forcing and compelling their kings to commit sin. 4. For this reason, behold I bring evil upon this city, and upon its inhabitants, and it will be removed from before Me for a time, and captivity. Yet during his captivity he is still called king (2 Kings xxv. 27; Jer. xxix. 2; Ezek. i. 2). Thus his twenty-fifth year would be 592, or two years before the approach of Nebuchadrezzar. It is no objection to this that, according to vi. 1, only one day and not two years should elapse between the prediction and its fulfilment; for in like manner the siege of Jerusalem, which lasted two years, is represented as lasting one day. The unities of time are sacrificed to suit the dramatic purposes of the writer. Why the writer spoke of Jeconiah and not of Zedekiah here, I cannot say. It was not from ignorance of the latter (cf. viii. 5).

The Lord. This title of God is found in iii. 1, 4; iv. 1; v. 2; x. 4, 18; xi. 3; xv. 1; xvii. 1; xxiv. 3; xxviii. 6; xlviii. 2; liv. 1, 20; lxxv. 1; lxxvii. 3. It is, therefore, not peculiar to any of the different elements of the book. This, however, may be due in part to the final editor. See note on iii. 1.

Baruch the son of Neriah. Cf. Jer. xxxii. 12; xxxvi. 4; Bar. i. 1.

2. The ten tribes. Elsewhere in this Apocalypse called "the nine and a half tribes." See lxxviii. 1, note.

3. Forced by their kings. I.e. by Jeroboam and others of the kings of Israel.

These two . . . compelling their kings to commit sin. It was in some instances the princes of Judah, and not Zedekiah, that resisted the teaching and prophecy of Jeremiah: cf. Jer. xxxviii.; and Josephus, Ant. x. 7. 2, ὁ δὲ Σεδεκίας ἐφ' ὅσον μὲν ἤκουε τοῦ προφήτου ταῦτα λέγοντος, ἐπείθετο αὐτῷ, καὶ συνήδει πᾶσιν ὡς ἀληθεύουσι . . . διέφθειραν δὲ πάλιν αὐτὸν οἱ φίλοι, καὶ διήγον ἀπὸ τῶν τοῦ προφήτου πρὸς ἅπερ ἤθελον.

4. I bring evil upon this city, and upon its inhabitants (2 Kings xxii. 16; 2 Chron. xxxiv. 28; Jer. vi. 19; xix. 3, etc.)

Will be removed from before Me (2 Kings xxiii. 27; xxiv. 3; Jer. xxxii. 31).

For a time. This phrase recurs in iv. 1; vi. 9; xxxii. 3. Since we must on other grounds regard xxxii. 2-4 in its present context as an interpolation, this phrase is peculiar to i.-viii., i.e. to B¹. Although Jerusalem has fallen under the Romans, the writer of these chapters believes that its desolation will be but "for a time." The future restoration of

I will scatter this people among the Gentiles that they may do good to the Gentiles. 5. And My people will be chastened, and the time will come when they will seek for the prosperity of their times.

II. "For I have said these things to thee that thou mayst say (them) to Jeremiah, and to all those who are like you, in order that ye may retire from this city. 2. Because your works are to this city as a firm pillar, and your prayers as a strong wall."

Jerusalem is implied also in lxxvii. 6; lxxviii. 7, where the return of the ten tribes is foretold. In B², i.e. ix.-xxvi.; xxxi.-xxxv.; xli.-xliii.; xlv. 9-15; xlvii.-lii.; lxxxiii.; B³, i.e. lxxxv., no such restoration is looked for; Jerusalem is removed, xx. 2 (see note in loc.), in order to usher in the judgment more speedily; in x. 10 the writer abandons all hope of a restored Jerusalem.

Scatter this people, etc. Jer. xxx. 11; Ezek. xxxvi. 19.

Do good to the Gentiles. This seems to mean to make proselytes of the Gentiles. Cf. xli. 4; xlii. 5; see also xlii. 12.

5. My people will be chastened. Cf. xlii. 10; xiv.; lxxix. 2; Pss. Sol. vii. 3; x. 1-3; xlii. 6-8; xviii. 4.

Seek for the prosperity of their times. The writer looks forward to a Messianic kingdom or period of blessedness for Israel on earth.

II. 1. According to Jer. xxxviii. 13, 28, Jeremiah was a prisoner in the court of the guard till the capture of Jerusalem.

Jeremiah is mentioned again in v. 5; ix.; x. 2, 4.

Those who are like you. This phrase is found in three of the sections of this book (cf. xxi. 24; lvii. 1; lix. 1; lxvi. 7). Cf. 4 Ezra iv. 36; viii. 51, 62; xiv. 9, 49.

Withdraw from the city. This reappears in the Rest of the Words of Baruch i. 1: "Jeremiah . . . go forth from this city." Cf. also i. 3, 7. The reason for this command appears in the Talmud. Thus, as in Tacnith, 19, we are told that a house cannot fall so long as a good man is in it; so in Pesikta, 115b (Buber's edition, 1868), it is said: "So long as Jeremiah was in Jerusalem, it was not destroyed, but when he went forth from it, it was destroyed."

2. Your works are to this city as a firm pillar, etc. We have here quite an illegitimate application of Jer. vi. 27: "I have made thee a tower and a fortress among my people." It is, however, a natural inference from Gen. xviii. 23-33. This verse is reproduced in the Rest of the Words of Baruch i. 2: αἱ γὰρ προσευχαὶ ὑμῶν ὡς στῦλος ἐδραῖος ἐν μέσῳ αὐτῆς, καὶ ὡς τεῖχος ἀδαμάντινον περικυκλοῦν αὐτήν. It will be remarked that the reference to "works" is omitted by this latter book, as we should naturally expect in a work of Christian authorship.

Your works. On the doctrine of works taught in this book see note on xiv. 7.

III. And I said: "O LORD, my Lord, have I come into the world for this purpose that I might see the evils of my mother? not (so) my Lord. 2. If I have found grace in Thy sight, first take my spirit that I may go to my fathers and not behold the destruction of my mother. 3. For two things vehemently constrain me: for I cannot resist Thee, and my soul,

III. 1. O LORD, my Lord. This title of God is found also in xiv. 8, 16; xvi. 1; xxiii. 1; xxxviii. 1; xlviii. 4, 5, and is thus, except in one instance, confined to B and B¹. It is remarkable that, whereas it is used only of God in the Apocalypse of Baruch, in 4 Ezra it is a designation of God in five instances (iii. 4; v. 23; vi. 38 (in Syriac, Eth., and Arm. versions); xii. 7; xiii. 51), and of an angel in six (iv. 38; v. 38; vi. 11; vii. 17, 58, 75). This fact makes it probable that the introduction of the angel in 4 Ezra is the work of the final editor. The usual titles used in addressing an angel in that book are dominus meus (iv. 3, 5; v. 33; vii. 3; x. 34). This is applied also to Ezra in ix. 41; domine (iv. 22, 41; v. 34, 35, 41, 56; vii. 10, 53, 132; viii. 6, 20, 36, 63). These last two titles are probably equivalents of אֲדֹנָי which is employed in Dan. x. 17, 19, in addressing an angel. The words מְלִיכָא דְּמִלְכֵּי are to be rendered O LORD, my Lord as above and not Dominator Domine, as we find in Ceriani and Fritzsche. Linguistically indeed either rendering is right, but the frequent occurrence of this phrase in the Syriac Version of 4 Ezra enables us to see that the suffix is not moribund but living; for it appears in the Ethiopic Version and occasionally in the Armenian. The Syriac is a translation either of δέσποτα κύριέ μου or κύριε κύριέ σου; these in turn would point either to אֲדֹנָי יְהוֹה, as in Gen. xv. 2, 8, or אֲדֹנָי יְהוֹה. Since such titles could only be used of God, we can with certainty conclude that their attribution to an angel in 4 Ezra is due to gross confusions or interpolations in the text.

My mother. Cf. iii. 2, 3; x. 16; Baruch iv. 9-16. This was a very natural term for a Jew to apply to Jerusalem. We find the correlative expression in Isa. xlix. 21; Matt. xxiii. 37; Gal. iv. 25. It is the earthly Jerusalem that is referred to here, for the writer of B¹ looks for a restored earthly Zion (see note on i. 4). Again the same title is applied to the fallen Jerusalem in 4 Ezra x. 7: "Sion mater nostra omnium," though there the writer looks for the restoration of Zion. In Gal. iv. 26 St. Paul uses it of the heavenly Jerusalem; for he has no further interest in the earthly. The earthly was the mother of Jews, but the heavenly of Christians. The earthly Jerusalem, as we should expect, in Matt. v. 35 is still "the city of the great King."

O Lord. See i. 1, note.

2. If I have found grace. xxviii.^a 6; 4 Ezra v. 56; vii. 102; viii. 42; xii. 7.

Take my spirit. An O. T. expression (cf. Ps. xxxi. 13; Jer. xv. 15).

moreover, cannot behold the evils of my mother. 4. But one thing I will say in Thy presence, O Lord. 5. What, therefore, will there be after these things? for if Thou destroyest Thy city, and deliverest up Thy land to those that hate us, how shall the name of Israel be again remembered? 6. Or how shall one speak of Thy praises? or to whom shall that which is in Thy law be explained? 7. Or shall the world return to its nature (of aforetime), and the age revert to primeval silence? 8. And shall the multitude of souls be taken away, and the nature of man not again be named? 9. And where is all that which Thou didst say to Moses regarding us?"

IV. And the Lord said unto me: "This city will be delivered up for a time, and the people will be 4-IV. 1. Baruch asks God if the end of all things will follow on the delivery of Jerusalem into the hands of its enemies; will Israel be blotted out? will there be no longer any students of the law? will all men die and chaos return? In iv. 1 God answers that Jerusalem will again be restored; the chastisement of its people soon be accomplished and chaos will not return. The writer thus looks forward to the returning felicity of Jerusalem.

Ezra vii. 30. In. iv. 1 this is answered in the negative, but in xlv. 9 (i.e. B²) in the affirmative.

IV. 2-7. In these verses we have an undoubted interpolation. The earthly Jerusalem, the restoration of which has just been promised, is here derided. This of itself is suspicious. When, however, we turn to vi. 9 and see there that the very Jerusalem that is now delivered up to its foes will hereafter be restored, and that for ever, the incongruity of these verses with their present context emerges still more clearly. This incongruity is still further emphasised when we observe that the actual vessels of the earthly temple are committed to the earth by an angel, that they may be preserved for future use in the restored Jerusalem (vi. 7-9). The vessels of the heavenly Jerusalem would naturally be of a heavenly kind, and are in fact already there (iv. 5).

III. 6. To whom shall that which is in Thy law be explained? The real answer to this question is given in Baruch's own words in xlv. 4.

7. We should observe that the Syriac word ܐܡܢܐ, here translated "world," really means "ornament." Thus the translator followed a wrong sense of κόσμος here.

Revert to primeval silence. Cf. 4

chastened during a time, and the world will not be given over to oblivion. 2. [Dost thou think that this is that city of which I said: 'On the palms of My hands have I graven thee'? 3. It is not this building which is now built in your midst; (it is) that which will be revealed with Me, that which was pre-

2. It is noteworthy that the words "On the palms of My hands," etc., which are taken from Isa. xlix. 16, agree letter for letter with the Syriac Version, which here stands alone against the Mass., LXX., and Vulg., in presupposing על כפות ידי instead of Mass. על כפים. This fuller phrase which the Syriac presupposes is the usual one (cf. 1 Sam. v. 4; 2 Kings ix. 35; Dan. x. 10).

3. It is not this building . . . (it is) that which will be revealed. These words represent one of the final stages of a movement which had already its beginnings in the O. T. Throughout the O. T. Jerusalem had always been singled out as the one place on earth in which it had pleased God to dwell, and with which He had inseparably connected His name. But from the growing transcendence and enlargement of the idea of God, combined with the deepened consciousness of sin, and the consequent sense of the unfitness of Jerusalem as God's habitation, the doctrine of a heavenly Jerusalem complete in all its parts came to be evolved.

Of the existence indeed of heavenly antitypes of the Tabernacle and its furniture we are told already in the Priest's Code (Exod. xxv. 9, 40, cf. Heb. viii. 5). It needed only a step further to postulate the existence of the heavenly temple and city. That the earthly copies needed to be purified or even wholly renewed, we are taught in Isa. lx.; Ezek. xl.-xlviii.; but that nothing else could suffice save the actual descent of the heavenly Jerusalem to the earth was not concluded till the revival of religion under the early Maccabees. In Isa. liv. 11 and Tob. xiii. 16, 17, there are highly figurative accounts of the rebuilding of Jerusalem, but it is the earthly. The first actual emergence of the idea of the heavenly seems to be in the Eth. En. xc. 28, 29, where the old Jerusalem is removed and the new is brought and set up by God Himself, though even there a prior existence is not assigned to the latter. This would be about 164 B.C. But the older ideas still held their ground. Thus in the Psalms of Solomon xvii. 25, 33 (circ. 70-40 B.C.), as in the oldest part of the Eth. En. x. 16-19; xxv. 1 (circ. 180 B.C.), the purification of Jerusalem is all that appears needful to the writers as a preparation for the Messianic kingdom. Even when we come down to the first century of the Christian era, such purification is deemed sufficient for the temporary Messianic kingdoms depicted in Apoc. Bar. xxix.; xxxix.-xl.; lxxii.-lxxiv.; Ezra vii. 27-30 (for vii. 26 is an interpolation, as Kabisch points out); xii. 32-34; and possibly in xiii. 32-50, where xiii. 36 seems also an intrusion. In all these passages a Messiah is expected. In B¹ of the Apoc. Bar. i.e. vi. 9, Jerusalem is to be restored pared beforehand here from the time when I took counsel to make Paradise, and showed it to Adam before he sinned, but when he transgressed the commandment, it was removed from him, as also Paradise. 4. And after these things I showed it to My and to be established for ever, but this is not the new Jerusalem coming down from heaven. The latter is mentioned in xxxii. 2-4. It was indeed a very current conception in the latter half of the first century A.D. Thus we find it in Gal. iv. 26; Heb. xii. 22; Rev. iii. 12; xxi. 2, 10. In Gal. iv. 26 the heavenly Jerusalem is a symbol of the spiritual commonwealth of which the Christian is even now a member. But in Rev. iii. 12; xxi. 2, 10, it is an actual city, the counterpart of the earthly Jerusalem, with its own buildings and vessels. Here we should probably class the passage in Test. Dan. v. This city was to descend from heaven, but this expectation does not apparently lie at the base of Heb. xii. 22. Similar conceptions to that found in Rev. iii. 12; xxi. 2, 10, appear in 4 Ezra viii. 52, 53; x. 44-59; and also in vii. 26 and xiii. 36, though we must regard one or both of the last two as interpolated. With these last we might reckon also the heavenly Jerusalem mentioned in the text. The heavenly Jerusalem is variously described as the νέα (Test. Dan. v.), ἡ ἄνω (Gal. iv. 26), καινὴ (Rev. iii. 12; xxi. 2), ἐπουράνιος (Heb. xii. 22). It was created in the beginning of creation, and preserved in heaven. It was shown to Adam before he sinned. To Adam indeed the heavens had been open originally (Slav. En. xxxi. 2; Philo, Quaest. xxxii. in Gen.; Book of Adam and Eve, i. 8); but when he transgressed the commandment the vision of the heavenly Jerusalem was taken from him and likewise the possession of Paradise. Among the Rabbins the heavenly Jerusalem was called ירושלים של מעלה (= ἡ ἄνω Ἱερουσαλήμ). For the various Rabbinic conceptions regarding it, see Schöttgen, de Hieros. Coelest. in his Horae Hebr. 1205 sqq.; Meuschen, N.T. ex Talm. ill. p. 199 sqq.; Bertholdt, Christologia, 217-220; Eisenmenger, Entdecktes Judenthum, ii. 839-845; Weber, Lehren d. Talmud, 356-359, 386.

Took counsel to make Paradise. Which Paradise is this? The context might support either. For we might regard it as the Paradise which is kept in heaven like the heavenly Jerusalem. Adam could see both before his fall, but after it he lost the vision of both. It may, however, be the earthly Paradise in which he was placed at the first. The period to which the creation of the earthly Paradise is assigned varies. In Gen. ii. 8-17 it is apparently one of the last works of the creation. When, however, we come down to the Christian era, its creation was attributed to the third day (Jub. ii. 7; Slav. En. xxx. 1). The heavenly Paradise, on the other hand, is described as already existing before the creation of the world either actually or in the mind of God (see Pesach. 54a; Beresh. 20 in Weber L. d. T. 191).

4. I showed it to My servant Abraham. There is naturally no mention of this in Gen. xv. 9-21; but in the Beresh. rabba on Gen. xxviii. 17 we are told that this servant Abraham by night among the portions of the victims. 5. And again also I showed it to Moses on Mount Sinai when I showed to him the likeness of the tabernacle and all its vessels. 6. And now, behold, it is preserved with Me, as also Paradise. 7. Go, therefore, and do as I command thee.”]

V. And I answered and said: “I shall, therefore, be in great straits in Zion, because Thine enemies will come to that place and pollute Thy sanctuary, and lead Thine inheritance into captivity, and will lord it over those whom Thou hast loved, and they will depart again to the place of their idols, and will boast before them. And what wilt Thou do for Thy great name?” 2. And the Lord said unto me: “My name and My glory have an eternal duration; My judgment, moreover, will preserve its rights in its own time. 3. And thou wilt see with thine eyes that the enemy will not overthrow Zion, nor burn Jerusalem, but be subservient to the judge for a time. 4. But do thou go and do whatsoever I have said unto thee.” 5. And I went and took Jeremiah, and Adu, and Seriah, and Jabish,

7. As I command thee. A frequently recurring phrase (cf. v. 4; x. 4; xxi. 1; 4 Ezra v. 20; xii. 51).

2. My name and My glory, etc. Ps. cxxxv. 13.

My judgment, moreover, will preserve its rights. This phrase in a slightly different form recurs in xlviii. 27, and lxxxv. 9.

3. This is carried out in vi. 5; vii.

4. This refers to the command given in ii. 1.

5. Adu. There is a priest of this name who went up with Zerubbabel (Neh. xii. 4). According to Mass. he is called Iddo, but both the and Gedaliah, and all the honourable men of the people, and I led them to the valley of Cedron, and I narrated to them all that had been said to me. 6. And they lifted up their voice, and they all wept. 7. And we sat there and fasted until the evening.

VI. And it came to pass on the morrow that, lo !

Syriac and Vulgate give Addo. In Ezra viii. 17 another Iddo is mentioned who returned with Ezra from Babylon.

Seriah. This Seriah was brother of Baruch and chief chamberlain of Zedekiah. He went with the latter to Babylon (see Jer. li. 59, 61).

Jabish. This name has been identified with 'Ιγαβής = יָבֵשׁ (1 Chron. iv. 9), but both the form of the name and the time of Jabez are against this identification.

Gedaliah. This is Gedaliah the son of Ahikam (see Jer. xl. 14). But Gedaliah might also be from Γεδολίας = גְּדִיָּא (cf. 1 Chron. viii. 26) a companion of Ezra (see Ezra viii. 7). Gedaliah is again mentioned in xliv. 1 in a fragment of B¹.

Cedron, i.e. קֶרְדֵּן (2 Sam. xv. 23). The valley of the Cedron is again the scene of Baruch's fast in xxi. 1, and of an assembly of the people in xxxi. 2.

Narrated to them, etc. After most of the revelations which Baruch receives, he makes known their disclosures to his friends and the elders of the people (see x. 4 ; xxxi. 3-xxxii. 7 ; xliv.-xlvi. ; lxxvii. 1-17). There is no need of such a disclosure in the second section, i.e. v. 7-viii., and such disclosure is forbidden in the fourth, i.e. xii. 5-xx.

THE SECOND SECTION

V. 7-VIII. This is a short section. First there is the fast of one day (v. 1). Thereupon to Baruch in his grief (vi. 2) is disclosed a vision. In this he sees the sacred vessels committed to the earth for a season and the city destroyed by angels, lest the enemy should triumph (vi. 3-vii.) The realisation of this vision which follows thereupon dispenses with the need of its publication by Baruch (viii.)

7. Fasted until the evening. The other fasts mentioned are of seven days. Of these there are four (see ix. 2 ; xii. 5 ; xxi. 1 ; xlvii. 2). The symmetry of the book would require another such fast after xxxv. For the scheme of the final editor is first a fast, then generally a prayer, then a divine message or revelation, then an announcement of this either to an individual, as in v. 5 ; x. 4, or to the people (xxxi. 2-xxxiv. ; xliv.-xlvi. ; lxxvii. 1-17), followed occasionally by a lamentation. In xx. 5, at the close of the fourth section, Baruch is bidden to make no announcement.

It will be observed that this scheme is broken through in the fifth section only, i.e. in xxi.-xlvi., where there is a fast, a prayer, an address to the people followed by a lament over Zion, a revelation and an address to the people (see ix. 2, note). In 4 Ezra there are four fasts of seven days (see v. 20 ; vi. 35 ; ix. 26, 27 ; xii. 51).

VI. 1. On the following morning, etc. These words are reproduced in Rest of Words (iv. 1).

the army of the Chaldees surrounded the city, and at the time of the evening I, Baruch, left the people, and I went forth and stood by the oak. 2. And I was grieving over Zion, and lamenting over the captivity which had come upon the people. 3. And, lo! suddenly a strong spirit raised me, and bore me aloft over the wall of Jerusalem. 4. And I beheld, and lo! four angels standing at the four angles of the city, each of them holding a lamp of fire in his hands. 5. And another angel began to descend from heaven, and said unto them: "Hold your lamps, and do not light them till I tell you. 6. For I am first sent to speak a word to the earth, and to place in it what the Lord the Most High has commanded me." 7. And I saw him descend into the Holy of Holies, and take from thence the veil,

By the oak. This oak is outside the city; for in ii. 1 Jeremiah and all that were like him were bidden to leave the city. This they and Baruch did in v. 5, and they fasted in the valley of the Cedron. On the following day the Chaldees surround the city. On that day Baruch left Jeremiah and the rest and went forth (probably from the cavern in the Cedron valley mentioned in xxi. 1) and stood by the oak. The oak thus appears to be near or in the Cedron valley, and thus in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem. This oak is mentioned again in lxxvii. 18. We are not, therefore, to compare this oak with the well-known one at Hebron, as Fritzsche, who compares LXX. ; Gen. xiii. 18 ; xiv. 13 ; xviii. 1.

It is noteworthy that no mention of this oak appears in B². In B¹ it is found twice (vi. 1 and lxxvii.

18). A tree is referred to in A³ in lv. 1.

3. As the Chaldeans encompassed Jerusalem, Baruch was unable to draw near to the wall. But a strong angel lifts him on high above the wall.

4. Cf. Rev. vii. 1, "I saw four angels standing on the four corners of the earth"; Rest of Words of Bar. iii. 2.

5. Cf. Rev. vii. 2 ; Rest of Words, iii. 4.

6. The office of the angel here is executed by Jeremiah in Rest of Words, iii. 8.

The Lord the Most High. Occurs here only in this book. It is not found in 4 Ezra.

and the holy ephod, and the mercy-seat, and the two tables, and the holy raiment of the priests, and the altar of incense, and the forty-eight precious stones, where-with the priest was adorned, and all the holy vessels of the tabernacle. 8. And he spake to the earth with a loud voice: "Earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the mighty God, and receive what I commit to thee, and guard them until the last times, so that, when thou art ordered, thou mayst restore them, so that strangers may not get possession of them. 9. For the time comes when Jerusalem also will be delivered up for a time, until it is said, that it is again restored for ever. 10. And the earth opened its mouth and swallowed them up."

VII. And after these things I heard that angel say-

Forty-eight precious stones. How this number is made up I cannot discover. There were twelve stones on the breastplate (Exod. xxviii. 15-21), and two on the ephod (Exod. xxviii. 9).

The altar of incense. The Syriac implies θυμιαστήριον, which in Josephus and Philo = כִּיבֹה הַקְטָרָה. See Appendix.

According to Bammidbar rabba, 15, five things were taken away and preserved on the destruction of Solomon's temple: the candlestick, the ark, the fire, the Holy Spirit, and the cherubim.

8. In the Rest of Words, iii. 8, these words in a greatly altered shape are attributed to Jeremiah.

Earth . . . of the mighty God; drawn from Jer. xxii. 29. Text agrees with Mass., Syr., Vulg., against LXX., which gives "earth" only twice.

Mighty God. This title recurs in vii. 1, and xiii. 2, 4. It is not found in 4 Ezra.

Guard them until the last times. Cf. Rest of Words, iii. 8, "Preserve the vessels of worship until the coming of the Beloved."

That . . . thou mayst restore them, i.e. for use in the temple of the rebuilt Jerusalem.

That strangers may not get possession of them (cf. x. 19). For a slightly different reason see lxxx. 2.

9. For a time. See i. 4, note.

Restored for ever. It is not necessary to take the phrase "for ever" literally. In any case a Messianic kingdom of indefinite duration is looked forward to with Jerusalem as its centre, and likewise the temple in which the sacred vessels of the former temple will again be used. During this kingdom the dispersion will again return to Palestine (lxxvii. 6; lxxviii. 7, notes).

IX. And I, Baruch, came, and Jeremiah, whose heart was found pure from sins, who had not been captured in the seizure of the city. 2. And we rent our garments, and wept, and mourned, and fasted seven days.

IX. 1. Heart . . . pure from sin. Contrast the "wicked heart" in 4 Ezra iii. 20, 21, 26; iv. 4, etc. In Pss. Sol. xvii. 41, the Messiah is said to be καθαρὸς ἀπὸ ἀμαρτίας.

THE THIRD SECTION

IX. 2-XII. 4. We have first the fast of seven days amid the ruins of Zion (ix., cf. x. 3). Then the word of the Lord comes to Baruch and bids him to tell Jeremiah to go to Babylon (x. 2), and promises a revelation of what should be in the end (x. 3). Then follows Baruch's announcement of the divine message to Jeremiah (x. 4). The section closes with Baruch's lament before the gates of the temple over Zion (x. 5-xii. 4).

We have shown below that x. 6-xii. 4 comes probably from the hand of a Sadducean priest.

IX. 2. Fasted seven days. See v. 7, note. This is the first fast of seven days. It is observed amid the ruins of Zion (cf. x. 3). There are three others to follow, though, as we have shown in the note just referred to, there should be four. The insertion of the fasts in their present positions is the work of the final editor. There seem to have been fasts in his sources (B¹ and B²).

Fasting was the usual preparation for the reception of supernatural communications (cf. Dan. ix. 3, 20-21, and all the instances in this book and 4 Ezra cited in note on v. 7). In Test. Jos. iii. there is likewise a fast of seven days (Armenian Version), and in 2 Macc. xiii. 12, and Ass. Mosis ix. 6, of three days.

The scene of the first and fourth fasts is Cedron; of the second and sixth, Mount Zion; of the third, the gates of the temple; the account of the fourth is lost.

X. 1. God. This word is found only twice again, i.e. liv. 12; lxxxii. 9. Its use is more frequent in 4 Ezra (see vii. 19, 20, 21, 79; viii. 58; ix. 45; x. 16).

2. The divine communication that follows on the fast consists of a command to be given through Baruch to Jeremiah. Jeremiah is bidden to go to Babylon. We have here a violation of historical truth. According to Jer. xliii. 4-7, both Jeremiah and Baruch were carried down into Egypt. In the Apocryphal Baruch i. 1, Baruch is represented as being in Babylon five years after the capture of Jerusalem. In the Rest of Words, iv. 5, Jeremiah was dragged an unwilling captive to Babylon, whereas in our text he goes there at the bidding of God. The words "go and confirm the captivity" recur in xxxiii. 2.

people unto Babylon. 3. But do thou remain here amid the desolation of Zion, and I will show to thee after these days what will befall at the end of days."

4. And I said to Jeremiah as the Lord commanded me.

5. And he, indeed, departed with the people, but I, Baruch, returned and sat before the gates of the temple, and I lamented with that lamentation over Zion and

X. 6.-XII. 4 = said: 6. "Blessed is he who was not born, or being B² or S.

It is probable that the references to Jeremiah in connection with Babylon belong to B²; for it is noteworthy that in lxxvii. 17, 19; lxxx. 4; lxxxv. 6, Baruch always speaks of writing to the brethren in Babylon, but never to Jeremiah. This would be strange if the writer believed Jeremiah to be there. The people also urge Baruch in lxxvii. 12 to write to their brethren in Babylon to confirm them. Now if Jeremiah were in charge of the people there, as x. 2, 5; xxxiii. 2, clearly imply, any letter of Baruch to Babylon would have been addressed to him. As a matter of fact, in the Rest of Words of Baruch, when Baruch writes to Babylon, he directs the letter to Jeremiah.

It is probable, therefore, that the account of B¹ does not conflict with Jer. xliii., where Johanan takes Jeremiah with him down into Egypt.

3. Baruch is commanded to remain among the ruins of Zion, and is promised a revelation of what will befall in the last days. The words "after these days" show that this revelation will be accorded on a future occasion, after a fast, no doubt.

At the end of days. Cf. xxv. 1.

5. Before the gates of the temple. This is the scene of the following lamentation of Baruch, and probably of the fast in xii. 5. It is again the scene of his lamentation in xxxv. 1.

A passage in the beginning of the Apoc. Bar. Tert. seems to be derived from our text: οὕτως ἐκάθητο ἐπὶ τὰς ὡραίαις πύλας ὅπου ἔκειτο τὰ τῶν ἀγίων ἄγια. Mount Zion, on the other hand, is the scene where revelations are accorded to him (cf. xiii. 1; xxi. 2; xlvii. 2).

X. 6-XII. 4. This fragment appears to be the work of a Sadducee—probably a Sadducean priest writing just after the fall of the temple. For (1) in x. 6 and xi. 7 we have a thoroughly Sadducean sentiment, i.e. it were best not to be born at all, or, being born, to die; for the dead enjoy a sorrowless rest and a tranquil sleep (xi. 4); they know not the anguish of the living (xi. 5). No resurrection of the individual or of the nation is looked for, but only that retribution in due course may come upon the enemies of Israel (xii. 4). (2) The conception of Sheol in xi. 6 is Sadducean. (3) In x. 6-xii. 4 we have the saddest dirge in the Jewish literature of the time. This might well be; for for the priesthood there was no future. As false stewards they relinquish their charge and restore the keys of the temple to God (x. 18). Never again should sacrifices be offered in Zion (x. 10).

X. 6. Blessed is he who was not born, etc. Similar expressions of pessimism and despair return time and again in the later literature of Judaism. But in this passage and in xi. 7 the born has died. 7. But as for us who live, woe unto us, because we see the afflictions of Zion, and what has befallen Jerusalem. 8. I will call the Sirens phrase is used with a significance that severs it from all other instances of its occurrence. For whereas repeatedly elsewhere, as we shall see presently, it is said that it were better man had never been born because of sin and future condemnation, here non-existence or death is said to be preferable to witnessing the present woes of Jerusalem. Lest we should suppose this to be an accidental exaggeration, we should observe that it recurs in an intensified form in xi. 7, where the state of the dead in Sheol is said to be better than that of the living. Such a sentiment was impossible for the Pharisaic author of B², or indeed for any of the authors of this Apocalypse. It is a genuinely Sadducean sentiment, and the conception of Sheol in xi. 6, 7 is likewise Sadducean—practically that of the O. T. or of Hades in the Greek world. To a Pharisee no condition of earthly life could in any way approach the horrors of the existence of the wicked in the after-world.

In 4 Ezra and elsewhere, as we have remarked, quite a different turn is given to the expression in our text. There it is said that it were better man had not been at all than be born and have to face future torment and judgment. Thus in vii. 66 the writer declares: "It is much better for them (i.e. the beasts of the field) than for us; for they expect not a judgment and know not of torments." Again in vii. 116, 117, it is urged that "it would have been best not to have given a body to Adam, or, that being done, to have restrained him from sin; for what profit is there that man should in the present life live in heaviness and after death look for punishment?" Finally, in iv. 12 the nexus of life, sin and suffering, just referred to is put still more strongly: "It were better we had not been born at all than that we should be born and live in sin and suffer." A perfect parallel to the last passage is found in the Slav. En. xli. 2: "Blessed is the man who was not born, or, having been born, has never sinned . . . so that he should not come into this place (i.e. hell);" and to 4 Ezra vii. 116, 117, in the Eth. En. xxxviii. 2, where it is said, in reference to the future destiny of the wicked: "It had been good for them if they had not been born." For a N. T. parallel see Matt. xxvi. 24. It is worth observing that there is a perfect parallelism of thought between the passage in our text and in Sophocles, Oed. Col., 1220—κᾷ λόγον · τὸ δ' ἔπει φανῇ,

8. Sirens. These are said in the Eth. En. xix. 2 (Greek Version) to have been the wives of the angels who went astray. It is strange that we have here the Greek conception of the Sirens, Σειρῆνες, i.e. that of sea-nymphs. But with the Greek translators of the O. T. it had quite a different meaning. Thus it is a

Ye husbandmen, sow not again; and thou, earth, wherefore givest thou the fruits of thy produce? keep within thee the sweets of thy sustenance. 10. And thou, vine, why further dost thou give thy wine? for an offering will Lelito. These are the Lilin (לילין) from the singular Lilith (לילית). Male and female demons named Lil and Lilit belong to Assyrian and Babylonian demonology. They were thought, as were also the Lilin (Shabbath, 151b), to attack men and women in their sleep (Lenormant, La Magie, p. 36). The Lilith, or night demon, is mentioned in Isa. xxxiv. 14, along with the satyr שָׁטִיר.

The Lilin, according to the Talmud, were female demons corresponding to the Shedim or male demons. They were partly the offspring (Eruv, 18b; Beresh. 42) of Adam and Lilith, Adam's first wife, a demon, and partly were derived from the generation that God dispersed (Gen. xi.), for God (Jalkut Shim., Beresh. 62) transformed that generation into Shedim, Ruchin, and Lilin. These Lilin inhabited desert places. They were said to kill children. They have been compared with the Lamiae and Striges; δνοκένταυροι is the LXX. rendering of the word in Isa. xxxiv. 14. For further details on the subject see Weber, Lehren d. Talm., pp. 245, 246, 248; Bochart, Hieroicoicon; iii. 829-831; Eisenmenger, Entd. Judenthum, ii. 413-426, 452.

Shedim. These were male demons to which various origins were assigned. Their souls were created by God, but as the Sabbath intervened before they received bodies they had to remain without them (Beresh. rabba, c. 7); or they were sprung from Adam and a demon wife, or from Eve and a demon husband (Beresh. rabba, c. 24); or were originally the generation that God transformed into Shedim, Ruchin, and Lilin. Their place of resort is the wilderness. For an account of their activities, see Weber, 245, 246.

Dragons. The word דִּרְגָּן is found in the Peshitto of Isa. xiii. 22 as a translation of תנין. Levy (Neuhebräisches Wörterbuch, ii. 265) defines it as "Drache oder sonst ein Thier mit klagendem, heulendem Tone." The word frequently occurs in the Targums and later Hebrew as דִּרְגָּן (ירר).

10. The writer of x. 6-xii. 4 resigns absolutely all hope of the restoration of Jerusalem. This is throughout the attitude of B² (see i. 4, note).

With the thought of this verse, cf. Kethuboth 112a: "O land, land, let thy fruit shrivel: for whom art thou producing thy fruit? is it not not again be made therefrom in Zion, nor will first-fruits again be offered. 11. And do ye, O heavens, withhold your dew, and open not the treasuries of rain. 12. And do thou, O sun, withhold the light of thy rays; and do thou, O moon, extinguish the multitude of thy light; for why should light rise again where the light of Zion is darkened? 13. And you, ye bridegrooms, enter not in, and let not the brides adorn themselves with garlands; and, ye women, pray not that ye may bear. 14. For the barren shall rejoice more, and those who have no sons shall be glad, and those who have sons shall have anguish. 15. For why should they bear in pain and bury in grief? 16. Or wherefore, again, should mankind have sons; or wherefore should the seed of their nature again be named, where that mother is desolate, and her sons are led into captivity? 17. From this time forward speak not of beauty and discourse not of gracefulness. 18. Moreover, ye priests, take ye the keys of the sanctuary and cast them into the height of heaven, and give them to the

for the Gentiles who rose up against us because of our sins?

13. Cf. Jer. vii. 34; xvi. 9; xxv. 10; Baruch ii. 23.

Brides. Syriac gives "virgins," but this idea is out of place in verses 13-16, where everything refers to marriage. The first right mention of virgins is in verse 19. The wrong text may be explained by a corruption of כלות into בחולות or עלמות. In the original Hebrew we should then have a paronomasia, כלילים אל תערינה כלות. In Git. 7a, and in Shabbath, 59b, bridegrooms are forbidden to use garlands.

14. Cf. Matt. xxiv. 19; Luke xxiii. 29: "Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that never bare, and the breasts that never gave suck" (cf. Isa. liv. 1).

16. That mother. See iii. 1, note

18. The priesthood have proved faithless to their duty, and the charge of the temple is no longer theirs. Cf. Rest of Words, iv. 3, 4, where another turn is given to the text: "And thereupon Jeremiah took the keys of the temple . . . and cast these keys before the sun, saying: 'I say unto thee, O sun, take the keys of the house of God and keep Lord, and say: 'Guard Thy house Thyself, for lo! we are found false stewards.' 19. And you, ye virgins, who spin fine linen and silk with gold of Ophir, hasten and take all things and cast (them) into the fire, that it may bear them to Him who made them, and the flame send them to Him who created them, lest the enemy get possession of them."

XI. Moreover, I, Baruch, say this against thee, Babylon: "If thou hadst prospered, and Zion had dwelt in her glory, it would have been a great grief to us that thou shouldst be equal to Zion. 2. But now, lo! the grief is infinite, and the lamentation measureless, for lo! thou art prospered and Zion desolate. 3. Who will be judge regarding these things? or to whom shall we complain regarding that which has befallen us? O Lord, how hast Thou borne (it)? 4. Our fathers went to rest without grief, and lo! the righteous sleep in the earth in tranquillity. 5. For them till the days when the Lord shall ask thee concerning them. For we are not worthy to keep them; for we have been found false stewards.'"

This verse reappears in the Jalkut Shim. on Isa. xxi. as follows: "The flower of the priests . . . gathered together . . . the keys of the court and the sanctuary and said before God: 'Lord of the universe, we are not fit to be stewards before Thee (לא זכינו להיות גוברים לפניך). Behold Thy keys are returned to Thee.' And they cast them aloft" (quoted by Rosenthal).

3. How hast Thou borne (it)? Cf. 4 Ezra iii. 30: "I have seen how Thou dost bear with them that sin." In Pss. Sol. ii. 1 and 4 Ezra iii. 8 the writers complain that God did not prevent such wrong-doing. With the latter cf. Isa. xiv. 6.

4. Our fathers went to rest. Cf. lxxxv. 9.

Sleep in the earth. Cf. xxi. 24; while the diction corresponds to Dan. xii. 2, "sleep in the dust of the earth," the thought is Sadducean and belongs to the earlier sphere of O.T. thought, presupposed in such a phrase as "slept with his fathers" (1 Kings ii. 10; xi. 21, they knew not this anguish, nor yet had they heard of that which had befallen us. 6. Would that thou hadst ears, O earth, and that thou hadst a heart, O dust, that ye might go and announce in Sheol, and say to the dead: 7. 'Blessed are ye more than we who are living.'"

XII. But I will say this as I think, and I will speak against thee, O land, which art prospering. 2. The noonday does not always burn, nor do the constant rays of the sun (always) give light. 3. Do not conclude or expect that thou wilt always be prosperous and rejoicing, and be not greatly uplifted and boastful. 4. For assuredly in its own season wrath will awake against thee, which now in long-suffering is held in as it etc.) There is no ground for supposing with Kabisch (Das vierte Buch Ezra, 68, 69) that this phrase in the mouth of a Pharisee of this period implied a capacity of life as still existing in the body even when interred. That "to sleep in the earth" and "to be in Sheol" are equivalent expressions for a Pharisee, is clear from Eth. En. li. 1 and 4 Ezra vii. 32. The former phrase, "to sleep in the earth," is merely a figure of speech, and must not be pressed. Yet see l. 2, note. These phrases are equivalents in verses 6, 7. Sadducean thought admitted of no resurrection; hence "life in Sheol" or "sleep in the earth" were interchangeable expressions for the same fact.

5. To a Pharisee this would be a trifling pain compared with the torments of the damned. But the Sadducee looked for no retribution in the world to come, but, like most of the writers in the O.T. and in Ecclesiasticus, only for a shadowy existence in Sheol.

6. That ye might go, etc. The Syriac = "and go ye." Here we have a Hebrew idiom, i.e. an imperative is used instead of a jussive in order to express the intention signified by the preceding verb (see Driver, Hebrew Moods and Tenses, p. 82).

Sheol. We have here the O.T. conception of Sheol—the eternal abode of the shades. This view of Sheol was maintained in N.T. times by the Sadducees. In xxiii. 5; xlviii. 16; lii. 2; lvi. 6, Sheol seems to be the abode of all departed souls prior to the final judgment. This also may be its meaning in xxi. 23 and in 4 Ezra iv. 41. In 4 Ezra viii. 53 it seems to bear the meaning of "hell." For a history of the various meanings borne by this word see Eth. En. lxiii. 10, note.

7. The condition of the shades was for the writer undoubtedly more blessed than that of the living (cf. x. 6, note).

XII. 3. Boastful. I have here emended לֹא־יִשְׁבַּח = "do (not) oppress" into לֹא־יִשְׁבַּח = "be (not) boastful."

THE FOURTH SECTION

XII. 5-XX. This section begins with a fast of seven days (xii. 5). Then follows a long revelation to Baruch (xiii. 2-xx. 2). (Owing to the complete disarrangement and confusion of the text, this revelation cannot be summarised here. For a discussion of these chapters see pp. 20-34.) Contrary to the usual procedure, Baruch is bidden not to publish this revelation (xx. 3).

XII. 5. On the fasts of Baruch see v. 9, note; ix. 2, note.

XIII.-XXV. The text of these chapters is inexplicable as it stands. The difficulties are due not to corruption, though that undoubtedly exists, but to a recasting of the original text by the final editor. In this process many passages were torn from their original contexts and placed in settings which are quite unsuitable. Some of the incongruities thus produced are as follows: (1) The words "those prosperous cities" are represented as speaking in xiii. 4 without a single note of introduction. (2) In the next verse the words, "thou and those like thee who have seen," are similarly unexplained, and are in fact inexplicable in their present context; for though Baruch was to be preserved till the consummation of the times, his contemporaries were not, and hence they could not see the future retribution of the Gentiles. If, however, xxiv. 2 originally preceded xiii. 3b-5, the words, "thou and those like thee who have seen," would be perfectly intelligible. (3) Again the retribution of the Gentiles referred to in xiii. 4, 5 has not been mentioned before, though the text presupposes some such mention. It is intelligible if xxv. or xxiv. 4 precedes where Baruch asks what will befall the enemies of Israel. (4) In xiv. 1 Baruch replies that God has shown him "the method of the times," whereas in xx. 6 this appears not to have been yet done, and it seems that a revelation of "the method of the times" is still to come. (5) In xxiv. 4 Baruch asks what retribution awaits the enemies of Israel, and when will the judgment be? In xxv. we find the answer to the latter question, whereas the answer to the former is already given in xiii. 4-12. (6) I can discover no adequate explanation of the "therefore" with which xx. 1 begins in its present context. If xx. were read immediately after xiii. the text would at once become clear. On these and other grounds we must attempt to restore the original order of the chapters before they were broken up and rearranged, mutilated, and interpolated by the final editor. Owing to the paucity of materials the attempt to restore the original order can only be partially successful. This order was probably xiii. 1-3a; xx.; xxiv. 2-4; xiii. 3b-12; xxv., xiv.-xix.; xxi.-xxiv. 1; xxx. 2. To reassure Baruch, who is plunged in grief over Jerusalem (xiii. 3a), God declares (xx. 1, 2) that the days and years will speed more quickly by in order to usher in the judgment which will right all wrongs, and that even Jerusalem was removed with this end in view. On the "method of the times" Baruch is then promised disclosures (xx. 6), and "he and many with him" will see the mercy of God on those that sinned and were righteous

I, Baruch, was standing upon Mount Zion, and lo! a voice came from the height and said unto me: 2. 'Stand upon thy feet, Baruch, and hear the word of the mighty God. 3. Because thou hast been astonished at what has befallen Zion, thou shalt therefore be assuredly preserved to the consummation of the times, (xxiv. 2). Baruch, thereupon, asks two questions (xxiv. 4): (a) what will befall Israel's enemies? (b) when will God judge the world (of which event He had already spoken, xx. 2)?

The answer to (a) is given in xiii. 3b-12. But the first words of this answer are lost. In these words there was a statement of this nature: "retribution will come upon the prosperous cities of your enemies" (cf. xiii. 4). Baruch, moreover (xiii. 3b-12), will be preserved until those days for the express purpose of testifying the reason of the retribution that has befallen these cities, and the date of its consummation. "He and those like him who have seen" (cf. xxiv. 2) should answer the remonstrances of the tormented Gentiles. And in answer to Baruch's second question, he is informed (xxv. 1, 2) that he shall likewise be preserved till the sign of the last days has come. This sign will be a stupor that shall seize the inhabitants of the earth (xxv. 3, 4). Baruch, thereupon, acknowledges: "Behold Thou hast shown me the method of the times" (xiv. 1). After this the thought advances connectedly through xiv. - xix.; xxi. - xxiv. 1; xxx. 2. For like rearrangements of already existing texts by the final editor, see my edition of the Eth.En. pp. 189, 260, 267, 268, 270, 274.

XIII. 1. Mount Zion. Mount Zion is the scene of the revelation in xiii.-xx.; of the prayer in xxi. 4-25 (cf. xiii. 1; xx. 6; xxi. 2); of the revelation in xxii.-xxx.; of the seven days' fast in xlvii. 2; and of the prayer and revelation that follow xlviii.-lii.

A voice. Cf. xxii. 1, note.

2. Stand upon thy feet. Ezek. ii. 1.

The mighty God. Cf. vi. 8; vii. 1; xiii. 4.

3. Thou shalt therefore be assuredly preserved, etc. This promise recurs twice again in B², i.e. in xxv. 1 and lxxvi. 2. Baruch is thus to be preserved as a testimony or a sign against the inhabitants of the earth in the last days (see also xiv. 2). This assumption and preservation of Baruch till the last judgment is the teaching of B². With the above passages compare also xlviii. 30 and xlv. 7, where the last is due to the final editor. In B¹, on the other hand, Baruch is to die a natural death (lxxviii. 5; lxxxiv. 1); he is to go the way of all flesh (xliv. 2) and to forget all corruptible things and the affairs of mortals (xliii. 2). Thus we have two conflicting accounts touching the destiny of Baruch. It is noteworthy that we have in the text a transference of a distinct Enochic function to Baruch. For in Jubilees iv. 24 it is stated: "(Enoch) was set as a sign there (in Eden), and that he should testify against all the children of men;" and again in x. 17: "As a testimony to the generations of the world the office was ordained for Enoch of recounting all the deeds of generation unto generation till the day of judgment" (see also Slav. En. xl. 13; liii. 2; lxiv. 5).

that thou mayst be for a testimony. 4. So that, if ever those prosperous cities say: 'Why hath the mighty God brought upon us this retribution?' 5. Thou and those like thee may say to them (even) ye who have seen: 'This evil and (these) retributions which

This robbing of Enoch to benefit Baruch is a clear sign of Jewish hostility to Christianity, and a tribute to the influence that Enoch enjoyed in the Christian Church of the first century. Enoch's acceptance amongst Christians as a Messianic prophet was the ground for his rejection by the Jews. So thoroughgoing, indeed, was this rejection that, although he was the chief figure next to Daniel in Jewish Apocalyptic prior to 40 A.D., in subsequent Jewish literature his functions and achievements are assigned to others, such as Moses, Ezra, or Baruch, and, with the exception of two or three passages, his name in subsequent Jewish literature is henceforth studiously ignored. The observation of this tendency of Jewish thought becomes of practical value to us when we come to lix. 4-11, as we are thus enabled to conclude that a document which on other grounds is prior to 70 A.D., is posterior to the rise of Christianity because it manifests clear signs of this tendency.

Assuredly be preserved. The Syriac lit. = σωσθεις σωσθήσει, a familiar Hebraism שָׁמַר הַשָּׁמַר. This idiom recurs frequently in this book (see xxii. 7; xli. 6; xlviii. 30; l. 2; lvi. 2; lxxv. 6; lxxvi. 2; lxxxii. 2; lxxxiii. 1, 2, 3, 6; lxxxiv. 2). That we have herein indubitable evidence of a Hebrew original we have shown in the Introduction.

4. Those prosperous cities. The abruptness with which these cities are introduced, though not heretofore mentioned, and their complaints about the retribution that has befallen them, though no such retribution has as yet been recorded, shows either that the text preceding these words has been lost, or else that xiii. 3b-12 should be read after xxiv. 2-4. In fact, since in xiii. 3b-12 we have an answer to xxiv. 4, we must assume that xiii. 3b-12 originally followed after xxiv. 4, and since xiii. 4 presupposes that a statement about the retribution that is to come upon the prosperous enemies of Israel has already been made, and since no such statement is found, we must further assume the loss of such words immediately preceding xiii. 3b (see note on xxiv. 3, 4). It might be possible to explain xiii. 4 by xxv. 3, and accordingly regard xiii. 3b-12 as following originally upon xxiv. 2-xxv. But many difficulties beset this interpretation. The cities here spoken of are of course Gentile cities (cf. ver. 11).

Brought upon us this retribution. The same phrase practically is applied to Israel in lxxvii. 4, but here the "us" refers to the "prosperous cities." The retribution intended by the editor seems to be that threatened in xii. 4.

5. Thou and those like thee who have seen it. These words are hardly capable of interpretation as they stand. They clearly mean Baruch's contemporaries; observe "ye who have seen"; but as the time is that of the end, they cannot be his contemporaries; for only are coming upon you and upon your people (are sent) in its time that the nations may be perfectly chastened.' 6. And then they will expect. 7. And if they say at that time: 'When?' 8. Thou wilt say to them: 'Ye who have drunk the strained wine, drink ye also of its dregs, the judgment of the Lofty One who has no respect of persons.' 9. On this account He had before no mercy on His own sons, but afflicted them as His enemies, because they sinned. 10. They were therefore chastened then that they might receive mercy. 11. But now, ye peoples and nations, ye are debtors. because all this time ye have trodden down the earth, Baruch is to be preserved till that date. If, however, xiii. 3b-12 was originally preceded by xxiv. 2-4, we can trace the phrase back to xxiv. 2—"thou wilt see and many who are with thee."

That the nations may be perfectly chastened. That this chastisement is vindictive and not corrective is clear from verse 7; the nations are to "drink of the dregs, the judgment of the Lofty One"; and also from verses 10, 11, where the implication obviously is that, whereas Israel is punished with a view to its ultimate pardon, it is otherwise with the Gentiles. The vindictive punishment therefore of the Gentiles is dealt with in this chapter. But so far as I know ךָּיִּי = "chasten" is never used in the sense of vindictive punishment. This difficulty might be surmounted by supposing רָצַח = "may be chastened," corrupt for רָצַח = "may be dispersed" (cf. Isa. xxxiii. 3). In the next chapter, however, in xiv. 1, the retribution spoken of by God is to be of service to the Gentiles. But see note in loc. On the other hand, it might be possible to understand לְעַמִּים = "nations," "peoples," of Israel, as in xlii. 5 (if the text is right there). But in this case it would be better to emend לְעַמִּים into לְעַמִּים = "that the people may be chastened."

6. The Gentiles will wait for or look forward to the consummation of their chastisement. This verse might by a slight change be understood of Israel (cf. xiv. 3).

8. Cf. Ps. lxxv. 7, 8: "God is the judge. . . . For in the hand of the Lord there is a cup . . . surely all the wicked of the earth . . . shall drink them."

XIV. And I answered and said: "Lo! Thou hast shown me the method of the times, and that which will be after these things, and Thou hast said unto me, that the retribution, which has been spoken of by Thee, will be of advantage to the nations. 2. 12. Cf. i. 4.

I have . . . benefited you. The Syriac is ܠܚܝܬܐ ܠܡܢܝܢܐ, but this order of the words, with this meaning, is highly irregular; for Syriac idiom all but universally requires the participle before the substantive and not as here, and in lxiii. 8, the converse order. This exceptional order may be due to the survival of the Hebrew order in the Syriac translation, i.e. הָיִיתָ מְבִרָךְ. For this seems to be the explanation of two out of the three instances where I have observed this irregularity in the Peshitto O.T., i.e. Gen. iv. 17 and 2 Sam. viii. 15. In the third (1 Sam. xviii. 13) I can offer no explanation, and the abnormality is there all the more striking, as three verses later the same phrase recurs in its right order. This irregularity (which is not noticed in Duval's Grammar, and only passingly mentioned in Nöldeke's) is not found, so far as I am aware, in the Peshitto N.T.

Ye have . . . denied. The Syriac is ܠܡܢܝܢܐ ܕܡܢܝܢܐ, which, according to Syriac idiom, is an imperative = "deny ye." The converse order = "ye have denied." This irregularity, as in the last instance, I would trace to a survival of the Hebrew idiom through the Greek.

XIV. 1. The final editor is again greatly to blame here. According to the text Baruch says: "Thou hast shown me the method of the times and that which will be after these things." Now this has not been done. In the preceding chapter instruction has been given as to the reason of the retribution which has come upon the cities of the Gentiles, and likewise as to the date when their chastisement will be consummated. "The method or scheme of the times" would imply such information as we find in xxiv. 2-xxv. taken in conjunction with xiii., or to xxvii.-xxx. In xx. 6 certain disclosures are promised regarding "the method of the times." The phrase is found also in xlvi. 1.

The retribution . . . spoken of by Thee. These words probably refer to xiii. 5, and yet the retribution in question is first mentioned, not by God but by the cities (xiii. 4), unless we suppose xxv. 3 to precede xiv.

Will be of advantage to the nations. In xiii. 5-11 the context is against the idea of a remedial chastisement of the Gentiles, which seems to be asserted here. Here, again something seems wrong.

nations will be left in those times, to whom those words shall be said which Thou didst say. 3. For what advantage is there in this, or what (evil), worse than what we have seen befall us, are we to expect to see? 4. But again I will speak in Thy presence: 5. What have they profited who confessed before Thee, and have not walked in vanity as the rest of the nations, and have not said to the dead: 'Give us life,' but always feared Thee, and have not left Thy ways? 6. And lo! they have been carried off, nor on their account hast Thou had mercy on Zion. 7. And if others did evil, it was

2. Few nations will be left in those times to whom, etc. Do these words refer back to xiii. 3? In that case Baruch complains that few of the Gentile nations will be alive to whom the words in xiii. 5, 7-11 are to be addressed.

3. These words seem to point to xiii. 6; cf. "they will expect" and "what . . . are we to expect to see?" But here they undoubtedly refer to Israel, whereas there they naturally refer to the Gentiles.

4-19. Of what profit has been the righteousness of the righteous? Of none; for it has helped neither them nor their city, though the last was at least their due (verses 4-7). Seeing this is so, man cannot understand Thy judgment (verses 8, 9), for he is but a breath; his birth is involuntary, and his end a mystery (verses 10, 11); for that end the righteous indeed may hope, for they have treasures in heaven, but for us there is only woe, here and hereafter (verses 12-14). Hence what Thou hast done on Thy servants' behalf Thou knowest, but we cannot discover. The world indeed Thou didst say was made for man. But how can this be? We pass away and the world abides (verses 15-19).

6. Have been carried off. Cf. lxxxv.

3. I have here followed Ceriani's emendation of אֲלֵי־צִיּוֹן into אֲלֵי־צִיּוֹן, who rightly compares xv. 2.

Nor on their account hast Thou had mercy on Zion. This was a great difficulty to the Jew. The presence of ten righteous men would have preserved Sodom; why then did Zion fall? Moreover, the preservation of the world, according to the Talmud (Weber, 201), depended on Israel. See xiv. 18, note.

7. We have here ideas which in some respects resemble those in Gen. xviii. 23-33. But whereas it due to Zion, that on account of the works of those who wrought good works she should be forgiven, and should not be overwhelmed on account of the works of those who wrought unrighteousness. 8. But who, O LORD, my Lord, will comprehend Thy judgment, or who will find out the profoundness of Thy path? or who will think out the gravity of Thy way? 9. Or who will be able to think out Thy incomprehensible counsel? or who of those that are born has ever found is taught there that God would spare a city because of the righteous persons in it, here and in ii. 2 it is the works of the righteous considered in themselves that are put forward as the ground of such mercy. On the question of good works the thought of the writers in this book, i.e. between 50 and 80 A.D., is to be described as follows: (a) The righteous are saved by their works (li. 7); they are justified by the law (li. 3); for righteousness is by the law (lxvii. 6). (b) Their works impart confidence to the righteous with respect to God when they pray for themselves or others. Thus Hezekiah trusted in his works and was hopeful in his righteousness, and so God heard him (lxiii. 3, 5); and the prophets also were heard because they trusted in their works (lxxxv. 2). (c) But the works of the righteous avail not themselves only; they are a defence also to the unrighteous among whom they dwell (ii. 2), and even after their death their works are regarded as a lasting merit on the ground of which mercy should be shown to Zion (xiv. 7; lxxxiv. 10). (d) Again these works are conceived as going before them to the next world, and being there guarded in the treasure chambers of God (xiv. 12), where they will be kept safely till the final judgment (xxiv. 1); hence the righteous hope for the end and leave the world without fear (xiv. 12). (On the teaching of this book as to faith, see note on liv. 21.) In 4 Ezra the doctrine of works as it is found in Baruch can hardly be said to exist. To (b) and (c) we find no parallels and only seeming parallels to (a), such as men "will be able to escape by their works or their faith in which they have believed" (ix. 7), and that "God will guard those who have works and faith in the Most Mighty" (xiii. 23). It will be observed that the doctrine of salvation by works is carefully guarded against by the addition of the words "and faith." To (d) we have good parallels in vii. 77, where Ezra is said to have "a treasury of works laid up with the Most High," and in viii. 33, where "the righteous are those who have many works laid up with Thee: from their own works will they receive reward."

Though the doctrine of justification as taught in Baruch should naturally be discussed here, we must refer the reader to the note on xxi. 9.

8. O LORD, my Lord. See iii. 1, note.

the beginning or end of Thy wisdom? 10. For we have all been made like a breath. 11. For as the breath ascends from the heart, and returning not is extinguished, such is the nature of men, who depart not according to their own will, and know not what will befall them in the end. 12. For the righteous justly hope for the end, and without fear depart from this habitation, because they have with Thee a store of works preserved in treasuries. 13. On this account also these without fear leave this world, and trusting with joy they hope to receive the world which Thou hast promised them. 14. But unto us there is woe, who also now are shamefully entreated, and at that time look forward

10. See references on next verse.

11. Ascends from the heart, and returning not is extinguished. Cf. Ps. lxxviii. 39: "a wind that passeth away, and cometh not again;" Ps. cxlvi. 4; Job vii. 7; James iv. 14. This rendering rests on a slight change of order in the text, i.e.

לֵבָבִי סֵבֵב מֵעַל לְבָבִי instead of לֵבָבִי מֵעַל לְבָבִי סֵבֵב. Ceriani and Fritzsche render the text,
"ascendit quin procedat de corde et restringitur."

Depart not according to their own will. Man does not settle the hour of his departure from this life. Cf. xlviii. 15; 4 Ezra viii. 5, "convenisti enim obaudire", (read volens with Syr. for obaudire) et profecta es nolens."

Know not what, etc. Cf. Slav. En. ii. 1; vii. 5.

12. The righteous justly hope. Eth. En. cii. 4.

A store of works, etc. The text reads לֵבָבִי, סֵבֵב = "a force or supply of works." But it also = "a store of works." Cf. 4 Ezra vii. 77, where we find "a treasure of works." In Shabbath, 31b, a man is spoken of as having אוֹצֵר וְכִיּוֹת, "a treasure of merits" in heaven. Cf. Matt. vi. 19, 20; Pss. Sol. ix. 9, ὁ ποιῶν δικαιοσύνην θησαυρίζει ζωὴν ἐν τῷ παρὰ κυρίῳ. See note on verse 7.

13. The world which Thou hast promised. This is clearly the spiritual world. Thus in li. 3 the righteous after death are to "receive the world which does not die, which is then promised to them;" in xlv. 13, 15 "theirs is the inheritance of the promised time," "for unto them will be given the world to come;" and in xv. 7, 8 "the world which is to come" is said to be on their account. Cf. 4 Ezra ix. 13. It is referred to again in xxi. 25 and lxxxiii. 5 under the general name of something promised. Throughout B² there is no promise of an earthly felicity, but only of spiritual transmundane blessedness.

14. There is woe. Cf. for diction lxxxiv. 11; 4 Ezra xiii. 16.

(only) to evils. 15. But Thou knowest accurately what Thou hast made on behalf of Thy servants; for we are not able to understand by means of any good thing that Thou art our Creator. 16. But again I will speak in Thy presence, O LORD, my Lord. 17. When of old there was no world with its inhabitants, Thou didst devise and speak with a word, and forthwith the works of creation stood before Thee. 18. And Thou didst say that Thou wouldst make for Thy world man as the administrator of Thy works, that it might be known that he was by no means made on account of the world, but the world on account of him.

Evils. These words refer back to xiv. 3, and their subject is again touched upon in xv. 1. What these are is given in xliv. 15; lxxxv. 13.

15. What Thou hast made (or done) on behalf of Thy servants. I.e.

ملكو دبتو صو دبتو. If my rendering is right, the entire verse appears to be in its wrong place, and should be read after verse 16. The sense then would be excellent: "Thou knowest what good things Thou hast created on behalf of Thy servants; but we know of none: yet Thou didst say that Thou didst make the world for man," etc. (verses 15, 17, 18). But the Syriac may be translated, "what Thou hast made out of Thy servants," or if we neglect the diacritic point, "what Thou has wrought out of Thy works." Ceriani translates the verse: "Tu autem recte nosti quid feceris de servis tuis: quia nos non possumus intelligere aliquid boni, quomodo tu sis fector noster." Before aliquid we should read "per."

17. Speak with a word, etc. Cf. Gen. i. 6, 7; Ps. xxxiii. 6; Heb.

xi. 3; 2 Peter iii. 5; Slav. En. xxiv. 5; xxv. 1; 4 Ezra vi. 38.

18. Thou wouldst make for Thy world man, etc. Cf. Gen. i. 26, 28; Ps. viii. 6; 4 Ezra vi. 54.

The world on account of him. So far as I am aware this exalted view of man's dignity in respect of the world is not found earlier than the first century of the Christian era. It recurs frequently in the literature of this time: cf. xiv. 19; xv. 7; xxi. 24 (this doctrine is thus confined to B² in this book); Assumpt. Mosis i. 12; 4 Ezra vi. 55, 59; vii. 11; viii. 44; ix. 13. In these passages the statement of the reason for the creation of the world assumes three forms: First, the world was created on account of man (Apoc. Bar. xiv. 18; 4 Ezra viii. 1, 44). But the writers of these books if pressed, would at once have withdrawn this statement in favour of two diverging statements: the one, that the world was created on account of Israel (4 Ezra vi. 55, 59; vii. 11; Assumpt. Mosis i. 12); the other that the world was created on account of the righteous in Israel

19. And now I see that as for the world which was made on account of us, lo ! it abides, but we, on account of whom it was made, depart."

XV. And the Lord answered and said unto me : "Thou art rightly astonished regarding the departure of man, but thou hast not judged well regarding the evils which befall those who sin. 2. And as regards what thou hast said, that the righteous are carried off and the impious are prospered, 3. And as regards what thou hast said : 'Man knows not Thy judgment'— 4. On this account hear, and I will speak to thee, and hearken, and I will cause thee to hear My words. 5. Man would not rightly have understood My judgment, if he had not accepted the law, and if his fear (Apoc. Bar. xiv. 19 ; xv. 7 ; xxi. 24). Either of the latter forms the real Jewish view from the Christian era onwards. Thus in the Talmud, it is either Israel, or the righteous in Israel, that were the cause of the world's creation and its subsequent preservation. Thus in Bammidbar rabba, ii., "if Israel were not, the world would not exist" ; in the Shemoth rabba, xxviii., "The world was created owing to the merits of Israel, and upon Israel stands the world." See Weber, pp. 201, 202, for other passages of the same import. See also note on xv. 7.

19. See note on last verse. That the "us" and the "we" here are the righteous is clear from xv. 7. This verse shows that the writer believed in the view that the safety of the world was bound up with that of the righteous.

In Pesikta 200b God is said to have created the world on account of Abraham's merit (Weber, p. 295).

XV. 1. Astonied regarding the de- parture of man. These words refer to xiv. 19. The Syriac noun translated "departure" is derived from the verb translated "depart" in xiv. 19. In xiii. 3 Baruch was "astonied" about the fate of Jerusalem.

Not judged rightly regarding the evils, etc. See xiv. 3, 14.

2. See xiv. 6.

3. See xiv. 8, 9.

5. The law. The law was the centre round which Jewish thought and life revolved. To a limited extent the Messianic expectation was likewise a centre. Frequently we find that in proportion as the one is emphasised the other falls into the background. This will receive illustration as we proceed to examine the position assigned to the law and the Messiah respectively in the five main constituents of this book. Thus in B¹ (written after 70 A.D.) where the restoration of Jerusalem is looked for, but no Messiah, the law is spoken of as had not been (rooted) in understanding. 6. But now, follows : God gave the law to Israel (lxxvii. 3) ; for transgressing it they were sent into exile (lxxvii. 4 ; lxxiv. 2) ; but let not Israel withdraw from the law (xliv. 3), but obey it (xlvi. 5) ; let them remember it (lxxxiv. 8) ; for if they do so, they will see the consolation of Zion (xliv. 7), and a son of the law will never be wanting (xlvi. 4), nor a lamp nor a shepherd (lxxvii. 16) ; for lamps and shepherds are from the law, and though these depart the law stands (lxxvii. 15) ; if they remember it, they will see the consolation of Zion (xliv. 7). In B² where there is no Messiah and no expectation of the restoration of Jerusalem, the law is still further glorified. Thus Moses brought the law to Jacob (xvii. 4) ; this conveyed a knowledge of the judgment of God (xv. 5), and entailed retribution on the consciously disobedient (xv. 6 ; xix. 3 ; xlviii. 40) ; it will exact all its rights (xlvi. 27), and repay the transgressor (xlvi. 47) ; apostates from it (xli. 3) will be specially dealt with (xlii. 4). On the other hand it will protect those who receive it in their hearts (xxxii. 1 ; xlviii. 24) ; by it they will be justified (li. 3), and in it will be the hope of the righteous (li. 7) ; the law is with Israel, and so long as they obey it they will not fall (xlvi. 22, 24). They have received one law from One (xlvi. 24). In B³ (which is akin to xiii. 2 in this respect) Israel has nothing save the Mighty One and the law (lxxxv. 3) ; they have one law by one (lxxxv. 14). When, however, we turn to the Messiah Apocalypses A¹ (= xxvii.-xxx. 1), A² (= xxxvi.-xl.), A³ (= liii.-lxxiv.), and to S. (= x. 6-12) which form more than a third of the entire book, we find no mention at all of the law in A¹ and S. In A² there is only one mention of it, i.e. God's law is life (xxxviii. 2). In A³ it naturally becomes more prominent, as A³ gives a brief history of God's dealings with Israel. The law and the tradition were observed by Abraham and his sons (lvii. 2). Thus, through the agency of Moses, its light shone on those in darkness (lix. 2). God imparted to Moses certain studies of the law (lix. 3). Josiah alone was faithful to it in his time (lxvi. 5). Such as loved it not perished (liv. 14). Righteousness comes by the law (lxvii. 6). Thus we observe that in purely eschatological descriptions such as A¹, there is not a single allusion to the law : the Messiah is the entire centre of interest. This is practically true in A² also ; for the reference in xxxviii. 2 does not belong to the account of the last things. In A³ finally, most of the references are to historical incidents, though it is true that in A³ great store is set by the law. The law was the centre of Jewish life, the source of righteousness, and in fact its spiritual schoolmaster, till the advent of the Messiah had arrived. Thenceforward (lxx.-lxxiv.) there is not even an allusion to it. The same phenomena are observable in the various constituents of 4 Ezra. Thus in the three or four distinct Messiah Apocalypses in that book (according to Kabisch's critical analyses) the law is only mentioned two or three times. The only strong expression regarding it is in xiii. 38, and there the text is doubtful. In the groundwork of the book (circa 100 A.D.) however, where we find no hope of a Messiah nor of a restored Jerusalem, the law, as might be expected, has a more important rôle to play. Thus God gave the law to Jacob (iii. 19). He sowed it in them that they might keep it (ix. 32), but it bore no fruit owing to because he transgressed though he knew, yea, on account of this also, he shall be tormented because he knew. 7. And as regards what thou didst say touching the righteous, that on account of them has this world come, nay more, even that which is to come is on their account. 8. For this world is to them the evil heart (iii. 20); they neglected it (vii. 20), did not keep it (ix. 32), rejected it (vii. 72), despised it (vii. 24; viii. 56), yet the law cannot perish (ix. 37.) Some did try to keep the law perfectly in this life (vii. 89), and God bore testimony to them because they did so (vii. 94); these acquired a store of good works (vii. 77; viii. 33), and from these they received their reward (viii. 33); and yet none can claim heaven purely as the reward of their righteousness, for all men have sinned (viii. 35).

It is obvious at a glance that the possession of the law by Israel is less a subject of self-gratulation in 4 Ezra than in Baruch. In the latter, especially in B² (written, like the groundwork in 4 Ezra, after 70 A.D., and having no expectation of the Messiah or a restored Jerusalem) the law is everything: it protects the righteous (xxxii. 1), justifies them (li. 3), is their hope (li. 7), and so long as it is with Israel, Israel cannot fall (xlvi. 22, 24). In Ezra, on the other hand, the law has begotten in the writer such a sense of sin that he trembles before it. Man needs mercy, not the award of the law; for all have sinned (viii. 35), and all but a very few would perish, but for the divine compassion (vii. 139).

5, 6. If his fear had not been (rooted) in understanding. But now, because he transgressed though he knew, etc. Here Ceriani followed by Fritzsche has mistranslated thus taking it for יָבֹֿא. This thought partially recurs in xix. 3; xlviii. 40, "Each of the inhabitants of the earth knew when he was committing iniquity" (see note in loc.), lv. 2; and almost a perfect parallel is found in 4 Ezra vii. 72: "Qui ergo commorantes sunt in terra hinc cruciabuntur quoniam sensum habentes iniquitatem fecerunt." Cf. Luke xii. 48.

יָבֹֿא (= transgressus est) by "fecit,"

7. As regards . . . has this world come. See note on xiv. 18. Nowhere in the present book are these words given as a divine utterance. The same statement is again made in xxi. 24. From a similar statement in 4 Ezra vi. 55, at the close of the short hexæmeron there, it is probable that some such statement was originally included in that hexæmeron in its independent form. On this hexæmeron see xxix. 4, note. Cf. 4 Ezra vi. 55; vii. 11.

Seeing that this world is "a trouble and a weariness" to the righteous, it is hard to understand such a belief unless we suppose that it was designed to be their discipline for the future life. Cf. lii. 6. On the world which is to come, see xiv. 13, note.

8. This world is to them a trouble . . . with much labour. Cf. xlviii. 50; li. 14; 4 Ezra vii. 3-14; Rom. viii. 18; 2 Cor. iv. 17. This world is evidently regarded by the a trouble and a weariness with much labour; and that accordingly which is to come, a crown with great glory."

XVI. And I answered and said: "O LORD, my Lord, lo! the years of this time are few and evil, and who is able in this little (space) to acquire that which is measureless?"

XVII. And the Lord answered and said unto me: "With the Most High account is not taken of much time nor of a few years. 2. For what did it profit Adam that he lived nine hundred and thirty years, and transgressed that which he was commanded? 3. Therefore the multitude of time that he lived did not profit him, but brought death and cut off the years of those who were born from him. 4. Or wherein did Moses suffer loss in that he lived only one hundred and twenty years, and, inasmuch as he was subject to Him who formed him, brought the law to the writer of B² but not of B¹ as a scene of trial and sorrow: a man must give himself to an ascetic life here if he is to attain blessedness hereafter. There is a more ascetic tone about 4 Ezra. In the Eth. En., however, still stronger statements are found. Thus in xlviii. 7 the Messiah "preserveth the lot of the righteous because they have hated and despised this world of un-righteousness," and in cviii. 7 God recompenses "the spirits of the humble and of those who afflict their bodies," and likewise those (cviii. 10) who, though "trodden under foot of wicked men," "loved heaven more than their life in this world."

Crown with great glory. Cf. 1 Pet. v. 4. We should expect "crown of great glory." Observe that if we retranslate these words into Hebrew, we have a paronomasia already familiar from Isa. lxii. 3; Ezek. xvi. 12; xxiii. 42, i.e. עֲטָרָה

בהתפארה רבה.

XVI. 1. Years . . . few and evil. Gen. xlvii. 9.

XVII. 1. The Most High. This title belongs to B¹, B², B³, and A³. See xxv. 1; liv. 9, 17; lvi. 1; lxiv. 6, 8; lxvii. 4, 7; lxix. 2; lxx. 7; lxxvi. 1; lxxvii. 4, 21; lxxx. 1, 3; lxxxi. 2, 4; lxxxii. 2, 6; lxxxiii. 1; lxxxv. 8, 12.

3. Brought death, etc. See xxiii. 4, note.

4. Brought the law, etc. Cf. 4 Ezra iii. 19. "Give the law to the seed of Jacob, and the commandment to the race of Israel."

seed of Jacob, and lighted a lamp for the nation of Israel."

XVIII. And I answered and said: "He that lighted has taken from the light, and there are but few that have imitated him. 2. But those many whom he has lighted have taken from the darkness of Adam, and have not rejoiced in the light of the lamp."

XIX. And He answered and said unto me: "Wherefore at that time he appointed for them a covenant, and said: 'Behold I have placed before you life and death,' and he called heaven and earth to witness against them. 2. For he knew that his time was but short, but that heaven and earth endure always. 3.

Lighted a lamp. Cf. lix. 2, "lamp of the eternal law." The thought in both phrases is drawn from Ps. cxix. 105, "Thy word is a lamp," etc. Cf. xviii. 2.

XVIII. 1. Has taken from the light, i.e. has chosen the light. In the next verse the many are said to have chosen the darkness of Adam.

2. The law and Adam are in this passage symbolical names for the opposing powers of light and darkness. This thought is foreign to the O.T. though Gen. i.-iii. has prepared the way for it. Adam is here, as in the Slav. En., represented as the primary source of human transgression, whereas in the Eth. En. and Jubilees human depravity is traced mainly to the angels that sinned with the daughters of men. Again, as in the Slav. En., the writer does not teach the doctrine of original sin and inherited spiritual incapacities. He implies rather that man is left to determine his own destiny, to choose light or take darkness for his portion, just as in much later times it was said: "God does not determine beforehand whether a man shall be righteous or wicked, but puts this into the hands of the man himself" (Tanchuma, Pikkude 3). See Slav. En. xxx. 15, 16, notes. The same view is enforced in A³, i.e. liv. 15, 16. See notes in loc.

XIX. 1, 2. Because few chose light and many chose darkness, Moses showed further that their choice of light or darkness was likewise a choice of life or death. xix. 1-3 looks like an addition of the final editor. The answer to xviii. seems to begin with xix. 4.

Behold I have placed, etc., Deut. xxx. 19. Called heaven, etc., Deut. iv. 26; xxx. 19; xxxi. 28. Cf. lxxxiv. 2; Ass. Mos. iii. 12.

Later times seem to have drawn from Deut. xxx. 19 the conclusion that the permanence of the law was bound up with that of heaven and earth. Cf. ver. 2; Matt. v. 18. Contrast Luke xvi. 17; Mark xiii. 31.

For after his death these sinned and transgressed (the covenant), though they knew that they had the law reproving (them), and the light in which nothing could err, also the spheres, which testify, and Me. 4. Now regarding everything that is it is I that judge, but do not thou take counsel in thy soul regarding these things, nor afflict thyself because of those which have been. 5. For now it is the consummation of time that is sought, whether of business, or of prosperity, or of shame, and not the beginning thereof. 6. Because if a man be prospered in his beginnings and shamefully entreated in his old age, he forgets all the prosperity that he had. 7. And again, if a man is shamefully entreated in his beginnings, and at his end is prospered, he remembereth not again his evil entreatment. 8. And again hearken: though each one were prospered all that time—all the time from the day on which death was decreed against those who transgress—and

3. Transgressed. This word recurs in the same connection (lxxxiv. 2) where it has as its object "the law." We must supply this or "the covenant" from ver. 1.

4. These words deal with Baruch's difficulties in xviii. 1, 2. Do not distress thyself with such problems; the end of all things is at hand.

5. Here only the end of all things is looked for—not an earthly felicity in a rebuilt Jerusalem.

6-8. The end of all things is at hand, and the only important question is: How does it find a man? will it bring him shame or honour? We are strongly reminded here of the well-known words of Solon in Herodotus i. 32 σκοπέειν δὲ χρῆ παντὸς χρήματος τὴν τελευτήν, κῆ ἀποβήσεται. πολλοῖσι γὰρ δὴ ὑποδέξας ὄλβον ὁ θεὸς προοπίζους ἀνέτρεψε. It was a familiar Hellenic theme. Cf. Soph. Trach. 1-3; Oed. Rex, 1494-97; Eurip. Androm. 100-103, etc.

8. Though a man . . . vanity. This seems the natural rendering of the passage. Cerianirenders: "Omne tempus istud a die quo decreta fuit mors contra eos qui praetereunt in isto tempore, si unusquisque prosperatus esset, et in fine suo in vanitatem corrumpetur, esset omne." Fritzsche quite wrongly writes "vanum" for "omne."

On which death was decreed, etc. See xxiii. 4, note.

in his end was destroyed, in vain would have been everything."

XX. Therefore, behold! the days will come, and the times will hasten more than the former, and the seasons will speed on more than those that are past, and the years will pass more quickly than the present (years). 2. Therefore have I now taken away Zion, in order that I may the more speedily visit the world in its season. 3. Now therefore hold fast in thy heart everything that I command thee, and seal it in the recesses of thy mind. 4. And then I will

XX. 1. Therefore. It is not clear that this word follows upon anything in xix. It could be taken closely with xviii. So far as I can see it is best to regard it as following directly on xiii. 3a. Jerusalem has fallen, therefore the years intervening before the judgment will be shortened. Cf. liv. 1, "Against the works of the inhabitants of the earth Thou dost hasten the beginnings of the times"; Matt. xxiv. 22. For the probable order of the text originally see pp. 20, 119.

The days will come. Cf. xxiv. 1; xxxi. 5; xxxix. 3; 4 Ezra vi. 18. A familiar O.T. phrase. Cf. Jer. xxiii. 7; xxx. 3, etc.

The times will hasten. Cf. lxxxiii. 1, 6, where almost the same thoughts and diction recur. Cf. liv. 1; 4 Ezra iv. 26.

2. The fall of Jerusalem is one of the steps preparatory for the final judgment. See xxi. 21. There is no hope here of a restored Jerusalem. See i. 4, note.

Speedily visit. The Syriac literally = σπεύδω καὶ ἀποστέλλω, and Hebraism, אָמַר וְאָפַקְר, Visit. Cf. xxiv. 4; lxxxiii. 2.

This word seems to be used in Baruch in a bad sense of the penal visitation of God, as in Exod. xx. 5; Ps. lxxxix. 32; Jer. vi. 15; ix. 25; xi. 22, etc.; also in 4 Ezra v. 56; vi. 18; ix. 2; Pss. Sol. xv. 14. The word (קָרָא = ἐπισκέπτεσθαι) has generally a good sense in the O.T., as in Gen. xxi. 1; Exod. iv. 31; Job x. 12; Pss. viii. 4; lxxx. 14; also in Eccles. xlv. 14; Wisdom vii. 7, 13; Pss. Sol. iii. 14; x. 5(?); xi. 2, 7; always in the N.T., as in Luke i. 68, 78; vii. 16; xix. 44; Acts xv. 14; 1 Peter ii. 12. It is noteworthy that whereas in the N.T. the thought of God's visitation is one of joy, its associations in 4 Ezra and Baruch are fear and wrath to come.

3. Everything that I command thee. The relative is omitted in the Syriac, but both the sense and the Syriac idiom require it. If the text is right, we must take it as a Hebraism; for the Hebrew admits the omission of the relative. We must then suppose this Hebraism misunderstood by the Greek translator; for neither does the Greek allow of the omission of the relative.

show thee the judgment of My might, and My ways which are past finding out. 5. Go therefore and sanctify thyself seven days, and eat no bread, nor drink water, nor speak to any one. 6. And afterwards come to that place, and I will reveal Myself to thee, and speak true things with thee, and I will give thee commandment regarding the method of the times; for they will come and will not tarry.

THE FIFTH AND SIXTH SECTIONS

XXI.-XLVI. This constitutes the fifth section of the book according to the present text, but in reality the fifth and sixth sections (see v. 7, note). For according to the scheme of the final editor, events proceed in each section in a certain order: thus first we find a fast, then generally a prayer or lamentation, then a divine message or disclosure followed by an announcement to the people. Thus we have here the fast of seven days in Cedron (xxi. 1); the prayer on Mount Zion (xxi. 4-26); the revelation (xxii. - xxx.); address to the people assembled in Cedron (xxxi. - xxxiv). At the close of xxxiv. there should follow a fast of seven days. The sixth section should open with this fast, but all mention of it has disappeared from the present text. After the fast comes a vision (xxxvi. - xl.) and a revelation regarding apostates and proselytes (xli. xlii.) with some further disclosures (xliii.); then the sixth section duly closes with an address to the people (xliv. - xlvi.)

It will be observed that xxi. - xlvi. embrace material from a variety of sources. Thus xxvi. - xxx. 1 = A¹, and xxxvi. - xl. = A² are independent Messiah apocalypses, and xliii. xlv. 7; xlv. xlvi. are derived from B¹. What remains of B² has been completely rearranged according to the views of the final editor. For what was probably the original order of B² see p. 119, and the Introduction, pp. lxi.-lxiii.

soul there, and I eat no bread, yet I was not hungry, and I drank no water, yet I thirsted not, and I was there till the seventh day, as He had commanded me. 2. And afterwards I came to that place where He had spoken with me. 3. And it came to pass at sunset that my soul took much thought, and I began to speak in the presence of the Mighty One, and said: 4. "O Thou that hast made the earth hear me, that hast fixed the firmament in its fulness, and hast made firm the height of the heaven by the spirit, that hast called from the beginning of the world that which did not yet exist, and they obey Thee. 5. Thou that hast commanded the air by Thy nod, and hast seen those things which are to be as those things

2. That place. Probably Mount Zion. Cf. xx. 6 and xiii. 1; otherwise the temple, x. 5. But this and some other such place determinations may be due to the final editor. The scene of the fast, the prayer, and the revelation was probably the same. See xlvii. 1, note.

3. The Mighty One. This is the first time this title occurs. It is found in B¹, B², A³, but not in A¹, A². See xxv. 4; xxxii. 1, 6; xxxiv. 1; xlv. 3, 6; xlv. 1, 4; xlvii. 1; xlviii. 1, 38; xlix. 1; liv. 1; lv. 6; lvi. 2, 3; lix. 3; lxi. 6; lxiii. 3, 5, 6, 8, 10; lxiv. 3, 4; lxv. 1; lxvi. 1, 5, 6; lxvii. 2; lxx. 2, 5; lxxvii. 11, 26; lxxxi. 4; lxxxii. 5; lxxxiv. 1, 6, 7, 10; lxxxv. 2, 3.

4. By the spirit. Have we here a reference to Gen. ii. 1, "The spirit of God," or does the whole phrase, "made firm . . . by the spirit," show a connection partly with the LXX. of Ps. xxxiii. 6, τῷ λόγῳ κυρίῳ οἱ οὐρανοὶ ἐστερεώθησαν καὶ τῷ πνεύματι τοῦ στόματος κτλ.

Hast called . . . that which did not yet exist. Cf. xlviii. 8, "with a word Thou quickenest that which was not." We seem to have here creation ex nihilo. On the other hand the words above are found in Philo, de Justitia, τὰ γὰρ μὴ ὄντα ἐκάλεσεν εἰς τὸ εἶναι. This may be accidental. At any rate the fundamental principles of the two writers are different; for, except in the De Somno, i. 13, Philo taught the formation of the world from pre-existent elements. See Slav. En. xxiv. 2; xxv. 1, notes. Such expressions as that in the text spring from the repeated "and God said," Gen. i. Cf. Ps. cxlviii. 5; Philo, de sacrif. Abel et Cain, ὁ γὰρ θεὸς λέγων ἅμα ἐποίη, μὴδὲν μεταξὺ ἀμφοῖν τιθεῖς. In 2 Pet. iii. 5, "There were heavens from of old, and an earth compacted out of water . . . by the word of God," we have the same teaching, with the additional idea that the solid earth was made from the water, as in the Slav. En. xxviii. 2.

Thou that rulest with great thought the powers that stand before Thee: (yea) rulest with indignation the holy living creatures, who are without number, which Thou didst make from the beginning, of flame and fire, which stand around Thy throne. 7. To Thee only does this belong that Thou shouldst do forthwith whatsoever Thou dost wish. 8. Who causest the drops of rain to rain by number upon the earth, and alone knowest the consummation of the times before they come: have respect unto my prayer. 9. For Thou alone art able to sustain all who are, and those who pass away, and those who are to be, those who sin, and those who are righteous [as

Which Thou didst make from the beginning. In Jub. ii. 2, the creation of the angels is assigned to the first day—evidently on the ground of Job xxxviii. 7. According to Targ. Jer. I. on Gen. i. 26, and Shemoth rabba, 15, God created the angels on the second day. So also Slav. En. xxix. 1.

8. The drops of rain to rain by number. Cf. lix. 5; Eccus. i. 2; Slav. En. xlvii. 5, note.

Alone knowest the end of the times. Cf. liv. 1.

9. Those who sin, and those who are righteous. For "who are righteous" the Syriac reads here and in xxiv. 2 ܥܕܢܝܝܝܡ = "who are justified" = οὐ δικαιοῦνται, and in xxi. 11, 12; lxii. 7, ܥܕܢܝܝܝܡ = "have been justified" = δεδικαιωμένοι εἶναι.

In all these passages the Syriac is at fault, but its error is to be traced to the Greek Version; for the Greek translator mistranslated the Hebrew before him, which was in the former case הַצְדִּיקִים, and in the latter צִדְקָה.

The grounds for this conclusion are as follows: (i.) The antithesis to "those who sin" is not "those who are justified," but "those who do righteousness" or "are righteous." (ii.) If "those who are justified" was the true text, then its antithesis would not be "those who sin," as we find it in xxi. 9, 11, 12; xxiv. 2, but "those who are condemned," as in li. 1 and 4 Ezra iv. 18. (iii.) But since "those who sin" is undoubtedly original, the error must lie in the phrase "those who are justified." (iv.) Now this error is easy to explain. From the LXX. we know that צִדְקָה was generally rendered by δικαιοῦσθαι, and only in a few cases by δίκαιος εἶναι (Job ix. 2, 15; x. 15; xv. 14; xxv. 4; xxxiii. 12; xxxiv. 5; living (and) being past finding out]. 10. For Thou alone dost live immortal and past finding out, and knowest the number of mankind. 11. And if in time many have sinned, yet others not a few have been righteous. 12. Thou knowest where Thou preservest xxxv. 36). The Greek translator, not appreciating the right meaning of נצח in our Apocalypse, gave it the sense he was most familiar with, and so mistranslated it by δικαιοῦσθαι. (v.) The above conclusions receive confirmation from the fact that the antithesis in our emended text is actually found in Job x. 15 and xxxv. 36, 37. I have emended the text accordingly in xxi. 9, 11, 12; xxiv. 1, 2; lxvii. 2.

The doctrine of justification in this Apocalypse differs from that taught in 4 Ezra.

(1) In Baruch men are justified by the law: thus the text in li. 3 = ἐδικαιώθησαν ἐν τῷ νόμῳ μου (where μου = τοῦ θεοῦ), and in lxvii. 6 it = ἡ δικαιοσύνη ἡ ἐκ τοῦ νόμου, and in lxxx. 7 it = ἐσώθησαν ἐν τοῖς ἔργοις αὐτῶν. In Ezra, on the other hand, the expression "salvation by works" is qualified by the addition of "and by faith." Cf. ix. 7; xiii. 23. In fact we do not find there either expressed or implied the doctrine of justification by works. (2) Quite in keeping with what precedes is the absolute assurance of salvation on the part of Baruch. He never personally dreads condemnation: he looks forward calmly to a life of future blessedness. Cf. xiii. 3; xxv. 1; xlv. 7; lxxvi. 2. Ezra, on the other hand, continually assumes his future woe till assured otherwise in viii. 47-49, 51-54. 4 Ezra xiv. does not belong to the rest of the book. There is a pessimistic outlook in Ezra as there is an optimistic one in all Baruch save S (i.e. x. 6-xii.) The note on xiv. 7 of this book will confirm the view above taken.

In 4 Ezra "to justify" preserves its ordinary meaning of "to declare just" in iv. 18 and xii. 7. It is used in this sense also in Ecclus. i. 22; vii. 5; x. 29; xiii. 22; xviii. 22; xxxi. 5; xlii. 2. In 4 Ezra, however, we find another use: thus in x. 16 it = "to vindicate as just." So also in Ps. li. 4; Isa. xlii. 21 (?); Pss. Sol. ii. 16; iii. 5; iv. 9; viii. 7, 27, 31; ix. 3; Luke vii. 29; Apoc. Baruch lxxviii. 5. On the word δικαιοῦν the reader can consult with advantage Sanday and Headlam's Romans, pp. 28-31. On the teaching on faith in A³, i.e. chaps. liii.-lxxiv., see liv. 25, note.

As living . . . out. This I bracket as a dittography. See next line.

10. Knowest the number of mankind. Gen. xxiii. 4, 5; xlviii. 4, 6.

11. Men many have sinned, but many also have been justified.

Others not a few have been righteous. This statement differs strongly from that given in 4 Ezra viii. 3, where it is said plainly that whereas "multi quidem creati sunt, pauci autem salvabuntur," and that the ratio of the saved to the lost is as the amount of gold in the earth to that of the clay in it (viii. 2). This optimism which we have observed already (see xxi. 9, note) differentiates Baruch from Ezra. The latter is in the main pessimistic both with regard to his own destiny (till otherwise reassured by God) and that of the vast bulk of mankind.

12, 13. But this life is not all; sin and righteousness have further the end of those who have sinned, or the consummation of those who have been righteous. 13. For if there were this life only, which here belongs to all men, nothing could be more bitter than this. 14. For of what profit is strength that turns to weakness, or the food of plenty that turns to famine, or beauty that turns to a hateful (thing)? 15. For the nature of man is always changeable. 16. For we have by no means been from the beginning what we now are, and what we now are we shall not afterwards remain. 17. For if a consummation had not been prepared for all, in vain would have been their beginning. 18. But regarding everything that comes from Thee, do Thou inform me, and regarding everything about which I ask Thee, do Thou enlighten me. 19. How long will that which is corruptible remain, and how long will the time of issues; else the life of the righteous here were a crowning bitterness.

13. This verse may be drawn from 1 Cor. xv. 19, or else both from a common source. Of what worth is life? for (1) it is subject to constant change (xxi. 14, 15); and (2) is likewise mortal (xxi. 16, 17, 22).

14. Strength that turns, etc. lxxxiii. 11.

Beauty that turns to a hateful (thing). lxxxiii. 12.

15. There is no fixity in the being of man: he is the creature of change. In ver. 22, which should follow verses 17, 18, man is by appointment mortal.

16. The text is corrupt. The above rendering rests on an emendation of the text. Thus for

וְהָיָה כְּעֵתוֹ וְהָיָה כְּעֵתוֹ
וְהָיָה כְּעֵתוֹ וְהָיָה כְּעֵתוֹ
וְהָיָה כְּעֵתוֹ וְהָיָה כְּעֵתוֹ

I have read וְהָיָה כְּעֵתוֹ וְהָיָה כְּעֵתוֹ
וְהָיָה כְּעֵתוֹ וְהָיָה כְּעֵתוֹ
וְהָיָה כְּעֵתוֹ וְהָיָה כְּעֵתוֹ. This restores, I believe, the original sense (cf. ver. 15). As the text stands it="aut nihil, sicuti quod sumus, est enim ab initio, nunc non sumus" (Ceriani).

17. Ver. 22 may have originally followed this verse.

19. How long will that which is corruptible remain? If this question comes from the final editor, its answer will be found in xl. 3; lxxiv. 3. But if it belongs to B², its answer would naturally be found in xxiii. 7-xxiv. 1; xxxi. 5. The writers of this book (particularly the writer of B²) are greatly impressed with the corruptibility of the present world. The whole present world, the olam hazzeh, belongs mortals be prospered, and until what time will those who transgress in the world be polluted with much wickedness? 20. Command therefore in mercy, and accomplish all that Thou saidst Thou wouldst bring, that Thy might may be made known to those who think that Thy long-suffering is weakness. 21. And show to those who know not, and let them see that it has befallen us and our city until now according to the long-suffering of Thy power, because on account of Thy name Thou hast called us a beloved people. 22. Every nature therefore from this onward is mortal.

to the sphere of corruption. Even so does the Messianic kingdom if it falls within the olam hazzeḥ, as it does in A¹, A², and A³ in this book. Thus in A² the Messianic reign forms the end of the world of corruption (xl. 3), and in A³, the end of corruption and the beginning of incorruption (lxxiv. 3). In B² all that has been is doomed to corruption (xxxi. 5); all that is corruptible will perish (xliv. 9); the new world that awaits them will not turn them to corruption (xliv. 12). In B³ what the righteous have lost was corruptible, but what they will receive is incorruptible (lxxxv. 5). The only reference to this subject in B¹ is where Baruch is told that he will pass away from the earth and forget all that is corruptible (xliii. 2). As to the remaining passages where this word recurs, the text is doubtful in xlviii. 29, and probably interpolated in xxviii. 5. In 4 Ezra vii. 113, the day of judgment is the end of this period and the beginning of the next immortal period. See also iv. 11; vii. 111.

Who transgress. These words could be rendered "who pass away," as in verse 9.

20. This is a prayer for the hastening of the final judgment (cf. 2 Pet. iii. 4-9).

21. The text is unintelligible as it stands: "Show to those who know not, and they have seen what has befallen us and our city until now according to the longsuffering," etc. Merely by the emendation of סמך = "and they have seen," into והיה = "and that it has been," we arrive at a perfectly consistent text. The fall of Jerusalem was brought about in the mercy of God to hasten the final judgment. See verse 23; xx. 2.

But, if the text is correct, it = καὶ ἐωράκασιν = וראו. Have we here an instance of the Hebrew perfect with strong waw used as a continuation of the imperative? In that case the original may have been הוריעו וראו אח אשר נקרה לנו . . . = "Show . . . and let them see that it has happened to us." I have emended accordingly.

A beloved people. Cf. v. 1.

22. It is obvious that this verse breaks the connection of thought. It should be read after verse 17 as

23. Reprove therefore the angel of death, and let Thy glory appear, and let the might of Thy beauty be known, and let Sheol be sealed so that from this time forward it may not receive the dead, and let the treasures of souls restore those which are enclosed in them. 24. For there have been many years like those that are desolate from the days of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, and of all those who are like them, who sleep in the earth, on whose account Thou didst say that Thou hadst created the world. 25. And now quickly show Thy glory, and do not defer suggested above. It is possible that לִשְׁאֵל is corrupt for לְנֶשֶׁל. We should then translate, "Every one, therefore, according to this law is mortal" (cf. ver. 15).

23. The writer in 20, 21, urged God to bring on the final judgment, that His power might be made known, and that men might learn that Israel's calamities had befallen them in the mercy of God. With a view to this final judgment the writer prays to God to put an end to death, to let His glory appear, and the dead arise.

23. The angel of death. Cf. Rev. vi. 8. On the prominent rôle played by this angel in later Jewish writings, see Testament of Abraham (ed. James); Weber, 239-242, 244, 247, 262, 321, 322, 373; Eisenmenger, Entdecktes Jud. i. 854, 855, 862-879.

Sheol. See xi. 6, note.

Be sealed. Cf. Isa. v. 14.

Treasures of souls. Only the righteous souls were admitted to these treasures or chambers. I have preserved the literal meaning of the original word. These are the places in which God treasures His righteous ones, or their righteous acts. After the death of a righteous man his soul was permitted during seven days to behold the seven ways of the righteous and the seven ways of the wicked. After so doing, the soul entered these chambers (4 Ezra vii. 101; iv. 35). These chambers were in Sheol (4 Ezra iv. 41); only righteous souls could enter them (4 Ezra vii. 80); they were guarded by angels, and were full of rest (Eth. En. c. 5; 4 Ezra vii. 95); at the final judgment they were to restore the souls committed to them (Apoc. Bar. xxi. 3; xxx. 2; 4 Ezra vii. 32, 80). It is to be observed that as there were treasures of righteous souls, so there were treasures of righteous works (see xxiv. 1).

It is strange that only the righteous souls are here mentioned. The reference to the wicked may be lost.

24. This verse should in all probability be read after ver. 19. It would there form a good link between vers. 19 and 20. If this is not so the text seems corrupt.

Or he who promises to give a present to another, but does not fulfil it, is it not robbery? 5. Or he who sows the earth, but does not reap its fruit in its season, does he not lose everything? 6. Or he who plants a plant, unless it grows till the time suitable to it, does he who planted it expect to receive fruit from it? 7. 3-8. In xxii. 3, 5, God rejoins that no man undertakes a work without hoping to enjoy its results, and that no work can be duly judged till it is completed (xxii. 8). Thus Baruch's depreciation of this life (xxi. 13-17, 22) is in some fashion answered. Things must be judged in the light of their consummation. Again, in reply to Baruch's request to hasten the period of judgment (xxi. 19, 24, 20, 21, 23, 25), God rejoins that, for the due accomplishment of any work, time is needed (xxii. 6, 7). Finally, to Baruch's plea for the fulfilment of the divine promise (xxi. 25), God acknowledges the obligation of that promise (xxii. 4).

And He answered and said unto me: "Why therefore art thou troubled about that which thou knowest not, and why art thou ill at ease about things in which thou art ignorant? 3. Because when Adam sinned and death was decreed against those who should be born, then XXIII. 1, 2. Baruch having admitted the justice of the divine reasons, God rejoins in the words of xxii. 3, "Why therefore art thou troubled?" for Baruch thereby acknowledges his ignorance of the things in question.

3. It is hard to see the relevance of this verse to any of Baruch's representations. Baruch has never doubted the ultimate fulfilment of the divine promises.

Who are remembered and those who are to come. The Syriac here

ܡܠܝܢ ܡܠܝܢ ܡܠܝܢ seems corrupted from ܡܠܝܢ ܡܠܝܢ

= "who are appointed to come."

4. When Adam sinned and death was decreed against, etc. There are two different conceptions of man's original destiny and of the physical effect of Adam's sin upon it in two of the different constituents of this book. (1) Thus in B², i.e. in xvii. 3; xix. 8; xxiii. 4, Adam's sin brought in physical death, otherwise man would have been immortal. We find the same view in Ecclus. xxv. 24 ἀπὸ γυναικὸς ἀρχὴ ἀμαρτίας, καὶ δι' αὐτήν ἀποθνήσκουσιν πάντες, though this view cannot be reconciled with the main teaching and tendencies of that book, which are to the effect that man was mortal from the outset (cf. xiv. 17; xvii. 1, 2; xl. 11). The conditional immortality of man appears next in Eth. En. lxix. 11; Book of Wisdom i. 13, 14; ii. 23, 24; Slav. En. xxx. 16, 17 (see notes in loc.); in 4 Ezra iii. 7, "Et huic (sc. Adamo) mandasti diligentiam unam tuam: et praeterivit eam, et statim instituisti in eum mortem et in nationibus ejus." It is likewise the Pauline view (cf. Rom. v. 12; 1 Cor. xv. 21). In the Talmud this was the prevailing view; thus, according to the Beresh. rabba, c. 9, Adam was not originally destined for death (Pesikta, 76a); if Adam had not sinned he would have lived for ever (see Weber, 214, 215, 239). (2) In A³, i.e. in liv. 15; lvi. 6, Adam is said to have brought in only premature death. This seems to be the view underlying Gen. ii., iii., though many, it is true, take it to be conditional immortality. But such an interpretation is difficult in the face the multitude of those who should be born was numbered, and for that number a place was prepared where the living might dwell and the dead might be guarded. 5. Unless therefore the number aforesaid is fulfilled, the creature will not live again [for My spirit is the creator of life], and Sheol will receive the dead. 6. And again it is given to thee to hear what things are to come after these times. 7. For truly My redemption has drawn nigh, and is not far distant as aforetime.

of Gen. iii. 19. (3) It may be well to add here that a third view is occasionally taught in the Talmud. Death came into the world in consequence of divine predestination (see Edersheim, Life and Times, etc., i. 166; Weber, 238, 239). On the spiritual effects of Adam's sin on his posterity, see xlviii. 42, note. On the whole question, see Sanday and Headlam, Romans, 136-138.

The multitude of those who should be born was numbered. This was a secret known only to God (xxi. 10; xlviii. 46). How this number was fixed upon is not recorded. It could not be added to or diminished; for the judgment could not come till it was completed (xxiii. 5; 4 Ezra iv. 33-43).

For that number a place was prepared. Cf. Slav. En. xlix. 2: "There has not been even a man in his mother's womb, for whom a place has not been prepared for every soul"; and lviii. 5: "There is a special place for mankind for all the souls of men according to their number." So in the Tractate Chagiga, fol. 15, col. 1; Torath Adam, fol. 101, col. 3; Avodath hakkodesh, fol. 19, col. 1, it is said that a place is prepared for every man either in Paradise or hell (Eisenmenger, ii. 315).

The dead might be guarded. The righteous were in "the treasuries of souls" guarded by angels (Eth. En. c. 5; 4 Ezra vii. 85, 95); the wicked in places of punishment guarded likewise by "those who keep the keys and are the guardians of the gates of hades standing like great serpents, and their faces are like quenched lamps, and their eyes fiery" (Slav. En. xlii. 1).

5. Not till the secret number of mankind is fulfilled can the resurrection take place. In Rev. vi. 11 and 4 Ezra iv. 36 the consummation of the world will follow, not when the number of mankind, but of the saints, is fulfilled. According to the Shemoth rabba, c. 39 (cf. Aboda Sara, 5a), all the generations of mankind were contained in a register called the ספר חולדות of Adam. And (Beresh. rabba, c. 24; Wajjikra rabba, c. 15) not until all the souls still dwelling in the גוף הנושמה, and included in the above register, had been born in the flesh should the Messiah come (i.e. the end of the world). See Weber, 335.

Sheol will receive. Cf. xxi. 23; xi. 6, note.

XXIV. 1. Behold! the days come. See xx. 1, note.

The books will be opened. Dan. vii. 10; Eth. En. xc. 20; Rev. xx. 12; 4 Ezra vi. 20. The books mentioned here contain only a record of the sins of sinners, as in Eth. En. xc. 20. This is probably the case also in Rev. xx. 12: "And books were opened." In the last passage the succeeding words have to do with the lot of the righteous: "And another book was opened which (is the book) of life." This book of life is mentioned also in Eth. En. xlvii. 3; cviii. 3. The books that are spoken of in Dan. vii. 10; 4 Ezra vi. 20, may be records both of the righteous and the wicked.

The treasures in which, etc. See xxi. 23, note. Divine "treasuries" or "storehouses" are a familiar idea in the O.T. Thus we have treasures of rain (Deut. xxviii. 12), of snow and hail (Job xxxviii. 22), of wind (Jer. x. 13; li. 16; Ps. cxxxv. 7), of the sea (Ps. xxxiii. 7); see also Eth. En. lx. 11, 19, 20, 21; 4 Ezra vi. 40. Again the idea of laying up spiritual things in store is found in the LXX. Thus in Prov. i. 18 θησαυρίζουσιν ἑαυτοῖς κακά, and still more clearly in Pss. Sol. ix. 9 θησαυρίζει ζωὴν ἑαυτῷ παρὰ κυρίῳ. The last passage belongs to a time when heaven had come to be regarded as the true home and destination of the righteous. Naturally, when this was the belief of the faithful, their highest thoughts, aspirations, and efforts would be directed thither, and thus Ezra is assured: "Tibi thesaurus operum repositus apud Altissimum" (4 Ezra vii. 77), and the righteous are those qui fidem thesaurizaverunt (vi. 5); they would lay up treasures in heaven (Matt. vi. 19, 20). By a faithless life, on the other hand, men "treasured up for themselves wrath against the day of wrath" (Rom. ii. 5). Finally, the deeds of the righteous were regarded as gathered in "treasuries," as in our text. The expression is found in another sense in xlv. 14. We should observe that אוצר and θησαυρός alike mean a treasure and the place where it is stored.

The righteousness of all, etc. As Dr. Sanday writes (Romans, p. 29): "For a Jew the whole sphere of righteousness was taken up by the Mosaic Law. His one idea of righteousness was that of conformity to this law. Righteousness was for him essentially obedience to the law." That these words are true of the conception of righteousness entertained by the writers of this book will be seen by a perusal of the note on xiv. 7. But naturally the conception of righteousness varied accordingly as it was used by the legalistic or the prophetic wing, if I may so speak, of Pharisaism. With the strict Legalists righteousness meant the fulfilment first and mainly of ceremonial observances, and secondly, but only in a very subordinate degree, of works of mercy. See, for instance, the Book of Jubilees. With the prophetic wing, from which emanated most of the Messianic Apocalypses, righteousness was taken in its large sense as the fulfilment of righteous in creation is gathered. 2. For it will come to pass at that time that thou shalt see—and many that are with thee—the long-suffering of the Most High, which has been throughout all generations, who has been long-suffering towards all those born that sin and are righteous.” 3. And I answered and said: “But, behold! O Lord, no one knows the number of those things which have passed nor yet of those things which are to come. 4. For I know indeed that which has befallen us, but what will happen to our enemies I know not, and when Thou wilt visit Thy works.”

moral duties and only in a very secondary degree of ceremonial. The Ethiopic and Slavonic Books of Enoch are illustrations of the latter statement. In some books it is hard to determine the pre-eminence of either tendency.

Who have been righteous. See note on xxi. 9.

2. I have already shown on p. 20 that xxiv. 2-4 probably followed originally on xx.

Thou shalt see—and many, etc. See note on xiii. 5.

Sin and are righteous. Both verbs depend on the same subject.

3, 4. In the preceding verse God had just assured Baruch that he and many with him should ultimately see the long-suffering of God. Baruch rejoins when that time of recompense will be no man knows (ver. 3), but there is one thing he knows well, i.e. the present calamities of Israel. Hence he wishes to know (a) what fate is in store for the Gentiles who inflicted these, and (b) when will it take effect. The answer to (a) is given in xiii. 3b-12. Just before xiii. 3b some statement such as “retribution will come upon your enemies who are now prospering,” has been lost. Then follows xiii. 3b-12, in which Baruch is told that a special rôle is assigned him in reference to the enemies of Israel. He is to be preserved till the end of the times to testify to these cities, when the threatened retribution has befallen them, the reason of such retribution, the thoroughness with which it will be carried out, and the time of its consummation. Then in xxv. comes the answer to Baruch's second question: “When wilt Thou visit Thy works?” Baruch is to be preserved to play a part in this respect also (xxv. 1).

Befallen us. For  = “what has befallen me,” I have read  = “what has befallen us?” The same corruption of the suffix appears in this MS. in lxxviii. 3 over against the right text in nine MSS.

Visit Thy works. xx. 2, note. The reference here is to the final judgment.

XXV. And He answered and said unto me :
 "Thou too shalt be kept safely till that time till that sign which the Most High will work for the inhabitants of the earth in the end of days. 2. This therefore will be the sign. 3. When a stupor shall seize the inhabitants of the earth, and they shall fall into many tribulations, and again when they shall fall into great torments. 4. And it will come to pass when they will say in their thoughts by reason of their much tribulation: 'The Mighty One doth no longer remember the earth'—yea, it will come to pass when they abandon hope, that the time will then awake."

XXVI.=E.

XXVI. And I answered and said: "Will that tribulation which is to be continue a long time, and will that necessity embrace many years?"

XXVII. And He answered and said unto me:

XXV. In this chapter we have an answer to Baruch's question:
 "When wilt Thou visit Thy works?"

XXV. 1. In xiii. 3b Baruch was to be preserved to testify against the Gentiles. He has also a further function: observe the "too."

Till that time till that sign which.
 The sign is the stupor that will come on the inhabitants of the earth.

The inhabitants of the earth.
 This phrase is always used in a bad ethical sense in Baruch. Cf. xxv.
 2; xlviii. 32, 40; liv. 1; lv. 2;
 lxx. 2, 10; generally in 4 Ezra; cf.
 iii. 34, 35; iv. 39; v. 6; vi. 24;
 vii. 72; x. 59; xiii. 30; but in vi.
 18, 26; xi. 5, 32, 34; xii. 24, the sense of the phrase is merely geographical. For the various meanings of this phrase in the Eth. En. and Rev., see Eth. En. pp. 43, 111.

3, 4. When stupor and despair have seized the inhabitants of the earth, the time of the judgment has come.
